Chapter Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 242, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds it appropriate to decontrol minimum wholesale, jobber, and retail milk prices; and

WHEREAS, it is necessary for the Board of Milk Control to adopt additional procedures and fair trade practices to promote the sale of Montana milk at competitive prices; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature encourages the use of Montana milk by Montana processors and the elimination of practices that encourage the purchase of Montana milk out of state for subsequent resale in Montana at a price lower than that established by the Board."

Chapter Case Notes

Milk Pricing Control — Actions Compelled by Law Not Unfair Trade Practices: A third-party plaintiff brought an action for declaratory and injunctive relief against the operation and enforcement of certain milk pricing statutes, claiming those statutes violated the provisions of 30-14-205, and the third-party defendant moved to dismiss the claim on the grounds that it did not state a claim for relief. The court found that although the statutes challenged by the plaintiff did fix the price of milk, eliminate competition, and create a monopoly, the only reason whereby 30-14-224 could control was if that section expressly or impliedly repealed the Milk Price Control Act. The court found no such repeal had been intended by the Legislature. Hinshaw v. Beatrice Foods, Inc., 37 St. Rep. 1677 (D.C. Mont. 1980) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

Milk Pricing Control — Violation of Equal Protection: A third-party plaintiff brought an action for declaratory and injunctive relief against the operation and enforcement of certain milk pricing statutes, claiming the statutes violated the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th amendment of the United States Constitution, and the defendant moved to dismiss the claim. The court found that the base plan established by the Board of Milk Control created a classification of milk producers based upon the past history of their deliveries to distributors and that while the states have wide discretion to make classifications in the area of economic regulation, it could not be said from the third-party complaint alone that there was no merit in the claimed denial of equal protection. Hinshaw v. Beatrice Foods, Inc., 37 St. Rep. 1677 (D.C. Mont. 1980) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

Milk Pricing Control — Violation of Sherman Act by Private Actions Compelled by State Law: Although the base plan established by the Board of Milk Control creates a system whereby the price of milk is fixed, price competition is eliminated, and a select group is given a property right in a monopoly and therefore violates the concepts of sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act (15 U.S.C. §§1, 2), the act does not make private actions compelled by Montana statutes and orders of the Board unlawful. Under the rationale of Parker v. Brown, 317 US 341 (1943), private actions compelled by state law, which would otherwise violate the Sherman Act, are immune from the operation of the act under certain standards satisfied in this case. Hinshaw v. Beatrice Foods, Inc., 37 St. Rep. 1677 (D.C. Mont. 1980) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 23 in (1) deleted definition of class I milk that read: ""Class I milk" includes all bottled or packaged milk, low fat, buttermilk, chocolate milk, whipping cream, commercial cream, half-and-half, skim milk, fortified skim milk, skim milk flavored drinks, eggnog, and any other fluid milk not specifically classified in this chapter, whether raw, pasteurized, homogenized, sterile, or aseptic", deleted definition of class II milk that read: ""Class II milk" includes milk used in the manufacture of ice cream and ice cream mix, ice milk, sherbet, cultured sour cream, cottage cheese, condensed milk, and powdered skim for human consumption", deleted definition of class III milk that read: ""Class III milk" includes milk used in the manufacture of butter, cheddar cheese, process cheese, livestock feed, powdered skim other than for human consumption, and skim milk dumped", and inserted definition of class; in (2) after "products" deleted "not expressly included in one of the classes defined in this section"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 135 in definition of class I milk near middle after "flavored drinks" inserted "eggnog"; in definition of class II milk after "sherbet" deleted "eggnog"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 242 deleted definition of jobber prices that read: ""Jobber prices" means those prices at which milk owned by a distributor is sold, in bulk or in packages, to a jobber or independent contractor"; deleted definition of retail prices that read: ""Retail prices" means those prices at which milk owned by a retailer is sold, in bulk or in packages, over the counter at retail or for consumption on the premises"; deleted definition of wholesale prices that read: ""Wholesale prices" means those prices at which milk owned by a distributor is sold, in bulk or in packages, to a retailer"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1996.

Chapter 333 deleted definition of Department that read: ""Department" means the department of commerce provided for in Title 2, chapter 15, part 18"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 546 in definition of person substituted "department of corrections" for "department of corrections and human services". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Saving Clause: Section 571, Ch. 546, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 56 in definition of person substituted "an individual" for "a person" and after "association" inserted reference to the prison dairy. Amendment effective February 19, 1993.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "department of commerce" for "department of business regulation" in (1)(g).

Case Notes

Wholesale Food Purchasing Organization Defined as Retailer: The Supreme Court determined that Associated Food Stores, owned by various independent retail stores and taxed as a cooperative, which purchased products from manufacturers for resale to retailers, was not a jobber as defined in ARM 8.79.101 (now ARM 32.23.101), but rather was a retailer under 81-23-101 and ARM 8.79.101 (now ARM 32.23.101), and therefore must pay the wholesale rather than jobber price for milk under Montana's milk price control law. St. Dept. of Commerce v. Gallatin Dairies, Inc., 221 M 492, 719 P2d 790, 43 St. Rep. 1001 (1986).

Chain Retailer "Distributing" to Its Stores Not Covered by Milk Control Law — What Is a Distributor: Albertson's proposed to purchase raw milk from a licensed distributor that it would take to a licensed processor in Wyoming and then distribute to its six retail stores in Montana. The Department of Business Regulation issued a declaratory ruling that Albertson's "may not carry out the business it proposes under the current statutory framework" of the milk control law. Albertson's sought judicial review, and the District Court held that Albertson's contemplated activity did not make it a distributor subject to licensing under the milk control law and that the law did not prohibit the proposed activity either expressly or by implication. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court holding. Albertson's, Inc. v. Dept. of Business Regulation, 184 M 12, 601 P2d 43, 36 St. Rep. 1793 (1979).

1995 Amendment: Chapter 242 in (1)(k), after "unless the producers", deleted "distributors, and others engaged in the marketing of milk"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1996.

Case Notes

Minimum Prices: The means selected to attain the object set forth in this section was a procedure set forth in 81-23-301 (repealed, 1983) and 81-23-302 whereby the Milk Control Board (now Board of Milk Control) was empowered to establish marketing areas in the state and to prescribe and enforce minimum producer, wholesale, and retail prices in such areas pursuant to the provisions of the (former) Milk Control Act (Title 81, ch. 23). (See 1995 amendment.) Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. Rehberg, 141 M 149, 376 P2d 508 (1962).

Purpose of Statutes: Because Title 81, ch. 23 (formerly the Milk Control Act), was aimed at activity injurious to health, it could be enforced by injunction under 81-23-406. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. Rehberg, 141 M 149, 376 P2d 508 (1962).

Reasonable Profit: Reasonable profit, as used in subsection (1)(k) of this section, contemplated a minimum price at which milk could be sold in view of surrounding circumstances. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. Rehberg, 141 M 149, 376 P2d 508 (1962).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 361 in (1) at beginning of first sentence substituted "board" for "department" and inserted second sentence regarding the board conducting hearings; in (3) at beginning substituted "department shall assist the board by investigating" for "department shall investigate" and at end substituted "by bringing proceedings to enforce the orders of the board" for "shall conduct hearings on any subject pertinent to the administration of this chapter"; at beginning of second sentence after "department" inserted "in exercising its enforcement duties"; inserted (4) regarding department's duty to provide staff to the board; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009, and terminates June 30, 2011.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 333 in (1), in second sentence after "health laws", deleted "or the law under which the department of livestock is constituted together with the department of livestock rules" and in third sentence, after "environmental sciences", deleted "the board of livestock"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 418 in last sentence of (1) substituted "department of public health" for "department of health and environmental sciences"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 546 in last sentence of (1) substituted "department of public health and human services" for "department of health and environmental sciences"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

2009 Amendment: Chapter 361 throughout section in six places substituted "board" for "department"; in (1) in second sentence near beginning following "license" deleted "from the department"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009, and terminates June 30, 2011.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 135 in (4)(a) near beginning of first sentence after "fee" deleted "of 14.97 cents", after "volume of" substituted "all classes of milk" for "class I milk", and after "sold by a" substituted "person licensed by the department" for "producer", inserted second sentence requiring that the fee be established pursuant to 81-1-102(2), and deleted former third sentence that read: "The board shall include this fee in its formulas for fixing by rule the minimum producer prices for class I milk in 81-23-302"; inserted (4)(b) requiring monthly milk production reports; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Chapter 333 in (1), near middle of first sentence, substituted "department, as provided in 81-22-202" for "department of livestock"; in (4), at end of first sentence after "department", deleted "of livestock"; in (7), at beginning of first sentence, deleted "Except for the assessment provided for in subsection (4)" and in second sentence, in two places, inserted reference to chapter 22; deleted former (8) that read: "(8) The assessment provided for in subsection (4) must be deposited by the department in an account in the state special revenue fund. Money in the account must be used to carry out the purposes of Title 81, chapter 22"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 566 inserted (4) assessing a fee of 14.97 cents per hundredweight on class I milk; in (5), near end after "department", inserted "and the fee established in subsection (4)"; at beginning of (7) inserted exception clause; inserted (8) regarding deposit of the assessment in the state special revenue fund; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 566, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] is effective July 1, 1993. Payment of the assessment in [section 1] [81-23-202] begins with the quarterly payment due on October 15, 1993."

1985 Appropriations Act — Milk Control Fees — Milk Testing Equipment: Section 17, Category C, Department of Livestock narrative of HB 500, "The General Appropriations Act of 1985", provided in part: "The appropriation in item 2 in fiscal 1986 includes $27,600 from the state special revenue fund for milk control authorized in section 81-23-202, MCA. The assessment authorized in section 81-23-202, MCA, in effect July 1, 1985, will not be reduced until this expenditure has been made. This amount has been generated under the provisions of section 81-23-105, MCA, for milk testing. This is to assist in the purchase of milk testing equipment authorized in this appropriation."

2009 Amendment: Chapter 361 in (1) at end substituted "board" for "department"; in (17) near middle of first sentence after "must be" deleted "enforced and", at end inserted "and enforced by the board", and inserted second sentence making an enforcement action subject to 81-23-407; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009, and terminates June 30, 2011.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 23 in (1) near beginning after "shall" inserted "by adopting rules" and at end substituted "classes of utilization of milk as defined by the department" for "class I, class II, and class III milk by adopting rules in a manner prescribed by the Montana Administrative Procedure Act"; in (7) near end after "milk" deleted "in classes I, II, and III"; in (11) near beginning of first sentence after "rules" deleted "after notice and hearing in the manner prescribed by the Montana Administrative Procedure Act"; in (13) near beginning of first sentence after "amend" substituted "a rule" for "an official rule"; in (14) near end of second sentence after "proceed by" deleted "official"; in (15)(a) in second, third, and fourth sentences before "order" deleted "official"; in (15)(d) at end of second sentence after "hearing" deleted "as required under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 416 in third sentence in (15)(a) after "mail" deleted "and by secret ballot" and deleted former fourth sentence that read: "The board shall keep confidential the vote of each producer, producer-distributor, and distributor voting in the referendum"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 242 in (1), after "producer", deleted "wholesale, jobber, and retail" and after "class I" deleted "milk and minimum producer prices only for"; in (3), after "producers", deleted "distributors, jobbers, retailers"; in (4), in two places after "costs of production", deleted "and distribution"; deleted (5)(b), (5)(f), and (5)(g) concerning ability of consumers to purchase milk, cost of distributing milk, and cost of jobbing milk (see 1995 Session Law for text); deleted (7)(b) that read: "(b) wholesale prices for milk in class I shall be computed"; deleted (7)(c) that read: "(c) jobber prices for milk in class I shall be computed"; deleted (7)(d) that read: "(d) retail prices for milk in class I shall be computed"; in (8) deleted second sentence that read: "If the evidence presented to the board at any public hearing for the establishment of revision of milk pricing formulas is found by the board to require the establishment of separate and varying wholesale prices for any particular uses, the board shall designate the reasons therefor and establish such separate formulas"; inserted (10) requiring certain distributors to purchase milk from Montana producers; in (11) inserted last two sentences authorizing Board to adopt rules; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1996.

Chapter 333 at end of (17) substituted "by the department" for "by the milk control bureau of the department of commerce"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Style changes in the chapters were slightly different. In each case, the codifier chose the most appropriate.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 333, L. 1995, provided: "It is the intent of the legislature that the rules promulgated by the department of commerce regarding the control of milk prices will be continued and enforced by the department of livestock."

1987 Amendment: In (14)(a), near beginning of first sentence after "petition by", substituted "10% or 20 of the licensed producers in Montana, whichever is less, or upon petition by any licensed" for "any producer", in second sentence, near end, inserted "by mail and by secret ballot", and inserted third through fifth sentences relating to referendum (see 1987 Session Law for text); inserted (14)(b) outlining provisions the Board may include in the order establishing the statewide pooling arrangement; inserted (14)(c) allowing withdrawal of cash reserves to fund initial pool startup and requiring reimbursement; and inserted (14)(d) to provide that a pooling arrangement order may be rescinded or amended pending notice and hearing.

1983 Amendment: In (1), after "class III milk" deleted "in all areas of the state"; deleted former (5)(i), which read: "a reasonable return on necessary investment to all ordinarily efficient and economical milk dealers"; deleted former (10), which read: "The milk produced in one natural marketing area and sold in another natural marketing area shall be paid for by a distributor or dealer in accordance with the pricing order of the area where produced at the price therein specified of the class or use in which it is ultimately used or sold."; in (11), deleted references to a natural marketing area; at end of (12), after "formulas" deleted "in all market areas of the state"; in (14), deleted several references to marketing areas; and in (15), after "quota plans" deleted "or areawide".

1981 Amendment: Substituted "department of commerce" for "department of business regulation" in (17).

Administrative Rules

Title 32, chapter 24, ARM Board of Milk Control.

Case Notes

Constitutionality:

Since the Legislature of Montana in enacting this statute acted in the exercise of its police power to supervise the milk industry, Art. XV, sec. 20, 1889 Mont. Const. (not reenacted), had no application. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. Rehberg, 141 M 149, 376 P2d 508 (1962).

The price-fixing provisions of this section did not offend due process and did not unconstitutionally delegate legislative power. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. Rehberg, 141 M 149, 376 P2d 508 (1962).

Nuisance: A sale of milk at a price less than the minimum prescribed by the Milk Control Board (now the Board of Milk Control) under this section, being a violation of 81-23-405, was a nuisance which could be enjoined by the Board under 81-23-406. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. Rehberg, 141 M 149, 376 P2d 508 (1962).

Authority for Institution of Proceedings: Petition disclosed that "unanimous consent of all members of the board" had been had prior to the institution of the proceeding as formerly required by 81-23-406, where the petition stated that the executive secretary of the board "as such administrative officer, has the authority of said Board to institute this action on their behalf under the provisions of R.C.M. 1947, section 27-424 [now 81-23-406]". State ex rel. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. District Court, 138 M 179, 355 P2d 664 (1960).

Facts to Be Noticed by Board: If the Milk Control Board (now the Board of Milk Control) proposed to base any part of an official order fixing minimum prices upon facts within its own knowledge, it had to give notice of the specific facts which it would consider. State ex rel. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. District Court, 138 M 179, 355 P2d 664 (1960).

Retail Price: When the retail price charged for some of the milk was more than twice the price paid by the distributor to the producer, there was a violation of the statute. (See 1995 amendment.) Heimbichner v. Mont. Milk Control Bd., 134 M 366, 332 P2d 922 (1958).

Promotional Schemes: Contest awarding college scholarships to winning applicants was not prohibited by this section where applicants were not required to purchase dairy products in order to participate and contest did not directly or indirectly affect the price of milk charged by the dairy or paid by its customers. A promotional scheme intended to draw noncustomers into purchasing a dairy's milk products was not prohibited by this section unless the contest affected the price of milk charged by the dairy or paid by its customers. Preparation of Rules:

This section was not intended to stand independently but rather as a mandatory guide for the Milk Control Board (now the Board of Milk Control) in preparing its rules. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. Community Creamery Co., 139 M 523, 366 P2d 151 (1961).

Rules promulgated by the Milk Control Board (now the Board of Milk Control) governing unfair trade practices were invalid because they failed to encompass all five of the unfair methods of doing business that the Legislature expressly stated should be contained in their rules. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. Community Creamery Co., 139 M 523, 366 P2d 151 (1961).

Validity of Rules: Rules governing unfair trade practices adopted by the Milk Control Board (now the Board of Milk Control) were invalid because they were not in accordance with the delegated authority of the Board. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. Community Creamery Co., 139 M 523, 366 P2d 151 (1961).

Violation of Fair Trade Practices: A violation of fair trade occurred when a party violated properly promulgated rules of the Milk Control Board (now the Board of Milk Control), enacted pursuant to this section. Mont. Milk Control Bd. v. Community Creamery Co., 139 M 523, 366 P2d 151 (1961).

Judgment Construed to Prevent Excavating That Causes Sloughing, Slumping, or Subsidence Within 30-Foot Buffer — District Court Erred in Denying Motion for Contempt: The defendant, who operates a gold mine on his property, was permanently enjoined from excavating within 30 feet of the plaintiffs' property boundary to ensure lateral support. After the defendant failed to abide by the order and a previous written agreement, the plaintiffs filed a motion for contempt to remediate for sloughing and ground cracking that occurred as a result of the excavating. The District Court denied the motion and awarded attorney fees to the defendant. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that the defendant was prohibited from excavating in a way that caused sloughing, slumping, or subsidence into the 30-foot buffer. Levens v. Ballard, 2011 MT 153, 361 Mont. 108, 255 P.3d 195.

Sandstone Not Considered Mineral With Respect to Mineral Reservation in Lease — Summary Judgment Proper: A deed conveying property to Craig reserved to Hart the rights, leases, and royalties to minerals on the property. After the sale, Craig mined and sold sandstone from a quarry on the property. Based on the reservation, Hart sued for the money Craig collected from the sale of the sandstone. The District Court granted summary judgment to Craig, and on appeal the Supreme Court affirmed. Sandstone is not considered an exceptionally rare or valuable mineral simply because it can be sold commercially. Therefore, sandstone was not considered to be a mineral included in the general reservation of mineral rights. Hart v. Craig, 2009 MT 283, 352 M 209, 216 P3d 197 (2009). See also Farley v. Booth Bros. Land & Livestock Co., 270 M 1, 890 P2d 377 (1995).

Scoria Not Mineral With Respect to Mineral Reservation in Lease — Payments for Surface Damage From Removing Scoria Pass With Land: Farley argued that under a lease to Booth reserving mineral rights, Farley was entitled to receive the payments from Western Energy Company to compensate for surface damages incurred in removing scoria from the land. The Supreme Court held that scoria was used in road building, but it was not of a rare and exceptional quality that would make it a mineral with respect to the mineral reservation clause in a lease. Farley also argued that the payments for surface damage in removing the scoria were royalty payments and as such personal property that did not pass to Booth when Booth purchased the surface rights to the property. The Supreme Court held that regardless of whether a royalty interest is personal or real property was of no significance because the royalty was appurtenant to the land and passed to Booth upon purchase of the surface. Farley v. Booth Bros. Land & Livestock Co., 270 M 1, 890 P2d 377, 52 St. Rep. 46 (1995).

Mineral Lands Leasing Act: District Courts have discretion to deny or grant injunctive relief upon finding that the government is in violation of the Federal Coal Leasing Amendments Act of 1976. N. Cheyenne Tribe v. Hodel, 842 F2d 224 (9th Cir. 1988).

Indian Mineral Development Act: The tribe could unilaterally rescind a proposed mineral development agreement before action by the Secretary of the Interior. Quantum Exploration v. Clark, 780 F2d 1457 (9th Cir. 1988).

Oil and Gas Conveyances: Montana is an ownership-in-place state with regard to oil, gas, and other minerals. Title to the mineral interest in land may be separated from the rest of the fee simple title. Under a mineral deed conveyance, the grantee receives, among other incidents, the right to go on land and explore for and produce oil and gas. A mineral reservation right of entry is an easement and conveys no interest in the underlying oil, gas, or minerals or in oil, gas, or minerals produced from the land. The right of entry is an incorporeal hereditament. McDonald v. Unirex, Inc., 221 M 156, 718 P2d 316, 43 St. Rep. 709 (1986).

The intent is to provide the Board with the authority to adopt rules to identify geophysical exploration crews operating in this state and to designate areas where geophysical exploration may not be allowed. Existence of Contract — Payment of Tort Judgment for Drilling Damages as Precluding Determination: Plaintiffs sued defendant for damages claimed to have occurred to their farmlands when a seismographic hole drilled and shot by defendant brought a continuous water flow to the surface, damaging farmland. Defendants left the area and later tried unsuccessfully to plug the hole. The jury found for plaintiffs and awarded actual and punitive damages. Defendant paid the award for actual damages and appealed the award of punitive damages. Defendant claimed the case involved a contract and that punitive damages were not properly allowable. By satisfying the judgment for actual damages, defendant acceded to the correctness of the judgment and accepted its benefits. When a judgment is paid, it passes beyond the review of a superior court. The question of whether a contract existed was submitted to the jury. Their judgment was based on a tort theory, comparative negligence. Because this judgment was satisfied, the Supreme Court could not rule on whether a contract was involved. Dahl v. Petroleum Geophysical Co., 194 M 294, 632 P2d 1136, 38 St. Rep. 1474 (1981).

Sealing of Shot Holes: Sealing "shot" holes by pouring excess cuttings down them and plugging the orifice with an aluminum plug by forcing it down into the hole so that the top of the plug was below plow depth was in compliance with this section when the holes were only 4 ½ inches in diameter, in view of expert testimony that seismographic holes tend to slough and cave, releasing lateral support from materials around the hole and that the pressure from the weight of the earth above has a tendency to force the material toward the center, sealing the hole. Coal Seam Methane Gas Not Part of Coal Estate — Ownership of and Right to Develop: In 1984, Carbon County gave a deed to Reserve's predecessor in interest conveying all "coal and coal rights with the right of ingress and egress to mine and remove the same" on certain lands within the county. In 1990, the county gave an oil and gas lease to Florentine, giving Florentine the right to operate for and produce from the disputed property "oil and all gas including coal seam methane of whatsoever nature or kind". Carbon County filed a quiet title action against Reserve, asserting the county's claims to all of the mineral and mineral rights, excluding the coal and coal rights, on the disputed property. The District Court held that the coal seam methane gas was part of the coal estate and was included in the conveyance of coal and coal rights by the county to Reserve's predecessor in interest. The Supreme Court held that coal seam methane gas is not a constituent part of coal. Thus, it may be severed from the coal estate. As the lessee of Carbon County, the owner of the gas estate, Florentine has the right to drill for and to produce coal seam methane gas either in advance of or during coal mining operations. Reserve has a mutual, simultaneous right to extract and to capture the gas for safety purposes, incident to its coal operations. Carbon County v. Union Reserve Coal Co., Inc., 271 M 459, 898 P2d 680, 52 St. Rep. 529 (1995).

New Legislative Definitions — Not Unlawful Taking of Coal Seam Methane Gas From Owners of Coal or Coal Lands: In a dispute between the county, the gas lessee of the county, and the owner of coal rights, the latter claimed that 1993 legislative changes in the definitions of gas, oil, and coal either were regulatory in nature only and did not affect rights or, in the alternative, that if the amendments did remove coal seam methane gas ownership from coal owners, then the removal was without compensation and so constituted an unconstitutional taking. The Supreme Court held that the question of taking without compensation was moot because the legislation was prospective in nature and there was a severance of the gas estate from the coal estate under the plain language of the grant. Carbon County v. Union Reserve Coal Co., Inc., 271 M 459, 898 P2d 680, 52 St. Rep. 529 (1995).

Cancellation and Forfeiture of Oil, Gas, or Mineral Leases

Part Case Notes

Coordination of Habendum and Pugh Clauses in Oil and Gas Lease — Shut-In Gas Well Considered Producing Well for Lease Purposes — Lease Extended on Section With Producing Well, Terminated on Undeveloped Sections for Lack of Timely Rental Payments: Plaintiff's oil and gas leases had habendum clauses, which provided that the primary leases would be extended as long as oil or gas was produced or drilling operations continued on any of the leased property, and Pugh clauses, which provided that production would not serve to extend the primary term of a lease unless the lessee paid an annual per-acre rental fee prior to the end of the primary term. By the end of the primary term, plaintiff had only one shut-in well developed on the leasehold. Depending on the habendum clauses, plaintiff concluded that there was not a producing well on the leasehold, so the Pugh clauses did not take effect and rental payments were not required. Depending on the Pugh clauses, defendants concluded that because there were no producing wells on the leasehold and because the rental fee on the shut-in well was 2 days late, all of plaintiff's leases were canceled. In reconciling the clauses, the District Court correctly found that: (1) the Pugh clauses required that rental payments be paid on or before the expiration of the primary term in order to extend leases on undeveloped sections; and (2) because time is of the essence in oil and gas leases and plaintiff did not pay timely rental, the leases expired by their own terms on all sections except the section containing the shut-in well, which was considered a producing well, and that lease would continue under the habendum clause as long as plaintiff used reasonable diligence in marketing the gas. Sandtana, Inc. v. Wallin Ranch Co., 2003 MT 329, 318 M 369, 80 P3d 1224 (2003).

No Requirement for Further Development When Delay Rental Payments Made: When the clear language of an oil lease allowed lessee to make annual delay rental payments instead of engaging in drilling or production operations and when the payments were made and accepted by lessor, the covenant to develop was not breached and lessee was relieved of drilling obligations, except that of offset drilling. Sundheim v. Reef Oil Corp., 247 M 244, 806 P2d 503, 48 St. Rep. 181 (1991).

Reasonable Notice Required Before Duty to Drill Offset Well Arises: Clarifying its opinion in U.V. Indus., Inc. v. Danielson, 184 M 203, 602 P2d 571 (1979), the Supreme Court held that before a lessee's duty to drill an offset well arises, the lessee must have reasonable notice of the necessity to protect the leasehold. Notice "can either be express, from the lessor, or constructive, gained from the surrounding circumstances". This rule is only applicable in cases when a lessor is seeking relief in the form of damages. If he is seeking other forms of relief, such as forfeiture of the lease, he must give written notice in order to give the lessor a chance to cure the breach. Sundheim v. Reef Oil Corp., 247 M 244, 806 P2d 503, 48 St. Rep. 181 (1991).

Act of God or Similar Clause in Lease — Failure to Remedy Reasonably Correctable Situation: Oil and gas lease contained a provision that if production and operations were stopped the lessee had 90 days to resume them, and if lessee did not do so the lease was terminated. It also contained a clause stating that if production or operations were stopped because of circumstances beyond the lessee's reasonable control, the lease was not terminated. The state ordered production stopped because of saltwater seepage from a saltwater pit at the well site. The lessee could have corrected the leakage with a truckload of mud, which was available, and it was reasonable for lessee to do so. Therefore, the clause saving the lease from termination did not apply and the lease terminated after 90 days. Edington v. Creek Oil Co., 213 M 112, 690 P2d 970, 41 St. Rep. 1990 (1984).

Conditioning Termination of Lease on Judicial Ruling of Breach: Oil and gas lease contained a provision that if production and operations were stopped and the lessee did not resume them within 90 days, the lease was terminated. It also contained a provision that the lease was not forfeited for breach of an implied covenant until it was finally judicially determined that the breach existed and the breach was not remedied within a reasonable time after the determination. The first clause was an express condition, not an implied covenant, and where lessee did not follow it, the lease terminated by its own express language and could not be saved by the second clause. Edington v. Creek Oil Co., 213 M 112, 690 P2d 970, 41 St. Rep. 1990 (1984).

Reentry by Lessee Following Termination of Lease — Willful Trespass: Oil and gas lease contained a provision that if production and operations were stopped and lessee did not resume them within 90 days, the lease was terminated. Production and operations were stopped and not resumed until years later, at a time when the lease had terminated and lessor had granted a lease to someone else. Lessee was a willful trespasser in entering and recommencing drilling as lessee knew the lease had expired by its own terms. Lessee thus was not entitled to proceeds from the oil produced after the reentry or to cost of producing the oil. Edington v. Creek Oil Co., 213 M 112, 690 P2d 970, 41 St. Rep. 1990 (1984).

No Default for Failure to Furnish Accounting and Keep Open Records: Where the plaintiffs served the defendants notice of default of an operating agreement, the District Court did not err in granting summary judgment for the defendants on the issue of the defendants' failure to furnish an accounting to the plaintiffs of all minerals mined, processed, and sold and the defendants' failure to keep open for inspection complete records of the milling operation. The operating agreement required only that the defendants maintain accounts and keep them open for inspection during regular business hours. The defendants made clear to the plaintiffs that accounts were open for inspection, but the plaintiffs did not ask to inspect the documents nor did they ask to see those kept in out-of-state offices. Since defendants were willing to cooperate, there was no default in this respect. Lewis v. St., 207 M 361, 675 P2d 107, 41 St. Rep. 9 (1984).

No Default for Failure to Pay Interest on Royalty Payment — Mineral Lease Not Requiring Payment of Interest: Where the plaintiff lessors of mineral rights gave the defendant lessees notice of default for failure to make a rental payment and the lessees tendered a check for that payment, the District Court did not err in granting summary judgment for the defendants in a later action for default brought by the plaintiffs. Even assuming that payment of interest in the royalty was due under 31-1-106, the agreement of the parties did not require payment of interest. Failure to remit interest was not in default of that agreement. Moreover, the default notice failed to notify the defendants that interest was due, contrary to the default clause of the parties' agreement. Failure to pay the interest was therefore immaterial. Lewis v. St., 207 M 361, 675 P2d 107, 41 St. Rep. 9 (1984).

No Default for Failure to Provide Records and Data When Needed Information Not Specified: Where the plaintiffs served notice of default of an operating agreement upon the defendants for failure to provide maps, assay reports, drilling results, and other data but failed to specify the documents or information not provided, the District Court did not err in granting summary judgment for the defendants in a default action brought by the plaintiffs. Defendants informed plaintiffs they were unsure what documents or information was lacking and asked for a clarification, which plaintiffs failed to provide. Plaintiffs cannot claim default if they failed to specify the deficiency as required by the operating agreement. Lewis v. St., 207 M 361, 675 P2d 107, 41 St. Rep. 9 (1984).

No Default in Payment by Personal Check: Where the defendants were given notice of default of an operating agreement for failure to make royalty payments but tendered a personal check for the royalties within the time allowed by the agreement for curing the default, the District Court did not err in granting summary judgment for the defendants in a default action subsequently brought by the plaintiffs. The operating agreement did not specify the form in which payment was to be made, and even though the plaintiffs had earlier requested payment in gold bullion, the defendants had never agreed to such payment. The evidence before the District Court was undisputed that prior payments had all been made by check and accepted, and the defendants had no reason to suspect dishonor. There was therefore no default in payment by check. Lewis v. St., 207 M 361, 675 P2d 107, 41 St. Rep. 9 (1984).

No Default Where Lien Removed Within Period for Remedy of Default: Where the plaintiffs served notice of default of an operating agreement upon the defendants for allowing a lien to be placed against the plaintiffs' mine, the District Court did not err in granting summary judgment for the defendant in a default action brought by the plaintiffs. The notice of judicial sale applied only to an interest in the property held by a previous partner of a defendant and did not affect the plaintiffs' interest in the mine. Even if the sale was a "lien" within the meaning of the operating agreement, it was removed within the 60-day period for remedying a default. Lewis v. St., 207 M 361, 675 P2d 107, 41 St. Rep. 9 (1984).

Operating Agreement Not Violation of Rule Against Perpetuities: Where the plaintiffs and defendants entered into an agreement for the operation of a mine that provided for two extensions of the 5-year primary term of the agreement only if the defendants were "engaged in commercial production of minerals" and only if "active mining operations" were in progress, the District Court did not err in granting summary judgment for the defendants and holding that the agreement did not violate the rule against perpetuities. Under the rationale of Consol. Mines Corp. v. O'Connell, 107 M 273, 85 P2d 345 (1938), the lease could be perpetually renewed but was limited by the required facts being found to exist at time of renewal. This is not a perpetuity. Lewis v. St., 207 M 361, 675 P2d 107, 41 St. Rep. 9 (1984).

Forfeiture of Gas and Oil Lease — Common-Law Offset Drilling Rule: Where an oil and gas lease provided that no change in ownership of the land was to be binding upon the lessees until after lessee had been given a copy of any such transfer, lessor's grantees' right to damages for failure to drill an offset well under the common-law offset drilling rule could not be defeated by a failure to give the required notice, as the purpose of the notice is to prevent the lessee's forfeiture of the lease for failure to pay delay rentals to the proper party. Such required notice has nothing to do with implied covenants. U. V. Indus., Inc. v. Danielson, 184 M 203, 602 P2d 571 (1979).

Construction of Lease in Favor of Lessor: An oil and gas lease should be construed strictly against the lessee and in favor of the lessor. Daley v. Torrey, 69 M 599, 223 P 498 (1924).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 228 inserted (2) regarding request for recordation of assignment or release of more than one lease; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: Near beginning of (1) before "forfeited", substituted "and recorded is" for "shall become" and after "forfeited", inserted "canceled, or expires"; near middle of (1) after "forfeiture", inserted "cancellation, or expiration"; and inserted (2) making violation of section a misdemeanor.

Case Notes

Plaintiff Prevailing Party on Release of Majority of Oil and Gas Leases Entitled to Attorney Fees: Plaintiff filed suit to compel release of 28 oil and gas leases in 1998, and defendants eventually executed release on 20 leases, leaving 8 leases for the jury to address at trial. Following remand at a second trial, plaintiff prevailed on three more leases, and upon a second appeal, the Supreme Court ordered execution on the remaining five leases as well. Thus, as the prevailing party on 23 leases even before the second appeal, plaintiff was entitled to reasonable attorney fees pursuant to this section. Somont Oil Co., Inc. v. A&G Drilling, Inc., 2006 MT 90, 332 M 56, 137 P3d 536 (2006).

Automatic Termination Clause — Notice Not Required: In 1965, Larsons executed a 5-year oil and gas lease to Sun Oil. In 1968, Sun Oil assigned the lease to Miami Oil. In 1980, Larsons sent Miami a letter noting drilling activities had been discontinued for the 2 previous years and requesting a release of its lease or assignment. Miami did not respond. Three months later, Larsons commenced an action to quiet title and obtain a release of the lease. Miami Oil argued that since production had commenced during the primary term of the lease, the lease could not be terminated unless notice was given pursuant to the habendum clause of the lease. The court relied on an automatic termination clause based on a cessation of production without resumption for more than 90 days. No notice was required because termination of the lease was automatic. The court adopted the reasoning and rule of Lynch v. Southern Coast Drilling Co., 442 S.W.2d 804 (Tex. Civ. App. 1969), in quieting title for the Larsons. Miami Oil Producers, Inc. v. Larson, 203 M 225, 661 P2d 1260, 40 St. Rep. 407 (1983), followed in Sundheim v. Reef Oil Corp., 247 M 244, 806 P2d 503, 48 St. Rep. 181 (1991).

Development: Lessor who intends to claim forfeiture, where development is an element, has the duty to demand that development proceed or commence. Braun v. Mon-O-Co Oil Corp., 133 M 101, 320 P2d 366 (1958).

Implied Covenant to Drill Offset Wells: Alleged failure to drill offset wells for protection of leased acreage in accordance with implied covenant to do so was not a breach of contract where there was no market for the gas that would be produced, and the drilling would thus have been a useless act. Severson v. Barstow, 103 M 526, 63 P2d 1022 (1936).

Implied Covenant to Find Market: Where the principal consideration for a lease on oil or gas lands is the payment of royalty, the lease, silent on the subject, carries an implied covenant to use reasonable diligence to market the product. Severson v. Barstow, 103 M 526, 63 P2d 1022 (1936).

Definition of "Forfeiture": "Forfeiture" means the deprivation of the right of the lessee to retain possession under the lease because of nonperformance of an obligation or condition imposed upon him by the lease. Steven v. Potlatch Oil & Ref. Co., 80 M 239, 260 P 119 (1927).

Time for Demanding Release: Lessor is not required to wait 60 days after forfeiture before making demand but may do so at any time, provided suit is not commenced before the expiration of the 60-day period during which it is the duty of the lessee to make release. Steven v. Potlatch Oil & Ref. Co., 80 M 239, 260 P 119 (1927).

Written Notice Not Required: The lessor of oil and gas rights is not required to give written notice of his intention to declare a forfeiture of the lease for failure of the lessee to commence drilling operations within the time stipulated in order for the lessor to prevail in an action brought under 82-1-201 through 82-1-204. Solberg v. Sunburst Oil & Gas Co., 76 M 254, 246 P 168 (1926).

Operations After Forfeiture: After forfeiture of an oil and gas lease has been declared and demand made for its return for nonperformance of the condition to commence drilling operations within a given time, it is immaterial that the lessee thereafter commenced drilling, and the lessee's failure to release the lease of record within 60 days entitles the lessor to prosecute his action under 82-1-201 through 82-1-204. Solberg v. Sunburst Oil & Gas Co., 76 M 254, 246 P 168 (1926).

Construction of Lease in Favor of Lessor: An oil and gas lease should be construed strictly against the lessee and in favor of the lessor. Daley v. Torrey, 69 M 599, 223 P 498 (1924).

Written Portion of Lease Controlling: Written paragraph in lease providing that in the event a well was not commenced within the time limit mentioned in the lease the instrument should be null and void was controlling as against a printed one under which, if the operations were not commenced within that time, the lessor should pay $2 per acre for each additional year commencement of drilling was delayed. Daley v. Torrey, 69 M 599, 223 P 498 (1924).

Case Notes

Oil and Gas Habendum Clause Obligating Maintenance of Production — Jury Instructions Allowing Consideration of Causes of Cessation of Production Improper When Evidence Shows Lack of Production of Paying Quantities: Actions to terminate oil and gas leases invoke two distinct inquiries: (1) whether the lease is producing in paying quantities; and (2) if not, whether the cessation in production is permanent or temporary. As an ownership-in-place state, in Montana, the lessee's interest terminates upon the occurrence of a stated event, which, under the habendum clause in effect here, was the cessation of production in paying quantities. Paying quantities is defined as the amount that would pay a small profit over the cost of operation, excluding the initial cost of bringing the well into production. Thus, the finder of fact must necessarily consider income generated from the property and the expenses incurred in its operation. However, in an effort to mitigate the harshness of the automatic termination rule, courts developed the temporary cessation of production rule, which shifts the burden to defendant to prove that cessation is temporary once plaintiff establishes that the lease has halted production. To determine whether a cessation is temporary or permanent, a jurisdiction considers the cause of the cessation, the time reasonably required to restore production, and the diligence exercised by the lessee in restoring production. Ownership-in-place jurisdictions generally limit temporary cessations to mechanical or production breakdowns. If there is a lack of market, if the lease is capable of producing in paying quantities, and if the lessee is using reasonable diligence to market the product, Montana law considers the lease as one that is producing in paying quantities and will not reach the temporary cessation of production question. The District Court in this case allowed jury consideration of oil prices, economic considerations, and defendant's financial condition in determining whether cessation was temporary or permanent. However, plaintiff established that the leases in question failed to produce in paying quantities during the prescribed accounting period. At that point, analysis implicating economic factors concluded. Therefore, the Supreme Court held that allowing jury consideration of defendant's economic factors was an abuse of discretion and was prejudicial to plaintiff, warranting a new trial. Somont Oil Co., Inc. v. A&G Drilling, Inc., 2002 MT 141, 310 M 221, 49 P3d 598 (2002), following Berthelote v. Loy Oil Co., 95 M 434, 28 P2d 187 (1933), and Christian v. A. A. Oil Corp., 161 M 420, 506 P2d 1369 (1973). On remand, defendants bore the burden of proving that cessation of production on all eight leases at issue was temporary, that all cessations in production were caused by sudden involuntary stoppages or mechanical breakdown of the wells, and that defendants engaged in diligent efforts to immediately restore production. However, given a complete lack of evidence from defendants as to why the majority of wells failed to operate and whether repairs were undertaken, there was no basis for submitting the question of temporary cessation to the jury, and plaintiff was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Additionally, the District Court did not err in limiting retrial to the second inquiry articulated in Somont I, id., concerning whether the cessation in production was permanent or temporary or in limiting the timeframe for which evidence could be presented regarding restoration of production to the leases. Somont Oil Co., Inc. v. A&G Drilling, Inc., 2006 MT 90, 332 M 56, 137 P3d 536 (2006). See also Watson v. Rochmill, 155 SW 2d 783 (Tex. 1941).

Following remand pursuant to Somont Oil Co., Inc. v. A&G Drilling, Inc., 2006 MT 90, 332 M 56, 137 P3d 536 (2006) (Somont II), plaintiff filed a renewed motion seeking damages for defendant's plugging the wells on the conceded leases. The District Court held that the damage claim was barred by res judicata. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The issue of damages was part of the litigation from the beginning in 1998. In the appeal that resulted from Somont II, plaintiff did not argue that it did not have a full opportunity to litigate whether damages were due, and nothing in the record indicated that plaintiff was precluded from litigating for damages. The litigation came to a close upon the decision in Somont II, and plaintiff's further claim for damages was prohibited by res judicata because plaintiff was barred from relitigating a claim that it already had an opportunity to litigate. Somont Oil Co. v. A&G Drilling, Inc., 2008 MT 447, 348 M 12, 199 P3d 241 (2008).

Standing to Compel Release of Oil and Gas Leases Gained by Assignment: Lessors of five oil and gas leases assigned plaintiff the right to sue defendant to compel release of the oil and gas leases. Defendant asserted that plaintiff lacked standing to sue because under this section, the owner of the leased premises may sue, but plaintiff was not the owner of the leases. The Supreme Court noted the longstanding rule that rights assigned from contracts between private individuals are assignable, that nonassignability is the exception, and that in the absence of a nonassignability clause, either party may generally make an assignment of contract rights. Further, under former Rule 17(a), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), a party vested with legal title is considered a real party in interest. Each of the leases in question provided for assignment of rights, one of which was the right to compel termination of a lessee's interest. Thus, plaintiff, having been vested with legal title by assignment, had standing to compel release of the leases. Somont Oil Co., Inc. v. A&G Drilling, Inc., 2002 MT 141, 310 M 221, 49 P3d 598 (2002).

Automatic Termination Clause — Notice Not Required: In 1965, Larsons executed a 5-year oil and gas lease to Sun Oil. In 1968, Sun Oil assigned the lease to Miami Oil. In 1980, Larsons sent Miami a letter noting drilling activities had been discontinued for the 2 previous years and requesting a release of its lease or assignment. Miami did not respond. Three months later, Larsons commenced an action to quiet title and obtain a release of the lease. Miami Oil argued that since production had commenced during the primary term of the lease, the lease could not be terminated unless notice was given pursuant to the habendum clause of the lease. The court relied on an automatic termination clause based on a cessation of production without resumption for more than 90 days. No notice was required because termination of the lease was automatic. The court adopted the reasoning and rule of Lynch v. Southern Coast Drilling Co., 442 S.W.2d 804 (Tex. Civ. App. 1969), in quieting title for the Larsons. Miami Oil Producers, Inc. v. Larson, 203 M 225, 661 P2d 1260, 40 St. Rep. 407 (1983), followed in Sundheim v. Reef Oil Corp., 247 M 244, 806 P2d 503, 48 St. Rep. 181 (1991).

Venue of Action: Although an action under this section combines three different causes of action, (1) an action for cancellation of the lease, (2) an action for the statutory penalty, and (3) an action for damages, the principal cause of action is for cancellation of the lease, which is a local nontransitory action in rem, and the defendant is not entitled to a change of venue as to any part of the action from the county where the real estate is located to the county of his residence. Beavers v. Rankin, 142 M 570, 385 P2d 640 (1963).

Attorney Fees:

Since this statute authorizes recovery of attorney fees, the Trial Court may act upon its own knowledge concerning value of attorneys' services and award fee without taking evidence. Stanolind Oil & Gas Co. v. Guertzgen, 100 F2d 299 (1938).

Where both lessor and lessee secured a portion of the relief they sought in action for cancellation of gas lease, neither party was required to pay the other's attorney fees. Severson v. Barstow, 103 M 526, 63 P2d 1022 (1936).

Nature of Action:

Action under these sections is one at law but embodies principle of equitable relief; Court should seek to do equity as between the parties. Severson v. Barstow, 103 M 526, 63 P2d 1022 (1936).

An action for the cancellation of an oil and gas lease and for recovery of damages and the statutory penalty for failure to release, brought under 82-1-201 through 82-1-204, is one at law, even through incidentally it calls for equitable relief. Stranahan v. Independent Natural Gas Co., 98 M 597, 41 P2d 39 (1935); Berthelote v. Loy Oil Co., 95 M 434, 28 P2d 187 (1933).

An action to compel the release of an oil and gas lease of record on the ground that the lessee had failed to commence drilling operations within the time fixed in the lease, by reason of which it became forfeited, and for the recovery of the statutory penalty, damages, and attorney's fees is one at law, entitling plaintiff to a jury trial. Solberg v. Sunburst Oil & Gas Co., 70 M 177, 225 P 612 (1924).

Burden to Prove Diligence to Find Market: In an action under 82-1-201 through 82-1-204 to cancel gas lease for failure to find market for gas produced, burden is upon lessee to establish fact that he used reasonable diligence in trying to find a market. Severson v. Barstow, 103 M 526, 63 P2d 1022 (1936).

Limitation of Action: A statute such as 82-1-202 that gives a right which existed before the statute and merely increases the damages by adding a penalty is not a penalty statute within the meaning of 27-2-211, the Statute of Limitations applicable to penalty statutes. Abell v. Bishop, 86 M 478, 284 P 525 (1930).

Grant by Lessor: When the lessor of oil and gas lands, after demanding a cancellation of the lease as required by 82-1-203, conveys title by warranty deed to another, both then have a remedial interest in the cause of action for cancellation of the lease when they join as plaintiffs in the action commenced after the passage of title. Failure of the grantee to make demand upon the lessee to clear the record of the instrument prior to commencement of the action does not destroy either plaintiff's right to maintain the suit since the lessor's demand was sufficient to meet the requirements of 82-1-203. Abell v. Bishop, 86 M 478, 284 P 525 (1930).

Abatement of Action: Although plaintiff's land was sold on foreclosure sale after his action for damages brought under 82-1-201 through 82-1-203 was commenced, the period of redemption having expired prior to retrial of the cause, it did not result in the abatement of the action under section 93-2824, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed). Solberg v. Sunburst Oil & Gas Co., 76 M 254, 246 P 168 (1926).

Construction of Lease — Time When Drilling Required: In an action to have an oil and gas lease forfeited for failure of the lessee to "commence drilling operations for oil" within the time specified in the lease, the phrase "commence drilling operations for oil" in the lease means the commencement of actual drilling and not the commencement of preliminary work necessary to such drilling. Evidence that a well is not "spudded in" is sufficient to make out a prima facie case of forfeiture. Solberg v. Sunburst Oil & Gas Co., 73 M 94, 235 P 761 (1925).

Damages:

To warrant recovery of special damages, i.e., such damages as are the natural but not the necessary result of defendant's wrongful act, they must be pleaded. Solberg v. Sunburst Oil & Gas Co., 73 M 94, 235 P 761 (1925).

Proof that lessee's failure to make release prevented lessor from making a new lease was admissible to show nominal damages recoverable under this section but inadmissible to show special damages. Solberg v. Sunburst Oil & Gas Co., 73 M 94, 235 P 761 (1925).

Case Notes

Lessee Unable to Rely on Lack of Notice to Successors in Interest: In 1965, Larsons executed a 5-year oil and gas lease to Sun Oil. In 1968, Sun Oil assigned the lease to Miami Oil. In 1980, Larsons sent Miami a letter noting drilling activities had been discontinued for the 2 previous years and requesting a release of its lease or assignment. Miami did not respond. Three months later, Larsons commenced an action to quiet title and obtain a release of the lease. Miami contended Larsons were not entitled to relief as they had not prior to commencing the action for release served notice of demand for release on every holder of any type of interest in the leasehold. Larsons made demand only on Miami and not on any of the other parties. Miami not only refused to execute the release but refused to supply the names of its successors in interest. The court refused to reward Miami for recalcitrance. The court held the purpose of 82-1-203 is served when one or all of the owners in interest in a mineral fee demand(s) release of a lease after its date of forfeiture or termination. A lessor's claim for relief against a particular lessee will not be defeated by failure to make contemporaneous demands on every one of the lessee's successors in interest. Miami Oil Producers, Inc. v. Larson, 203 M 225, 661 P2d 1260, 40 St. Rep. 407 (1983).

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 126 in (3), after first "clerk of court", inserted "or, if the clerk of court declines to act as trustee, the department of revenue" and substituted "authorize the clerk of court or the department" for "authorize him"; inserted (4) relating to appointment of Department of Revenue as trustee; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Definitions of "Related Documents" and "Tract of Land": Under 82-1-302, the term "related documents" refers to instruments which give a property interest holder the right to produce his property for such items as minerals. The interest holder's records of production and division proceeds also qualify as related documents. "Tract of land" includes all parcels described in a single lease, mineral deed, or other instrument giving a producer the right to produce property. In re Mont. Pac. Oil & Gas Co., 189 M 11, 614 P2d 1045, 37 St. Rep. 1238 (1980).

Fees for Creation of a Trust: Petitions filed pursuant to 82-1-302 and 82-1-305 are "special proceedings" within the meaning of 27-1-102, and as such, a fee of $20 is proper to assess for each such proceeding filed. In re Mont. Pac. Oil & Gas Co., 189 M 11, 614 P2d 1045 (1980).

Section Relating to Unlocatable Mineral Interest Owners Not Unconstitutionally Vague: Under the rule of law established in Cramp v. Bd. of Public Instruction, 368 US 278 (1961), that the due process test for vagueness of a statute is whether the law is so vague and uncertain that men of common intelligence must guess at its meaning, 82-1-305 is not unconstitutionally vague. This section (before 1997 amendment) can be interpreted to mean the following:

"1. Any person holding funds payable to persons the holder cannot locate, produced from mineral interests or mineral production, including oil and gas, must turn the funds over to the clerk of the local District Court. A grace period of six months is allowed from the enactment of the statutes.

2. Subsequent to the enactment of the statutes, no holder of the type stated above may continue holding payments for the account of unlocatable persons for longer than six months. In turning over the monies to the clerk of the court as required by the statutes, the holder must petition for a trust as provided for in section 82-1-302, MCA.

3. Civil penalties are provided for failure to comply with the statutes." In re Mont. Pac. Oil & Gas Co., 189 M 11, 614 P2d 1045, 37 St. Rep. 1238 (1980).

82-1-303. No further liability for petitioner.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "unlocatable owners" for "absent owners" after "income due to the".

82-1-304. Administration of trust.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 126 in (4) substituted "must be kept in force" for "shall be in force"; in (5), in first sentence, substituted "invest funds in a prudent manner" for "invest funds under his management in the manner of a prudent man" and in second sentence, after "credited", inserted "to the department of revenue or, if the clerk of the court is the trustee"; and made minor changes in style.

1989 Amendment: At end of first sentence of (5) substituted "provided in 72-34-114" for "defined in 72-21-104".

82-1-305. Trust for unlocatable mineral, leasehold, and royalty interest owners — penalty.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 126 deleted former (1) that read: "(1) Any bonuses, rental payments, royalties, and other income now held by any person or association for unlocatable owners or claimants of an interest in minerals underlying a tract of land must be deposited with the clerk of the district court in which the tract is located within 6 months after July 1, 1979. An accounting for the funds, any related documents, and any instrument creating a trust must be filed with the funds"; in (1), after "owners or claimants of", substituted "an interest in minerals underlying a tract of land. Within the 6-month period, the person shall petition" for "an interest in minerals, but in such case must petition"; in (2), after "subsection (1)", deleted "or (2)", substituted "on funds subject to subsection (1)" for "on such funds", and after "financial institutions" substituted "in any district in which the property or part of the property is located" for "in that district"; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Fees for Creation of a Trust: Petitions filed pursuant to 82-1-302 and 82-1-305 are "special proceedings" within the meaning of 27-1-102, and as such, a fee of $20 is proper to assess for each such proceeding filed. In re Mont. Pac. Oil & Gas Co., 189 M 11, 614 P2d 1045 (1980).

No Violation of Equal Protection: Section 82-1-305 does not violate the equal protection clause of the federal and state constitutions. The state through its Legislature has a legitimate interest in establishing a classification for the protection of unlocated owners of interests in minerals or in mineral production and in providing a method for the protection of mineral producers, including oil and gas operators, as a defense against liability from future claims of such unlocated owners. In re Mont. Pac. Oil & Gas Co., 189 M 11, 614 P2d 1045, 37 St. Rep. 1238 (1980).

Section Not Unconstitutionally Vague: Under the rule of law established in Cramp v. Bd. of Public Instruction, 368 US 278 (1961), that the due process test for vagueness of a statute is whether the law is so vague and uncertain that men of common intelligence must guess at its meaning, 82-1-305 is not unconstitutionally vague. This section (before 1997 amendment) can be interpreted to mean the following:

"1. Any person holding funds payable to persons the holder cannot locate, produced from mineral interests or mineral production, including oil and gas, must turn the funds over to the clerk of the local District Court. A grace period of six months is allowed from the enactment of the statutes.

2. Subsequent to the enactment of the statutes, no holder of the type stated above may continue holding payments for the account of unlocatable persons for longer than six months. In turning over the monies to the clerk of the court as required by the statutes, the holder must petition for a trust as provided for in section 82-1-302, MCA.

3. Civil penalties are provided for failure to comply with the statutes." In re Mont. Pac. Oil & Gas Co., 189 M 11, 614 P2d 1045, 37 St. Rep. 1238 (1980).

82-1-306. Filing of addresses.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 126 in (1), after "county", substituted "in which the land is located a notice containing the person's address and a description of the person's interest in the minerals. Filing the notice creates a rebuttable presumption" for "wherein the mineral interests lie a notice of his address and the legal description of his interest and thereby establish a rebuttable presumption"; inserted (2) requiring Clerk and Recorder to forward copy of notice to trustee; and made minor changes in style.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 3, of the Montana Constitution enumerates certain inalienable individual rights, including the right to a clean and healthful environment, the right of pursuing life's basic necessities, the right of enjoying and defending an individual's life and liberty, the right of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and the right of seeking individual safety, health, and happiness in all lawful ways; and

WHEREAS, the constitutionally enumerated rights are by their very nature bound to result in competing interests in specific fact situations; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 1, of the Montana Constitution provides that the state and each person shall maintain and improve a clean and healthful environment in Montana for present and future generations and directs the Legislature to provide for the administration and enforcement of this duty and also directs the Legislature to provide adequate remedies for the protection of the environmental life support system from degradation and to provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has reviewed the intent of the framers of the 1972 Montana Constitution as evidenced in the verbatim transcripts of the constitutional convention; and

WHEREAS, there is no indication that one enumerated inalienable right is intended to supersede other inalienable rights, including the right to use property in all lawful means; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature, mindful of its constitutional obligation to provide for the administration and enforcement of the constitution, has enacted a comprehensive set of laws to accomplish the goals of the constitution, including the Montana Clean Indoor Air Act of 1979, Title 50, chapter 40, part 1, MCA; the Montana Environmental Policy Act, Title 75, chapter 1, parts 1 through 3, MCA; the Clean Air Act of Montana, Title 75, chapter 2, parts 1 through 4, MCA; water quality laws, Title 75, chapter 5, MCA; The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, Title 75, chapter 7, part 1, MCA; The Montana Solid Waste Management Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 2, MCA; The Montana Hazardous Waste Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 4, MCA; the Comprehensive Environmental Cleanup and Responsibility Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 7, MCA; the Montana Megalandfill Siting Act, sections 75-10-901 through 75-10-945, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Installer and Inspector Licensing and Permitting Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 2, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 5, MCA; the Montana Major Facility Siting Act, Title 75, chapter 20, MCA; the Open-Space Land and Voluntary Conservation Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 6, MCA; the Environmental Control Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 7, MCA; The Strip and Underground Mine Siting Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 1, MCA; The Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 2, MCA; The Opencut Mining Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 4, MCA; and The Nongame and Endangered Species Conservation Act, Title 87, chapter 5, part 1, MCA."

Effective Date: Section 40, Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided that this section is effective on passage and approval. Approved April 16, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 41, Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to actions for judicial review or other causes of action challenging the issuance of a permit, petition for review, amendment, license, arbitration, action, certificate, or inspection that are pending but not yet decided on or after [the effective date of this act]." Part 1
Location and Record of Claims

Part Case Notes

Necessity for Substantial Compliance: The provisions of local statutes relative to the location and recording notice of the location of mining claims are not only valid, but they are mandatory, and must be substantially complied with in order that the locator may acquire any right under his location. Thompson v. Barton Gulch Min. Co., 63 M 190, 207 P 108 (1922); Wilson v. Freeman 29 M 470, 75 P 84 (1876).

82-2-101. Manner of locating claim.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Case Notes

Meaning of "Discovery": Whether or not a mineral claimant has made a discovery sufficient to make valid his location is a question for the trier of fact. It is not required for validity that the mineral deposits must be sufficiently extensive to pay the mine's operating expenses, nor is there a requirement that the ground must yield any specific quantity of a particular mineral. Rather, the rule is that to constitute a "discovery" under mining law, it is sufficient that a particular mineral be found in the ground in a quantity that justifies the locator's development of the claim with a reasonable expectation of finding the mineral in payment quantities. Boscarino v. Gibson, 207 M 112, 672 P2d 1119, 40 St. Rep. 1931 (1983).

Notice of Location — Posting at Point of Discovery: When the record revealed that the notice was not posted near any discovery point, but rather was posted in the center of the claim and that the individual posting the claim had not seen any mineralization at the point the notice was posted, there was insufficient evidence to support the jury's verdict that the attempted claim was valid. The Anaconda Co. v. Whittaker, 188 M 66, 610 P2d 1177, 37 St. Rep. 902 (1980).

Actual Discovery of Minerals Required: When the record revealed that no one had actually found minerals in place on the claim but that the attempted discovery was based on geological studies for potential discovery of mineralization, there was insufficient evidence to support the jury's verdict that the attempted claim was valid. The Anaconda Co. v. Whittaker, 188 M 66, 610 P2d 1177, 37 St. Rep. 902 (1980).

Rights Against Subsequent Locator With Notice: Under 82-2-112, the failure to record a verified location of a mining claim does not operate to deprive the locator of his interest therein as against one who enters the property and makes a subsequent location with notice of the prior claim. Harvey v. Havener, 135 M 437, 340 P2d 1084 (1959).

Location Notice to Accurately Describe Claim: In action to quiet title to mining claims, location notices of defendants were void where they were so indefinite and uncertain that it would be very difficult or perhaps impossible to locate the corners of the claims. Robinson v. Laffon, 131 M 446, 311 P2d 768 (1957).

Exclusive Right of Possession: One in rightful possession of a lawfully made placer mining location is guaranteed the exclusive right of possession, excluding anyone else from entering thereon during the life of the location for any purpose. Conway v. Fabian, 108 M 287, 89 P2d 1022 (1939).

Placer Rights Subject to Right to Mill Tailings: The locator of a placer mining claim does not have the right to mill tailings placed thereon by the operator of a quartz mine that have not been abandoned, the owner of the tailings having had a right to deposit them upon the public domain or upon lands of which he had possession. A mineral location thereafter made upon such lands is subject to the right of the prior deposit. Conway v. Fabian, 108 M 287, 89 P2d 1022 (1939).

Area of Claim: The area bounded by a mining location must be within the limits granted by the statute—1,500 feet in length by 600 in width—and boundaries beyond such limits do not impart notice to subsequent locators, they not being required to look for stakes or boundaries beyond such limits. Thompson v. Barton Gulch Min. Co., 63 M 190, 207 P 108 (1922).

Boundaries:

The boundaries of a mining location must be so definite and certain that, taking the discovery as the initial point, they may be readily traced. The declaratory statement must furnish such information that a person of reasonable intelligence may therefrom find the claim and run its lines. Thompson v. Barton Gulch Min. Co., 63 M 190, 207 P 108 (1922).

The right of the Legislature to provide rules for the marking of the boundaries of mining claims and to provide for a record of such a claim and for what the recorded paper must contain is fully settled in this state. Baker v. Butte City Water Co., 28 M 222, 72 P 617 (1903), affirmed in Butte City Water Co. v. Baker, 196 US 119, 49 L Ed 409, 25 S Ct 211 (1905).

Substantial Compliance Necessary:

The provisions of this section, calling for the posting of a notice of location of a quartz lode mining claim containing a statement of the number of feet claimed along the course of the vein from the point of discovery, and of the next section, requiring the recordation of a certificate of location in the office of the County Clerk showing the direction and distance claimed along the course of the vein, etc., must be substantially complied with. Thompson v. Barton Gulch Min. Co., 63 M 190, 207 P 108 (1922).

Evidence that the locator of a mining claim substantially complied with the requirements of the federal statutes is not alone sufficient to a valid location, a substantial compliance with the state statutes also being required. Ringling v. Mahurin, 59 M 38, 197 P 829 (1921).

There can be no valid location of a mining claim without a discovery and a compliance with the requirements of the state statute. Ferris v. McNally, 45 M 20, 121 P 889 (1912); Baker v. Butte City Water Co., 28 M 222, 72 P 617 (1903); Sanders v. Noble, 22 M 110, 55 P 1037 (1899); Upton v. Larkin, 7 M 449, 17 P 728 (1888).

Where the locator had posted his notice a considerable distance away from the point of discovery but about a month thereafter, in accordance with the statute, sank his discovery shaft at the point where he posted his notice, and in the meantime another had made discovery and posted his notice, the location of the former must be postponed to the date when he posted his notice at the point of discovery because of the intervening rights of the latter. Butte N. Copper Co. v. Radmilovich, 39 M 157, 101 P 1078 (1909).

Where the locator of a lode mining claim failed to comply with the requirements of the statute relative to completing his location after the posting of his declaratory statement and another made a location conflicting with the claim of the prior discoverer, the area in conflict did not revert to the public domain but inured to the benefit of the junior locator who, by performing the necessary work required by the statute, became entitled to the possession of it. Helena Gold & Iron Co. v. Baggaley, 34 M 464, 87 P 455 (1906). See Street v. Delta Min. Co., 42 M 371, 112 P 701 (1910); Ferris v. McNally, 45 M 20, 121 P 889 (1912).

Failure to Complete Claim: Sections 82-2-101 through 82-2-104, modifying to some extent the requirements of the law with relation to the location of mining claims, go no further than to direct the Courts to disregard defects or irregularities in the posted and recorded notice and the failure to do any of the other acts made necessary to complete a location when it appears that such acts have in fact been done before a location of the same ground has been made by another. However, these sections do not excuse the performance of any act, even though the subsequent locator has notice of a prior location, which is required to perfect the location. Ringling v. Mahurin, 59 M 38, 197 P 829 (1921).

Prior Right by Discovery and Notice: By discovery and the posting of notice of claim, the discoverer acquires a right to make a location to the exclusion of one who thereafter enters and makes a location pending the time allowed by this section to complete the marking of the boundaries and the required excavation work. Ferris v. McNally, 45 M 20, 121 P 889 (1912).

Development Work: In addition to the acts required by the federal statutes, the state might rightfully exact of the locator of a quartz lode mining claim the doing of development work and the filing for record of a declaratory statement. Orton v. Bender, 43 M 263, 115 P 406 (1911); Butte Consol. Min. Co. v. Barker, 35 M 327, 89 P 302, 90 P 177 (1907); Mares v. Dillon, 30 M 117, 75 P 963 (1904).

Independent Acts to Be Done: The law contemplates that the location of a mining claim shall consist of a number of distinct acts which are independent of each other. The last that may be done does not relate back to the first, and all must be performed before a legal location exists. Thornton v. Kaufman, 40 M 282, 106 P 361 (1910); McKay v. McDougall, 25 M 258, 64 P 669 (1901); Gonu v. Russell, 3 M 358 (1879).

Manifestation of Intention to Claim Quartz Lode: Under the Political Code of 1895 the only way the locator of a quartz lode mining claim could manifest his intention to claim the ground embraced within his boundaries, in good faith under the mining laws, was by means either of a discovery shaft or a crosscut sunk or made from an opening upon the claim sought to be located and not upon grounds over which he had not complete control as a matter of right or from which he might be excluded at any time at the option of another. Butte Consol. Min. Co. v. Barker, 35 M 327, 89 P 302, 90 P 177 (1907).

Constitutionality: State statutes providing additional requirements for valid location of mining claims to those imposed by acts of Congress are not in violation of the United States Constitution and acts of Congress. While the validity of a law of the Territory requiring a location notice to be verified was doubted in Wenner v. McNulty, 7 M 30, 14 P 643 (1887), the power of a state legislature to impose additional burdens upon the locator of a mining claim is now definitely settled. Purdum v. Laddin, 23 M 387, 59 P 153 (1899); Berg v. Koegel, 16 M 266, 40 P 605 (1895); McCowan v. Maclay, 16 M 234, 40 P 602 (1895); Metcalf v. Prescott, 10 M 283, 25 P 1037 (1891); O'Donnell v. Glenn, 8 M 248, 19 P 302 (1888).

Possession Alone Insufficient: A location of a mining claim is not made by taking possession alone but by working on the ground, recording, and doing whatever else is required for that purpose by the acts of Congress and the local laws and regulations. Purdum v. Laddin, 23 M 387, 59 P 153 (1899); Garfield M. & M. Co. v. Hammer, 6 M 53, 8 P 153 (1886); Upton v. Larkin 5 M 600, 6 P 66 (1885).

Power to Swing Claim: Though a locator has posted a notice under state and federal statutes stating the general course of the vein, he may, within 90 days, swing his claim in any direction required to include the vein, where no bad faith is shown. Sanders v. Noble, 22 M 110, 55 P 1037 (1899).

Procedure for Quartz Lode Claim Generally: Relative to the successive steps for making a valid location of a quartz lode mining claim, see Orton v. Bender, 43 M 263, 115 P 406 (1911); Thornton v. Kaufman, 40 M 282, 106 P 361 (1910); Butte N. Copper Co. v. Radmilovich, 39 M 157, 101 P 1078 (1909); Butte Consol. Min. Co. v. Barker, 35 M 327, 89 P 302, 90 P 177 (1907).

Notice Generally: For decisions as to the requisites of a valid location of a mining claim and the sufficiency or insufficiency of notice of location and declaratory statement under former statutes, see, generally, Consol. Gold & Sapphire Min. Co. v. Struthers, 41 M 565, 111 P 152 (1910); Giberson v. Tuolumne Copper Min. Co., 41 M 396, 109 P 974 (1910); Tiggeman v. Mrzlak, 40 M 19, 105 P 77 (1909); Butte N. Copper Co. v. Radmilovich, 39 M 157, 101 P 1078 (1909); Hickey v. Anaconda Copper Min. Co., 33 M 46, 81 P 806 (1905); Mares v. Dillon, 30 M 117, 75 P 963 (1904); Wilson v. Freeman, 29 M 470, 75 P 84 (1904); Brownfield v. Bier, 15 M 403, 39 P 461 (1895); Freezer v. Sweeney, 8 M 508, 21 P 20 (1888); Gamer v. Glenn, 8 M 371, 20 P 654 (1888); Flick v. Gold Hill & Lee Mtn. Section Not Codified: Section 50-703, R.C.M. 1947, a statute giving effect to mining locations that were recorded before the statute was enacted, was not codified in the MCA. This statute has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to Sec. 3613, Pol. C. 1895.

Case Notes

Valid Location of Mine — Test: A condition precedent to a valid mining location is the actual discovery of a vein, lode, or ledge of rock in place bearing a valuable mineral deposit. If a subsequent locator questions the existence of such a discovery, it is incumbent on the original locator to prove he discovered sufficient minerals to meet the prudent man test. That test is whether minerals have been found and the evidence is such that a person of ordinary prudence would be justified in the further expenditure of his labor and means with a reasonable prospect of success in developing a valuable mine. The ore need not be in sufficient quantity to support a profitable mining operation, nor must any specific amount of ore be found. In the present case, a certificate of location filed by the original locator was, under this section, sufficient prima facie evidence of a valid discovery. Silver Jet Mines, Inc. v. Schwark, 210 M 81, 682 P2d 708, 41 St. Rep. 933 (1984).

Reference to Natural or Permanent Monument: The fact that location certificate did not refer to a natural or permanent monument was of no significance when the contestant found a copy of the certificate at the entrance to the mine. McCarthy v. Morris, 159 M 227, 497 P2d 97 (1972).

Rights Against Subsequent Locator With Notice: Under 82-2-112, the failure to record a verified location of a mining claim does not operate to deprive the locator of his interest therein as against one who enters the property and makes a subsequent location with notice of the prior claim. Harvey v. Havener, 135 M 437, 340 P2d 1084 (1959).

Invalid Certificates as Cloud on Title: Recorded certificates of location may cloud the title when apparently valid but actually, under the mining law, invalid. Hopkins v. Walker, 244 US 486, 61 L Ed 1270, 37 S Ct 711 (1917).

Statement to Be Self-Evident: The declaratory statement of a mining location required to be filed for record cannot be supplemented by proof of what was actually done in the premises. Dolan v. Passmore, 34 M 277, 85 P 1034 (1906); Hahn v. James, 29 M 1, 73 P 965 (1903).

Statement to Be Verified:

A declaratory statement of location of quartz mining claim, required to be recorded, must be under oath. McCowan v. Maclay, 16 M 234, 40 P 602 (1895); Brownfield v. Bier, 15 M 403, 39 P 461 (1895); Mattingly v. Lewisohn, 13 M 508, 25 P 111 (1893); Russell v. Hoyt, 4 M 412, 2 P 25 (1882). In O'Donnell v. Glenn, 8 M 248, 19 P 302 (1888), the Supreme Court held that a declaratory statement which does not contain the required affidavit is void and that decision has since then been followed uniformly. Washoe Copper Co. v. Junila, 43 M 178, 115 P 916 (1911). See Hickey v. Anaconda Copper Min. Co., 33 M 46, 81 P 806 (1905).

An affidavit to a declaratory statement of a quartz mining claim, made on information, has been held sufficient under a statute in Wenner v. McNulty, 7 M 30, 14 P 643 (1887), and the fact that the locator verified the statement on information only, instead of on his personal knowledge, did not render the statement void under a statute requiring such statement to be verified by the "oath of the locator". In the absence of proof tending to impeach the truth of the facts stated in a declaratory statement for a mining claim, it is immaterial to an adverse locator that the declaration was verified on information only. Mares v. Dillon, 30 M 117, 75 P 963 (1904).

A location notice, the affidavit to which did not contain notarial evidence that the party making it took an oath or was ever present before the officer, was held to be sufficient. Metcalf v. Prescott, 10 M 283, 25 P 1037 (1891). So, too, an affidavit to the declaratory statement of a quartz location, which disclosed that the statement was sworn to 1 year before the location of the lode, was considered fatal to the validity of the location in the absence of proof that the affidavit was wrongly dated by mistake of the notary. Berg v. Koegel, 16 M 266, 40 P 605 (1895). But where it appeared that the declaratory statement was sworn and subscribed to before an officer having power to administer an oath, it was valid although affiant's name did not appear in the body of the instrument. Davidson v. Bordeaux, 15 M 245, 38 P 1075 (1895).

Case Notes

Failure to File Affidavit — Effect on Possessory Interests: Section 82-2-103 was enacted to supplement federal statutory law relating to annual improvements. That law simply requires work to be done annually. If the work is done, the claim is not open for relocation. Thus, in this quiet title action plaintiffs did not forfeit their interest in four mining claims upon which they faithfully performed the annual labor although they failed to file affidavits of performance of annual assessment work for one year. Defendants were not entitled to relocate the mining claims upon discovery of plaintiffs' omission to file affidavits. Section 82-2-103 does not mandate forfeiture of possessory interests in a claim if an affidavit is not filed. The only penalty is that the claimant must use other proof of the assessment work to avoid opening the claim for relocation. O'Connor v. Wilke, 217 M 422, 705 P2d 572, 42 St. Rep. 1298 (1985).

Sufficiency of Annual Assessment Work — Attribution to Another Claim: Where second locator of unpatented mining claim challenged the sufficiency of the required annual assessment work of successor to original locator, the court need scrutinize only the assessment work of 1980, since second locator did not locate his claim until that year. If the 1980 work was sufficient, the successor had a valid claim. If it was insufficient, even sufficient work during prior years could not save successor's claim, presuming a valid location by second locator. Generally, assessment work must tend to develop the claim and facilitate the extraction of ore. The work was sufficient where it consisted of securing the tunnel entrance on an adjoining patented claim to prevent unauthorized entry, clearing growth on the path to the tunnel, and clearing about 6,000 square yards of ground. The work on the adjoining patented claim could be attributed to the unpatented claim since evidence showed the clearing would be used as the needed base of operations for mining the unpatented claim and that the claim could be mined from the tunnel. Silver Jet Mines, Inc. v. Schwark, 210 M 81, 682 P2d 708, 41 St. Rep. 933 (1984).

Filing of Annual Assessment Affidavit Mandatory: Under former law, the filing of an annual affidavit could be used as proof that the assessment work had been done, but filing the affidavit was not required. It is now mandatory to file such an affidavit, and failure to file it is prima facie evidence that the assessment work has not been done. Sawyer-Adecor Int'l, Inc. v. Anglin, 198 M 440, 646 P2d 1194, 39 St. Rep. 1118 (1982).

Amount of Work Required: Recorded affidavit was prima facie evidence that annual assessment work was done, and it was not important how much work was done. McCarthy v. Morris, 159 M 227, 497 P2d 97 (1972).

Preservation of Evidence: Such statutes as this relate not to the effect of doing the work or making the improvements, as required by law but to the method of preserving prima facie evidence of the fact that such requirement has been fulfilled. Davidson v. Bordeaux, 15 M 245, 38 P 1075 (1895); Coleman v. Curtis, 12 M 301, 30 P 266 (1892).

Oral Evidence: The affidavit of annual representation is prima facie evidence of the facts recited, but oral evidence may be given to prove that the work was done, and it will not be regarded as error to admit the affidavit. Davidson v. Bordeaux, 15 M 245, 38 P 1075 (1895).

Payment for Work Done: Where labor performed as annual representation upon a mining claim is done by other than the owner, it is not necessary that such work be actually paid for by the owner in order to be effectual for that purpose. Coleman v. Curtis, 12 M 301, 30 P 266 (1892).

Intent to Abandon: In determining what constitutes abandonment of personal property (in the instant case mill tailings), the paramount object of inquiry is the intention of the owner to abandon, gathered from his acts or statements. Hence, where the owner of a mill tailing dump took measures to preserve it at considerable expense for future treatment, there was no abandonment. Conway v. Fabian, 108 M 287, 89 P2d 1022 (1939), followed in Hawkins v. Mahoney, 1999 MT 296, 297 M 98, 990 P2d 776, 56 St. Rep. 1185 (1999).

Relocation of Claim Held Not to Require Abandonment of Former Overlapping Claim: Noranda Minerals Corporation's predecessor in interest, the United States Borax and Chemical Corporation (Borax), located several mining claims that partially overlapped previously existing Borax mining claims. The Wilderness Society (TWS) challenged the validity of Borax's later claim, asserting that the later claim could not be approved by the U.S. Forest Service unless the earlier claim had been replaced, abandoned, or automatically extinguished and therefore constituted unappropriated ground. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, distinguishing Tiggeman v. Mrzlak, 40 M 19, 105 P 77 (1909), and Lehman v. Sutter, 60 M 97, 198 P 1100 (1921), and relying upon Harvey v. Havener, 135 M 437, 340 P2d 1084 (1959), affirmed the judgment of the U.S. District Court and held that there was nothing in the language of 82-2-109 or this section requiring the interpretation of those statutes in the manner asserted by TWS. Wilderness Society v. Dombeck, 168 F3d 367 (9th Cir. 1999).

Failure to Excavate: Where relocators of their own claims did not do the excavation work required to be done under this section before another had located the same ground, their attempted relocations were nugatory. Lehman v. Sutter, 60 M 97, 198 P 1100 (1921).

Actual Knowledge: Where subsequent locators had actual knowledge of prior locations and the only defects on which they relied in attempting to prove that the claim of the prior locators was of no force and effect were defects in a recorded certificate which, under 82-2-112, did not deprive the locators of their rights, they could not rely on this section to avoid the force and effect of 82-2-107 through 82-2-109. Rights Against Subsequent Locator With Notice: Under 82-2-112, the failure to record a verified location of a mining claim does not operate to deprive the locator of his interest therein as against one who enters the property and makes a subsequent location with notice of the prior claim. Harvey v. Havener, 135 M 437, 340 P2d 1084 (1959).

Notice to Subsequent Locators:

In action to quiet title, it appeared that defendants were aware of the claims of plaintiffs and were watching to ascertain whether plaintiffs performed their assessment work. Plaintiffs had been interested in their claims for 21 years, and they were originally located in 1930. One of the defendants had been familiar with the area of the claims since 1932. Defendants in such circumstances could not maintain that they located their claims without notice of the prior claims of plaintiffs. Robinson v. Laffon, 131 M 446, 311 P2d 768 (1957).

In view of the provision of this section that defects in a recorded certificate of location of a mining claim are not material where the person relying on the defects made his location with notice thereof, allegations in his complaint, in an action to determine an adverse claim, relating to such defects are immaterial. Lehman v. Sutter, 60 M 97, 198 P 1100 (1921); Heilman v. Loughrin, 57 M 380, 188 P 370 (1920).

Title Required to Take Advantage of Defects: In an action in ejectment to recover possession of a mining claim, where defendants did not attempt to show title in themselves to the portion of the claim in dispute, either by location or any other method provided for by the federal statutes, they were in no position to take advantage of alleged defects in the original and amended declaratory statements of location. Consol. Gold & Sapphire Min. Co. v. Struthers, 41 M 565, 111 P 152 (1910).

82-2-113. Effect of patent.

Case Notes

Rejection by Federal Land Department: Where the federal Land Department did not merely reject an application for patent to placer mining location but declared that the ground covered thereby was nonmineral in character and that the location was null and void, the force and effect of the location was destroyed, the land within its boundaries reverted to the public domain, and only the federal government could question the right of another to enter thereon and reclaim mill tailings deposited on it. Conway v. Fabian, 108 M 287, 89 P2d 1022 (1939).

Retroactive Effect: In an action to quiet title and for an accounting of ore alleged to have been unlawfully taken, the Court properly held this section to have retroactive effect, notwithstanding a statutory prohibition against retroactive effects without a specific declaration of retroactivity, as the language of the statute itself evidenced an intent that it should apply to claims made before the enactment of the law. Butte & Superior Copper Co. v. Clark-Mont. Realty Co., 248 F 609 (1918).

Amendment of Description: A locator who had misdescribed his claim as running easterly and westerly was entitled under this section to file an amended declaratory statement that the claim ran in a northerly and southerly direction to correspond to the staking of the claim on the ground. Wilson v. Freeman, 29 M 470, 75 P 84 (1904).

Amendment Relates Back:

An amended declaratory statement confers no rights which did not exist prior to the filing of the amended statement but relates back to the first location. Milwaukee Gold Extraction Co. v. Gordon, 37 M 209, 95 P 995 (1908). See Giberson v. Tuolumne Copper Min. Co., 41 M 396, 109 P 974 (1910).

An amended declaratory statement relates back to the date of the original location, by virtue of the locator's discovery, his prior possession, the posting of the notice, the marking of the boundaries, the doing of the necessary development work, and the attempted compliance with the law relating to the filing of the declaratory statement for record. Butte Consol. Min. Co. v. Barker, 35 M 327, 89 P 302, 90 P 177 (1907). See Giberson v. Tuolumne Copper Min. Co., 41 M 396, 109 P 974 (1910).

Change of Name of Claim: The addition of a word to the name of a mining claim in an amended declaratory statement was insufficient to invalidate the statement, where such statement declares on its face that it is an amended declaratory statement, and the ground embraced therein is the same as in the original. Butte Consol. Min. Co. v. Barker, 35 M 327, 89 P 302, 90 P 177 (1907).

Case Notes

Oil Well Not Considered Mine to Which Right-of-Way May Be Obtained Through Eminent Domain — No Condemnation Power of Private Individuals and Corporation Except Through Legislative Grant — Condemnation Statutes Strictly Construed: Plaintiff filed a federal action seeking to condemn an access easement and right-of-way across defendant's ranch land for access to drill and operate oil wells. The federal District Court certified two questions to the Montana Supreme Court regarding whether: (1) exploration and development of a federal oil and gas lease are considered a mine that constitutes a public use under 70-30-102; and (2) this section grants the owner of a federal oil and gas lease the power, as the owner of a "mining claim", to condemn a right-of-way across land of another for access to explore and develop the lease. The Supreme Court answered both questions in the negative. Private individuals and corporations, like state agencies, have no inherent power of eminent domain, so their authority to condemn derives only from a legislative grant. Public uses for which the power of eminent domain are granted must be interpreted pursuant to the plain language set forth by the Legislature and may not be implied. Because eminent domain interferes with the fundamental constitutional right to the private ownership of real property, any statute that allows condemnation of private property must be strictly construed, giving the statute its plain interpretation but favoring the person's fundamental rights. Under the plain meaning of 70-30-102, oil wells are not considered mines to which rights-of-way for roads may be obtained through eminent domain proceedings. Further, exploration and development of a federal oil and gas lease are not a mine that constitutes a public use, so the owner of an oil and gas lease has no power under this section to condemn a right-of-way. McCabe Petroleum Corp. v. N Bar Ranch, LLC, 2004 MT 73, 320 M 384, 87 P3d 995 (2004), following St. v. Aitchison, 96 M 335, 30 P2d 805 (1934), and Bozeman v. Right to Use Common Road Established by Express Grant in Deed — Prescriptive Easement Inapplicable: Appellants contended that they were entitled to an injunction because the presence of a gate across a common road changed the nature of their easement from prescriptive to permissive. However, because their right to use the common road was obtained by express grant in their deed pursuant to an agreement under this section that allows owners of certain mining claims to obtain a right-of-way by agreement, there was no prescriptive use and no basis for appellants' argument that the presence of the gate diminished their right to use the common road. The fact that appellants did not use the easement to any significant extent, coupled with the trial court's setting of standards regarding the gate, affirmed that the court did not abuse its discretion in denying appellants' request for an injunction to prevent maintenance of a locked gate across the common road. Case Notes

Open-Pit Excavation Necessary for Backslope as Authorized Public Use — Landowner Notification Act Ineffectual to Prevent Condemnation: An open-pit excavation necessary to backslope the mining of an ore body is an authorized public use for which condemnation may be had. The Landowner Notification Act appears to preclude this kind of condemnation because under 82-2-303, an open-pit mine operator must obtain from the surface owner of private lands specific written approval of proposed work before commencing operations. However, the Supreme Court noted that the Act was aimed at the protection of private persons, while eminent domain law, constitutionally grounded and deriving from the power of sovereignty, was enacted to protect the public good. The court found it inconceivable that the Legislature intended provisions enacted for the benefit of private persons to overcome and supersede provisions preserving the public good. Therefore, the Landowner Notification Act was found not to adversely affect the right to use eminent domain against a nonconsenting landowner. Mont. Talc Co. v. Cyprus Mines Corp., 229 M 491, 748 P2d 444, 44 St. Rep. 2161 (1987). See also McCabe Petroleum Corp. v. Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 3, of the Montana Constitution enumerates certain inalienable individual rights, including the right to a clean and healthful environment, the right of pursuing life's basic necessities, the right of enjoying and defending an individual's life and liberty, the right of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and the right of seeking individual safety, health, and happiness in all lawful ways; and

WHEREAS, the constitutionally enumerated rights are by their very nature bound to result in competing interests in specific fact situations; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 1, of the Montana Constitution provides that the state and each person shall maintain and improve a clean and healthful environment in Montana for present and future generations and directs the Legislature to provide for the administration and enforcement of this duty and also directs the Legislature to provide adequate remedies for the protection of the environmental life support system from degradation and to provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has reviewed the intent of the framers of the 1972 Montana Constitution as evidenced in the verbatim transcripts of the constitutional convention; and

WHEREAS, there is no indication that one enumerated inalienable right is intended to supersede other inalienable rights, including the right to use property in all lawful means; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature, mindful of its constitutional obligation to provide for the administration and enforcement of the constitution, has enacted a comprehensive set of laws to accomplish the goals of the constitution, including the Montana Clean Indoor Air Act of 1979, Title 50, chapter 40, part 1, MCA; the Montana Environmental Policy Act, Title 75, chapter 1, parts 1 through 3, MCA; the Clean Air Act of Montana, Title 75, chapter 2, parts 1 through 4, MCA; water quality laws, Title 75, chapter 5, MCA; The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, Title 75, chapter 7, part 1, MCA; The Montana Solid Waste Management Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 2, MCA; The Montana Hazardous Waste Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 4, MCA; the Comprehensive Environmental Cleanup and Responsibility Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 7, MCA; the Montana Megalandfill Siting Act, sections 75-10-901 through 75-10-945, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Installer and Inspector Licensing and Permitting Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 2, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 5, MCA; the Montana Major Facility Siting Act, Title 75, chapter 20, MCA; the Open-Space Land and Voluntary Conservation Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 6, MCA; the Environmental Control Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 7, MCA; The Strip and Underground Mine Siting Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 1, MCA; The Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 2, MCA; The Opencut Mining Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 4, MCA; and The Nongame and Endangered Species Conservation Act, Title 87, chapter 5, part 1, MCA."

Severability: Section 39, Ch. 361, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 41, Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to actions for judicial review or other causes of action challenging the issuance of a permit, petition for review, amendment, license, arbitration, action, certificate, or inspection that are pending but not yet decided on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 16, 2003.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (2)(b), after "rules", deleted "to suspend and revoke permits, and to conduct hearings". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Sections Amended and Created — Effective Date: Chapter 550, L. 1979, amended 16 sections of this part and created one section for the purpose of bringing state law into compliance with federal law requiring reclamation of strip-mined lands. The effective date of Chapter 550 was delayed pending approval by the Secretary of the Interior of the state plan implementing the federal requirements. Section 19(1), Ch. 550, L. 1979, provided: "(1) This act does not become effective until the secretary of interior has conditionally or finally approved the state's permanent regulatory program under Public Law 95-87; however, rules pursuant to this act may be adopted pursuant to Title 2, chapter 4, prior to the effective date of this act and shall become effective only on the effective date of this act." Conditional approval of the state implementation plan was granted effective April 1, 1980. Sections amended were 82-4-202 through 82-4-205, 82-4-221 through 82-4-223, 82-4-225, 82-4-227, 82-4-231, 82-4-232, 82-4-235, 82-4-239, 82-4-251, 82-4-252, and 82-4-254. Section 82-4-228 was created.

Temporary Provisions: Section 19(2), Ch. 550, L. 1979, provided: "(2) Within 2 months of the secretary of interior's approval of the state's permanent regulatory program pursuant to section 503 of Public Law 95-87, as amended, each operator shall submit to the department a permit revision application to bring its permit into compliance with this act. The burden shall be on the applicant to demonstrate that the application complies with all the requirements of this act. The department shall make a written finding granting or denying the application within 5 months of its submittal. Eight months after the secretary of interior's approval of the state's permanent regulatory program, no operator may conduct strip- or underground-mining operations unless the operator's permit has been revised to conform to the requirements of this act and approved by the department. Eight months after the secretary of interior's approval of the state's regulatory program, all strip- or underground-mining operations must be conducted in accordance with Title 82, chapter 2, part 4, as amended by this act." Conditional approval of the state implementation plan was granted effective April 1, 1980.

Section 27, Ch. 325, L. 1973, read: "Every operator shall within ninety (90) days after the effective date of this act file with the department an application for a permit."

Section 28, Ch. 325, L. 1973, read: "Ninety (90) days after the effective date of this act, the state shall proceed to cancel, according to their terms, all existing contracts entered into pursuant to chapter 245, Laws of Montana, 1967. If the contract does not provide according to its terms, for the cancellation, it shall be terminated and void within two hundred seventy (270) days from the effective date of this act."

(2) Within 15 days of the effective date of the disapproval under subsection (1), the department of environmental quality shall notify the code commissioner, certifying that the disapproval under subsection (1) has occurred." Subsection (3)(d) concerning lands mined for coal and the phrase "and attainable" in former (3)(e) were disapproved February 16, 2005.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 41, Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to actions for judicial review or other causes of action challenging the issuance of a permit, petition for review, amendment, license, arbitration, action, certificate, or inspection that are pending but not yet decided on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 16, 2003.

Case Notes

Mining Held to Be Precondition for Permit Renewal — Two-Year Extension Provision Applicable to Three-Year Term for Mining — Construction and Purpose of Statute: In 1984, the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) issued Montco a 5-year mining permit. Montco performed no site preparation or other work during the first 3 years after the permit was issued, but Montco applied for and was granted a 2-year extension of the mining deadline. During the first 4 years of the permit, the permit was under challenge in administrative and judicial proceedings. As the 5-year term came to an end, Montco applied for a 5-year renewal, and renewal was granted by the Department. When 3 years of that 5-year period came to an end with Montco having accomplished no work at the site, Montco applied for and was granted another 2-year extension, although throughout this second 5-year period, there were no formal administrative or judicial proceedings challenging the permit. After Montco asked for another 5-year extension of the permit, it was denied by the Department, but the District Court granted summary judgment for Montco and against intervenors, requiring that another 5-year extension be granted. The Supreme Court followed the rules of statutory construction preventing part of a statute from having no effect, prohibiting a court from inserting omitted language, and prohibiting absurd results and held that: (1) the period for a 2-year renewal applies only to the first 3-year period for commencement of mining; (2) the 3-year period for commencement of mining must be renewed for 2 years if the permittee proves that mining was not commenced because the permit was being litigated; (3) renewal of the 5-year permit term may be accomplished only by an "operator", who is defined in 82-4-203 as a person "engaged in mining"; and (4) once a permit has expired after the initial 3-year period (if no extension of the time for commencement of mining is granted) or after the 2-year extension for the permittee to commence mining, the permit may not again be renewed because, in the words of 82-4-221(1), the permittee is no longer in compliance with the requirements of "this part" and the permit has therefore expired. The Supreme Court also held that an administrative rule adopted by the Department could not be construed to require a result contrary to the Supreme Court's interpretation of the statutes and that the District Court's interpretation, automatically granting a 3-year extension of the permit itself, not only made the "must expire" language of the statute meaningless but was also contrary to the purpose of the Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act, which seeks an orderly development of coal resources while protecting a wide range of other interests and values. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court and ordered that summary judgment be granted against Montco and denied renewal of the permit. Montco v. Simonich, 285 M 280, 947 P2d 1047, 54 St. Rep. 1150 (1997).

Contingent Voidness: Section 15, Ch. 204, L. 2003, provided: "(1) If any provision of [this act] is disapproved by the United States secretary of the interior pursuant to 30 CFR 732.17, then that portion of [this act] is void.

(2) Within 15 days of the effective date of the disapproval under subsection (1), the department of environmental quality shall notify the code commissioner, certifying that the disapproval under subsection (1) has occurred." In the definition of approximate original contour in (c) at end the phrase "as necessary to support postmining land uses within the area affected and the adjacent area" and in definition of hydrologic balance at end the phrase "as they relate to uses of land and water within the area affected by mining and the adjacent area" were disapproved February 16, 2005.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 196 in definition of operator inserted (d) concerning a person who is engaged in uranium mining using in situ methods; in definition of prospecting, in (a)(ii) before "mineral", deleted "natural"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 3, 1997.

Severability: Section 7, Ch. 196, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 8, Ch. 196, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to underground coal mining operations that occurred after October 24, 1992."

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 159 in definition of prospecting, after "means", deleted "the removal of overburden, core drilling, construction of roads, or any other disturbance of the surface for the purpose of determining the location, quantity, or quality of a natural mineral deposit" and inserted (a)(ii) concerning the location, quantity, or quality of a natural mineral deposit; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 418 in definition of Board substituted "board of environmental review provided for in 2-15-3502" for "board of land commissioners as provided for in Article X, section 4, of the constitution of this state"; deleted definition of Commissioner that read: ""Commissioner" means the commissioner of state lands provided for in 2-15-3202"; in definition of Department substituted "department of environmental quality provided for in 2-15-3501" for "department of state lands provided for in Title 2, chapter 15, part 32"; substituted definition of prime farmland for former definition that read: ""Prime farmland" means that land previously prescribed by the United States secretary of agriculture on the basis of such factors as moisture availability, temperature regime, chemical balance, permeability, surface-layer composition, susceptibility to flooding, and erosion characteristics and which historically has been used for intensive agricultural purposes and as defined in the Federal Register"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

A style change in the chapters was slightly different. The codifier chose the most appropriate.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 225 in definition of prospecting, after "deposit", deleted "and, on areas designated unsuitable for coal mining pursuant to 82-4-227 and 82-4-228" and after "overburden" deleted "and coal"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In definition of prospecting, near middle after "mineral deposit", inserted "and, on areas designated unsuitable for coal mining pursuant to 82-4-227 and 82-4-228, the gathering of surface or subsurface geologic, physical, or chemical data by mapping, trenching, geophysical, or other techniques necessary to determine the quality and quantity of overburden and coal in an area and the gathering of environmental data to establish the conditions of an area before beginning strip- or underground-coal-mining and reclamation operations under this part".

1987 Amendment: Inserted definitions of coal preparation and coal preparation plant; in definition of operation inserted "including coal preparation plants"; in definition of operator, at end, inserted "or a person engaged in operating a coal preparation plant"; inserted definition of remining; and in definition of strip mining, at end, inserted two sentences stating what the term includes and does not include.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "minable" for "strippable" in (12).

Case Notes

Mining Held to Be Precondition for Permit Renewal — Two-Year Extension Provision Applicable to Three-Year Term for Mining — Construction and Purpose of Statute: In 1984, the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) issued Montco a 5-year mining permit. Montco performed no site preparation or other work during the first 3 years after the permit was issued, but Montco applied for and was granted a 2-year extension of the mining deadline. During the first 4 years of the permit, the permit was under challenge in administrative and judicial proceedings. As the 5-year term came to an end, Montco applied for a 5-year renewal, and renewal was granted by the Department. When 3 years of that 5-year period came to an end with Montco having accomplished no work at the site, Montco applied for and was granted another 2-year extension, although throughout this second 5-year period, there were no formal administrative or judicial proceedings challenging the permit. After Montco asked for another 5-year extension of the permit, it was denied by the Department, but the District Court granted summary judgment for Montco and against intervenors, requiring that another 5-year extension be granted. The Supreme Court followed the rules of statutory construction preventing part of a statute from having no effect, prohibiting a court from inserting omitted language, and prohibiting absurd results and held that: (1) the period for a 2-year renewal applies only to the first 3-year period for commencement of mining; (2) the 3-year period for commencement of mining must be renewed for 2 years if the permittee proves that mining was not commenced because the permit was being litigated; (3) renewal of the 5-year permit term may be accomplished only by an "operator", who is defined in this section as a person "engaged in mining"; and (4) once a permit has expired after the initial 3-year period (if no extension of the time for commencement of mining is granted) or after the 2-year extension for the permittee to commence mining, the permit may not again be renewed because, in the words of 82-4-221(1), the permittee is no longer in compliance with the requirements of "this part" and the permit has therefore expired. The Supreme Court also held that an administrative rule adopted by the Department could not be construed to require a result contrary to the Supreme Court's interpretation of the statutes and that the District Court's interpretation, automatically granting a 3-year extension of the permit itself, not only made the "must expire" language of the statute meaningless but was also contrary to the purpose of the Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act, which seeks an orderly development of coal resources while protecting a wide range of other interests and values. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court and ordered that summary judgment be granted against Montco and denied renewal of the permit. Montco v. Simonich, 285 M 280, 947 P2d 1047, 54 St. Rep. 1150 (1997).

Contingent Voidness: Section 15, Ch. 204, L. 2003, provided: "(1) If any provision of [this act] is disapproved by the United States secretary of the interior pursuant to 30 CFR 732.17, then that portion of [this act] is void.

(2) Within 15 days of the effective date of the disapproval under subsection (1), the department of environmental quality shall notify the code commissioner, certifying that the disapproval under subsection (1) has occurred." In (10)(k) at end the phrase "as necessary to support postmining land uses and to prevent material damage to the hydrologic balance in the adjacent area" and in (10)(k)(viii) at end the phrase "to protect the hydrologic balance as necessary to support postmining land uses within the area affected and to prevent material damage to the hydrologic balance in adjacent areas" were disapproved February 16, 2005.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 82 in (8)(c) at end substituted "at least 15 days prior to the date of issuance of the written findings pursuant to subsection (8)(f)" for "within 365 days of the date of notice provided pursuant to subsection (5)"; in (8)(f) at end of first sentence after "acceptable" deleted "or from the publication of the final environmental impact statement, whichever occurs later"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2001.

Chapter 299 in (8)(d) at beginning of first sentence and at beginning of fourth sentence and in (8)(f) at beginning inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose appropriate text.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 82, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, The Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act now requires the Department of Environmental Quality to complete and publish a final environmental impact statement within 365 days of notifying the applicant that the application for a permit or a major permit amendment is administratively complete; and

WHEREAS, applications that are administratively complete may be revised significantly because of substantive deficiencies under The Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act discovered by the Department in its subsequent acceptability review of the application; and

WHEREAS, the preparation of an environmental impact statement prior to the Department's acceptability review is inefficient; and

WHEREAS, completion of the environmental impact statement 15 days prior to the Department's written findings will allow efficient preparation of the environmental impact statement and will not delay the decision on the application."

Applicability: Section 16, Ch. 299, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies to environmental reviews that are begun after [the effective date of this act]." Effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (9), at end of first sentence, deleted "by the board" and in third and fourth sentences substituted "department" for "board"; in (10)(f), in two places, substituted "department" for "board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

1985 Amendment: Renumbered former second sentence of (2) as (3); inserted (4) providing criteria for determining an application to be administratively complete; inserted (5) providing for notification of environmental impact statement, if required; inserted first sentence of (6) concerning publication and near end of (6), after "proposed operation", deleted "after adequate public notice" and inserted "within 30 days of receipt of the request. The department shall notify the applicant and all parties to the informal conference of its decision and the reasons therefor within 60 days of the informal conference"; in (7) substituted "The filing of written objections or a request for an informal conference shall not preclude the department from proceeding with its review of the application as specified in subsection (8)" for former text that read: "The department shall notify the applicant by certified or registered mail within 120 days after receipt of the complete application if it is or is not acceptable. The department may extend the 120 days an additional 120 days upon notification of the operator in writing. The department shall make written findings granting or denying the permit or revision application in whole or in part. If the application is not acceptable, the department shall set forth the reasons why it is not acceptable, and it may propose modifications, delete areas, or reject the entire application. A landowner, operator, or any person with an interest that is or may be adversely affected may by written notice request a hearing by the board. The hearing shall be held within 30 days of the request. No person who presided at the informal conference may either preside at the hearing or participate in the decision thereon. For purposes of the hearing, the board may order site inspections of the area pertinent to the application. The board shall notify the person by certified or registered mail and all other persons by regular mail within 20 days after the hearing of its decision. Every reclamation plan shall be subject to annual review and modification"; inserted (8) referring to Department's review and determination of acceptability of applications; and inserted (9) referring to request for hearing and hearing by the Board.

Compiler's Comments

Contingent Voidness: Section 2, Ch. 425, L. 2007, provided: "(1) If the provisions of [this act] are disapproved by the United States secretary of the interior pursuant to 30 CFR 732.17, then [this act] is void.

(2) Within 15 days of the effective date of a disapproval pursuant to subsection (1), the department of environmental quality shall notify the code commissioner certifying that the disapproval has occurred." The Secretary of the Interior approved the changes made by Ch. 425, L. 2007, as documented in the January 9, 2009, Federal Register at page 217. Therefore, the contingency that would have occurred if the changes had been "disapproved" will never occur; thus, changes made by Ch. 425, L. 2007, are not void and are reflected in the text of this section.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 425 in (6)(k) substituted "shall" for "may"; substituted (6)(l)(i) requiring the department to provide to the permittee detailed written findings demonstrating that the reclamation covered by the bond was not accomplished as required and recommending corrective action for "notify the permittee, in writing, stating the reasons for disapproval"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 127 in (6)(a) in first sentence after "file" substituted "an application" for "a request" and at end after "bond" deleted "or deposit", deleted former second sentence that read: "Within 30 days after any application for bond or deposit release has been filed with the department, the permittee shall submit a copy of an advertisement notice placed at least once a week for 4 successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in the locality of the prospecting or mining operation", and at beginning of second sentence after "The" deleted "notice is considered part of any bond release", after "contain a" substituted "proposed public notice" for "notification", and near middle after "acres" inserted "for which bond release is sought"; inserted (6)(b) through (6)(g) regarding application requirements, completeness, and administration; in (6)(h) at beginning of first sentence deleted "Upon receipt of the request and copies of the notification made under subsection (6)(a)" and after "30 days" inserted "of determining that the application is administratively complete or as soon as weather permits" and deleted former third sentence that read: "The department shall notify the permittee in writing of its decision to release or not to release all or part of the performance bond within 60 days of the filing of the request if a public hearing is not held pursuant to subsection (6)(f) or, if a public hearing is held pursuant to that subsection, within 30 days after the hearing"; inserted (6)(i) and (6)(j) concerning department procedure regarding a completed application; in (6)(k) in three places after "bond" deleted "or deposit"; in (6)(k)(ii) in third sentence after "bond" deleted "or deposit"; in (6)(m) near middle after "municipality" inserted "or county"; deleted former (6)(f) through (6)(h) that read: "(f) Any person with a valid legal interest that might be adversely affected by release of the bond or the responsible officer or head of any federal, state, or local governmental agency that has jurisdiction by law or special expertise with respect to any environmental, social, or economic impact involved in the operation or is authorized to develop and enforce environmental standards with respect to the operations has the right to file written objections to the proposed release from bond to the department within 30 days after the last publication of the notice provided for in subsection (6)(a). If written objections are filed and a hearing is requested, the department shall inform all the interested parties of the time and place of the hearing and, within 30 days of the request for the hearing, hold a public hearing in the locality of the operation proposed for bond release. The date, time, and location of the public hearing must be advertised by the department in a newspaper of general circulation in the locality for 2 consecutive weeks, and the hearing must be held in the locality of the operation proposed for bond release or at the state capital, at the option of the objector, within 30 days of the request for the hearing.

(g) Without prejudice to the rights of the objectors or the permittee or the responsibilities of the department pursuant to this section, the department may establish an informal conference to resolve written objections.

(h) For the purpose of the hearing under subsection (6)(f), the department may administer oaths; subpoena witnesses or written or printed materials; compel the attendance of witnesses or the production of materials; and take evidence, including but not limited to site inspections of the land affected and other operations carried on by the permittee in the general vicinity. A verbatim record of each public hearing required by this section must be made, and a transcript must be made available on the motion of any party or by order of the department"; in (8)(a)(i), (8)(a)(ii), and (8)(a)(iii) substituted "alternative" for "alternate"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 30, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 204 in (1)(a) deleted former second, third, and fourth sentences that read: "All highwalls must be reduced and the steepest slope of the reduced highwall may be no greater than 20 degrees from the horizontal. Highwall reduction must be commenced at or beyond the top of the highwall and sloped to the graded spoil bank. Reduction, backfilling, and grading must eliminate all highwalls and spoil peaks" and in second sentence after "must be" substituted "backfilled and graded" for "restored"; inserted (1)(a)(i) through (1)(a)(iv) concerning reclaimed topography; inserted (1)(b) providing that spoil from the first cut is not required to be transported to the last cut if highwalls are eliminated, box cut spoils are graded to blend in with the surrounding terrain, and the approximate original contour of the land is achieved; in (1)(c) deleted former second sentence that read: "Additional restoration work may be required by the department according to rules adopted by the board"; inserted (7) providing that all disturbed areas must be reclaimed in a timely manner to conditions that are capable of supporting the land uses that they were capable of supporting prior to any mining or to higher or better uses; in (8)(a) near beginning after "may propose" substituted "a higher or better use as an alternative postmining land use. If the landowner is not the operator, the operator shall submit written documentation of the concurrence of the landowner or the land management agency with jurisdiction over the land. The department may approve the proposed alternative postmining land use only if it meets all of the following criteria:

(i) There is a reasonable likelihood for achievement of the alternate land use.

(ii) The alternate land use does not present any actual or probable hazard to the public health or safety or any threat of water diminution or pollution.

(iii) The alternate land use will not:

(A) be impractical or unreasonable;

(B) be inconsistent with applicable land use policies or plans;

(C) involve unreasonable delay in implementation; or

(D) cause or contribute to violation of federal, state, or local law" for "alternative plans other than backfilling, grading, highwall reduction, topsoiling, or seeding to a permanent diverse vegetative cover if the restoration will be consistent with the purpose of this part. These plans must be submitted to the department, and after consultation with the landowner, if the plans are approved by the department and complied with within the time limits determined by the department as being reasonable for carrying out the plans, the backfilling, grading, highwall reduction, topsoiling, or revegetation requirements of this part may be modified by the department. An operator who proposes alternative plans that will affect an existing permit shall comply with the notice requirement of 82-4-222(1)(l)"; deleted former (8) that read: "(8) If alternate revegetation is proposed, a management plan must be submitted showing how the area will be used and any data necessary to show that the alternate postmining land use can be achieved. Any plan must require the operation at a minimum to:

(a) restore the land affected to a condition capable of supporting the use that it was capable of supporting prior to any mining operation or to a higher or better use of which there is a reasonable likelihood, if the use or uses do not present any actual or probable threat of water diminution or pollution, and if the permit applicant's proposed land use following reclamation is not determined to be impractical, unreasonable, or inconsistent with applicable land use policies and plans, would not involve unreasonable delay in implementation, and would not violate federal, state, or local law; and

(b) prevent soil erosion to the extent achieved prior to mining"; inserted (8)(b) defining landowner; inserted (9) requiring the reclamation plan to incorporate appropriate wildlife habitat enhancement features; inserted (10) providing that facilities existing prior to mining, including but not limited to public roads, utility lines, railroads, or pipelines, may be replaced as part of the reclamation plan; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2004.

Severability: Section 13, Ch. 204, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 14, Ch. 204, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

Contingent Voidness: Section 15, Ch. 204, L. 2003, provided: "(1) If any provision of [this act] is disapproved by the United States secretary of the interior pursuant to 30 CFR 732.17, then that portion of [this act] is void.

(2) Within 15 days of the effective date of the disapproval under subsection (1), the department of environmental quality shall notify the code commissioner, certifying that the disapproval under subsection (1) has occurred." Pursuant to action by the secretary of the interior on February 16, 2005, none of the provisions of this section were disapproved.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (7), at end, substituted "82-4-222(1)(l)" for "82-4-222(1)(k)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (7), in three places, substituted "department" for "board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1987 Amendment: At end of (6)(c)(ii)(A) changed "82-4-231(3)(k)" to "82-4-231(10)(k)".

1985 Amendment: In (6) substituted language establishing procedures for release of performance bond or deposit for former text that read: "When the backfilling, grading, subsidence stabilization, water controls, and topsoiling have been completed and approved by the department, the commissioner, after public notice and opportunity for hearing, may release so much of the bond which was filed for that portion of the operation as the commissioner may determine, provided that no less than $200 per acre shall be retained by the department until such time as the planting and revegetation is done according to law and approved by the department, at which time the commissioner shall release the bond in the remaining amount. No part of the bond or deposit may be released under this subsection so long as the lands to which the release would be applicable are contributing suspended solids to streamflow or runoff outside the permit area in excess of the requirements set by this part or until soil productivity for prime farmlands mined for coal has returned to equivalent levels of yield as nonmined land of the same soil type in the surrounding area under equivalent management practices as determined from the soil survey performed pursuant to this part. Where a silt dam is to be retained as a permanent impoundment, the portion of bond pertaining thereto may be released under this subsection so long as provisions for sound future maintenance by the operator or the landowner have been made with the department. Any person with a valid legal interest that might be adversely affected by release of the bond or the responsible head of any federal, state, or local governmental agency that has jurisdiction by law or special expertise with respect to any environmental, social, or economic impact involved in the operation or is authorized to develop and enforce environmental standards with respect to such operations shall have the right to file written objections to the proposed release with the department within 30 days of public notice. The hearing shall be held at the state capital or, if an objector so requests, in the locality of the proposed bond release. For purposes of the hearing, the board may order site inspections of the area for which bond release is sought and other strip- or underground-mining operations carried on by the applicant in the area. Without prejudice to the rights of the objectors or the applicant or to the responsibilities of the department, the department may establish an informal conference to resolve written objections."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 127 deleted former (5) that read: "(5) For land that was mined, disturbed, or redisturbed after May 2, 1978, and that was seeded prior to January 1, 1984, using a seed mix that was approved by the department and on which the reclaimed vegetation otherwise meets the requirements of subsections (1) and (2) and applicable state and federal seed and vegetation laws and rules, introduced species are considered desirable and necessary to achieve the postmining land use and may compose a major or dominant component of the reclaimed vegetation." Amendment effective March 30, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 204 substituted (1) requiring an operator to establish an approved vegetative cover for former (1) that read: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (4), after the operation has been backfilled, graded, topsoiled, and approved by the department, the operator shall prepare the soil and plant the legumes, grasses, shrubs, and trees that are necessary to establish on the regraded areas and all other lands affected a diverse, effective, and permanent vegetative cover of the same seasonal variety native to the area of land to be affected and capable of self-regeneration and plant succession at least equal in extent of cover to the natural vegetation of the area except that introduced species may be used in the revegetation process where desirable and necessary to achieve the approved postmining land use plan. The vegetative cover must be capable of:

(a) feeding and withstanding grazing pressure from a quantity and mixture of wildlife and livestock at least comparable to that which the land could have sustained prior to the operation;

(b) regenerating under the natural conditions prevailing at the site, including occasional drought, heavy snowfalls, and strong winds; and

fencing, and any other measures necessary to provide a suitable permanent diverse vegetative cover must be defined by rules of the board"; inserted (3) concerning reestablished vegetation; in (5) near beginning after "department" deleted "pursuant to subsection (2)" and after "requirements of" substituted "subsections (1) and (2)" for "subsection (1)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2004.

(2) Within 15 days of the effective date of the disapproval under subsection (1), the department of environmental quality shall notify the code commissioner, certifying that the disapproval under subsection (1) has occurred." Pursuant to action by the secretary of the interior on February 16, 2005, none of the provisions of this section were disapproved.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 196 in (1), at beginning, inserted exception clause; inserted (4) considering introduced species as desirable and necessary to achieve postmining land use; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 84 in (3)(a) near end after "support facilities include" deleted "but are not limited to" and at end substituted "and access roads" for "access roads, segments of haul roads, and electrical substations". Amendment effective March 30, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 72 in temporary version in (2) at beginning of third sentence inserted exception clause; inserted (3) providing that limited vegetative cover of water management facilities and other support facilities in a strip mine operation is eligible for early bond release if the cover meets reclamation standards; in (4)(a) near beginning substituted "provisions of subsections (2) and (3)" for "provision in subsection (2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 127 in (3)(a) near middle after "1978" inserted "pursuant to a permit issued by the department under this part". Amendment effective March 30, 2005.

Saving Clause: Section 11, Ch. 127, L. 2005, was a saving clause.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 204 inserted (1) concerning determination of the success of revegetation; in (2) in first sentence after "evaluation" substituted "of reclaimed" for "for permanent diverse" and in second sentence after "satisfactory" deleted "permanent diverse"; in (3)(a)(ii)(D) after "standards of" substituted "82-4-232" for "82-4-232(8)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2004.

Severability: Section 13, Ch. 204, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 14, Ch. 204, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

Contingent Voidness: Section 15, Ch. 204, L. 2003, provided: "(1) If any provision of [this act] is disapproved by the United States secretary of the interior pursuant to 30 CFR 732.17, then that portion of [this act] is void.

(2) Within 15 days of the effective date of the disapproval under subsection (1), the department of environmental quality shall notify the code commissioner, certifying that the disapproval under subsection (1) has occurred." Former subsection (1)(d) concerning diverse reestablished vegetation and the phrase "are introduced species that have become naturalized" in former (1)(g) were disapproved February 16, 2005.

1997 Amendment: (Version effective on occurrence of contingency) Chapter 196 in (1) deleted former third sentence that read: "For land that was seeded using a seed mix that included a substantial component of introduced species approved by the department pursuant to 82-4-233(2) and on which reclaimed vegetation otherwise meets the requirements of 82-4-233(1), approval of reclaimed vegetation for release of bond may not be withheld on the basis that introduced species compose a major or dominant component" and at beginning of third sentence deleted "Except as provided in subsection (2)(b)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 3, 1997.

1995 Amendment: (Version effective on occurrence of contingency) Chapter 193 in first sentence of (1), after "possible", inserted "following an application for final bond release", inserted third sentence prohibiting withholding of approval of reclaimed vegetation bond on reclaimed land meeting requirements and using introduced species approved by Department, and at beginning of fourth sentence inserted exception clause and substituted "May 2" for "February 2"; inserted (2)(a) providing criteria for approval to release a bond on land upon which coal was removed prior to May 2, 1978; inserted (2)(b) authorizing interseeding or supplemental planting without liability on land meeting criteria; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 193, L. 1995, provided: "This bill is intended to provide criteria for approving as successful reclamation reclaimed vegetation seeded in the 1970s and early 1980s using seed mixes that included grass species approved by the department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of environmental quality]. At that time, availability of native grass seed was very limited and introduced species in combination with native species were routinely approved. Because introduced grass species can be aggressive competitors, many of these lands are now dominated by introduced species. Current standards require dominance by native species as a condition for release of bond, and hence, mine operators might be required to plow and reseed, restarting the 10-year bond liability period. Reclaimed vegetation dominated by introduced species has demonstrated its ability to withstand climatic extremes, support grazing of livestock, provide habitat for wildlife, and control erosion. The date of May 3, 1978, is the date on which reclamation performance standards of the federal Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 became effective on existing coal mining operations in Montana."

Contingent Effective Date: Section 2, Ch. 193, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] is effective on the date that it is approved by the secretary of the United States department of the interior pursuant to 30 U.S.C. 1253. If the secretary disapproves any portion of [this act], those provisions that are approved become effective on the date of approval." (2) Within 15 days of the effective date of the disapproval under subsection (1), the department of environmental quality shall notify the code commissioner, certifying that the disapproval under subsection (1) has occurred." Pursuant to action by the secretary of the interior on February 16, 2005, none of the provisions of this section were disapproved.

82-4-237. Operator to file annual reports.

Compiler's Comments

1983 Amendment: In (1), inserted second sentence authorizing Department to allow annual report for each operation in lieu of annual report on each permit; in third sentence of (1), substituted "an annual" for "this"; and at end of (1)(a), inserted "or numbers".

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 214 (Ch. 68, L. 1983) provided: "This bill grants the department discretionary authority to allow mine operators under the Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act to file one report for each operation rather than a separate report for each permit. A statement of intent is necessary because the department will be required to amend its present rules concerning annual reports and provide a procedure for determining when the operator is required to file the report. It is the intent of the Legislature to facilitate department review of annual reports and ease the burden of filing reports on operators with more than one permit."

Chapter 217 in (1) near middle of subsection, after "$750 for each day", inserted "up to 30 days" and inserted last sentence referring to actions Department may take in cases of continued failure to abate.

Source: Chapter 217, L. 1985, is based on language contained in 30 C.F.R. 845.15(b)(2), a rule adopted by the Office of Surface Mining in 1982. The language of subsection (1) imposing a $750 penalty per day is based on the penalty provisions of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977, found at 30 U.S.C. 1268(h).

1983 Amendment: At beginning of (1), inserted exception clause; and inserted (2) referring to waiver of penalty.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 615 (Ch. 499, L. 1983) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants rulemaking authority to the Board of Land Commissioners [functions now transferred to Board of Environmental Review] for the issuance of waivers of civil penalties for minor violations of the Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act.

Section 1 of the bill allows the Board to adopt rules concerning the issuance of waivers for civil penalties if the underlying violation does not pose potential harm to public health, public safety, or the environment or impair administration of the Act. It is the legislature's intent that the Board's rules prescribe specific criteria that will be used by the Department of State Lands [functions now transferred to Department of Environmental Quality] in determining whether or not a violation poses potential harm to the public health, public safety, or the environment or threatens to impair the administration of the Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act. The rules must also establish a procedure for the issuance of waivers, which must include a requirement that the Department of State Lands [functions now transferred to Department of Environmental Quality] give notice of the violation and waiver to the permittee and place such notice in the permittee's file kept by the department."

1981 Amendment: Reworded the language of subsection (1) to clarify that "term or condition" refers to a permit.

Part Case Notes

Motion for Written Undertaking Properly Denied Absent Active Industrial Operation or Activity: Defendant mining company moved for a written undertaking pursuant to 27-19-306 based on its reclamation activities, even though the company was no longer engaged in mining. The motion was denied, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The express purpose of an undertaking is to protect employees of the party enjoined from loss of wages, salaries, and benefits during the period that operations are enjoined. The injunction at issue in this case did not restrain the company from engaging in an industrial operation or activity, but rather required sequestration of proceeds from the sale of company assets. Therefore, 27-19-306 was inapplicable, and a written undertaking was not required. Shammel v. Canyon Resources Corp., 2003 MT 372, 319 M 132, 82 P3d 912 (2003).

Mining Permit Not Required Prior to Condemnation: Plaintiff contends that since 70-30-111 requires the use for condemned property to be "authorized by law" before condemnation is allowed, the obtaining of a valid mining permit is a condition precedent to condemnation. Section 70-30-102 declares mining to be a public use. It is unquestioned that the Anaconda Co. is engaged in mining operations. To find that a mining permit must be obtained prior to condemnation would be inconsistent with statutory authority and contrary to the public policy of providing expediency in eminent domain proceedings. Schara v. The Anaconda Co., 187 M 377, 610 P2d 132, 37 St. Rep. 790 (1980).

2003 Amendment: Chapter 361 inserted (1) relating to constitutional obligations and legislative intent; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 2003.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 3, of the Montana Constitution enumerates certain inalienable individual rights, including the right to a clean and healthful environment, the right of pursuing life's basic necessities, the right of enjoying and defending an individual's life and liberty, the right of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and the right of seeking individual safety, health, and happiness in all lawful ways; and

WHEREAS, the constitutionally enumerated rights are by their very nature bound to result in competing interests in specific fact situations; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 1, of the Montana Constitution provides that the state and each person shall maintain and improve a clean and healthful environment in Montana for present and future generations and directs the Legislature to provide for the administration and enforcement of this duty and also directs the Legislature to provide adequate remedies for the protection of the environmental life support system from degradation and to provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has reviewed the intent of the framers of the 1972 Montana Constitution as evidenced in the verbatim transcripts of the constitutional convention; and

WHEREAS, there is no indication that one enumerated inalienable right is intended to supersede other inalienable rights, including the right to use property in all lawful means; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature, mindful of its constitutional obligation to provide for the administration and enforcement of the constitution, has enacted a comprehensive set of laws to accomplish the goals of the constitution, including the Montana Clean Indoor Air Act of 1979, Title 50, chapter 40, part 1, MCA; the Montana Environmental Policy Act, Title 75, chapter 1, parts 1 through 3, MCA; the Clean Air Act of Montana, Title 75, chapter 2, parts 1 through 4, MCA; water quality laws, Title 75, chapter 5, MCA; The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, Title 75, chapter 7, part 1, MCA; The Montana Solid Waste Management Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 2, MCA; The Montana Hazardous Waste Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 4, MCA; the Comprehensive Environmental Cleanup and Responsibility Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 7, MCA; the Montana Megalandfill Siting Act, sections 75-10-901 through 75-10-945, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Installer and Inspector Licensing and Permitting Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 2, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 5, MCA; the Montana Major Facility Siting Act, Title

75, chapter 20, MCA; the Open-Space Land and Voluntary Conservation Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 6, MCA; the Environmental Control Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 7, MCA; The Strip and Underground Mine Siting Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 1, MCA; The Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 2, MCA; The Opencut Mining Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 4, MCA; and The Nongame and Endangered Species Conservation Act, Title 87, chapter 5, part 1, MCA."

Severability: Section 39, Ch. 361, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 41, Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to actions for judicial review or other causes of action challenging the issuance of a permit, petition for review, amendment, license, arbitration, action, certificate, or inspection that are pending but not yet decided on or after [the effective date of this act]." 2000 Amendment: Chapter 7 substituted (1)(a) through (1)(h) enumerating purposes of part for former text that read: "(a) that the usefulness, productivity, and scenic values of all lands and surface waters involved in mining and mining exploration within the boundaries and lawful jurisdiction of the state will receive the greatest reasonable degree of protection and reclamation to beneficial use;

(b) authority for cooperation between private and governmental entities in carrying this part into effect;

(c) for the recognition of the recreational and aesthetic values of land as a benefit to the state of Montana; and

(d) priorities and values to the aesthetics of our landscape, waters, and ground cover"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 18, 2000.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 7, Sp. L. May 2000, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsections (2) and (3), [this act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to permits and permit amendments approved by the department after September 30, 1995.

(2) Section 82-4-336(9)(b)(ii) and (9)(b)(iii) do not apply to any reclamation plan approved by the department for a mine at which mining operations have permanently ceased on [the effective date of this act] [effective May 18, 2000].

(3) Section 82-4-336(9)(c) does not alter or abrogate any backfilling requirement imposed or approved by the department prior to [the effective date of this act]." Effective May 18, 2000.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 410 inserted definition of completeness; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 410, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the metal mine reclamation laws provide substantive requirements for the permitting of metal mines in Montana; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Environmental Policy Act provides procedures for environmental assessment with respect to decisions of state agencies; and

WHEREAS, coordination of review of permit applications for compliance with substantive requirements of mine permitting statutes and environmental assessment of permit decisions would create efficiency, reduce burdens on state government, and require permit applicants to more fully bear the burden of providing complete permit applications that meet all requirements of the metal mine reclamation laws and other laws of the state related to mine permitting in a timely fashion; and

WHEREAS, completion of the requirements of the Montana Environmental Policy Act within the timeframes required can be facilitated by an initial determination of compliance with applicable permitting laws and regulations."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 63 inserted definition of rock products; in definition of small miner near end of (a) substituted "82-4-335(3)" for "82-4-335(2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 365 in definition of reclamation plan at end of (a) inserted "which may include use of the land as an industrial site not necessarily related to mining"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 2003.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 365, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, metal mine operators typically construct ancillary industrial facilities in conjunction with the operation of metal mines; and

WHEREAS, facilities may include office buildings, shop buildings, electrical transmission lines, electrical power substations, electronic communication lines and facilities, water lines, water treatment plants, septic systems, roads, parking lots, fencing, security stations, and environmental monitoring sites; and

WHEREAS, these facilities may have significant value when the operator discontinues the mining operations; and

WHEREAS, the continued availability of these facilities may provide economic development opportunities for the residents of the county where the facilities are located and to the people of Montana generally; and

WHEREAS, the metal mine reclamation laws do not include provisions that encourage or require the Department of Environmental Quality or the mine operator to consider the feasibility of a postmining use of these facilities for other industrial purposes instead of simply removing the facilities; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature believes that future beneficial use provisions could be provided for in the metal mine reclamation laws without significantly increasing the cost to the state or to the operator of obtaining and maintaining a mine operating permit.

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds that it is beneficial and appropriate to create these provisions."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 488 in definition of disturbed land in second sentence near middle after "roads, conveyor systems" inserted "load-out facilities". Amendment effective May 1, 2001.

Severability: Section 13, Ch. 488, L. 2001, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 15, Ch. 488, L. 2001, provided: "Sections 82-4-303(6) and 82-4-338(8) apply to licenses and permits issued after [the effective date of this act] [effective May 1, 2001] and to permits issued before [the effective date of this act] [effective May 1, 2001] that are in effect on [1 year after the effective date of this act] [effective May 1, 2002]."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 507 in definition of mineral after "gravel" substituted "peat, soil materials" for "phosphate rock"; in definition of placer deposit in (a) after "in" substituted "gravel, glacial, eolian, colluvial, or alluvial deposits" for "gravel or alluvium" and inserted (b) expanding definition to include all forms of deposit except veins of quartz and other rock in place; in definition of small miner after "engages in" inserted "mining activity that is not exempt from this part pursuant to 82-4-310, that engages in" and after "business of" deleted "mining or"; in definition of surface mining in (b) after "gravel" substituted "peat, soil materials" for "phosphate rock"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 28, 1999.

Applicability: Section 23(1), Ch. 507, L. 1999, provided: "[Section 1(8)] [82-4-303(8)] and [section 9(6)] [82-4-403(6)] apply to operations conducted after July 31, 1999, except that the department of environmental quality may accept small miner exclusions and issue licenses and permits to implement these provisions at any time after [the effective date of this act] [effective April 28, 1999]. [Section 1(8)] [82-4-303(8)] and [section 9(6)] [82-4-403(6)] apply to those operations upon filing of the exclusion or issuance of the license or permit."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 272 in definition of small miner, in (a) near middle after "waste materials", substituted "or, except as provided in 82-4-310, that knowingly allows other persons to engage in mining activities on land owned or controlled by the person, firm, or corporation" for "that does not remove from the earth during any calendar year material in excess of 36,500 tons in the aggregate", after "82-4-335(2)" inserted "or a permit that meets the criteria of subsection (15)(c)", deleted (a)(i)(C) that read: "(C) not operated simultaneously except during seasonal transitional periods, not to exceed 30 days", inserted (b)(ii) requiring exclusion of access roads in computing mining area, and inserted (c) limiting area disturbance to 100 acres; inserted definition of soil materials; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 1997.

Applicability: Section 4(1), Ch. 272, L. 1997, provided: "[Section 1(15)] [amending the definition of small miner in 82-4-303] applies to operations conducted after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 16, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in definition of Board substituted "board of environmental review provided for in 2-15-3502" for "board of land commissioners or a state employee or state agency as may succeed to its powers and duties under this part"; deleted definition of Commissioner that read: ""Commissioner" means the commissioner of state lands provided for in 2-15-3202"; in definition of Department substituted "department of environmental quality provided for in 2-15-3501" for "department of state lands"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 472 inserted definition of amendment; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 1993.

Saving Clause: Section 8, Ch. 472, L. 1993, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 9, Ch. 472, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 283 inserted definition of Commissioner. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 637 inserted definition of Commissioner. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 93 near end of definition of exploration deleted reference to 82-4-305; and in definition of small miner, in (a)(i), substituted "an operation" for "operations". Amendment effective October 1, 1989.

Chapter 346 inserted definitions of placer deposit and placer or dredge mining; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Chapter 347 inserted definition of cyanide ore-processing reagent; in definition of small miner, near end of (a) after "82-4-335", inserted "except for a permit issued under 82-4-335(2)"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 93, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review]. Under the provisions of this bill, the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review] shall adopt rules to implement and administer a procedure for waiver of a minor violation from the civil penalty provisions provided in [section 5] [82-4-361].

It is the intent of the legislature that the waiver be allowed only if a violation does not represent potential harm to the public health, public safety, or the environment and does not otherwise impair administration of the provisions of Title 84, chapter 4, part 3."

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 347, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is provided for this bill to elaborate on the type and extent of review that the department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of environmental quality] shall give to a small-miner application for an operating permit for a cyanide ore-processing facility. Moreover, the legislature anticipates that implementation of this bill will require rulemaking by the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review].

While an operating permit is required for these operations, the legislature intends that, because of the size and limited scope of the operation, the application requirements in general may be substantially less rigorous than the requirements for larger proposed mine operations not under the small-miner exclusion. The department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of environmental quality] shall also attempt to review these applications in a shorter timeframe than currently needed to review operating permit applications for larger mines.

To encourage expedited review, the department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of environmental quality] shall provide clear guidance to permit applicants concerning requirements for a complete application. In particular, the guidance must help applicants prepare adequate operating and reclamation plans. While the legislature recognizes plan requirements may vary with the site and characteristics of the proposed operation, the department shall attempt to guide the applicant in a manner that minimizes applicant costs while also meeting metal mine reclamation requirements.

Finally, [section 4 of this act] [see compiler's comment to 82-4-335] exempts an existing cyanide ore-processing facility if the operator registers the facility by January 1, 1990. In order to provide ample notice to existing operators, the legislature intends that the department shall prepare the form and notify affected small miners of the form's availability and purpose as soon as possible by mail or publication, or both."

Applicability Date: Section 4, Ch. 346, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies to any placer or dredge mining operation for which a small-miner exemption has not been obtained before July 1, 1989."

1985 Amendments: Chapter 386 in definition of small miner acreage computation near end, after "mining", deleted "or exploration".

Chapter 453 in definition of disturbed land after "overburden", inserted "tailings, waste materials"; inserted definition of ore processing; in definition of person after "exploration for", deleted "or development" and after "earth", inserted "reprocessing of tailings or waste materials, or operation of a hard-rock mill"; in definition of small miner after "business of mining", inserted "or reprocessing of tailings or waste materials".

1997 Amendment: Chapter 272 in (1)(d), after "small miner", inserted "shall salvage and protect all soil materials for use in reclamation of that site and";in (3), in first sentence after "state's", substituted "documented cost estimate" for "actual cost" and after "exceed" substituted "$10,000" for "$5,000"; in (7) inserted last sentence excluding disturbed acreage from the statutory 5-acre limit; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 1997.

Applicability: Section 4(2), Ch. 272, L. 1997, provided: "[Section 2(1)(d)] [amending 82-4-305(1)(d)] applies to lands initially disturbed after May 15, 1997." Section 4(3), Ch. 272, L. 1997, provided: "[Section 2(3)] [amending 82-4-305(3)] applies to operations for which a bond was not posted prior to May 15, 1997."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 329 in (2)(a) substituted "an individual" for "a natural person"; inserted (9)(c) relating to area subject to remediation of contamination or pollution by a public agency; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 5, 1995.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 598 inserted (8)(b) through (8)(d) adding additional exceptions to the small miner exemption for persons who have not paid a penalty, posted a reclamation bond, or complied with an abatement order; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In (1) extended subsection references; and inserted (9) providing that the exemption pertaining to small miner with annual written agreement does not apply to area under permit pursuant to 82-4-335 or to area permitted pursuant to 82-4-335 and reclaimed by permittee, Department, or other state or federal agency. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 93 inserted (8) disallowing the exemption of certain persons unless the provisions of 82-4-360 are met; and made minor changes in phraseology and form. Amendment effective October 1, 1989.

Chapter 346 at beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; inserted (1)(d) relating to reclamation of placer or dredge mining operations; inserted (3) requiring posting of a performance bond; inserted (4) establishing liability for failure to reclaim placer or dredge operations; inserted (5) regarding notification of Department reclamation; inserted (6) relating to collection of additional reclamation costs; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Chapter 347 at beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; inserted (7) requiring an operating permit for cyanide ore-processing reagent operations; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 93, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review]. 2011 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 145 inserted (4)(b) relating to the direct invoicing of an applicant; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 7, 2011.

Chapter 410 in (1) in two places before "operating permit" inserted "final"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 410, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the metal mine reclamation laws provide substantive requirements for the permitting of metal mines in Montana; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Environmental Policy Act provides procedures for environmental assessment with respect to decisions of state agencies; and

WHEREAS, coordination of review of permit applications for compliance with substantive requirements of mine permitting statutes and environmental assessment of permit decisions would create efficiency, reduce burdens on state government, and require permit applicants to more fully bear the burden of providing complete permit applications that meet all requirements of the metal mine reclamation laws and other laws of the state related to mine permitting in a timely fashion; and

WHEREAS, completion of the requirements of the Montana Environmental Policy Act within the timeframes required can be facilitated by an initial determination of compliance with applicable permitting laws and regulations."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 63 in (1) at beginning of second sentence inserted exception clause; inserted (2) allowing an operating permit for multiple sites under certain conditions and clarifying permittee responsibility; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 365 inserted (4)(o) requiring application to include assessment of potential for postmining use of mine-related facilities for other industrial purposes; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 2003.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 365, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, metal mine operators typically construct ancillary industrial facilities in conjunction with the operation of metal mines; and

WHEREAS, facilities may include office buildings, shop buildings, electrical transmission lines, electrical power substations, electronic communication lines and facilities, water lines, water treatment plants, septic systems, roads, parking lots, fencing, security stations, and environmental monitoring sites; and

WHEREAS, these facilities may have significant value when the operator discontinues the mining operations; and

WHEREAS, the continued availability of these facilities may provide economic development opportunities for the residents of the county where the facilities are located and to the people of Montana generally; and

WHEREAS, the metal mine reclamation laws do not include provisions that encourage or require the Department of Environmental Quality or the mine operator to consider the feasibility of a postmining use of these facilities for other industrial purposes instead of simply removing the facilities; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature believes that future beneficial use provisions could be provided for in the metal mine reclamation laws without significantly increasing the cost to the state or to the operator of obtaining and maintaining a mine operating permit.

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds that it is beneficial and appropriate to create these provisions."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 488 in (3) at end of first sentence increased basic permit fee from $25 to $500; in (8)(a) near beginning after "that person's failure" inserted "or the failure of any firm or business association of which that person was a principal or controlling member" and at end after "this part has resulted in" substituted "either the receipt of bond proceeds by the department or the completion of reclamation by the person's surety or by the department" for "the forfeiture of a bond"; in (8)(c) at end after "bond required by 82-4-305" deleted "unless the department has certified that the area for which the bond should have been posted has been reclaimed by that person or reclaimed by the department and the person has reimbursed the department for the cost of the reclamation"; and made minor changes in style. Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 598 inserted (8)(b) through (8)(d) adding additional exceptions to the operating permit provisions for persons who have not paid a penalty, posted a reclamation bond, or complied with an abatement order; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 227 in (6) changed subsection reference to 90-6-302. Amendment effective March 29, 1991.

Chapter 403 in (3)(f), after "addresses of the", substituted remainder of subsection relating to owners of record and purchasers under contract for deed of the surface of the land for "surface and mineral owners of all lands within the mining area, to the extent known to the applicant"; inserted (3)(g) concerning owners of record and purchasers under contract for deed of minerals; inserted (3)(h) concerning source of applicant's legal right to mine; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 637 in (3) inserted last five sentences authorizing Department to charge additional fee for permit not to exceed normal departmental operating expenses, including environmental review, authorizing Department to define expenses by rule, requiring Department to notify applicant and provide itemized expense estimate if fee will exceed $5,000, allowing applicant opportunity to review estimated expenses, and authorizing applicant to indicate duplicative or excessive expenses; at beginning of (4) inserted "The person"; in (4)(a), after "its", deleted "principal" and after "officers" inserted "directors, owners of 10% or more of any class of voting stock"; in (5) changed subsection reference; inserted (9) prohibiting issuance of permit unless certain current information is provided; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 637, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill to provide guidance to the department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of environmental quality] concerning the adoption of rules to define the types of department expenses that applicants for hard-rock mine operating permits will be required to pay through increased permit application fees. Section 82-4-335(3) of the bill allows the department to increase the permit application review fee to fund expenses that are beyond the department's normal operating expenses and that are reasonably necessary in order for the department to provide a timely and adequate review, including any environmental review that is conducted pursuant to the requirements of the Montana Environmental Policy Act. The department's rules should authorize the use of the money collected from increased permit application fees for expenses, such as the hiring of temporary employees and contracted consultants and data collection and analysis when, due to workload considerations and statutory deadlines, the department cannot otherwise perform an adequate review."

1989 Amendments: Chapter 93 inserted (7) disallowing issuance of an operating permit to certain persons unless the provisions of 82-4-360 are met; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective October 1, 1989.

Chapter 347 near middle of (1), after "hard-rock mill", inserted "use cyanide ore-processing reagents"; inserted (2) requiring an operating permit for cyanide ore-processing reagent operations; in (4) corrected internal reference; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 93, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review]. Under the provisions of this bill, the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review]. shall adopt rules to implement and administer a procedure for waiver of a minor violation from the civil penalty provisions provided in [section 5] [82-4-361].

It is the intent of the legislature that the waiver be allowed only if a violation does not represent potential harm to the public health, public safety, or the environment and does not otherwise impair administration of the provisions of Title 84, chapter 4, part 3."

The statement of intent attached to Ch. 347, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is provided for this bill to elaborate on the type and extent of review that the department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of environmental quality] shall give to a small-miner application for an operating permit for a cyanide ore-processing facility. Moreover, the legislature anticipates that implementation of this bill will require rulemaking by the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review].

While an operating permit is required for these operations, the legislature intends that, because of the size and limited scope of the operation, the application requirements in general may be substantially less rigorous than the requirements for larger proposed mine operations not under the small-miner exclusion. The department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of environmental quality] shall also attempt to review these applications in a shorter timeframe than currently needed to review operating permit applications for larger mines.

To encourage expedited review, the department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of environmental quality] shall provide clear guidance to permit applicants concerning requirements for a complete application. In particular, the guidance must help applicants prepare adequate operating and reclamation plans. While the legislature recognizes plan requirements may vary with the site and characteristics of the proposed operation, the department shall attempt to guide the applicant in a manner that minimizes applicant costs while also meeting metal mine reclamation requirements.

Finally, [section 4 of this act] [see compiler's comment to 82-4-335] exempts an existing cyanide ore-processing facility if the operator registers the facility by January 1, 1990. In order to provide ample notice to existing operators, the legislature intends that the department shall prepare the form and notify affected small miners of the form's availability and purpose as soon as possible by mail or publication, or both."

Registration of Cyanide Ore-Processing Operations — Temporary Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 347, L. 1989, provided: "An existing facility that uses a cyanide ore-processing reagent and was not, prior to July 1, 1989, required to obtain an operating permit for the facility or to include the facility in an operating permit is not subject to [this act] if the facility is registered by January 1, 1990, by the owner or operator, on a form provided by the department." See statement of intent to Ch. 347, L. 1989.

1987 Amendment: In (2), in two places in first sentence, substituted reference to approval of impact plan under 90-6-307 for reference to approval by the Hard-Rock Mining Impact Board.

1985 Amendments: Chapter 345 inserted (1)(h) referring to ground and surface water hydrologic data; inserted (1)(i) referring to tailings impoundments and water reservoirs; inserted (1)(j) referring to control and mitigation of discharges to surface or ground water; and inserted (1)(k) referring to expected life and expansion of tailings impoundment or waste site.

Chapter 453 in (1) near beginning, after "engage in mining", inserted "ore processing, or reprocessing of tailings or waste material or construct or operate a hard-rock mill" and after "anticipation of", substituted "those activities" for "mining"; at end of second sentence of (1) substituted "complex" for "mine complex"; at end of (1)(d) substituted "operations" for "mining"; in (1)(g) after "plan" deleted "of mining" and after "completion of", substituted "the operation" for "mining and associated land disturbances".

Chapter 582 in (2) changed "subsection (3)" to "subsection (4)"; and inserted (3) referring to compliance with hard-rock mining impact review and implementation requirements by a permittee who becomes a large-scale mineral developer.

1983 Amendment: Near beginning of (2), substituted "activities under the permit" for "mining".

1981 Amendment: Inserted (2) referring to permit for large-scale mineral development; and inserted (3) exempting small samples from impact plan requirement.

Severability: Section 15, Ch. 617, L. 1981, was a severability section.

Case Notes

Failure to Actively Pursue Administrative Mining Permitting Process — Mineral Lease Properly Terminated: Plaintiffs had an operating permit pending for a cyanide leach pit gold mine when voters passed Initiative Measure No. 137 (I-137) that prohibited cyanide mining in Montana. Plaintiffs then filed a legal challenge to I-137, but failed to pursue any administrative actions in pursuit of the permitting process. The state Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) subsequently terminated plaintiffs' mineral leases prior to resolution of the legal challenge on grounds that plaintiffs had not actively pursued permitting until requesting an administrative hearing 2 weeks after the leases expired, and the District Court upheld the agency's decision. Plaintiffs contended on appeal that the leases were improperly terminated, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Challenging the validity of a voter-passed initiative, without more, did not constitute an administrative act of pursuing a permit. The DEQ was not obligated to extend the primary terms of the leases to include the time necessary for plaintiffs to seek invalidation of I-137, and because plaintiffs did not pursue the administrative process during the legal challenge, the leases were properly terminated. Seven Up Pete Venture v. St., 2005 MT 146, 327 M 306, 114 P3d 1009 (2005).

Initiative Banning Cyanide Mining Not Unconstitutional Taking or Impairment of Contract — Opportunity to Apply for Mining Permit Not Property Right: Plaintiffs had an operating permit pending for a cyanide leach pit gold mine when voters passed Initiative Measure No. 137 (I-137) that prohibited cyanide mining in Montana. Plaintiffs sued on grounds that I-137 interfered with their property right in the permit, constituted an unconstitutional regulatory taking for which they should be compensated, and violated the contract clause in Art. II, sec. 31, Mont. Const. The District Court found for the state on all issues, and plaintiffs appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Plaintiffs' mere opportunity to seek a mining permit did not constitute a property right, given the state's wide discretion to reject the application even without the passage of I-137. Further, I-137 did not constitute a taking because plaintiffs had not yet obtained a right to mine that the initiative took away. Moreover, even though the District Court incorrectly held that plaintiffs' corporate mining agreement was not substantially impaired by I-137, the court nonetheless correctly concluded that there was no contract clause violation because I-137 was reasonably related to the legitimate and significant public purpose of protecting the environment. Seven Up Pete Venture v. St., 2005 MT 146, 327 M 306, 114 P3d 1009 (2005).

Deficient Application for Permit — Effect: Because the application for permit was deficient under the hard-rock mining law, the present mining operations on the 500 acres covered by Permit 41A cannot be continued until an adequate application is made and a valid permit pursuant to the hard-rock mining law is issued. Kadillak v. The Anaconda Co., 184 M 127, 602 P2d 147 (1979).

Environmental Impact Statement Not Required: An environmental impact statement (EIS) was not required before granting a permit under the hard-rock mining law because the 60-day period was a woefully inadequate period for the preparation of a proper EIS, the same reason that an EIS was not required in Flint Ridge Dev. Co. v. Scenic Rivers Ass'n, 426 US 776 (1976). Furthermore, the statutory requirement of an EIS was not given constitutional status by the enactment of Art. II, sec. 3, and Art. IX, sec. 1, Mont. Const., subsequent to the Montana Environmental Policy Act and the hard-rock mining law. Kadillak v. The Anaconda Co., 184 M 127, 602 P2d 147 (1979).

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds that it is beneficial and appropriate to create these provisions."

Severability: Section 2, Ch. 459, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 459, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to permits and permit amendments approved by the department of environmental quality after September 30, 1995."

2000 Amendment: Chapter 7 inserted (1) concerning site-specific conditions and circumstances; at end of (5) substituted "development area to the extent that it serves as a host or breeding ground for mosquitoes or other disease-bearing or noxious insect life" for "mined area"; in (7)(a) after "covering" substituted "the faces" for "to a depth of 2 feet or more" and at end inserted "in order to mitigate the generation of objectionable effluents"; in (9)(a) at beginning inserted "With regard to disturbed land other than open pits and rock faces", after "disturbed land" deleted "Proposed reclamation must provide for the reclamation of disturbed land", and at end deleted "except for open pits and rock faces that may not be feasible to reclaim in the same fashion as other disturbed lands"; in (9)(b)(ii) after "affords" inserted "some" and at end substituted "or the environment" for "and the surrounding natural system to the extent feasible"; substituted (9)(b)(iii) concerning mitigation of visual contrasts for "blends with the appearance of the surrounding area to the extent feasible"; inserted (9)(c) concerning backfilling; at end of (11) substituted "requirements and standards set forth in this section" for "activities specified in this section"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 18, 2000.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 7, Sp. L. May 2000, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsections (2) and (3), [this act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to permits and permit amendments approved by the department after September 30, 1995.

(2) Section 82-4-336(9)(b)(ii) and (9)(b)(iii) do not apply to any reclamation plan approved by the department for a mine at which mining operations have permanently ceased on [the effective date of this act] [effective May 18, 2000].

(3) Section 82-4-336(9)(c) does not alter or abrogate any backfilling requirement imposed or approved by the department prior to [the effective date of this act]." Effective May 18, 2000.

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 418 in (1), (4), (5)(b), (5)(c), (5)(e), (8), and (9) substituted "department" for "board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995. The amendment in (8) was rendered void by Ch. 464.

Chapter 464 in (3), after "in the mined area", deleted "which may serve as a host or breeding ground for mosquitoes or other disease-bearing or noxious insect life"; in (7), at end of first sentence, inserted "in the same fashion as other disturbed lands" and substituted "In the case of open pits and rock faces, the reclamation plan must provide for reclamation to a condition" for "In such excepted cases"; inserted (7)(a) through (7)(c) regarding conditions for reclamation; in (8) substituted "The reclamation plan must provide" for "the board shall require"; and made minor changes in style.

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 464, L. 1995, provided: "In this bill, the legislature is implementing, with regard to open pits and rock faces that are the result of metal mining, the duty imposed upon it by Article IX, section 2(1), of the Montana constitution, which provides that "All lands disturbed by the taking of natural resources shall be reclaimed. The legislature shall provide effective requirements and standards for the reclamation of lands disturbed."

The drafters of this provision of the constitution expressly decided not to impose a constitutional requirement for a specified level of reclamation for all disturbed lands in all locations under all circumstances. Rather, they delegated to the legislature the duty to more specifically define reclamation in the public interest.

The legislature expects, and this bill requires, that miners will prepare and submit to the state reclamation plans for open pits and rock faces. This bill requires that these plans must, at a minimum, provide for return of these lands to structural stability and that the plans must be protective of air and water quality as provided elsewhere in the metal mine reclamation laws. These requirements and standards will prevent risks to public health and safety and the environment and will thereby adequately protect the environmental life support system from degradation.

In order to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources, the legislature finds that further reclamation of open pits and rock faces to provide functional uses and to blend with surrounding areas should be accomplished whenever feasible.

In determining feasibility of further reclamation, the legislature directs the department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of environmental quality] to consider and give effect to each of the following objectives:

(1) to encourage mining as an activity beneficial to the economy of our state;

(2) to encourage the production of minerals to meet the needs of society and the economic demands of the marketplace;

(3) to encourage reclamation to a condition that is aesthetically unobtrusive;

(4) to encourage reclamation to functional use;

(5) to discourage requirements that may foreclose future access to mineral resources not fully developed by current mining operations;

(6) to discourage requirements that will generate undesirable offsite environmental impacts.

The legislature finds that functional postreclamation uses include but are not limited to livestock grazing, agriculture, timber, recreation, wildlife habitat or other wildlife use, or other industrial use, including remining.

The legislature finds that when reclamation has been accomplished in accordance with an approved reclamation plan, the economic and social benefits of mining outweigh the scenic and other impacts associated with open-pit mining."

1985 Amendments: Chapter 345 in (6) inserted second sentence referring to noxious weed control standards; in (7) substituted "shall provide for the reclamation of disturbed land to comparable utility and stability as that of adjacent areas, except for open pits and rock faces which may not be feasible to reclaim. In such excepted cases, the board shall require sufficient measures to insure public safety and to prevent the pollution of air or water and the degradation of adjacent lands" for "need not reclaim the areas to a better condition or different use than that which existed prior to development or mining"; and inserted (9) referring to landscaping and contouring and postmining ground water discharges.

Chapter 453 throughout (1) substituted "the operation" for "mining"; at end of first sentence of (1), after "disturbance", deleted "by the mining operation"; and in middle of first sentence and at end of (1), substituted "the complex" for "mine complex".

2011 Amendment: Chapter 410 in (1)(a) in first sentence substituted "and compliance with the requirements of this part and rules adopted pursuant to this part within 90 days" for "within 60 days", in second sentence before first two instances of "notice" deleted "completeness", deleted former third sentence that read: "The department may, however, raise any deficiency during the adequacy review pursuant to subsection (1)(b)", in third sentence after "completeness" inserted

"and compliance", and in fourth sentence after "complete" inserted "and compliant" and before "deficiencies" deleted "any"; deleted former (1)(b) that read: "(b) Except as provided in 75-1-205(4) and 75-1-208(4)(b), unless the review period is extended as provided in this section, the department shall review the adequacy of the proposed reclamation plan and plan of operation within 30 days of the determination that the application is complete or within 60 days of receipt of the application if the department does not notify the applicant of any deficiencies in the application"; inserted (1)(b) through (1)(f) relating to limited review, notice of deficiencies, action when application is complete and compliant, inspection prior to draft permit issuance, and status of issued draft permit; in (1)(g) in first sentence substituted "that there are deficiencies or inadequacies in the application or that the application is compliant within the time period required by subsection (1)(a), the final operating permit" for "of deficiencies or inadequacies in the proposed reclamation plan and plan of operation within the time period, the operating permit" and inserted last sentence relating to responding to deficiency notification; in (1)(h) at beginning inserted exception clause and before "permit" inserted "final"; inserted (1)(h)(iv) relating to completion of review; inserted (1)(h)(v) relating to determination of meeting substantive requirements; deleted former (1)(d)(i) through (1)(d)(iii) that read: "(d) (i) Prior to issuance of a permit, the department shall inspect the site, unless the department has failed to act on the application within the time prescribed in subsection (1)(b). If the site is not accessible because of extended adverse weather conditions, the department may extend the time period prescribed in subsection (1)(b) by not more than 180 days to allow inspection of the site and reasonable review. The department shall serve written notice of extension upon the applicant in person or by certified mail, and any extension is subject to appeal to the board in accordance with the Montana Administrative Procedure Act.

(ii) Except as provided in 75-1-208(4)(b), if the department determines that additional time is needed for analysis to determine whether a detailed environmental impact statement is necessary under 75-1-201, the department and the applicant shall negotiate to extend the period prescribed in subsection (1)(b) of this section by not more than 75 days to permit reasonable analysis. The applicant may by written waiver extend this period.

(iii) Except as provided in 75-1-208(4)(b), if the department determines that additional time is needed to review the application and reclamation plan for a major operation, the department and the applicant shall negotiate to extend the period prescribed in subsection (1)(b) of this section by not more than 365 days in order to permit reasonable review. The applicant may by written waiver extend this time period"; deleted former (1)(d)(v) that read: "(v) Failure of the department to act upon a complete application within the extension period constitutes approval of the application, and the permit must be issued promptly upon receipt of the bond as required in 82-4-338"; inserted (2) relating to action after issuance of draft permit but before issuance of final permit; in (3) and (4) near beginning before "operating permit" inserted "final"; in (4)(c) substituted "situations not permitted under the terms of regulatory permits held by the permittee are revealed by field inspection and the department has the authority to address them under the provisions of this part" for "situations are revealed by field inspection"; in (5)(a) in first sentence before "operating" inserted "final", in second sentence substituted "comply with" for "conform to", and at end deleted "including any environmental analysis required by Title 75, chapter 1, part 2"; deleted former (5) through (8) that read: "(5) During the term of an operating permit, an operator may apply for an amendment or revision to the permit. The operator may not apply for an amendment to delete disturbed acreage from the permit.

(6) Applications for major amendments must be processed in the same manner as applications for new permits.

(7) Major amendments are those that may significantly affect the environment. Minor amendments are those that will not significantly affect the environment. The board may by rule establish criteria for classification of amendments as major or minor. The rules must establish requirements for the content of applications for amendments and revisions and procedures for processing of minor amendments.

(8) If the department demonstrates that a revision may result in a significant environmental impact that was not previously and substantially evaluated in an environmental impact statement, the application must be processed in the same manner as is provided for new permits. Except as provided in 75-1-208(4)(b), applications for minor amendments and other revisions must be processed within 30 days of receipt of an application"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 410, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the metal mine reclamation laws provide substantive requirements for the permitting of metal mines in Montana; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Environmental Policy Act provides procedures for environmental assessment with respect to decisions of state agencies; and

WHEREAS, coordination of review of permit applications for compliance with substantive requirements of mine permitting statutes and environmental assessment of permit decisions would create efficiency, reduce burdens on state government, and require permit applicants to more fully bear the burden of providing complete permit applications that meet all requirements of the metal mine reclamation laws and other laws of the state related to mine permitting in a timely fashion; and

WHEREAS, completion of the requirements of the Montana Environmental Policy Act within the timeframes required can be facilitated by an initial determination of compliance with applicable permitting laws and regulations."

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 63 in (1)(c)(ii) at end substituted "82-4-335(10)" for "82-4-335(9)"; in (1)(c)(iii) at end substituted "82-4-335(9)" for "82-4-335(8)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

Chapter 337 near beginning of (1)(b) in exception clause inserted "75-1-205(4) and". Amendment effective April 21, 2005.

Applicability: Section 22, Ch. 337, L. 2005, provided: "[This act] applies to environmental impact statements on which the agency responsible for preparation commenced preparation after December 31, 2004."

2003 Amendment: Chapter 287 inserted (4) providing that the modification of an operating permit may be a major or minor amendment or a revision, referencing the procedures for processing a modification, and providing that a mine reclamation bond may not be increased until permit modification is complete; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 11, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 287, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to permits and permit amendments that were approved by the department of environmental quality after September 30, 1995."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 299 in (1)(b), (1)(d)(ii), (1)(d)(iii) at beginning, and (7) at beginning of second sentence inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Applicability: Section 16, Ch. 299, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies to environmental reviews that are begun after [the effective date of this act]." Effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (1)(c)(iii) substituted "82-4-341(7)" for "82-4-341(6)". Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 204 inserted (1)(d)(ii) authorizing the Department to negotiate to extend analysis time by up to 75 days and authorizing applicant to extend time period by written waiver; in (1)(d)(iii) inserted last sentence authorizing written waiver; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 418 in (1)(a), in two places, (1)(b), in two places, (1)(d)(v), (2), and (3) substituted "department" for "board"; in (3), before "after timely notice", deleted "department"; and in (6), in third sentence, substituted "board" for "department". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 472 in (1)(a), in first sentence before "30 days", inserted "60 days of receipt of the initial application and within" and at end, after "receipt", inserted "of responses to notices of deficiencies", inserted second and third sentences relating to deficiency issues, and in last sentence, at end, substituted "the appropriate review period" for "30 days of receipt"; inserted (1)(d)(iii) concerning contract to prepare EIS; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 1993.

Chapter 598 in (1)(a), in first sentence before "30 days", inserted "60 days of receipt of the initial application and within" and at end, after "receipt", inserted "of responses to notices of deficiencies" and in last sentence, at end, substituted "the appropriate review period" for "30 days of receipt"; inserted (4) through (7) regarding amendment or revision of operating permits; and made minor changes in style.

A style change in (1)(b) was slightly different in the two chapters. The codifier chose the more appropriate of the two.

Severability: Section 9, Ch. 472, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

1991 Amendment: In (1)(b), at end of second sentence after "82-4-338", inserted "and pursuant to the requirements of subsection (1)(c)"; inserted (1)(c)(ii) prohibiting issuance of permit until information and certification have been submitted pursuant to 82-4-335(9); inserted (1)(c)(iii) prohibiting issuance of permit until Department has found issuance not prohibited by 82-4-335(8) or 82-4-341(6); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1985 Amendment: In (1)(b) in two places, substituted "plan of operation" for "plan of mining"; in (2) after "period required to", substituted "complete the operation" for "mine the land covered by the plan" and after "until the", substituted "operation" for "surface or underground mining".

Case Notes

Mandate Proper Remedy: Writ of Mandate is a proper remedy for return of a mining application and voidance of permit because the Department of State Lands (functions now transferred to Department of Environmental Quality) had a clear legal duty to return the permit application as incomplete and inadequate. Because the application was not returned, Permit 41A was void, and the Anaconda Company may not continue mining activities on the Permit 41A area until a valid permit is granted by the Department. Kadillak v. The Anaconda Co., 184 M 127, 602 P2d 147 (1979).

Specific Statute to Control: The well-settled principle of statutory construction that a specific statute will control a general one requires that the 60-day period in 82-4-337 controls the general provisions of 75-1-201(2)(c). Kadillak v. The Anaconda Co., 184 M 127, 602 P2d 147 (1979).

Severability: Section 13, Ch. 488, L. 2001, was a severability clause.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 507 at end of first sentence in (2) inserted "or as required pursuant to subsection (8)"; at end of first sentence in (3) inserted language requiring department notice and hearing and at beginning of second sentence inserted "As soon as practicable thereafter"; in (4) substituted "department" for "board"; and inserted (8) requiring department to determine whether further suspension of mine operation will cause violations or impair reclamation when no mineral extraction or ore processing has occurred for past 5 years, requiring department to notify permittee to abate conditions upon written determination of violations or reclamation impairment, authorizing department to grant reasonable time extensions for good cause, requiring department to order abatement of condition or reclamation if permittee does not abate conditions or reclamation within specified time, authorizing permittee to request hearing within 30 days of order, and providing that request for hearing stays order pending final decision unless department determines in writing that stay creates imminent threat of significant harm or impairs reclamation. Amendment effective April 28, 1999.

Severability: Section 21, Ch. 507, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 204 at beginning of (1) substituted language requiring inspection at least annually of permit area for former language that read: "Following receipt of the permittee's report and at any other reasonable time the board may elect" and at end substituted language requiring inspection to determine if permittee has complied with part, rules, or the permit for former language requiring inspection to determine if permittee has complied with reclamation plan and Department rules; inserted introductory clause in (4) regarding forfeiture of bond; in (4)(c), after "required", deleted former language authorizing Board, with staff, equipment, and material under its control or by contract, to take action to reclaim lands by competitive bidding and requiring record of expenses; in (5) deleted former second sentence requiring order to state expenses incurred by Board in reclaiming disturbed land and to include notice of amount due; in (6) inserted first three sentences authorizing Board, with its staff, equipment, and material or by contract, to reclaim certain disturbed lands through competitive bidding and to keep expense records and inserted last sentence requiring Board to return unexpended amount following reclamation; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 418 in (1), (2), in three places, (3), (4)(a), (4)(c), (5), in two places, (6), in three places, and (7), in three places, substituted "department" for "board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Because Ch. 418 transferred duties from the Board to the Department, the Code Commissioner has substituted "department" for "board" in the material enacted by Ch. 204 to reflect the intent of Ch. 418. Authority for the change is found in sec. 569, Ch. 546.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

2011 Amendment: Chapter 410 in (1) in first sentence inserted "a permit revision as described in subsections (5)(g) through (5)(j) or"; in (2)(a) in second sentence in two places inserted "revisions and"; in (4) near beginning inserted "a revision or" and near end inserted "or amended"; in (5) at end inserted "and permit revisions"; in (5)(g) substituted "25 acres or 10%" for "10 acres or 5%"; inserted (5)(h) relating to changes consistent with part and rules; in (5)(i) after "operating plan" deleted "or reclamation plan", substituted "if the changes" for "provided that the impacts of the change", and at end substituted "relative to the entire operation and the changes are consistent with subsection (5)(g)" for "relative to the impacts of the entire operation and there is less than 10 acres of additional disturbance"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 410, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the metal mine reclamation laws provide substantive requirements for the permitting of metal mines in Montana; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Environmental Policy Act provides procedures for environmental assessment with respect to decisions of state agencies; and

WHEREAS, coordination of review of permit applications for compliance with substantive requirements of mine permitting statutes and environmental assessment of permit decisions would create efficiency, reduce burdens on state government, and require permit applicants to more fully bear the burden of providing complete permit applications that meet all requirements of the metal mine reclamation laws and other laws of the state related to mine permitting in a timely fashion; and

WHEREAS, completion of the requirements of the Montana Environmental Policy Act within the timeframes required can be facilitated by an initial determination of compliance with applicable permitting laws and regulations."

2003 Amendment: Chapter 365 inserted (2)(b) requiring permit amendment to be considered minor if for purpose of retention of facilities valuable for postmining use, evidence submitted shows local government has requested retention for postmining use, and postmining use meets statutory requirements; inserted (5)(i) providing department not required to prepare assessment or impact statement for changes in permit for retention of mine-related facilities valuable for postmining use; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 2003.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 365, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, metal mine operators typically construct ancillary industrial facilities in conjunction with the operation of metal mines; and

WHEREAS, facilities may include office buildings, shop buildings, electrical transmission lines, electrical power substations, electronic communication lines and facilities, water lines, water treatment plants, septic systems, roads, parking lots, fencing, security stations, and environmental monitoring sites; and

WHEREAS, these facilities may have significant value when the operator discontinues the mining operations; and

WHEREAS, the continued availability of these facilities may provide economic development opportunities for the residents of the county where the facilities are located and to the people of Montana generally; and

WHEREAS, the metal mine reclamation laws do not include provisions that encourage or require the Department of Environmental Quality or the mine operator to consider the feasibility of a postmining use of these facilities for other industrial purposes instead of simply removing the facilities; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature believes that future beneficial use provisions could be provided for in the metal mine reclamation laws without significantly increasing the cost to the state or to the operator of obtaining and maintaining a mine operating permit.

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds that it is beneficial and appropriate to create these provisions."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (2), in first and second sentences, substituted "board" for "department". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 486 inserted (1) relating to violation letters; in (2)(a) at beginning inserted "By issuance of an order pursuant to subsection (6)" and in two places before "penalty" deleted "civil"; in (2)(a)(i) near middle substituted "rule adopted or an order issued" for "rule or order adopted"; in (2)(a)(ii) near middle substituted "rule adopted or an order issued" for "rule or order adopted"; in (2)(b) near end before "penalty" inserted "administrative"; inserted (2)(c) relating to use of judicial action or injunctive relief; inserted (3) relating to penalties for a judicial action (the last sentence concerning the penalty factors in 82-4-1001 was not codified because it was redundant with subsection (4) as inserted by Ch. 487); deleted former (4) that read: "(4) The department shall notify the person or operator of the violation. The department shall issue a statement of proposed penalty within 30 days after issuing the notice of the violation. The person or operator, by filing a written request stating the reason for the request within 20 days of receipt of the notice of proposed penalty, is entitled to a hearing before the board on the issues of whether the alleged violation has occurred and whether the penalty proposed to be assessed is proper. After the hearing, the board shall make findings of fact and issue a written decision as to the occurrence of the violation and, if the board finds that the violation occurred, the amount of penalty warranted. The board shall order the payment of a penalty in that amount. If the time for requesting a hearing expires without a hearing request, the department shall make the findings of fact and issue the written decision and order. The person or operator shall remit the amount of the penalty or petition for judicial review within 30 days of receipt of the order. A person or operator who fails to request the hearing provided for in this subsection or who fails to petition for judicial review within 30 days of receipt of the order forfeits that person's or operator's right to seek judicial review of the violation or penalty determinations. These penalties are recoverable in an action brought by the department in district court"; inserted (6) relating to corrective orders; in (7) near beginning inserted "penalties or" and at end substituted "the first judicial district, Lewis and Clark County" for "any other judicial district" and deleted former last sentence that read: "Legal actions for review of penalty orders or for recovery of penalties must be brought in the district court in the first judicial district, Lewis and Clark County"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

Chapter 487 in (2)(a)(ii) near middle substituted "purposely or knowingly" for "willfully"; in (4) substituted language relating to penalty factors in 82-4-1001 for "The department shall take into account the following factors in determining whether to institute a civil penalty action and in determining the penalty amount:

(a) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(b) the violator's prior history of violations;

(c) the economic benefit or savings, if any, to the violator resulting from the violator's action;

(d) the amounts voluntarily expended by the violator to address or mitigate the violation or impacts of the violation; and

(e) other matters that justice may require"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 204 substituted (1)(a) and (1)(b) regarding civil penalties for each violation, for continuing violations, and for violations creating imminent danger to health or safety and authorizing injunctions for former language that read: "A person who violates any of the provisions of this part, the rules or orders adopted under this part (except 82-4-339), the provisions of any license or permit, or the conditions of a small minor exemption shall pay a civil penalty of not less that $100 or more than $1,000 for the violations and an additional civil penalty of not less than $100 or more than $1,000 for each day during which a violation continues and may be enjoined from continuing such violations as provided in this section. These penalties are recoverable in any action brought in the name of the state of Montana by the attorney general in the district court of the first judicial district of this state in and for the county of Lewis and Clark or in the district court having jurisdiction of the defendant"; at beginning of (2)(a) substituted language authorizing the Department to bring an action for restraining order for former language requiring the Attorney General, upon request of the Department, to initiate suit for recovery of penalties; inserted (3) providing procedures for hearing and appeals; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In (1), near beginning, inserted "the provisions of any license or permit". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1989 Amendment: Inserted (3) providing for waiver of civil penalties under certain circumstances and requiring adoption of rules; and made minor changes in phraseology.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 93, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review]. Under the provisions of this bill, the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review] shall adopt rules to implement and administer a procedure for waiver of a minor violation from the civil penalty provisions provided in [section 5] [82-4-361].

It is the intent of the legislature that the waiver be allowed only if a violation does not represent potential harm to the public health, public safety, or the environment and does not otherwise impair administration of the provisions of Title 84, chapter 4, part 3."

1985 Amendments: Chapter 284 near beginning of (1) after "this part", inserted "except 82-4-339".

Chapter 386 in (1) near beginning, after "under this part", inserted "or conditions of a small-miner exemption".

2001 Amendment: Chapter 79 in (1) near middle of first sentence after "notice of" substituted "violation" for "noncompliance" and at end before "permit" inserted "license or", at beginning of second sentence inserted "license or", in third sentence after "suspension of a" inserted "license or", in fourth sentence after "served" inserted "on the licensee or permittee", and in fifth sentence after "notice of" substituted "violation" for "noncompliance", after "specify" substituted "the provisions of" for "in what respects the operator has failed to comply with", before "permit" inserted "license or", and after "permit" inserted "violated and the facts alleged to constitute the violation"; in (2) in first sentence after "notice of" substituted "violation" for "noncompliance" and before "permit" inserted "license or", deleted former second sentence that read: "The licensee or permittee is entitled to a hearing before the department on the revocation of a permit or license or the forfeiture of a performance bond if a hearing is requested within 30 days after service of notice as provided in subsection (1)", at beginning of second sentence after "notice" inserted "of violation or order of suspension" and at end after "hearing" inserted "before the board", inserted third sentence regarding a request for a hearing within 30 days of receipt of the notice or order, and at end of fourth sentence substituted "board" for "department"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2001.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 79, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, certain environmental statutes administered by the Montana Department of Environmental Quality provide that a person aggrieved by a decision of the Department may appeal that decision to the Director of the Department; and

WHEREAS, the possibility of an appeal prevents the Director from becoming involved in certain Department decisions that are subject to appeal to the Director; and

WHEREAS, section 82-4-427, MCA, states that a contested case hearing requested under The Opencut Mining Act must be held within 30 days after the hearing is requested; and

WHEREAS, it is difficult for the Department to conduct a contested case hearing under that Act within 30 days after the hearing is requested; and

WHEREAS, certain revisions to statutes administered by the Department are necessary for clarity and consistency and to conform the statutes to current drafting style."

Saving Clause: Section 18, Ch. 79, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 204 in first and last sentences in (1), after "permit", deleted "or reclamation plan", inserted second sentence authorizing suspension of permit for failure to comply with order to pay civil penalty, and in third sentence, after "permit", deleted "including the reclamation plan"; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 418 in (1), in three places, and in (3), in two places, substituted "director" for "commissioner"; and in (2) substituted "department" for "board". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 598 near middle of first sentence of (1), after "complied with", deleted "within the time limits set by the department or board or by this part", near middle of third sentence, before "mail", deleted "or registered", and in fourth sentence, after "noncompliance", inserted "or order of suspension", before "or the reclamation plan" inserted "the permit", and after "or the reclamation plan" inserted "and must, if the violation has not been abated, order abatement within a specified time period"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In (1), near beginning of first sentence before "reclamation", inserted "a license, permit, or", inserted second sentence allowing Commissioner to suspend a permit when a violation creates a danger to persons outside the permit area, and at end of third sentence, before "permit", inserted "license or"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1989 Amendment: In (1), in two places after "rules", inserted "adopted under this part"; inserted second, third, and fourth sentences of (2) providing hearing and notice requirements for licensees or permittees; and made minor changes in phraseology.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 93, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review]. Under the provisions of this bill, the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review] shall adopt rules to implement and administer a procedure for waiver of a minor violation from the civil penalty provisions provided in [section 5] [82-4-361].

It is the intent of the legislature that the waiver be allowed only if a violation does not represent potential harm to the public health, public safety, or the environment and does not otherwise impair administration of the provisions of Title 84, chapter 4, part 3."

1985 Amendment: Inserted (3) referring to suspension for failure to pay fee or file report required under 82-4-339.

Section Not Codified: Section 50-1226, R.C.M. 1947, concerning the validity of operating permits issued under prior law, was not codified in the MCA because it was of temporary significance. Case Notes

Initiative Banning Cyanide Mining — Reverse Condemnation Against State Not Justiciable in Federal Court: Initiative Measure No. 137, codified as 82-4-390, which banned the use of open-pit mining using cyanide leaching except as to mines operating with existing permits, could not be the basis of a reverse condemnation action in federal court because such an action is jurisdictionally barred by the 11th amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Eleventh amendment immunity cannot be avoided by the application of Ex parte Young, 209 US 123 (1908), since a reverse condemnation action is a form of retroactive relief and not a claim for prospective relief. Seven Up Pete Venture v. Schweitzer, 523 F3d 948 (9th Cir. 2008).

Failure to Actively Pursue Administrative Mining Permitting Process — Mineral Lease Properly Terminated: Plaintiffs had an operating permit pending for a cyanide leach pit gold mine when voters passed Initiative Measure No. 137 (I-137) that prohibited cyanide mining in Montana. Plaintiffs then filed a legal challenge to I-137, but failed to pursue any administrative actions in pursuit of the permitting process. The state Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) subsequently terminated plaintiffs' mineral leases prior to resolution of the legal challenge on grounds that plaintiffs had not actively pursued permitting until requesting an administrative hearing 2 weeks after the leases expired, and the District Court upheld the agency's decision. Plaintiffs contended on appeal that the leases were improperly terminated, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Challenging the validity of a voter-passed initiative, without more, did not constitute an administrative act of pursuing a permit. The DEQ was not obligated to extend the primary terms of the leases to include the time necessary for plaintiffs to seek invalidation of I-137, and because plaintiffs did not pursue the administrative process during the legal challenge, the leases were properly terminated. Seven Up Pete Venture v. St., 2005 MT 146, 327 M 306, 114 P3d 1009 (2005).

Initiative Banning Cyanide Mining Not Unconstitutional Taking or Impairment of Contract — Opportunity to Apply for Mining Permit Not Property Right: Plaintiffs had an operating permit pending for a cyanide leach pit gold mine when voters passed Initiative Measure No. 137 (I-137) that prohibited cyanide mining in Montana. Plaintiffs sued on grounds that I-137 interfered with their property right in the permit, constituted an unconstitutional regulatory taking for which they should be compensated, and violated the contract clause in Art. II, sec. 31, Mont. Const. The District Court found for the state on all issues, and plaintiffs appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Plaintiffs' mere opportunity to seek a mining permit did not constitute a property right, given the state's wide discretion to reject the application even without the passage of I-137. Further, I-137 did not constitute a taking because plaintiffs had not yet obtained a right to mine that the initiative took away. Moreover, even though the District Court incorrectly held that plaintiffs' corporate mining agreement was not substantially impaired by I-137, the court nonetheless correctly concluded that there was no contract clause violation because I-137 was reasonably related to the legitimate and significant public purpose of protecting the environment. 2007 Amendment: Chapter 385 in (2) at end of first sentence of introductory clause and in (2)(c) at end substituted "operations" for "materials mining". Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 361 inserted (1) relating to constitutional obligations and legislative intent; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 2003.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 3, of the Montana Constitution enumerates certain inalienable individual rights, including the right to a clean and healthful environment, the right of pursuing life's basic necessities, the right of enjoying and defending an individual's life and liberty, the right of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and the right of seeking individual safety, health, and happiness in all lawful ways; and

WHEREAS, the constitutionally enumerated rights are by their very nature bound to result in competing interests in specific fact situations; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 1, of the Montana Constitution provides that the state and each person shall maintain and improve a clean and healthful environment in Montana for present and future generations and directs the Legislature to provide for the administration and enforcement of this duty and also directs the Legislature to provide adequate remedies for the protection of the environmental life support system from degradation and to provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has reviewed the intent of the framers of the 1972 Montana Constitution as evidenced in the verbatim transcripts of the constitutional convention; and

WHEREAS, there is no indication that one enumerated inalienable right is intended to supersede other inalienable rights, including the right to use property in all lawful means; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature, mindful of its constitutional obligation to provide for the administration and enforcement of the constitution, has enacted a comprehensive set of laws to accomplish the goals of the constitution, including the Montana Clean Indoor Air Act of 1979, Title 50, chapter 40, part 1, MCA; the Montana Environmental Policy Act, Title 75, chapter 1, parts 1 through 3, MCA; the Clean Air Act of Montana, Title 75, chapter 2, parts 1 through 4, MCA; water quality laws, Title 75, chapter 5, MCA; The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, Title 75, chapter 7, part 1, MCA; The Montana Solid Waste Management Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 2, MCA; The Montana Hazardous Waste Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 4, MCA; the Comprehensive Environmental Cleanup and Responsibility Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 7, MCA; the Montana Megalandfill Siting Act, sections 75-10-901 through 75-10-945, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Installer and Inspector Licensing and Permitting Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 2, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 5, MCA; the Montana Major Facility Siting Act, Title 75, chapter 20, MCA; the Open-Space Land and Voluntary Conservation Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 6, MCA; the Environmental Control Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 7, MCA; The Strip and Underground Mine Siting Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 1, MCA; The Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 2, MCA; The Opencut Mining Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 4, MCA; and The Nongame and Endangered Species Conservation Act, Title 87, chapter 5, part 1, MCA."

Severability: Section 39, Ch. 361, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 41, Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to actions for judicial review or other causes of action challenging the issuance of a permit, petition for review, amendment, license, arbitration, action, certificate, or inspection that are pending but not yet decided on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 16, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 325 at beginning inserted introductory phrase concerning economy of state; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 507 in two places substituted "opencut materials" for "opencut mineral"; near end of second sentence after "property" inserted "through reclamation"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 28, 1999.

Severability: Section 21, Ch. 507, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

1987 Amendment: In two places substituted "mineral mining" for "bentonite, clay, scoria, phosphate rock, sand, or gravel mining".

2007 Amendment: Chapter 385 throughout section in three places substituted "opencut operation" for references to opencut mining operation; inserted definitions of amendment and plan of operation; in definition of affected land near middle of first sentence after "deposited" inserted "existing private roads that are used and", after "ponds" inserted "soil", and at end inserted "and any other surface or subsurface disturbance associated with opencut operations" and inserted second sentence providing that an affected road may be included as affected land only with the landowner's consent; deleted definition of final cut that read: ""Final cut" means the last pit created in an opencut-mined area"; in definition of landowner after "means the" substituted "holder of legal title to" for "owner of"; in definition of materials after "soil" deleted "materials" and after "gravel" inserted "or mixtures of those substances"; in definition of opencut operation in introductory clause after "means the" substituted "following activities, if they are conducted for the primary purpose of sale or utilization of materials" for "mining of materials by", in (a)(i) after "overburden" deleted "lying upon natural deposits of materials", and inserted (b) through (g) describing activities that are defined as an opencut operation; in definition of operator inserted second sentence providing that when a permit has been issued for an operation, a person who removes materials from the site under the control of the operator is not considered an operator; in definition of overburden after "earth" deleted "and other materials"; in definition of processing facilities in (a) after "screens" inserted "and pug mills", in (b) after "asphalt" inserted "wash", and inserted (c) including other processing equipment in the definition; deleted definition of progress report that read: ""Progress report" means a report on a form provided by the department, with appropriate maps, that shows:

(a) any change in ownership or control of the affected land and includes a landowner consent form if a change has occurred;

(b) any change in personnel who are in charge of the operation or responsible for reclamation;

(c) any change in any contractors or subcontractors who will be working at the site; and

(d) all land that has been affected by the operation"; in definition of reclamation after "affected land" deleted "by opencut-mining operations" and at end after "industrial" substituted "development" for "sites"; deleted definition of reclamation plan that read: ""Reclamation plan" means a plan that:

(a) meets the requirements of 82-4-434; and

(b) contains a description of current land use, topographical data, water data, soils data, leased areas, and intended mine areas and an explanation of proposed reclamation of the land, including appropriate maps"; deleted definition of refuse that read: ""Refuse" means all waste material directly connected with the opencut-mining operations"; in definition of soil at beginning substituted ""Soil" means the dark or root-bearing surface matter that has been generated through time by the interaction of biological activity, climate, topography, and parent material" for ""Soil materials" are those horizons that contain topsoil or other soils leached free of deleterious salts", after "recognized" inserted "and identified", and at end after "authorities" inserted "and methods"; deleted definition of spoil that read: ""Spoil" means the overburden that is disturbed from its natural state in the process of opencut mining"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 507 in definitions of affected land, opencut mining, and overburden substituted "material" or "materials" for "mineral" or "minerals"; deleted former definition of contract that read: ""Contract" means a mined land reclamation contract prepared by the board to meet the requirements of this part"; in definition of landowner substituted "subjected to" for "directly affected by"; substituted materials for minerals as defined term and in definition of materials substituted "peat" for "phosphate rock" and after "sand" inserted "soil materials"; in definition of opencut mining deleted former (c) that read: "(c) removing overburden for the purpose of determining the location, quality, or quantity of any natural deposit of minerals"; in definition of progress report after "report" substituted language regarding form and maps provided by department and outlining map requirements for former language that read: "showing the land that the operator has affected by opencut mining during the year. The report must show the number of acres of affected land and all reclamation accomplished"; deleted former definition of public notice that read: ""Public notice" means notice given by publication in a newspaper in the general area where the affected land is located. The notice must be given once a week for 3 successive weeks"; in definition of reclamation plan inserted "meets the requirements of 82-4-434"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 28, 1999.

Applicability: Section 23(1), Ch. 507, L. 1999, provided: "[Section 1(8)] [82-4-303(8)] and [section 9(6)] [82-4-403(6)] apply to operations conducted after July 31, 1999, except that the department of environmental quality may accept small miner exclusions and issue licenses and permits to implement these provisions at any time after [the effective date of this act] [effective April 28, 1999]. [Section 1(8)] [82-4-303(8)] and [section 9(6)] [82-4-403(6)] apply to those operations upon filing of the exclusion or issuance of the license or permit."

Section 23(3)(b), Ch. 507, L. 1999, provided that for purposes of the amendments in [section 9], amending 82-4-403, "relating to changing opencut mining "contracts" to "permits", contracts issued before [the effective date of this act] [effective April 28, 1999] are permits. The department of environmental quality shall issue permit documents to the contract holders within a reasonable time after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 28, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in definition of Board substituted "board of environmental review provided for in 2-15-3502" for "state board of land commissioners"; inserted definition of Department; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

1987 Amendment: Substituted ""Affected land" means the area of land and land covered by water that is disturbed by opencut mining operations, including the area from which overburden or mineral is to be or has been removed and upon which the overburden is to be or has been deposited, roads constructed to gain access to the mineral, areas of processing facilities on or contiguous to the opencut mine, treatment and sedimentation ponds, and mineral stockpile areas on or contiguous to the opencut mine" for former definition that read: ""Affected land" means the area of land from which overburden is to be or has been removed and upon which the overburden is to be or has been deposited"; deleted former (5) that read: ""Highwall" means that side of the pit adjacent to unmined land"; inserted definition of minerals; in definition of opencut mining, in introductory clause, and in (7)(c) and definition of overburden substituted "minerals" for "bentonite, clay, scoria, phosphate rock, sand, or gravel"; in definition of opencut mining inserted language referring to mining directly from natural deposits of minerals; in (7)(c), at beginning, substituted "removing" for "including the removal of"; in definition of operator substituted "or" for "and"; and inserted definition of processing facilities.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 385 near beginning after "federal" inserted "and state", near middle after "regulations" inserted "or rules administered or", after "federal" inserted "or state", after "administering" inserted "or having jurisdiction over", before "land" inserted "affected", and near end after "controls for" substituted "opencut operations on" for "reclamation of"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Attorney General's Opinions

Applicability of Opencut Mining Act: The Opencut Mining Act does not apply to federal agencies conducting opencut mining operations on private or federal land absent congressional authorization. But the Act does apply to private contractors mining on private land, and unless conflicting federal legislation applies, the Act also applies to private contractors mining on federal land. Any private contractor to whom the Act applies is required to enter into a contract pursuant to 82-4-431. 37 A.G. Op. 164 (1978).

Case Notes

Board of County Commissioners Compelled to Follow Clear Statutory Language and Allow Gravel Pit in Nonresidential Area: Plaintiff owned agricultural property adjacent to a school and sought to develop a gravel pit on the property. Plaintiff applied for the appropriate special review with the Board of County Commissioners. The Board determined that a gravel pit would interfere with surrounding property uses and would violate the rights of people who lived and attended school nearby to a clean and healthful environment, citing 82-4-432 and this section as authority for the Board's right to deny the special review. Plaintiff argued that under 76-1-113 and 76-2-209, local planning boards may not prevent the operation of a gravel pit in a nonresidential area. The District Court concluded that plaintiff accurately construed the statutes and that the Board could not deny a gravel pit in a nonresidential area. The Supreme Court affirmed. The Board ruled as if either 76-2-209 did not exist or the statute unconstitutionally deprived residents of a clean and healthful environment, but as an Executive Branch agency, the Board violated the separation of powers doctrine by ruling on the constitutionality of the statute. The statutory language was clear and unambiguous, and the Board was compelled to follow the legal mandate and allow the gravel pit. Further, because the statutes were clear, the District Court was not required to reach the constitutional question and did not err in failing to address the constitutionality of the statute. Attorney General's Opinions

Applicability of Opencut Mining Act: The Opencut Mining Act does not apply to federal agencies conducting opencut mining operations on private or federal land absent congressional authorization. But the Act does apply to private contractors mining on private land, and unless conflicting federal legislation applies, the Act also applies to private contractors mining on federal land. Any private contractor to whom the Act applies is required to enter into a contract pursuant to 82-4-431. 37 A.G. Op. 164 (1978).

Case Notes

Board of County Commissioners Compelled to Follow Clear Statutory Language and Allow Gravel Pit in Nonresidential Area: Plaintiff owned agricultural property adjacent to a school and sought to develop a gravel pit on the property. Plaintiff applied for the appropriate special review with the Board of County Commissioners. The Board determined that a gravel pit would interfere with surrounding property uses and would violate the rights of people who lived and attended school nearby to a clean and healthful environment, citing 82-4-431 and this section as authority for the Board's right to deny the special review. Plaintiff argued that under 76-1-113 and 76-2-209, local planning boards may not prevent the operation of a gravel pit in a nonresidential area. The District Court concluded that plaintiff accurately construed the statutes and that the Board could not deny a gravel pit in a nonresidential area. The Supreme Court affirmed. The Board ruled as if either 76-2-209 did not exist or the statute unconstitutionally deprived residents of a clean and healthful environment, but as an Executive Branch agency, the Board violated the separation of powers doctrine by ruling on the constitutionality of the statute. The statutory language was clear and unambiguous, and the Board was compelled to follow the legal mandate and allow the gravel pit. Further, because the statutes were clear, the District Court was not required to reach the constitutional question and did not err in failing to address the constitutionality of the statute. Attorney General's Opinions

Board Empowered to Require Contract Terms in Addition to Those in This Section: A policy section is relevant not only to the question of legislative intent concerning an act's overall purpose but also to the scope of administrative agency authority under the act. Thus, 82-4-402, the policy section of The Opencut Mining Act, is properly considered in determining the extent of the Board of Land Commissioners' [functions now transferred to Board of Environmental Review] authority under this Act to require reclamation contract commitments in addition to those mandated under this section. 40 A.G. Op. 47 (1984).

2003 Amendment: Chapter 361 inserted (6) relating to venue; and inserted (7) relating to judicial challenges to an amendment. Amendment effective April 16, 2003.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 3, of the Montana Constitution enumerates certain inalienable individual rights, including the right to a clean and healthful environment, the right of pursuing life's basic necessities, the right of enjoying and defending an individual's life and liberty, the right of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and the right of seeking individual safety, health, and happiness in all lawful ways; and

WHEREAS, the constitutionally enumerated rights are by their very nature bound to result in competing interests in specific fact situations; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 1, of the Montana Constitution provides that the state and each person shall maintain and improve a clean and healthful environment in Montana for present and future generations and directs the Legislature to provide for the administration and enforcement of this duty and also directs the Legislature to provide adequate remedies for the protection of the environmental life support system from degradation and to provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has reviewed the intent of the framers of the 1972 Montana Constitution as evidenced in the verbatim transcripts of the constitutional convention; and

WHEREAS, there is no indication that one enumerated inalienable right is intended to supersede other inalienable rights, including the right to use property in all lawful means; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature, mindful of its constitutional obligation to provide for the administration and enforcement of the constitution, has enacted a comprehensive set of laws to accomplish the goals of the constitution, including the Montana Clean Indoor Air Act of 1979, Title 50, chapter 40, part 1, MCA; the Montana Environmental Policy Act, Title 75, chapter 1, parts 1 through 3, MCA; the Clean Air Act of Montana, Title 75, chapter 2, parts 1 through 4, MCA; water quality laws, Title 75, chapter 5, MCA; The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, Title 75, chapter 7, part 1, MCA; The Montana Solid Waste Management Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 2, MCA; The Montana Hazardous Waste Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 4, MCA; the Comprehensive Environmental Cleanup and Responsibility Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 7, MCA; the Montana Megalandfill Siting Act, sections 75-10-901 through 75-10-945, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Installer and Inspector Licensing and Permitting Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 2, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 5, MCA; the Montana Major Facility Siting Act, Title 75, chapter 20, MCA; the Open-Space Land and Voluntary Conservation Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 6, MCA; the Environmental Control Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 7, MCA; The Strip and Underground Mine Siting Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 1, MCA; The Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 2, MCA; The Opencut Mining Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 4, MCA; and The Nongame and Endangered Species Conservation Act, Title 87, chapter 5, part 1, MCA."

2007 Amendment: Chapter 385 in (2) at end of introductory clause before "permit" deleted "reclamation"; and in (6) near middle of second sentence after "opencut" substituted "operation" for "mine". Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 486 inserted (1) relating to violation letters; in (2) at beginning inserted "By issuance of an order pursuant to subsection (5)" and near end inserted "or orders issued"; in (2)(a) at beginning substituted "administrative penalty" for "civil penalty"; in (2)(b) near beginning substituted "administrative penalty" for "civil penalty" and at end deleted "following the service of notice of the violation"; inserted (3) relating to penalties for judicial action; inserted (4) relating to penalty factors; deleted former (2) and (3) that read: "(2) The department shall take into account the following factors in determining whether to institute a civil penalty action and in determining the penalty amount:

(a) the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation;

(b) the violator's prior history of violations within the past 3 years;

(c) the economic benefit or savings, if any, to the violator resulting from the violator's action;

(d) the amounts voluntarily expended by the violator to address or mitigate the violation or impacts of the violation; and

(e) other matters that justice may require to decrease the amount of penalty.

(3) The department shall notify the person or operator of the violation. The department shall issue a statement of proposed penalty, including the penalty calculation that identifies and describes the factors considered pursuant to subsection (2), no more than 10 days after issuing the notice of violation. After a hearing provided for in 82-4-427, the board shall make findings of fact, issue a written decision as to the occurrence of the violation and, if the board finds that the violation occurred, the amount of penalty warranted, and order the payment of a penalty in that amount. If the time for requesting a hearing expires without a hearing request, the department shall make the findings of fact and issue the written decision and order. The person or operator shall remit the amount of any penalty within 30 days of the order. If the person or operator wishes to obtain judicial review of the assessment, the person or operator shall submit with the penalty a statement that the penalty is being paid under protest and the department shall hold the payment in escrow until judicial review is complete. A person or operator who fails to request and submit testimony at the hearing provided for in this subsection or who fails to pay the assessed penalty under protest within 30 days of the order assessing the penalty forfeits the right to seek judicial review of the violation or penalty determinations. These penalties are recoverable in an action brought by the department in the district court of the first judicial district, Lewis and Clark County, or in the district court of the county in which the opencut mine is located"; inserted (5) relating to violation orders; in (6) in first sentence at end deleted "in the district court of the first judicial district, Lewis and Clark County, or in the district court of the county in which the opencut mine is located" and inserted last sentence that establishes venue for actions for injunctions or penalties; inserted (7) relating to bringing judicial or injunctive actions instead of administrative actions; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

The amendments to this section made by sec. 3, Ch. 486, L. 2005, and sec. 27, Ch. 487, L. 2005, were rendered void by sec. 4, Ch. 486, L. 2005, a coordination section.

Section 29, Ch. 487, L. 2005, was a saving clause.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 79 in (3) deleted former second sentence that read: "The person or operator is entitled, by filing a written request within 20 days of receipt of the notice of violation, to a hearing on the issues of whether the alleged violation has occurred and whether the penalty proposed to be imposed is proper", in second sentence after "10 days after" inserted "issuing the", in third sentence after "hearing" substituted "provided for in 82-4-427, the board" for "or after the time for requesting a hearing has expired, the department" and after "violation and" inserted "if the board finds that the violation occurred", and inserted fourth sentence regarding department action if the time for requesting a hearing expires; in (4) near middle after "permit" inserted "issued"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2001.

Chapter 325 at end of (2)(b) inserted "within the past 3 years"; at end of (2)(e) inserted "to decrease the amount of penalty"; in (3) near middle of second sentence inserted "including the penalty calculation that identifies and describes the factors considered pursuant to subsection (2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 79, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, certain environmental statutes administered by the Montana Department of Environmental Quality provide that a person aggrieved by a decision of the Department may appeal that decision to the Director of the Department; and

WHEREAS, the possibility of an appeal prevents the Director from becoming involved in certain Department decisions that are subject to appeal to the Director; and

WHEREAS, section 82-4-427, MCA, states that a contested case hearing requested under The Opencut Mining Act must be held within 30 days after the hearing is requested; and

WHEREAS, it is difficult for the Department to conduct a contested case hearing under that Act within 30 days after the hearing is requested; and

WHEREAS, certain revisions to statutes administered by the Department are necessary for clarity and consistency and to conform the statutes to current drafting style."

Saving Clause: Section 18, Ch. 79, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 507 in (1) substituted "a reclamation permit" for "a contract for reclamation"; and in (4) substituted "a permit pursuant" for "a contract made pursuant". Amendment effective April 28, 1999.

Applicability: Section 23(3)(b), Ch. 507, L. 1999, provided that for purposes of the amendments in [section 18], amending 82-4-441, "relating to changing opencut mining "contracts" to "permits", contracts issued before [the effective date of this act] [effective April 28, 1999] are permits. The department of environmental quality shall issue permit documents to the contract holders within a reasonable time after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 28, 1999.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 271 in (1), at beginning, inserted "The department may assess against"; in (1)(a) and (1)(b), at beginning, deleted "shall pay"; deleted (1)(c) that read: "(c) may be enjoined from continuing the violation as provided in this section"; substituted (2) setting out factors to be considered prior to instituting a civil penalty action for former (2) that read: "The civil penalties provided for in this section may be waived for a minor violation if it is determined that the violation does not represent potential harm to public health, public safety, or the environment and does not impair the administration of this part. The board shall adopt rules to implement and administer a procedure for waiver of a penalty under this subsection"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 1997.

Chapter 273 in (3), near middle of fourth sentence, substituted "department" for "board". Amendment effective April 16, 1997.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 271, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] applies to proceedings begun on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 16, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 6, Ch. 273, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 at beginning of (3), after "department", deleted "of state lands"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1991 Amendment: In (1), at end, deleted "These penalties are recoverable in an action brought in the name of the state of Montana by the attorney general in the district court having jurisdiction of the defendant or by mutual agreement of the parties involved, in the district court of the first judicial district. Penalty money shall be credited to the general fund"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The attorney general shall, upon the request of the department, sue for the recovery of the penalties provided for in this section and bring an action for a restraining order or a temporary or permanent injunction against an operator or other person violating or threatening to violate an order adopted under this part"; inserted (3) providing administrative procedures in case of a violation; and inserted (4) authorizing Department to bring an action to enjoin violations.

1987 Amendment: In (1), near beginning of first sentence after "rules adopted thereunder", inserted "or provisions of a contract for reclamation"; and inserted (3) providing for waiver of civil penalties in certain cases.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 280, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill to provide guidelines on rules that must be adopted by the board of land commissioners [functions now transferred to board of environmental review] under the provisions of section 7, which amends 82-4-441. Currently, 82-4-441 requires the imposition of a penalty regardless of the seriousness of a violation. A waiver of penalty provision would allow the department of state lands [functions now transferred to department of environmental quality] to serve a notice of noncompliance, informing the operator of violations of the act or contract, without imposing a fine for minor violation.

It is anticipated that the rules would set forth those instances where a violation would not result in a fine. Under the amendment to 82-4-441, a fine may be waived if the violation does not represent potential harm to public health, public safety, or the environment and does not impair the administration of the Opencut Mining Act. The adopted rules will set forth a mechanism through which the department may exercise its discretion in waiving a penalty. Also, the rules will set forth, within the guidelines of the statute, those violations that do not warrant the imposition of a fine. In establishing these rules, the department shall consider:

(1) whether the violation is inadvertent or unavoidable or results from an emergency situation;

(2) whether the violation will significantly alter or hinder reclamation or the approved reclaimed use;

(3) whether there has been a history of violations by the operator;

(4) whether the operator has shown good faith in rectifying the violation; and

(5) other pertinent factors relating to the seriousness of the violation."

CHAPTER 10
OIL AND GAS — GENERAL PROVISIONS

Chapter Case Notes

Oil and Gas Leases in Deep Creek of Bob Marshall: Federal agencies violated the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 by issuing oil and gas leases without preparation of an environmental impact statement and without adequate consideration of a no-action alternative. They violated the Endangered Species Act of 1973 by issuing leases without preparation of a comprehensive biological opinion assessing effects on threatened and endangered species in the area. Bob Marshall Alliance v. Hodel, 852 F2d 1223 (9th Cir. 1988).

Gas Pipeline on Tribal Land: A 50-year term for natural gas pipeline rights-of-way, consented to by the tribe, was valid. Blackfeet Indian Tribe v. Mont. Power Co., 838 F2d 1055 (9th Cir. 1988).

Oil and Gas Leases on National Forest Lands: Issuance of leases without "no surface occupancy" stipulations required filing of an environmental impact statement. Connor v. Burford, 836 F2d 1521 (9th Cir. 1988).

Ambiguity in Reservation — Summary Judgment Improper: In a 1944 deed, the grantor reserved "six percent of all royalties received for oil and gas removed from the above-described property". In 1968, the mineral owners leased the property subject to a one-eighth landowner's royalty (12 ½% of oil and gas produced). In a subsequent suit, the royalty owners claimed they were entitled to 6% of production and the mineral owners claimed that the royalty owners were entitled to 6% of the landowner's royalty of 12 ½% of production. The District Court granted summary judgment for the mineral owners. The Supreme Court reversed on the grounds that the reservation language is ambiguous and the true intent of the parties is discernible only with reference to extrinsic evidence, not from the deed alone; therefore, summary judgment was inappropriate. Proctor v. Werk, 220 M 246, 714 P2d 171, 43 St. Rep. 333 (1986).

Ambiguity in Reservation — Course of Conduct: Plaintiffs initiated an action to determine their rights under a reservation in an assignment of an oil and gas lease. The 1926 lease assigned reserved the right to take and use gas "for the purpose of extracting, making, or manufacturing casing-head gasoline or by-products or carbon black". The course of conduct and expert testimony both showed that the language was meant to be nonrestrictive. Souders v. Mont. Power Co., 203 M 483, 662 P2d 289, 40 St. Rep. 583 (1983).

Royalty Interests

Part Case Notes

No Adverse Possession of Royalty Interest by Color of Title Found — Estoppel Applied: Defendants in an action to quiet title to a royalty interest argued that they held color of title to the interest by virtue of an invalid tax deed and subsequent conveyances. However, defendants also argued that the reservation of a royalty interest by Rosebud County, their ultimate grantor, was invalid. Citing Russell v. Texas Co., 238 F2d 636 (1956), the Supreme Court held that the defendants could not attack a royalty reservation in a title under and through which defendants claimed adverse possession by color of title. The court held that defendants were estopped from attacking Rosebud County's royalty reservation and that because defendants' grant expressly subjects them to the county's reservation of a royalty interest, defendants had no color of title to their royalty. Stanford v. Rosebud County, 251 M 128, 822 P2d 1074, 48 St. Rep. 1124 (1991).

No Adverse Possession of Royalty Interest by Use and Occupancy Found — Burden of Proof Unmet: Defendants in an action to quiet title to certain royalty interests argued that they established adverse possession. Citing Burlingame v. Marjerrison, 204 M 464, 665 P2d 1136 (1983), the Supreme Court noted that adverse possession must rely upon possession that is actual, visible, exclusive, hostile, and continuous for the required statutory period. Because the defendants failed to produce evidence that they possessed or had taken any of the proceeds from the royalty, which was held by the clerk of court, the Supreme Court held that adverse possession did not apply. Stanford v. Rosebud County, 251 M 128, 822 P2d 1074, 48 St. Rep. 1124 (1991).

Royalty Interest Not Derived From Mineral Interest — Owner of Mineral and Surface Interests Not Entitled to Royalty Interest: Defendants in an action to quiet title to mineral interests in oil and gas argued that because a royalty interest can be derived only from a mineral interest of which they owned 75% and because they invested in and were in control of the mineral interest, they were entitled to all royalties except those burdened by the production lease. Citing McSweyn v. Musselshell County, 193 M 525, 632 P2d 1095, 38 St. Rep. 1260 (1981), the Supreme Court held that the distinction between a mineral interest and a royalty interest must be recognized. A mineral interest is a right to develop or lease for development and to keep the proceeds of the lease, whereas a royalty interest is the right to a share in production while remaining free from the costs of production. Defendants' argument that they can spend time and money on production yet have a royalty interest blurs this distinction and is contradictory to the definition of a royalty interest. The court refused to recognize such a basis for a royalty interest and awarded the royalty interest to plaintiffs. Stanford v. Rosebud County, 251 M 128, 822 P2d 1074, 48 St. Rep. 1124 (1991).

Unresolved Issues Regarding Royalty Interests — Summary Judgment Precluded: Prior to 1955, McDonald & Eide, Inc. (M&E) owned the entire working interest in a lease on a producing oil well. On July 12, 1955, M&E assigned 100% of its interest in the south half and 50% of its interest in the north half to H. W. McDonald, but this assignment was not recorded until 1963. After M&E's corporate charter was repealed for failure to pay taxes, corporate officers of M&E purported to assign M&E's total working interest to V. Eide and J. Von DeLinde in 1961, but this assignment conflicted with the one previously made to McDonald, who filed a quiet title action. Thereafter, all three entered an agreement with Continental Oil Company (Continental) assigning to the company an undivided one-half interest in the lease. While the quiet title action was pending, McDonald assigned undivided interests to G. Huntley, D. Iverson, and A. Larson with the intent to convey to each the respective share "held in suspense by Continental". In 1964, final judgment quieted title in McDonald subject to the agreement with Continental. In 1965, M&E stockholders appointed F. Gunnip as receiver, and he sued M&E corporate officers to recover the lease and other property. A 1970 judgment voided the 1961 agreement, and in 1976, final judgment provided that Gunnip owned one-half interest in the north half of the lease while Eide, Von DeLinde, and Continental were held to have no interest. Shell Oil Company, responsible for disbursing the lease proceeds, continued to pay Continental one-half of the proceeds under the agreement with McDonald, and although Gunnip was owner of a 50% interest, he received only a 25% share of proceeds. In 1981, Gunnip assigned a 3.75% interest in the north half to Huntley and a 2.5% interest in the north half to R. Schwinn. Huntley became aware that Gunnip was not receiving his full share, so Gunnip, Huntley, and Schwinn sued Continental, requesting an additional one-eighth of the proceeds. The District Court granted summary judgment to Continental in 1985, but the Supreme Court reversed on appeal, holding that: (1) unresolved issues of material fact remained regarding Continental's interest; (2) a trial must be had to assess Continental's interest considering potential application of adverse possession, waiver, and estoppel; and (3) Continental's asserted 50% interest in the north half of the lease must be tested against the interest of McDonald's assignees and successors in interest. The case was remanded for further proceedings. Gunnip v. Cont. Oil Co., 223 M 141, 727 P2d 1315, 43 St. Rep. 1605 (1986). On remand, the District Court neglected to assess Continental's interest as directed. On later appeal, the Supreme Court granted supervisory control and determined that: (1) plaintiffs failed to present substantial evidence to support a theory of adverse possession, waiver, or estoppel against Continental; (2) Continental owned an undivided one-half interest in the working interest in the north half of the lease; and (3) Gunnip and his assigns owned the remaining half of the working interest in the north half. Cont. Oil Co. v. Elks Nat'l Foundation, 235 M 438, 767 P2d 1324, 46 St. Rep. 121 (1989).

Assignment of Oil and Gas Lease Working Interest to Trust Valid Grant: In 1954, Fitzpatrick and three other parties entered into an operating agreement concerning the working interest in an oil and gas lease. The agreement included a clause giving each party a preferential right to purchase the working interest of any other party. In 1969, Fitzpatrick divided his interest into three parts. He assigned one-third to his wife, reserved one-third in himself, and assigned one-third in four equal parts to four trusts which he had created for his four children. In 1972, Fitzpatrick signed a quitclaim assignment of whatever working interest he had to Youngblood, successor in interest to one of the four parties to the 1954 agreement. Youngblood had acquired similar quitclaim assignments from the other two parties to the original agreement. Believing that he owned 100% of the working interest in the lease, Youngblood began development of oil and gas wells on the land. The land became productive in 1972. In 1975, Youngblood, concerned about whether or not he had acquired all of Fitzpatrick's interest, had Fitzpatrick and his wife sign letters to ratify that Youngblood had acquired all their working interest in 1972. The Fitzpatrick children, as beneficiaries of the trusts, refused to sign similar letters. Youngblood then filed an action to quiet title to the working interest in him. The District Court found for Youngblood, ruling that the 1969 assignment was invalid for failure of delivery, failure of acceptance, and for retention of dominion and control over the working interest by Fitzpatrick. The Supreme Court reversed. The court ruled that Fitzpatrick's intent in making the 1969 assignment was to transfer income from oil and gas production to his wife and four children and that delivery was therefore complete. Acceptance of the assignment may be presumed because the net effect of the assignment was beneficial to the trusts. The court further ruled that there was not sufficient evidence that Fitzpatrick retained dominion and control over the working interests after the 1969 assignment. Finally, the court ruled that the parties did not intend the preferential purchase clause to apply to a transfer without consideration between family members, so Youngblood was not entitled to enforce that clause. Exeter Exploration Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 202 M 209, 661 P2d 1255, 40 St. Rep. 38 (1983).

Deed Reserving Mineral Interest to County — No Mutual Mistake: A 1944 deed reserved a mineral interest to the county. The deed did not on its face indicate mutual mistake, the parties agreed in 1977 that the 1944 deed reserved a royalty, and not one of the interested parties claimed mutual mistake. Plaintiff did not overcome the presumption that the 1944 deed contained the final agreement of the parties. McSweyn v. Musselshell County, 193 M 525, 632 P2d 1095, 38 St. Rep. 1260 (1981).

Case Notes

Procedures for Determining Market Price of Gas: In an appeal from a declaratory judgment action, petitioner Montana Power Company requested the Supreme Court to determine whether the procedures adopted on remand from a previous case by the District Court for determining market price are consistent with the Supreme Court's instruction for remand. The Supreme Court held that the District Court's action on remand was proper, which action set the market price of gas at a certain level, and required the parties to attempt to renegotiate the market price if market conditions materially change, the court retaining jurisdiction if the parties cannot agree as to price. Mont. Power v. Kravik, 189 M 369, 616 P2d 321, 37 St. Rep. 1531 (1980).

1983 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 500, at beginning of section, changed "The remedy herein provided for" to "The remedy provided for in 82-10-101"; near end changed "provisions of this part" to "provisions of 82-10-101"; and at end changed "this part" to "that section".

Chapter 582, near beginning of section, changed "The remedy herein provided for" to "The remedy provided for in 82-10-101"; and after "the provisions of" and "provided for by" changed "this part" to "that section".

In preparing the composite of this section, the compiler has chosen the section designation "82-10-101" from Ch. 500 rather than the language "that section" from Ch. 582, for purposes of clarity.

Use of Pore Space — Separate Compensation Not Required: The District Court correctly concluded that the owner of an oil and gas lease could dispose of wastewater in a well on the surface estate owner's property without paying the surface estate owner additional compensation for the use of the pore space beneath the well. Although the pore space belongs to the surface estate, the surface estate owner failed to establish that the use of the pore space affected the surface estate owner's interest in the land value, agricultural production, or value to improvements under the Surface Owner Damage and Disruption Compensation Act. Compiler's Comments 2007 Amendment: Chapter 57 in (1) inserted third sentence concerning including certain material with notice, in fifth sentence substituted "180 days" for "90 days", "20 days" for "10 days", and near end "any activity that disturbs" for "commencement of any activity on", and inserted last sentence concerning waiver of notice; inserted (2) concerning surface owner responsibility for providing names and addresses of parties using surface operations; inserted (3) concerning entry for certain purposes prior to notice; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 57, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] applies to proceedings begun on or after October 1, 2007."

1985 Amendment: Inserted last sentence referring to time deadlines for giving notice of drilling operations.

1983 Amendment: Twice after "surface owner" inserted "and any purchaser under contract for deed" and after second insertion substituted "their addresses" for "his address".

Case Notes

Preliminary Injunction to Ensure Entry to Property for Gas and Oil Drilling: Plaintiff was granted a preliminary injunction to prohibit defendant from denying plaintiff's entry onto defendant's land to exercise oil and gas drilling rights pursuant to a surface and damage agreement between the parties. Defendant contended that the injunction was improperly granted because plaintiff failed to provide statutory notice as required by 82-10-503(1). Plaintiff satisfied all other statutory requirements, but instead of sending notice to defendant's address of record, plaintiff sent notice to the land manager's personal address. The land manager then met with the plaintiff and accepted written correspondence and the statutory notice. Under common law and by specific terms of the agreement, plaintiff was allowed access to exercise its mineral rights. The statute was not intended to abrogate the common-law right of entry, and defendant offered no authority that would bar plaintiff from entering the land for failing to provide statutory notice. Rather, plaintiff established the likelihood of success on its claim and the likelihood of irreparable damage if the injunction was not granted. Therefore, the Supreme Court affirmed the grant of the preliminary injunction. Pinnacle Gas Resources, Inc. v. Diamond Cross Properties, LLC, 2009 MT 12, 349 M 17, 201 P3d 160 (2009). 82-10-504. Surface damage and disruption payments — dispute resolution — penalty for late payment.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 57 in (1)(a) inserted first sentence concerning attempt to negotiate agreement on damages and near end of second sentence substituted "oil and gas" for "drilling"; inserted (1)(c) concerning dispute resolution process; in (1)(e) near end of first sentence substituted "oil and gas" for "drilling"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 57, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] applies to proceedings begun on or after October 1, 2007."

1985 Amendment — Subsection Enactment: In (1)(c) substituted "receive annual damage payments" for "be paid damages in annual installments".

Subsection (2) concerning penalty for late payment by an oil and gas developer or operator was enacted as a separate section by Ch. 497, L. 1985, but is codified with this section for convenience.

OIL AND GAS CONSERVATION

Chapter Administrative Rules

Title 36, chapter 22, ARM Board of Oil and Gas Conservation.

Chapter Case Notes

Reasonable Notice Required Before Duty to Drill Offset Well Arises: Clarifying its opinion in U.V. Indus., Inc. v. Danielson, 184 M 203, 602 P2d 571 (1979), the Supreme Court held that before a lessee's duty to drill an offset well arises, the lessee must have reasonable notice of the necessity to protect the leasehold. Notice "can either be express, from the lessor, or constructive, gained from the surrounding circumstances". This rule is only applicable in cases when a lessor is seeking relief in the form of damages. If he is seeking other forms of relief, such as forfeiture of the lease, he must give written notice in order to give the lessor a chance to cure the breach. Sundheim v. Reef Oil Corp., 247 M 244, 806 P2d 503, 48 St. Rep. 181 (1991).

Forfeiture of Gas and Oil Lease — Common-Law Offset Drilling Rule: Where an oil and gas lease provided that no change in ownership of the land was to be binding upon the lessees until after lessee had been given a copy of any such transfer, lessor's grantees' right to damages for failure to drill an offset well under the common-law offset drilling rule could not be defeated by a failure to give the required notice, as the purpose of the notice is to prevent the lessee's forfeiture of the lease for failure to pay delay rentals to the proper party. Such required notice has nothing to do with implied covenants. U. V. Indus., Inc. v. Danielson, 184 M 203, 602 P2d 571 (1979).

Notice or Demand to Drill Under Common-Law Offset Drilling Rule: Where plaintiffs' well was being drained by an adjoining well in which defendants (plaintiffs' lessees under a gas and oil lease) also had an interest, there was no requirement that plaintiffs must serve written notice or demand to drill an offset well under the common-law offset drilling rule, as those defendants were presumed to know that plaintiffs' well was being drained. However, as to those defendants who did not own an interest in the well causing the plaintiffs' well to drain, the plaintiffs must give notice to drill. U. V. Indus., Inc. v. Danielson, 184 M 203, 602 P2d 571 (1979).

Common-Law Offset Drilling Rule — Implied Covenant Not Altered by Enactment of Statutes: Where the parties entered into a mineral lease for the production of oil underlying plaintiff's property, there was by common law implied in this and every oil and gas lease a covenant on the part of the lessee to protect the premises of his lessor from drainage by an adjacent producing well by drilling an offset well. The implied covenant was not per se eliminated by the enactment of the 1953 oil and gas conservation law, and an oil and gas lessee still has a duty under the implied covenant to protect his premises from drainage by drilling an offset well, if doing so would not be in violation of the statutes or of a valid rule or order of the Oil and Gas Conservation Board. U. V. Indus., Inc. v. Danielson, 184 M 203, 602 P2d 571 (1979).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 474 inserted definitions of carbon dioxide, carbon dioxide injection well, geologic storage operator, geologic storage reservoir, and verification and monitoring; in definition of pool at end of second sentence after "pool" deleted "as that term is used in this chapter", and inserted third sentence providing that the definition includes an underground reservoir for the long-term storage of carbon dioxide; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

Transition — Contingent Implementation: Section 30, Ch. 474, L. 2009, provided: "If the United States environmental protection agency adopts regulations allowing states to apply for primacy over carbon dioxide sequestration wells under the federal underground injection control program adopted by the environmental protection agency, the board of oil and gas conservation shall in consultation with the department of environmental quality and the department of natural resources and conservation develop draft rules to implement [this act] [Chapter 474, L. 2009] and seek primacy."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 379 deleted definition of gas that read: ""Gas" means all natural gases and all other fluid hydrocarbons as produced at the wellhead and not defined as oil in subsection (10) of this section"; deleted definition of oil that read: ""Oil" means crude petroleum oil and other hydrocarbons regardless of gravity which are produced at the wellhead in liquid form by ordinary production methods and which are not the result of condensation of gas before or after it leaves the reservoir"; in definition of waste inserted (b) excluding from definition loss of gas to atmosphere during coal mining; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In definition of responsible person inserted "disposal well, water source well, drill site", after "hole" inserted "or other area where oil and gas drilling and production operations were conducted", and deleted former (a) and (b) requiring responsible person to be either a corporation, association, partnership, or other business organization with assets in excess of $250,000 or, if the business organization does not have assets in excess of $250,000, to be a natural person with primary ownership in the business organization; and made minor changes in style.

1989 Amendment: Inserted definition of responsible person. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1987 Amendment: Inserted definitions of administrator, class II injection well, fluid, pollution, and state waters; and in definition of gas changed reference to subsection (7) to reference to subsection (10).

1983 Amendment: In definition of gas, substituted reference to "(7)" for "(6)".

Severability Clause: Section 8, Ch. 19, L. 1979, read: "If a part of this act is invalid, all valid parts that are severable from the invalid part remain in effect. If a part of this act is invalid in one or more of its applications, the part remains in effect in all valid applications that are severable from the invalid applications."

Case Notes

Common-Law Rule Not Superseded by Authority of Board:

In an action by plaintiffs (lessor's grantees) for damages resulting from defendant lessees' failure under an oil and gas lease to protect the plaintiffs' interests by drilling an offset well, the common-law offset drilling rule, under which plaintiffs seek damages, has not been superseded by the administrative powers of the Board of Oil and Gas Conservation, as the powers of the Board do not include the authority to adjudicate private rights. As held in the case of Pattie v. Oil & Gas Conserv. Comm'n, 145 M 531, 402 P2d 596 (1965), the Legislature gave the Board the duty to consider correlative rights in making orders, but adjudication of those rights must be by civil action in the District Courts. U. V. Indus., Inc. v. Danielson, 184 M 203, 602 P2d 571 (1979).

Under 82-11-201, the Oil and Gas Conservation Commission had authority to consider correlative rights and private interests in making regulatory orders establishing spacing units with respect to fringe owners, but it does not have authority to adjudicate disputes involving those rights. Pattie v. Oil & Gas Conserv. Comm'n, 145 M 531, 402 P2d 596 (1965).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 474 in (1) in first sentence after "application from" inserted "a geologic storage operator or" and in second sentence after "owner" inserted "geologic storage operator"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

Saving Clause: Section 29, Ch. 474, L. 2009, was a saving clause.

Transition — Contingent Implementation: Section 30, Ch. 474, L. 2009, provided: "If the United States environmental protection agency adopts regulations allowing states to apply for primacy over carbon dioxide sequestration wells under the federal underground injection control program adopted by the environmental protection agency, the board of oil and gas conservation shall in consultation with the department of environmental quality and the department of natural resources and conservation develop draft rules to implement [this act] [Chapter 474, L. 2009] and seek primacy."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 451 in (1) substituted "15-36-303" for "15-23-601 or 15-36-101". Amendment effective January 1, 1996.

Applicability: Section 55, Ch. 451, L. 1995, provided: "(1) [This act] applies to oil and natural gas produced and sold on or after January 1, 1996.

(2) (a) [Sections 21 through 26] [7-1-2111, 7-7-2101, 7-7-2203, 7-14-2524, 7-14-2525, and 7-16-2327] apply to county fiscal years beginning after June 30, 1996.

(b) [Sections 38 through 46] [20-9-104, 20-9-141, 20-9-161, 20-9-331, 20-9-333, 20-9-501, 20-9-507, 20-10-144, and 20-10-146] apply to school fiscal years beginning after June 30, 1996.

(3) (a) An operator is subject to provisions of Title 15, chapter 23, parts 1 and 6 [part 6 now repealed]; Title 15, chapter 36; Title 15, chapter 38; and Title 82, chapter 11, part 1, as those laws read on December 31, 1995, for all oil and natural gas produced and sold by the operator before January 1, 1996. [On December 31, 1995, Title 15, ch. 36, contained only part 1, now repealed. Part 3 of that chapter became effective January 1, 1996.]

(b) Except as provided in subsection (3)(c), the payment, collection, and distribution of taxes on oil and natural gas production occurring before January 1, 1996, must be made according to the provisions of the laws referred to in subsection (3)(a) governing the tax in effect on the last day of the tax period in which the activity, enterprise, or product being taxed was engaged in, took place, or was produced and sold.

(c) [Section 19] [15-36-325, now repealed] applies to the payment, collection, and distribution of the local government severance tax for oil and natural gas produced and sold after December 31, 1994, and before January 1, 1996.

(d) All taxes collected pursuant to audit or collected after the date the tax is payable under the laws referred to in subsection (3)(a) must be distributed according to the statute governing allocation of the tax in effect on the date when the tax liability was incurred."

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 9, Sp. L. November 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the board of oil and gas conservation is authorized to approve and certify production decline rates for the purpose of determining incremental production from enhanced recovery projects as provided in this bill.

The department of revenue has adopted rules for determining incremental production from tertiary production based on production decline rates. It is the intent of this legislation that the determination of incremental production is more appropriately a function of the board of oil and gas conservation because the board already has comprehensive statutory authority over oil and gas exploration and development activities in Montana.

The legislature intends that the board of oil and gas conservation shall, in consultation with the department of revenue, adopt rules setting forth the methodology by which the board may approve new or expanded secondary and tertiary recovery projects. The rules must include the method for establishing the rate of decline in production in the existing level of development in a project area. For a secondary or tertiary recovery project for which initial approval is sought, the rules must include the method for establishing the rate of decline in production from existing primary or secondary recovery operations in a proposed project area. In addition, the rules must include the method for determining the level of production from existing wells in a project area in order to establish the level of incremental production that qualifies for the tax incentive rates provided in this bill.

The board of oil and gas conservation is required to establish by rule a fee schedule to defray the expenses associated with reviewing applications for enhanced recovery projects. The fee schedule adopted by the board must take into account the complexity of processing the application.

A statement of intent is also required for this bill because the department of revenue is granted rulemaking authority for determining the allocation of incremental production from enhanced recovery projects to production that is subject to net proceeds taxation and to production that is subject to the local government severance tax. The allocation must be based on the ratio of production from wells drilled before July 1, 1985, in a project area that qualifies for a reduced tax rate on incremental production to production from wells drilled after June 30, 1985, in the project area that qualifies for a reduced tax rate on incremental production."

Report Requirement Repealed: Section 1, Ch. 223, L. 2003, repealed sec. 21, Ch. 9, Sp. L. November 1993, which required the board of oil and gas conservation to report annually to the revenue oversight committee [now revenue and transportation interim committee].

Report Required: Section 21, Ch. 9, Sp. L. November 1993, provided: "The board of oil and gas conservation shall report at least once a year to the revenue oversight committee [now revenue and transportation interim committee] regarding the implementation of [this act]. The reports must include but are not limited to information regarding:

(1) the methods used to determine production decline rates;

(2) rules adopted to implement [this act];

(3) the number of enhanced recovery projects completed or anticipated to be completed in a year; and

(4) the number of horizontal wells completed or anticipated to be completed in a year and the method of recovery from the horizontal wells."

Severability: Section 23, Ch. 9, Sp. L. November 1993, was a severability clause.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 24, Ch. 9, Sp. L. November 1993, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval [approved December 17, 1993] and applies to oil production from new or expanded enhanced recovery projects and to tax years that begin after December 31, 1993."

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 474 in (1)(a) after "ownership of" inserted "carbon dioxide injection wells, carbon dioxide, geologic storage reservoirs, and"; in (1)(c) near beginning after "wells" inserted "carbon dioxide injection wells" and in three places inserted "carbon dioxide"; in (1)(e) at beginning inserted exception clause; inserted (1)(f) requiring the furnishing of a bond or surety; in (1)(h) in first sentence after "water" inserted "or carbon dioxide" and near end of third sentence after "gas" inserted "carbon dioxide"; in (1)(i) after "operation of" inserted "carbon dioxide injection wells and"; inserted (2) setting out additional requirements for the geologic carbon dioxide injection well permitting system; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

Saving Clause: Section 29, Ch. 474, L. 2009, was a saving clause.

Transition — Contingent Implementation: Section 30, Ch. 474, L. 2009, provided: "If the United States environmental protection agency adopts regulations allowing states to apply for primacy over carbon dioxide sequestration wells under the federal underground injection control program adopted by the environmental protection agency, the board of oil and gas conservation shall in consultation with the department of environmental quality and the department of natural resources and conservation develop draft rules to implement [this act] [Chapter 474, L. 2009] and seek primacy."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 34 deleted former (5)(b) that read: "(b) if the well is completed after June 30, 1989, until the owner notifies the board that the well is producing oil and gas in commercial quantities and meets the requirements of 82-11-162"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 24, 1997.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 376 in (2), after "surveys", inserted "geological sample logs, mud logs, core descriptions, and ordinary core analysis"; in (5), in second sentence after "bond", inserted "may be forfeited in its entirety by the board for failure to perform the duty to properly plug each dry or abandoned well and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 83 in (3) substituted "strata" for "stratum" and "cave-ins" for "cavings".

Chapter 530 inserted (5)(a) and (5)(b) stating circumstances under which bond may not be canceled or absolved. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1987 Amendment: In (3), after "wells", inserted "and class II injection wells"; in (7), near beginning after "gas", inserted "or injects or disposes of water" and near end, after "gas", inserted "or water"; and inserted (8) requiring monitoring equipment or methods in the operation of class II injection wells.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 474 in (2) after "class II injection well" inserted "or a carbon dioxide injection well"; and deleted former (3) through (5) that read: "(3) Except as provided in subsection (5), on lands managed as Makoshika state park, pursuant to Title 23, chapter 1, and under the control of the department of fish, wildlife, and parks, by grant, acquisition, lease, easement, or other means, a person may not:

(a) drill, construct, convert, or operate an oil or gas well, stratigraphic test well, or core hole;

(b) conduct vibroseis, drill a seismic shot hole, or set a surface charge;

(c) explore for oil or gas in a manner that damages the land surface; or

(d) construct or place any surface facility associated with oil or gas exploration or development.

(4) The prohibitions in subsection (3) do not preclude the development of oil or gas resources from beneath Makoshika state park through directional drilling or access from property outside the boundaries of the state park provided that the surface resources of the state park are not disturbed.

(5) The prohibitions listed in subsection (3) do not apply to oil or gas resources within Makoshika state park that are owned by a private person, nor do the prohibitions apply to school trust lands within the boundaries of the park. The state acknowledges the mineral rights of Dawson County and the state school trust and the private property rights of persons owning private mineral rights within Makoshika state park. The department of fish, wildlife, and parks is directed to conduct negotiations with the owners of mineral rights within Makoshika state park, with the purpose of acquiring those rights in the name of the state, and to report the results of the negotiations to the legislature no later than January 8, 2001". Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

Transition — Contingent Implementation: Section 30, Ch. 474, L. 2009, provided: "If the United States environmental protection agency adopts regulations allowing states to apply for primacy over carbon dioxide sequestration wells under the federal underground injection control program adopted by the environmental protection agency, the board of oil and gas conservation shall in consultation with the department of environmental quality and the department of natural resources and conservation develop draft rules to implement [this act] [Chapter 474, L. 2009] and seek primacy."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 522 inserted (3) listing certain prohibited oil and gas development activities in Makoshika state park; inserted (4) allowing directional drilling and access from outside park; inserted (5) pertaining to privately owned mineral rights and school trust lands in the park; and made minor changes in style. 82-11-131. Privilege and license tax.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 573 in (1) increased assessment on market value from "2/10 of 1%" to "3/10 of 1%" and after "petroleum" deleted "originally"; in third sentence in (2), after "crude", substituted "petroleum produced" for "production" and after "natural gas" substituted "produced" for "mentioned in that subsection"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Pursuant to sec. 2, Ch. 573, L. 1995, a coordination section, deleted fifth sentence in (2) that read: "The producer shall be reimbursed for the payments made on crude oil and natural gas produced for another in the same manner as he is reimbursed for net proceeds tax paid under 15-23-607 on crude petroleum or natural gas produced for another"; and in (3) substituted "For the purposes of this section, the provisions of Title 15, chapter 36, part 3, apply to the privilege and license tax assessment" for "The department of revenue shall collect the privilege and license tax assessment in the same manner as the oil and gas severance tax is collected under Title 15, chapter 36." Amendment effective January 1, 1996.

Purported Repeal — Coordination: Section 50, Ch. 451, L. 1995, repealed this section, but sec. 2, Ch. 573, L. 1995, a coordination section, voided the repeal.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 573, L. 1995, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), [this act] is effective July 1, 1995, and applies to oil and gas production occurring after June 30, 1995.

(2) [Section 2(2) and (3)], which amend 82-11-131(2) and 82-11-131(3), respectively, are effective January 1, 1996."

1987 Amendment: In (2), near end after "tax paid", inserted "under 15-23-607" and at end, after "another", deleted "under 15-23-607".

1983 Amendment: Near beginning of (2), after "shall" substituted phrase relating to the Administrative Procedure Act for "by order, without prior notice or hearing"; after "may from time to time" deleted "without prior notice or hearing"; after "increase the amount thereof as" deleted "in its judgment"; and inserted (3) referring to collection of privilege and license tax assessment.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 148 (Ch. 93, L. 1983) provided: "A statement of intent is required for Senate Bill 148 because it grants the Board of Oil and Gas Conservation authority to fix an assessment against each barrel of crude petroleum originally produced.

The Legislature intends that the amount assessed be sufficient to provide funds to defray the expenses of enforcing the oil and gas laws and the operations of the board. The assessment shall not be so high as to generate revenue in excess of expenses."

Case Notes

State Taxation of Indian Trust Properties Valid — No Repeal by Implication Found: Where the plaintiff Indian tribe sought declaratory and injunctive relief against the levy and collection of certain taxes by the state and several counties on the production of oil and gas owned by the United States in trust for the plaintiff by non-Indian lessees within the boundaries of the plaintiff's reservation, the court held that the provisions of 25 U.S.C. §398 specifically authorized state taxation of oil and gas on tribal lands and that the provisions of the statute had not been impliedly repealed by 25 U.S.C. §396. The sovereign right asserted by the plaintiff to be free from state taxation has been controlled by Congress, and the plaintiff has not shown that there is such a repugnancy between the two federal statutes as to satisfy their burden of proving a congressional intent to repeal the former by enactment of the latter or that there is an ambiguity in the law which should be construed in favor of the plaintiff. 1997 Amendment: Chapter 422 deleted second sentence that read: "These funds are statutorily appropriated as provided in 17-7-502." Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 265, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is provided for this bill in order to describe the need for a statutory appropriation and deletion of current reporting requirements. In the absence of a statutory appropriation authorizing the board of oil and gas conservation to accept and expend funds received from bonds for the proper plugging of abandoned or dry wells, the board must receive separate authorization for this purpose each biennium through the appropriation process. As a result, the board is unable to correct problems resulting from improperly plugged wells for up to 2 years or until it receives authorization to expend the necessary funds received from forfeited bonds.

The board of oil and gas conservation is removed from receiving statements of crude petroleum and natural gas produced and marketed in the state in order to avoid duplicative reporting requirements.

The department of revenue is authorized to adopt administrative rules concerning the administration and collection of the privilege and license tax, including the time for payment and the period covered by payment. The administration and collection of the tax should be similar to the administration and collection of the oil and gas severance tax."

Case Notes

Injunction Not Exclusive Board Remedy in Nonemergency Situations: The Board of Oil and Gas Conservation ordered that Hawley's oil production be terminated because of Hawley's failure to bring wells into substantial compliance. Hawley filed suit against the Board to enjoin enforcement of the Board's order, alleging that absent an emergency action under 82-11-151, the Board had no statutory authority to order termination of production and that the Board's sole remedy was to petition the District Court for an injunction under subsection (1)(a) of this section. The Supreme Court found that Hawley's contention that subsection (1)(a) of this section establishes the Board's exclusive remedy for nonemergency situations rang hollow in light of the provisions of subsection (1)(b) of this section, which clearly grant the Board express authority to issue an order requiring compliance with a prior Board order. Further, under 82-11-149, pursuance of a civil penalty does not bar enforcement by injunction "or other appropriate remedy". Thus, injunction through judicial enforcement is not the exclusive remedy available to the Board in nonemergency situations, and the District Court's vacation of the Board's termination order on those grounds was reversible error. Hawley v. Bd. of Oil & Gas Conserv., 2000 MT 2, 297 M 467, 993 P2d 677, 57 St. Rep. 5 (2000).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 474 in (3) at end substituted "82-11-136(1)" for "82-11-136"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

Saving Clause: Section 29, Ch. 474, L. 2009, was a saving clause.

Transition — Contingent Implementation: Section 30, Ch. 474, L. 2009, provided: "If the United States environmental protection agency adopts regulations allowing states to apply for primacy over carbon dioxide sequestration wells under the federal underground injection control program adopted by the environmental protection agency, the board of oil and gas conservation shall in consultation with the department of environmental quality and the department of natural resources and conservation develop draft rules to implement [this act] [Chapter 474, L. 2009] and seek primacy."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 34 deleted former (3)(b) that read: "(b) all fees received by the board from owners of producing wells pursuant to 82-11-162"; in (4), near end of first and second sentences after "restore the well", inserted "sump, hole"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 24, 1997.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 349 at beginning of (2) deleted "On July 1, 1991, and" and after "each" deleted "succeeding"; deleted (6) that read: "(6) The board shall, as provided in 5-11-210, submit to the legislature a complete financial report on the oil and gas production damage mitigation account, including a description of all expenditures made since the preceding report"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 112 near beginning of (6) inserted reference to 5-11-210 and after "legislature" deleted "at the beginning of each regular session". Amendment effective March 20, 1991.

Chapter 734 in (4), in first sentence after "well", inserted "and either reclaiming or restoring, or both, a drill site or other drilling or producing area damaged by oil and gas operations", after "hole" inserted "drill site, or drilling or producing area", and after "person" substituted "fails or refuses to properly plug, reclaim, or restore the well, drill site, or drilling or producing area within a reasonable time after demand by the board" for "does not have sufficient funds to pay the costs" and near end of second sentence, after "plug", inserted "reclaim, or restore", after "well" inserted "drill site, or drilling or producing area", and after "damage" substituted "for which he is responsible" for "caused by the well"; and made minor changes in style.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 530, L. 1989, provided: "It is the intent of the legislature to create an oil and gas production damage mitigation account to be administered by the board of oil and gas conservation for the purpose of properly plugging and abandoning oil and gas wells when a responsible person cannot be found or when the responsible person does not have sufficient financial resources. The board shall adopt rules to help it define "sufficient financial resources", shall require a responsible person to pay the costs of plugging and abandoning to the extent of his available resources, and shall pursue full cost recovery for funds spent from the account through the procedures provided in [section 9] [82-11-164] or other lawful means. The board may adopt rules to administer instituting a lien on the person's personal and real property to cover the cost of plugging and abandoning.

The legislature intends that the board use the account for reclamation related to land, water, or wildlife resources disturbed by abandoned oil and gas wells, injection wells, sumps, and seismographic shot holes.

It is also the intent to remove producing wells completed after June 30, 1989, from drilling bonds and to limit the liability of the bond or its equivalent to the period between issuance of the bond and either proper plugging and abandoning of a dry hole or completion of a producing well. The board shall adopt forms for the producer to indicate that a well has been completed and shall, upon receipt of the information and payment required under [section 7] [82-11-162, now repealed], release and absolve the owner of the well from the bond required under 82-11-123.

It is further the intent of the legislature that the board of oil and gas conservation respond promptly to emergency situations that may arise."

Extent of Conservation District Implementation of Land Use Regulations Regarding Coal Bed Methane Wastewater Operations: The Legislature did not intend that the listing in 76-15-706 of measures necessary to protect soil and water limit the flexibility of conservation districts to devise means to control the adverse effects of coal bed methane runoff. Thus, a conservation district has authority under 76-15-706, following a referendum by the voters, to implement land use regulations in order to implement reasonable measures to conserve soils, protect soil structure from coal bed methane water, and conserve the water resources of the conservation district. 50 A.G. Case Notes

Coordination of Habendum and Pugh Clauses in Oil and Gas Lease — Shut-In Gas Well Considered Producing Well for Lease Purposes — Lease Extended on Section With Producing Well, Terminated on Undeveloped Sections for Lack of Timely Rental Payments: Plaintiff's oil and gas leases had habendum clauses, which provided that the primary leases would be extended as long as oil or gas was produced or drilling operations continued on any of the leased property, and Pugh clauses, which provided that production would not serve to extend the primary term of a lease unless the lessee paid an annual per-acre rental fee prior to the end of the primary term. By the end of the primary term, plaintiff had only one shut-in well developed on the leasehold. Depending on the habendum clauses, plaintiff concluded that there was not a producing well on the leasehold, so the Pugh clauses did not take effect and rental payments were not required. Depending on the Pugh clauses, defendants concluded that because there were no producing wells on the leasehold and because the rental fee on the shut-in well was 2 days late, all of plaintiff's leases were canceled. In reconciling the clauses, the District Court correctly found that: (1) the Pugh clauses required that rental payments be paid on or before the expiration of the primary term in order to extend leases on undeveloped sections; and (2) because time is of the essence in oil and gas leases and plaintiff did not pay timely rental, the leases expired by their own terms on all sections except the section containing the shut-in well, which was considered a producing well, and that lease would continue under the habendum clause as long as plaintiff used reasonable diligence in marketing the gas. Sandtana, Inc. v. Wallin Ranch Co., 2003 MT 329, 318 M 369, 80 P3d 1224 (2003).

Oil Lease Construed to Make All Provisions Effective: Texaco argued that the one productive well it had drilled was sufficient to extend the lease on all lands covered by the lease for as long as the well produced. The Supreme Court held that the general duration clause in the lease relied on by Texaco was modified by a subsequent provision that limited the lease extension to the 320-acre spacing unit on which the producing well was located. Fed. Land Bank of Spokane v. Texaco, Inc., 250 M 471, 820 P2d 1269, 48 St. Rep. 998 (1991).

Common-Law Offset Drilling Rule — Implied Covenant Not Altered by Enactment of Statutes: Where the parties entered into a mineral lease for the production of oil underlying plaintiff's property, there was by common law implied in this and every oil and gas lease a covenant on the part of the lessee to protect the premises of his lessor from drainage by an adjacent producing well by drilling an offset well. The implied covenant was not per se eliminated by the enactment of the 1953 oil and gas conservation law, and an oil and gas lessee still has a duty under the implied covenant to protect his premises from drainage by drilling an offset well, if doing so would not be in violation of the statutes or of a valid rule or order of the Oil and Gas Conservation Board. U. V. Indus., Inc. v. Danielson, 184 M 203, 602 P2d 571 (1979).

Common-Law Rule Not Superseded by Authority of Board: In an action by plaintiffs (lessor's grantees) for damages resulting from defendant lessees' failure under an oil and gas lease to protect the plaintiffs' interests by drilling an offset well, the common-law offset drilling rule, under which plaintiffs seek damages, has not been superseded by the administrative powers of the Board of Oil and Gas Conservation, as the powers of the Board do not include the authority to adjudicate private rights. As held in the case of Pattie v. Oil & Gas Conserv. Comm'n, 145 M 531, 402 P2d 596 (1965), the Legislature gave the Board the duty to consider correlative rights in making orders, but adjudication of those rights must be by civil action in the District Courts. U. V. Indus., Inc. v. Danielson, 184 M 203, 602 P2d 571 (1979).

Limiting Production of an Exception Location Well: Under 82-11-201, authorizing the Commission to grant exceptions to field spacing rules, the Commission must hear evidence on the issue of injury to correlative rights of adjoining landowners and determine if there are grounds for exercise of its authority to limit production of an exception location well, even in the absence of a showing of waste. Chevron Oil Co. v. Oil & Gas Conserv. Comm'n, 150 M 351, 435 P2d 781 (1968).

Adjudication of Private Rights by Board of Oil and Gas Conservation: Section 82-11-201(3) (now (4)) was sufficiently broad to permit the Oil and Gas Conservation Commission to consider private rights in making orders. Pattie v. Oil & Gas Conserv. Comm'n, 145 M 531, 402 P2d 596 (1965).

Granting of Exception Allowed: Under 82-11-201(3) (now (4)), where property lies on the projected edge of a petroleum reservoir, an exception may be granted if requiring the well to be drilled at the authorized location on the spacing units would be inequitable or unreasonable. Pattie v. Oil & Gas Conserv. Comm'n, 145 M 531, 402 P2d 596 (1965).

82-11-202. Pooling of interest within spacing unit.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 313 near middle of (1)(a), after "within a", inserted "temporary or permanent"; at beginning of first sentence of (1)(b) deleted "In the absence of voluntary pooling within the spacing unit", near middle, before "spacing", inserted "permanent", and at end inserted "of the permanent spacing unit and the allocation of production if the applicant has made an unsuccessful, good faith attempt to voluntarily pool the interests within the permanent spacing unit", inserted second sentence requiring that the applicant own an interest in the oil or gas, and in third, fourth, and fifth sentences, before "spacing", inserted "permanent"; deleted former first sentence of (2)(a) that read: "The pooling order shall provide for the drilling and operating of a well on the spacing unit and for the payment of the cost thereof, which cost may include a reasonable charge for supervision, handling, and storage", near beginning of first sentence, after "costs of", substituted "development or other operations referred to in subsection (1)" for "drilling and operating the well" and near middle, before "spacing", inserted "permanent", inserted second sentence providing for drilling and payment of costs when a well has not been drilled prior to hearing on the application, in third sentence, before "order", inserted "subsequent" and after "order" inserted "after notice and hearing", and in last sentence, before "spacing", inserted "permanent"; substituted (2)(b) regarding costs included in the order for former language that read: "If an owner refuses to pay his share of the costs of drilling and operating the well, the order must include as cost"; inserted (2)(e) providing for payment of costs when an owner of an interest in a temporary spacing unit refuses to pay drilling and operating costs; inserted (3) clarifying when an owner is presumed to have refused to pay costs; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (2)(a), near end of second sentence, inserted "and excluding the royalty provided for in subsection (2)(c) of this section"; inserted (2)(b) providing for percentage of costs to be assessed against refusing owner; inserted (2)(c) referring to refusing owner's landowner royalty interest; and inserted (2)(d) referring to accounting due from operator to refusing owner.

Case Notes

Common-Law Offset Drilling Rule — Implied Covenant Not Altered by Enactment of Statutes: Where the parties entered into a mineral lease for the production of oil underlying plaintiff's property, there was by common law implied in this and every oil and gas lease a covenant on the part of the lessee to protect the premises of his lessor from drainage by an adjacent producing well by drilling an offset well. The implied covenant was not per se eliminated by the enactment of the 1953 oil and gas conservation law, and an oil and gas lessee still has a duty under the implied covenant to protect his premises from drainage by drilling an offset well, if doing so would not be in violation of the statutes or of a valid rule or order of the Oil and Gas Conservation Board. U. V. Indus., Inc. v. Danielson, 184 M 203, 602 P2d 571 (1979).

Unitization of Reservoir Containing Multilease Lands: Under 82-11-202, an application by an oil and gas lessee to the Oil and Gas Conservation Commission for unitization of a reservoir did not constitute breach of a one-well pooling provision in the lease since such unitization of an extensive reservoir containing multilease lands, multiproducing wells, multipools, and multispacing or drilling units was different from a lease provision relating to pooling. Armstrong v. High Crest Oil, Inc., 164 M 187, 520 P2d 1081 (1974).

Creation of Unit an Exercise of Police Power: Oil and gas conservation laws and rules have the effect of modifying provisions of existing leases, and statutory and administrative action creating a gas unit is an exercise of police power, and the fact that in some instances an oil and gas lease may have been procured prior to legislative or administrative pronunciation is immaterial. Armstrong v. High Crest Oil, Inc., 164 M 187, 520 P2d 1081 (1974).

Indian Lands: Under 82-11-202, the matter in controversy in a suit by Indian tribes for an injunction to restrain the Oil and Gas Conservation Commission from enforcing an order "pooling" tribes' lands with lands of another to form a "spacing unit" was not the lands or royalties but the regulation and right to be free from it. Since the tribes failed to show the jurisdictional amount in controversy, the suit was not properly brought in Federal Court. Yoder v. Assiniboine & Sioux Tribes of Fort Peck Indian Reservation, 339 F2d 360 (1964).

82-11-204. Hearing on operation of pool as unit.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 474 inserted (1)(b) requiring a hearing to consider the need for the operation of a unit for the long-term storage of carbon dioxide; inserted (2)(b) requiring notice of an applicant's intention to make an application; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

Saving Clause: Section 29, Ch. 474, L. 2009, was a saving clause.

Transition — Contingent Implementation: Section 30, Ch. 474, L. 2009, provided: "If the United States environmental protection agency adopts regulations allowing states to apply for primacy over carbon dioxide sequestration wells under the federal underground injection control program adopted by the environmental protection agency, the board of oil and gas conservation shall in consultation with the department of environmental quality and the department of natural resources and conservation develop draft rules to implement [this act] [Chapter 474, L. 2009] and seek primacy."

Case Notes

Unitization of Entire Reservoir: Application by oil and gas lessee to the Commission for unitization of a reservoir did not constitute a breach of one-well pooling provision in lease; unitization of an entire reservoir under this section is entirely different from one-well pooling pursuant to 82-11-202. Armstrong v. High Crest Oils, Inc., 164 M 187, 520 P2d 1081 (1974).

82-11-205. Board order for unit operation — criteria.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 474 in introductory clause after "pools" inserted "or of a geologic storage reservoir"; in (1) at end after "gas" inserted "or the operation is necessary for the long-term storage of carbon dioxide"; inserted (3)(b) concerning geologic storage reservoir; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

Saving Clause: Section 29, Ch. 474, L. 2009, was a saving clause.

Transition — Contingent Implementation: Section 30, Ch. 474, L. 2009, provided: "If the United States environmental protection agency adopts regulations allowing states to apply for primacy over carbon dioxide sequestration wells under the federal underground injection control program adopted by the environmental protection agency, the board of oil and gas conservation shall in consultation with the department of environmental quality and the department of natural resources and conservation develop draft rules to implement [this act] [Chapter 474, L. 2009] and seek primacy."

82-11-302. Interstate oil and gas compact.

Compiler's Comments

Interstate Compact Extended: The original interstate compact to conserve oil and gas, which was to expire September 1, 1937, has been extended from time to time by the various states with the approval of Congress. It had been extended to 1947 at the time Montana ratified the compact. The latest extension was granted on May 2, 1979, by Senate Joint Resolution 72, which provides for the approval by Congress effective from January 1, 1979, "until Congress withdraws such consent".

All the states mentioned in Article I, except California, have ratified the compact. Additional states which have ratified the compact are Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, West Virginia, and Wyoming.

82-15-105. Licenses and fees — status of license on transfer of ownership.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 62 deleted former (4) that read: "(4) If ownership of a measuring device changes and the device:

(a) remains at the same location, the license transfers to the new owner and remains in effect until December 31 of that year;

(b) is moved to a new location, the license is void, and the new owner shall:

(i) apply for a new license that will expire on the anniversary date of that year, as provided in subsection (3); and

(ii) pay the applicable fees"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 54 in second sentence in (3) substituted "within 60 days of the licensee's anniversary date" for "before March 1 of each year in which the vehicle tank, meter, or measuring device is in use". Amendment effective March 15, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 366 in (2) inserted second sentence regarding payment of fees by credit card and discounting of fees; in (3), at end of first sentence, substituted "the anniversary date established by rule by the board of review established in 30-16-302" for "December 31 of each year"; and in (4)(b)(i), after "expire on", substituted "the anniversary date of that year, as provided in subsection (3)" for "December 31 of that year".

1993 Amendment: Chapter 498 substituted (2) requiring Department to adopt rules establishing licensing fees based upon the measuring devices used by dealers and requiring fees to be deposited in special revenue account for administering and enforcing this part for former (2) that read: "The fee for this license is determined as follows and depends upon the number of devices utilized by the dealer:

(a) each gasoline pump, diesel pump, or fuel oil pump measuring device—$7;

(b) each petroleum vehicle tank meter or bulk petroleum meter of 2 inches (5.08 centimeters) and under—$20;

(c) each bulk petroleum meter over 2 inches (5.08 centimeters)—$25;

(d) each liquefied petroleum liquid meter—$30;

(e) each vapor meter—$4;

(f) each petroleum and liquefied petroleum vehicle tank up to and including 2,000 gallons (7,570 liters)—$25;

(g) each petroleum and liquefied petroleum vehicle tank over 2,000 gallons (7,570 liters)—$25 plus $5 for each additional 1,000 gallons (3,785 liters)"; at end of (4)(b)(ii) deleted "prescribed in subsection (2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1994.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 498, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in order to provide the department of commerce the authority to establish by rule license fees for petroleum dealers and liquefied petroleum dealers. The fees must be set in an amount necessary to cover costs of the department to administer and enforce the provisions of Title 82, chapter 15, part 1."

Implementation: Section 2, Ch. 498, L. 1993, provided: "The department of commerce may adopt rules implementing [this act] to be in place on January 1, 1994." Effective April 24, 1993.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section (3)(1), Ch. 498, L. 1993, provided: "[Section 1] [82-15-105] is effective January 1, 1994, and applies to license fees beginning after December 31, 1993."

1991 Amendment: In (2)(a) increased fee from $5 to $7; in (2)(b) increased fee from $15 to $20; in (2)(c) increased fee from $20 to $25; in (2)(d) increased fee from $25 to $30; in (2)(e) increased fee from $3 to $4; in (2)(f) increased fee from $20 to $25; in (2)(g) increased fee from $20 plus $4 to $25 plus $5; in first sentence of (3), after "annual", deleted "and nontransferable as to person or location"; inserted (4) clarifying status of licenses upon change of ownership of measuring devices; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1992.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 56, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] is effective January 1, 1992, and applies to licenses and fees for years beginning after December 31, 1991."

1983 Amendment: Increased the fee in (2)(a) from $3 to $5, in (2)(b) from $10 to $15, in (2)(c) from $15 to $20, and in (2)(d) from $15 to $25.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 432 deleted definition of renewable resource grant and loan program state special revenue account that read: ""Renewable resource grant and loan program state special revenue account" means a separate account created by 85-1-604 within the state special revenue fund of the state treasury for the purposes of the renewable resource grant and loan program as set forth in 85-1-604"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 436 inserted definition of tribal government; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 18 in definition of cost of works, in (e) after "legal", substituted "services" for "expenses"; near end of definition of renewable resource grant and loan program state special revenue account substituted reference to renewable resource grant and loan program for reference to water development program; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 418 deleted definition of Board that read: ""Board" means the board of natural resources and conservation provided for in 2-15-3302"; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 478 inserted definitions of renewable resource grant and loan program state special revenue account and renewable resource loan debt service fund; deleted water development account as defined term and applied former definition to renewable resource loan proceeds account and substituted "renewable resource grant and loan program" for "water development program"; deleted definition of water development debt service fund that read: ""Water development debt service fund" means a separate fund created by 85-1-603 within the debt service fund type of the state treasury to be used as provided in 85-1-619"; in definition of water development project inserted (b) providing that for purposes of renewable resource grant and loan program, water development activities must be included; deleted definition of water development state special revenue account that read: ""Water development state special revenue account" means a separate account created by 85-1-604 within the state special revenue fund of the state treasury for the purposes of the water development program as set forth in 85-1-604"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1989 Amendment: In definition of water development account, after "recipients", inserted "and to purchase liens and operate property, as provided in 85-1-615"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 11, 1989.

1987 Amendment: Inserted definitions of administrative costs and cost of operation and maintenance; in (4), after "cost of construction", inserted "including any rehabilitation or alteration of the project"; and in (13) changed reference to subsection (6) to subsection (8).

1983 Amendment: In definition of water development account, near beginning before "account" deleted "clearance", and substituted "state special revenue fund" for "bond proceeds and insurance clearance fund"; and in definition of water development state special revenue account substituted "state special revenue account" for "earmarked account" and "state special revenue fund" for "earmarked revenue fund"; in definition of water development debt service fund substituted references to debt service fund for references to sinking account and sinking fund.

1981 Amendment: Inserted (5) defining private person; and inserted (7) through (12) defining public benefits, water development clearance account, water development activity, water development earmarked account, water development project, and water development sinking account.

Case Notes

Remand for Determination of Appropriate Findings and Damages Related to Ditch Rights — Sanctions Dismissed Absent Specific Findings of Sanctionable Conduct: The parties entered a settlement agreement in 1998 regarding use and maintenance of a ditch that crossed plaintiffs' property and conveyed irrigation water to defendants' property. In 2002, plaintiffs alleged breach of the agreement, nuisance, and trespass. Defendants counterclaimed, alleging breach of the agreement, interference with water rights and easements, and nuisance. The District Court found that plaintiffs' claims were without merit and awarded sanctions against plaintiffs pursuant to former Rule 11, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). The court also found that all the counterclaims were unfounded and dismissed the counterclaims with prejudice. Plaintiffs appealed, and defendants cross-appealed. The Supreme Court concluded that the findings of fact regarding plaintiffs' claims were supported by substantial credible evidence and not clearly erroneous, so the trial court's holding that defendants did not breach the agreement was affirmed. Dismissal of defendants' counterclaims, however, was not affirmed. Although claims of plaintiffs' physical interference were not supported by the evidence, under Kephart v. Portmann, 259 M 232, 855 P2d 120 (1993), plaintiffs' filing of the lawsuit and forcing defendants into court to defend their established rights constituted an impairment of defendants' acknowledged ditch rights under 70-17-112, so the Supreme Court remanded for a determination of defendants' damages, if any. In addition, the District Court failed to set out specific findings concerning whether plaintiffs breached the settlement agreement, so evaluation of the counterclaims was not possible, and the Supreme Court directed the District Court to enter appropriate findings on remand. Last, the District Court failed to set out specific findings concerning plaintiffs' acts warranting sanctions, stating only that plaintiffs' case was so strongly without merit that it was frivolous. Without more specific findings as to why sanctions were assessed, the Supreme Court vacated the award and directed the District Court on remand to enter specific findings of fact in support of its determination that plaintiffs violated former Rule 11 and, if so, as to the appropriateness of the choice of sanction imposed (see Akin v. Q-L Investments, Inc., 959 F2d 521 (5th Cir. 1992)). Byrum v. Andren, 2007 MT 107, 337 M 167, 159 P3d 1062 (2007).

Public Right to Use Beaverhead River for Recreational Purposes: Following the decision in Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984), the Supreme Court held that: (1) the Beaverhead River is navigable for recreational purposes and the public has a right to use its bed and banks up to the ordinary high-water mark with limited right to portage across private property in order to bypass barriers in the water; (2) determination of navigability for title is not necessary; (3) the public does not have the right to trespass over private property in order to reach the state-owned waters; and (4) plaintiff's action did not constitute inverse condemnation because public use of waters, rather than title, was determined. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Hildreth, 211 M 29, 684 P2d 1088, 41 St. Rep. 1192 (1984). (Annotator's note: Chapters 429, 556, and 599, L. 1985, pertained to recreational use of waterways and related issues.)

Navigability for Title Purposes — Federal Test — Dearborn River Navigable: Federal law controlled the issue of whether the Dearborn River was, at the time Montana became a state, navigable for the purpose of determining title to its bed. Under federal law, rivers are navigable in law if they are navigable in fact, and they are navigable in fact if they were used or capable of being used, in their ordinary condition, as highways for commerce over which trade and travel were or could be conducted in the customary modes of trade and travel on the water at the time of the state's admission to the Union. Navigability in fact can be determined by using the log-floating test. That test was satisfied by evidence that in 1887, 2 years before Montana became a state, the Dearborn was used to float about 100,000 railroad ties and that in 1888 or 1889, one or two log drives a year were floated down the river, one of them containing 700,000 board feet. Title to the riverbed was thus in the federal government when Montana became a state in 1889 and was transferred to the State upon its admission to the Union. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984). (Annotator's note: Chapters 429, 556, and 599, L. 1985, pertained to recreational use of waterways and related issues.)

Public Recreational Use of Dearborn River — No Inverse Condemnation: Landowner along Dearborn River was sued by parties seeking a determination of the public's right to use the river for recreational uses. Landowner counterclaimed for inverse condemnation, basing the counterclaim on his claim to ownership of the riverbed. The Supreme Court held that the question of title to the bed was irrelevant to determining navigability for use by the public; that landowner had no claim to the waters; that since there was no claim to the waters, nothing was taken and thus there was no ground for an inverse condemnation claim; and that, consequently, the District Court did not err in dismissing the counterclaim. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984). (Annotator's note: Chapters 429, 556, and 599, L. 1985, pertained to recreational use of waterways and related issues.)

Public Recreational Use Rights on Dearborn River — Limits: Navigability for public use is governed by state law and is separate from the question of navigability under federal law for title purposes. The question is whether waters owned by the State under Art. IX, sec. 3(3), Mont. Const., are susceptible to recreational use by the public. The capability of use of the waters for recreational purposes determines the availability of the waters for recreational use by the public. Whether or not a private party owns the bed beneath the waters is irrelevant. The constitution and the Public Trust Doctrine bar a private party from interfering with the public's right to use of the surface of the waters owned by the State, and any surface waters that are capable of recreational use may be so used by the public without regard to streambed ownership or navigability for nonrecreational purposes. The public's recreational use right extends to the point of the high-water marks. The public does not have the right to cross over private property to reach waters upon which they have a recreational use right, though they may portage around barriers in the water in the least intrusive way possible, avoiding damage to any private property holder's rights. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984). (Annotator's note: Chapters 429, 556, and 599, L. 1985, pertained to recreational use of waterways and related issues.)

Title to and Public Use of Dearborn River — Federal Commerce Clause Navigability Immaterial: In action for determination of the public's right to use the Dearborn River, whether Montana has adopted the log-floating test of commercial navigability and whether the Dearborn is navigable under the federal commercial use test were immaterial because the question was one of recreational use or navigability, not commercial navigability. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984). (Annotator's note: Chapters 429, 556, and 599, L. 1985, pertained to recreational use of waterways and related issues.)

Title to and Public Use of Dearborn River — Subject Matter Jurisdiction Found: Landowner along the Dearborn River claimed the District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over action for determination of the public's right to use the river, basing his claim on the presumption that he held title to the riverbed and that the State had no power to strip him of that title under the guise of determining navigability of the waters over the riverbed. The claim lacked merit because the State holds title to the riverbed and the water flowing over it, so that there was no question of the District Court's subject matter jurisdiction. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984). (Annotator's note: Chapters 429, 556, and 599, L. 1985, pertained to recreational use of waterways and related issues.)

Case Notes

Navigability for Title Test for Missouri, Clark Fork, and Madison Rivers — Equal Footing Doctrine — State Ownership of Riverbeds: The District Court granted the state's motion for summary judgment on the issue of whether the Missouri, Clark Fork, and Madison Rivers were navigable for determining whether title to the riverbeds resided with the state. The concept of navigability for title means that a river does not have to experience actual use at or before the time of statehood, as long as the river was susceptible of providing a channel for commerce. Commerce is very broadly construed, and emerging and newly discovered forms of commerce can be applied retroactively to considerations of navigability. Thus, present day use of a river may be probative of its status as a navigable river at the time of statehood. Under the navigability for title test, the state has held title to the riverbeds beginning at statehood in 1889, and according to the equal footing doctrine, the disposition, use, and ownership interests in the beds of the rivers in question have been governed by state law since that time. The evidence presented by the state was clearly sufficient to demonstrate navigability in fact, and the state was therefore entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The District Court was affirmed. PPL Mont., LLC v. St., 2010 MT 64, 355 Mont. 402, 229 P.3d 421, following The Montello, 87 US 430 (1874), and U.S. v. Utah, 283 US 64 (1931). See also Alaska v. Ahtna, 891 F2d 1401 (9th Cir. 1989).

On February 22, 2012, the United States Supreme Court overruled the Montana Supreme Court, holding that the state court's decision was based upon an infirm legal understanding of the rules of navigability for title. PPL Montana LLC v. Montana, 565 US __, 132 S Ct 1215, 182 L Ed 2d 77 (2012).

Public Right to Use Beaverhead River for Recreational Purposes: Following the decision in Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984), the Supreme Court held that: (1) the Beaverhead River is navigable for recreational purposes and the public has a right to use its bed and banks up to the ordinary high-water mark with limited right to portage across private property in order to bypass barriers in the water; (2) determination of navigability for title is not necessary; (3) the public does not have the right to trespass over private property in order to reach the state-owned waters; and (4) plaintiff's action did not constitute inverse condemnation because public use of waters, rather than title, was determined. (Annotator's note: Chapters 429, 556, and 599, L. 1985, pertained to recreational use of waterways and related issues.)

Navigability for Title Purposes — Summary Judgment — Dearborn River: The District Court properly granted the coalition for stream access and two state departments summary judgment on the issue of navigability of the Dearborn River in 1889 for title purposes. The affidavits and depositions of plaintiffs' two competent historians were admissible because the historians were qualified experts who provided evidence of the history of the river, their affidavits and depositions disclosed circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness, and the facts and data they relied on were of a type reasonably relied on by experts in their field; the facts and data did not themselves have to be admissible. The affidavits of defendant landowner's witnesses were worthless, were not admissible, and did not create any genuine issue of material fact concerning the navigability of the river at the time Montana became a state in 1889. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984). Title to and Public Recreation on Dearborn River — Ex Post Facto, Contract Clause, and Irrevocable Privileged Considerations: The Supreme Court held that the State, not the landowner along the Dearborn River, held title to the bed of the river under the federal test of navigability for purposes of determining title to the riverbed. The court also held that landowner had no right to exclude the public from recreational use of the waters of the Dearborn. Because of these holdings, landowner's questions relating to ex post facto laws, violation of the contract clause of the constitution, and irrevocable rights and privileges were not germane to the case. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984). (Annotator's note: Chapters 429, 556, and 599, L. 1985, pertained to recreational use of waterways and related issues.)

Attorney General's Opinions

Access to Rivers and Streams Via County Road Right-of-Way and Bridges: Given that the public has the right to use public highways in any manner and for any purpose consistent with or reasonably incidental to public travel, this right includes the use of public rights-of-way created by county roads to gain access to rivers and streams. Using a county road right-of-way as an access point to a river or stream right-of-way is consistent with and reasonably incidental to the public's right to travel on county roads. Further, a bridge and its abutments, as part of a public highway, offer the same access to rivers and streams for recreational use as the highway to which they are attached. However, the public's right of access is not unlimited and is subject to the following limitations: (1) the recreating public must stay within the county road and bridge right-of-way, which is assumed to be 60 feet unless otherwise stated by petition or dedication; (2) access may be limited by the reasonable exercise of a governing body's police power to control the use of roads for purposes such as safety and parking; and (3) use of a public highway may be limited by the manner in which it was created, such as a road created by prescriptive easement, which is limited both in size and usage to the original use during the prescriptive period and may include access for hunting, fishing, and recreation. 48 A.G. Part Case Notes

Federal Court Without Jurisdiction of Action Against Board — Under Section 89-101, R.C.M. 1947: The Montana Water Conservation Board, precursor to the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, is a mere arm of the state; hence, an action by a nonresident corporation against the Board and its members to enjoin interference with corporation's water rights was in effect an action against the state, so that federal District Court was without jurisdiction to entertain it. 1985 Amendment: In first sentence, after "distribution for", substituted "any beneficial use" for "industrial and other uses" and at end deleted "except as provided in subsection (2)"; and deleted former (2) that read: "Until a final decree has been issued pursuant to 85-2-234 concerning the waters in a federal reservoir, the department may sell, rent, or distribute such water only after a permit has been issued to an applicant for purchase, rent, or distribution of water in accordance with part 3 of this chapter."

Temporary Changes Made Permanent: Section 7, Ch. 706, L. 1983, provided that the amendments made by Ch. 706 were to terminate on July 1, 1985. Section 23, Ch. 573, L. 1985, amended sec. 7, Ch. 706, L. 1983, to provide that only one section (Ch. 706, sec. 4), that established the Select Committee on Water Marketing, would terminate on July 1, 1985. Thus the amendments to this section made by Ch. 706, L. 1983 (set forth below in the 1983 amendment note), are now permanent, except insofar as the section was further amended in 1985.

1983 Amendment: Near beginning of (1), after "acquire water" inserted "or water storage"; after "federal government from" substituted "any federal reservoir" for "the Fort Peck Reservoir"; at end of first sentence of (1), after "industrial" deleted "use" and inserted "and other uses"; at end of (1) added "except as provided in subsection (2)"; and inserted (2) authorizing the Department to sell, rent, or distribute water in a federal reservoir until a final decree is issued only after an applicant has been issued a permit for purchase, rent, or distribution of water.

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 301 at beginning of (1) deleted "Subject to the approval of the board"; at end of first sentence in (3), after "projects", deleted "designed for those purposes", in second sentence, after "approved", deleted "by the board", and in last sentence, after "failure", deleted "of the board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 418 in (1), at beginning, deleted "Subject to the approval of the board"; in (3), in two places, substituted "department" for "board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Style changes in the chapters were slightly different. In each case, the codifier chose the most appropriate.

Severability: Section 19, Ch. 301, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1987 Amendment: In (1), in middle of first sentence after "grant", inserted "or loan", in second and third sentences, after "cost of", substituted "operation and maintenance" for "maintaining, repairing, and operating it", and in third sentence, before "the principal", deleted "to pay" and before "revenue bonds" inserted "loans or"; and in (3), at end of second sentence after "maintenance", substituted "and the principal and interest of loans and revenue bonds issued to finance the construction" for "and repair and the amortization of the cost of the construction".

85-1-207. Determination of costs of works.

Compiler's Comments

1987 Amendment: Substituted language concerning determination of cost of water projects for former language that read: "The department, in determining the cost of works, may make nonreimbursable allowances for costs of public benefits, including but not limited to irrigation, recreation, flood prevention, fish and wildlife, and stream stabilization."

85-1-208. Construction across streams, highways, or other obstacles.

Case Notes

Affirmative Duty to Maintain Bridges: The State Water Conservation Board (precursor to the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) built bridges over its irrigation ditch where the ditch intersected city streets. Concomitant with the duty to construct bridges so as to restore streets to their former usefulness is a duty to maintain the bridges. Although this section is silent regarding the duty to maintain, such a duty can be implied from reading all the sections of the Water Conservation Act (section 89-101, et seq., R.C.M. 1947, now partially contained in Title 85, ch. 1) together. 2011 Amendment: Chapter 144 inserted (5)(b) relating to the Cataract Creek Dam project; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 7, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 144, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the Cataract Creek Dam water project is a state water project operated by the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation as successor to the project originally constructed by and through the Montana State Water Conservation Board; and

WHEREAS, the State of Montana in the 1990s authorized the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to transfer and dispose of components of various state water projects throughout Montana to water user associations interested in taking over the components of the projects; and

WHEREAS, the Cataract Creek Dam project was constructed in the 1950s by the State Water Conservation Board to supply water to irrigators below the dam and resulted in the Cataract Water Users Association being formed to contract with the Department to market and distribute the project's water; and

WHEREAS, the project has never been identified in previous disposal efforts as a project that could be disposed of to the users of the system; and

WHEREAS, the Cataract Water Users Association has expressed interest in taking over the project from the Department, if economically feasible, to own and operate the system, to make necessary repairs and improvements to the project so that water from the system could be used for the benefit of the users, and to address shortcomings with the project that have not been addressed by the state over the years during which the project has been owned by the Department or its predecessor."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 120 in (5) inserted fourth sentence requiring the department to comply with 85-6-109 and give purchase preference in the disposal of a project; deleted former (6)

that read: "(6) (a) The department shall attempt to dispose of its canal projects by June 30, 1995. The canal projects to be disposed of include the:

(i) Columbus canal;
(ii) Delphia-Melstone canals;
(iii) Hysham pumping canals;
(iv) Lewistown ditch;
(v) Livingston ditch;
(vi) Florence canal;
(vii) Paradise canal;
(viii) Park Branch canal;
(ix) Sidney pumping canals;
(x) South Side canal;
(xi) Vigilante canal; and
(xii) West Bench canal.

(b) The department may dispose of a canal project by sale, transfer to a water users' association, abandonment, or other legal conveyance. If there is an existing water users' association on the canal project, the provisions of 85-6-109 must be complied with in the disposal of the canal project. The department shall give preference to existing water users' associations operating and maintaining the canal project.

(c) Upon the sale or transfer of a canal project, the department shall either cancel or write off from the accounts receivable carried on the books of the department a sum not to exceed any previous 1-year cost of operating and maintaining the canal project or make a payment not to exceed any previous 1-year cost of operating and maintaining the canal project. For a canal project not disposed of by June 30, 1995, the water users of the canal project are responsible for the department's administrative costs and the actual costs of operation and maintenance of the canal project"; in (6) in first sentence in two places before "project" deleted "canal"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 19, 1999.

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 301 at beginning of first sentence of (5) deleted "Subject to the approval of the board under 85-1-202" and after "abandon" inserted "lease or rent" and at beginning of second sentence inserted exception clause; in (6)(b) deleted reference to subsection (5) of 85-6-109; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 418 in (5), at beginning, deleted "Subject to the approval of the board under 85-1-202"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Issuance of Revenue Bonds in Aid of Emergency Relief Act: Issuance of revenue bonds by the Water Conservation Board, formed pursuant to prior law, to aid in the construction of a dam and reservoir under sec. 1, Ch. 85, L. 1937 (omitted), to the extent of agreeing to take up relief warrants issued by the county sponsoring the project with the proceeds, the bonds to be secured by revenue obtained from the members of a water users' association using the stored water, is not a lending of the credit of the state or any of its subdivisions to the association, within the meaning of Art. XIII, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const., or a violation of Art. XIII, sec. 4, 1889 Mont. Const., prohibiting the state from assuming the debt of a county or municipal corporation. Kraus v. Riley, 107 M 116, 80 P2d 864 (1938).

Power of Board to Issue Revenue Bonds to Be Retired by Funds Obtained From Water Users: Contention that the Water Conservation Board, formed pursuant to prior law, was without power to issue revenue bonds to be retired by funds obtained from water users was erroneous since such power is expressly conferred by sections 89-109, R.C.M. 1947 (85-1-301), and 89-111, R.C.M. 1947 (85-1-307). Bonds Issued Not State Indebtedness — Under 1889 Constitution: Issuance of bonds by the Water Conservation Board, formed pursuant to prior law, does not create a debt of the state in excess of the constitutional limit prescribed by Art. Const.), since section 89-109, R.C.M. 1947 (85-1-302), provides that all bonds shall contain a statement that they do not constitute a state debt or liability and the bonds are made payable only from revenue of the works to be constructed. 1981 Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 503, L. 1981 (SB 229), provided: "WHEREAS, the availability of energy from traditional sources is diminishing; and

WHEREAS, the demand for energy from the state's citizens is increasing, due to population growth and economic expansion; and

WHEREAS, because of newly developing technology and increasing energy costs, small-scale hydroelectric power generation is becoming an economically feasible additional source of energy; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana currently owns and controls many water projects which may have potential capacity for the small-scale generation of hydroelectric energy; and

WHEREAS, it is in the best interest of the people of Montana to utilize Montana's water resources to the fullest extent possible."

Part Case Notes

Private Appropriations — Control by State Required: Plaintiff filed a complaint for declaratory judgment in the Supreme Court seeking to determine the validity of several acts of the Legislature allowing the issuance of state revenue bonds. Section 2 of Ch. 705, L. 1983, authorized the creation of state debt for development of hydroelectric power at three state-owned dams. Under Title 85, ch. 1, part 5, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation and Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (functions now transferred to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) are mandated to make the completed projects available for lease to utilities, electric cooperatives, or a state corporation proposing to use a substantial portion of the generated power. Plaintiff contended that this scheme violated Art. V, sec. 11, Mont. Const., by benefiting the public utilities, electric cooperatives, or a private corporation. The court stated that as long as the provisions relating to the expenditure of the funds derived from the proceeds of the bonds are under the control of the State, the constitutional mandate is satisfied. In this case, the proceeds of the coal severance tax bonds will be expended by a state agency under the control of the State for construction of hydroelectric projects. The appropriations therefore are made for an agency of the State. The fact that the State may afterwards lease the projects to a private association or corporation is no more offensive constitutionally than is the power of the State to lease its state-held lands to private parties. Grossman v. St., 209 M 427, 682 P2d 1319, 41 St. Rep. 804 (1984).

Delegation of Legislative Authority — Contingent Authorization Allowed: Plaintiff filed a complaint for declaratory judgment in the Supreme Court seeking to determine the validity of several acts of the Legislature allowing the issuance of state revenue bonds. Plaintiff contended that Ch. 705, L. 1983, granted the Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (BNRC) (now abolished) the power and authority to determine the feasibility of various water conservation projects and make recommendations on the projects to the Board of Examiners. Plaintiff contended the delegation was unconstitutional in that it failed to set forth adequate standards or to place limits on the discretion of the BNRC. The court found standards imposed with reasonable clarity in 85-1-501 and 85-1-502. Under these statutes, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) is required to study the economic and environmental feasibility of constructing and operating power generating facilities on water projects. Once DNRC has reached its determination, it is the BNRC's duty to determine feasibility and public interest. The court found the legislative enactments complete and sufficiently clear, definite, and certain to enable the agencies to know their respective rights and obligations. The court found that determinations of economic and environmental feasibility are more appropriate in the administrative than the legislative sector. The court found nothing improper in the Legislature's making its authorizations contingent upon administrative decisions properly made in the executive side of state government. Grossman v. St., 209 M 427, 682 P2d 1319, 41 St. Rep. 804 (1984).

Water Development Program

Part Compiler's Comments

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 478, L. 1993, provided: "This bill is introduced as a result of a legislative request to combine the water development and renewable resource development programs. These grant and loan programs have been administered as essentially one program for the past 4 bienniums. The renewable resource grant and loan program keeps the critical elements of both the water development and renewable resource development programs and does not expand either eligible projects or eligible applicants.

The long-range planning subcommittee of the appropriations and finance and claims committees stated its intent to establish minimum funding levels for these grant programs in House Bill No. 6 (Chapter 551, Laws of 1991) and House Bill No. 8 (Chapter 552, Laws of 1991) passed by the 1991 legislature. Over the past several bienniums grant funding has decreased. At the same time, revenues allocated to the water development, renewable resource development, and reclamation and development accounts have increased. Appropriations to natural resource agencies have made up the difference and have increased at a rate surpassing the growth in resource indemnity trust (RIT) interest income. This bill establishes minimum funding levels for the renewable resource grant and loan program, the reclamation and development grants program, and the water storage account.

In order to reflect the combining of the water development and renewable resource development programs, the allocation of interest earnings from the RIT is changed. Currently, 30% and 8%, respectively, of the RIT interest earnings are allocated to water development and the renewable resource development state special revenue accounts. This bill would eliminate these accounts. In their place, the renewable resource grant and loan program state special revenue account would be established and 38% of the RIT interest earnings would be allocated to this account.

Resource indemnity tax proceeds are allocated to the renewable resource grant and loan program and the reclamation and development grants state special revenue accounts. This will ensure funding for the operation of state natural resource agencies."

Study of Recreational User Fees — 1992 Report: Section 5, Ch. 659, L. 1991, provided for a study by the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, in cooperation with the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, of the feasibility of charging recreational beneficiaries of water storage projects fees to assist in the repayment of a portion of those project costs. A written report must be submitted to the Water Policy Committee by July 1, 1992.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 491, L. 1989, provided: "This bill would allow the department of natural resources and conservation to use funds in the water development special revenue account and water development general obligation bond proceeds to protect loans made under the water development private loan program.

The program has made approximately 55 loans totalling [sic] $4 million to private individuals, primarily for irrigation projects. In the event that any lien holder or the department would have to foreclose on any of these loans, the department would need to be in a position to protect its security interests. These loans are primarily secured with real estate mortgages. In those instances where the department is not in first lien position and a foreclosure is necessary, the department would need funds to buy out the first lien holder to gain control of the property. The property would then be resold to recoup the funds used to buy out the first lien as well as the department's initial loan funds.

This bill would also allow the department to use these funds to operate a project if a loan should go into default. If the loan recipient should walk away from a project, the department may need to temporarily operate the project to secure its interests until foreclosure proceedings are complete. An example would be a hydropower project that requires continual attention to guard against breakdown or damage.

This bill is intended to give the department access to funds that would be used to protect its security interests when other loan collection efforts have not worked. It is the intent of the legislature that every effort be made to avoid forced loan collections. It is further the intent of the legislature that any property acquired in the manner provided for in HB 367 be resold as expeditiously as possible to recover funds used under 85-1-65 [sic, 85-1-605] and funds loaned to the borrower."

Part Case Notes

Special Legislation — Permissible When General Act Cannot Be Provided: Plaintiff filed a complaint for declaratory judgment in the Supreme Court seeking to determine the validity of several acts of the Legislature allowing the issuance of state revenue bonds. The bonds would be financed by coal severance taxes to provide proceeds for development of state water resources. Plaintiff contended that the appropriation of funds for favorable loans to a score of small municipalities, water districts, and portions of counties constituted special legislation and was unconstitutional. The court noted that Art. V, sec. 12, Mont. Const., is not absolutely prohibitory. The court noted that the Legislature can not draft a general act of statewide application providing for the issuance and sale of revenue bonds and at the same time keep a handle on the way the proceeds are to be spent or loaned except through its direct authorization of projects. The court held that the passage of Ch. 705, L. 1983, was an implementation of Title 85, ch. 1, part 6, and excluded no class of governmental entity. Therefore, those enactments were "general" legislation within the meaning of Art. V, sec. 12, Mont. Const. The court also held sections 5 and 6 of Ch. 705, L. 1983, were valid in any event because even though local in effect, these were provisions for which a general act could not be provided. Grossman v. St., 209 M 427, 682 P2d 1319, 41 St. Rep. 804 (1984).

1999 Amendment Void: The amendment to this section made by sec. 10, Ch. 3, L. 1999, was rendered void by sec. 16, Ch. 3, L. 1999, a contingent voidness section, which provided that if Constitutional Initiative No. 75, enacting Article VIII, section 17, of the Montana constitution, was declared invalid, then [this act] was void. The initiative was declared invalid February 24, 1999.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 478 in (1), (2), and (3) substituted "renewable resource bonds" for "water development bonds"; in (1), at end of first sentence, substituted "renewable resource grant and loan program" for "water development loan program"; in (2), near beginning, substituted "department" for "board of natural resources and conservation"; near middle of (3) substituted "renewable resource loan debt service" for "water development debt service"; in (5) substituted "renewable resource loan proceeds account" for "water development account"; near beginning of (6) substituted "renewable resource loan proceeds account" for "water development account", in two places, before "debt service", substituted "renewable resource loan" for "water development", near end of first sentence substituted "renewable resource loan loss reserve fund" for "water development loan loss reserve fund", and near end of second sentence, after "board", inserted "of examiners"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1989 Amendment: In (6) inserted reference to the water development loan loss reserve fund. Amendment effective April 11, 1989.

1986 Amendment: In (6) at end of first sentence substituted "debt service fund pursuant to 85-1-603" for "state special revenue account pursuant to 85-1-604".

1985 Amendment: At end of (2) inserted reference to 17-5-731; in (4) inserted reference to notes after each occurrence of "bonds"; near beginning of (6) inserted "or notes" after "proceeds of bonds".

1983 Amendments — Composite: House Bill 533 (Ch. 298, L. 1983) was entitled in part: "AN ACT TO GENERALLY REVISE LANGUAGE IN CODE SECTIONS DEALING WITH THE ISSUANCE OF BONDS IN ORDER THAT REFERENCES TO THE TREASURY FUND STRUCTURE CONFORM TO CHAPTER 28, LAWS OF 1981." Section 42 of Ch. 298, at end of first sentence of 85-1-617(6) after "deposited in the", substituted "water development debt service fund" for "water development sinking account". Chapter 149, in the same subsection of 85-1-617, substituted "water development earmarked account pursuant to 85-1-604" for "water development sinking account and must be applied to the payment, redemption premiums, and interest on the particular bond issue from whose proceeds the loan was made". The Code Commissioner determined that the change made by Ch. 149 took precedence over that made by Ch. 298 because Ch. 149 made a substantive change whereas Ch. 298 substituted one term for its equivalent in the former treasury fund structure. Under the authority of sec. 55 of Ch. 298, the Code Commissioner then changed "water development earmarked account" to "water development state special revenue account" as that account was renamed by sec. 36 of Ch. 298.

Further changes made by Ch. 298 are as follows: in (3) and (6), substituted "water development debt service fund" for "water development sinking account"; in (5), substituted "water development account within the state special revenue fund" for "water development clearance account within the bond proceeds and insurance clearance fund"; and in (6), substituted "water development account" for "water development clearance account".

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 497, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court, in In the Matter of the Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit Nos. 66459-76L, Ciotti; 64988-g76L, Starner; and Application for Change of Appropriation Water Right No. G15152-s761, Pope, which was decided August 22, 1996, held that an applicant for a permit or change of use authorization on the Flathead Indian Reservation may not as a matter of law meet the applicant's burden of proof to establish that the proposed use will not interfere unreasonably with planned uses or developments for which water has been reserved until the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes' federal reserved water rights are quantified; and

WHEREAS, in 1973, Montana enacted comprehensive legislation referred to as the Montana Water Use Act of 1973, codified in Title 85, chapter 2, to implement Article IX, section 3(4), of the Montana Constitution, which requires that the Legislature provide for the administration, control, and regulation of water rights and establish a system of centralized records of all water rights, and to implement Article IX making the water of the state subject to appropriation for beneficial use by its citizens; and

WHEREAS, Title 85, chapter 2, as amended, provides for the comprehensive adjudication of water rights and the continued development of Montana's water resources through a permit and change authorization process; and

WHEREAS, historically in Montana, water has been developed, water use rights acquired, and changes in water use completed in the absence of the adjudication of water rights in a source of supply; and

WHEREAS, since July 1, 1973, it has been the intent of the Legislature that provisional permits and change authorizations be issued pursuant to statutory standards in the absence of a completed adjudication in a source of supply; and

WHEREAS, the dissent filed with the Montana Supreme Court decision raises a concern that the majority decision may be interpreted to apply statewide, but that interpretation does not reflect the intent of the Legislature to allow for the continued wise and efficient use of Montana's water resources and Montana's growing economy as required under Title 85, chapter 2."

Chapter Case Notes

Water Right Held Through Pre-1973 Mesne Conveyances — Summary Judgment Incorrectly Granted — Abandonment of Right Factually Dependent: Duncan, who lived on a tract of land in Madison County, used water from a spring located on property (the large parcel) now owned separately from the parcel (the small parcel) lived on by Duncan. In 1950, Duncan conveyed all the property in what is now the large and small parcels to Baker. In 1951, Baker divided the property, conveying the large parcel and all appurtenances to Halse and reserving the small parcel for herself. Baker made no express reservation of water rights with the reserved property, and the deed to Halse conveying the large parcel made no express grant of water rights. For the next 10 years, Baker made no use of the house located on the small parcel. In 1961, Baker conveyed the small parcel to the Hunts, expressly conveying water rights on the property. In 1963, Halse filed a declaration of vested ground water rights for the "total flow of all springs" located on the large parcel. Fosseco, who acquired the large parcel from Halse, conveyed it, through mesne conveyances, to M.S. Consulting. The Hunts conveyed the small parcel, through mesne conveyances, to the Axtells. All uses of the water were for livestock and domestic use. In 1993, the Axtells filed a notice of water rights with the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation. M.S. Consulting subsequently served the Axtells with notice that their water rights would be cut off in 45 days, and the Axtells brought an action to enjoin the discontinuance of their water supply. The District Court granted summary judgment for the Axtells, and M.S. Consulting appealed. The Supreme Court reviewed the background of the prior appropriation law in Montana, noting that because the current statutes recognize existing water rights, the law before the 1973 statutes were enacted is still the law with regard to water rights acquired before 1973. The Supreme Court reviewed the pre-1973 law and concluded that the water rights appurtenant to all the property passed to Baker but that there was a factual issue whether, as a result of Baker's nonuse of the property and its water rights for over 10 years, Baker had abandoned the water rights conveyed to her by Duncan. If the abandonment occurred, there was no reservation of conveyance and no right to use of the water after that period of nonuse. The issue of abandonment, the Supreme Court noted, depended in turn upon several other issues, such as whether Baker intended to abandon her water right. The Supreme Court also agreed with M.S. Consulting that several other issues of fact raised by the company may also exist, although it noted that these other issues were only material if the District Court ruled a particular way on the question of abandonment. Because there were genuine issues of material fact, the Supreme Court held that the District Court erred in granting summary judgment to the Axtells. Axtell v. M.S. Consulting, 1998 MT 64, 288 M 150, 955 P2d 1362, 55 St. Rep. 276 (1998).

EPA Regulations Granting "Treatment as State" Status to Develop Water Standards Within Flathead Indian Reservation Upheld: In 1987, Congress added section 518(e) to the Clean Water Act, which authorized the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to permit Indian tribes "to be treated as a state" (TAS) for purposes of promulgating water quality standards. In 1992, the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes (tribes) applied for TAS status for all surface waters within the Flathead Indian Reservation. Montana opposed the EPA's grant of TAS status to the tribes because it would extend to lands and surface water within reservation boundaries owned in fee by nontribal members. After the EPA Director, upon determining that the tribes possessed inherent authority over nonmembers on fee land, approved the tribes' TAS application, Montana filed suit, arguing that the EPA's regulations granting TAS status to all sources of pollutant emissions within the boundaries of the Flathead Indian Reservation permitted the tribes to exercise broader authority over nonmembers than the inherent tribal powers recognized as necessary to self-governance. The District Court granted summary judgment to the EPA and tribes. In affirming the District Court decision, the Ninth Circuit Court, citing its previous holdings in Mont. v. U.S., 450 US 544 (1981), and Strate v. A-1 Contractors, 520 US 438, 137 L Ed 2d 661, 117 S Ct 1404 (1997), ruled that based upon the finding that the activities of the nonmembers posed such a serious and substantial threat to tribal health and welfare, the EPA's decision to grant the tribes TAS authority was valid and reflected the appropriate application of inherent tribal regulatory authority over nonconsenting nonmembers. Mont. v. U.S. Envtl. Protection Agency, 137 F3d 1135 (9th Cir. 1998), certiorari denied, 142 L Ed 2d 227, 119 S Ct 275 (1998).

Abandonment of Water Right by Nonuse Distinguished From Abandonment of Easement or Ditch Right: After hearing, the Water Court determined that three water rights held by appellants Pitsch had been abandoned because of nonuse over approximately 40 years. The Supreme Court held that the Water Court did not err in holding that the case was not governed by E.E. Eggebrecht, Inc. v. Waters, 217 M 291, 704 P2d 422 (1985), and that there was no conflict between Eggebrecht and 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215 (1983). Eggebrecht concerns the abandonment of easements by grant, more analogous to a ditch right by grant than a water right, while 79 Ranch concerns abandonment of a water right. There is no reason why Montana law on abandonment of those interests should be identical. In re Adjudication of Musselshell River Rights, 255 M 43, 840 P2d 577, 49 St. Rep. 866 (1992).

State Water Court — Jurisdiction to Adjudicate Indian Reserved Water Rights: In an original proceeding to determine jurisdiction over controversies involving federal water rights of the Water Court over Indian tribes and water flowing through state reservations, the Supreme Court held that Article I of the Montana Constitution does not bar state jurisdiction to adjudicate Indian reserved water rights. With the 1952 McCarran amendment, the U.S. Congress diminished the scope of absolute federal jurisdiction over controversies involving federal water rights by allowing state courts concurrent jurisdiction to adjudicate federal water rights. In Colo. River Water Conserv. District v. U.S., 424 US 800 (1976), the U.S. Supreme Court held that the McCarran amendment applied to Indian water rights. The state Legislature's enactment of the Water Use Act (Title 85, ch. 2) pursuant to Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., constitutes a valid and binding consent of the people of Montana to Congress' grant of state jurisdiction over Indian reserved water rights. State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754, 42 St. Rep. 1856 (1985), followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986).

Water Use Act — Adjudication of Federal and Indian Reserved Water Rights:

The Montana Water Use Act (Title 85, ch. 2) is adequate on its face to adjudicate federal reserved water rights. Although federal reserved rights differ from state appropriative rights in origin, determination of priority date, and quantification standards, the Water Use Act recognizes the distinction between federal reserved rights and state-created appropriative rights. As the Act permits each different class of water rights to be treated differently, the Act is adequate to allow for adjudication of federal reserved rights. State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754, 42 St. Rep. 1856 (1985), followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986).

The Montana Water Use Act (Title 85, ch. 2) is adequate on its face to adjudicate Indian reserved water rights. Although state appropriative water rights and Indian reserved water rights differ in origin and definition, the Water Use Act, as amended, permits the Water Court to treat Indian reserved water rights differently from state appropriative rights. The Water Use Act does not state explicitly that the Water Court shall apply federal law in adjudicating Indian reserved rights; however, state courts are required to follow federal law with regard to those water rights. State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754, 42 St. Rep. 1856 (1985), followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986).

Forty Years of Nonuse as Raising Rebuttable Presumption of Intent to Abandon: In litigation to establish plaintiff's and defendant's respective priorities to water appropriated from Big Coulee Creek, the evidence showed that neither had used previously appropriated water for a period of at least 40 years. Thus, the District Court did not err in holding that under section 89-802, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the appropriation rights of both parties had been abandoned for lack of use of the water. While abandonment of a water right is a question of fact, nonuse for a period of at least 40 years raises, in effect, a rebuttable presumption of abandonment. A claim that the predecessors of the parties could not afford to use the water by irrigating their land did not excuse the failure to use the water or rebut the presumption of abandonment since economics could excuse nearly every otherwise abandoned water right. 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215, 40 St. Rep. 981 (1983), followed in In re Adjudication of Clark Fork River Drainage, 254 M 11, 833 P2d 1120, 49 St. Rep. 591 (1992), in which nonuse for 23-plus years was sufficient to constitute a presumption of abandonment despite the fact that the water right was carried as an asset on the county's books during the period of nonuse. See also Axtell v. M.S. Consulting, 1998 MT 64, 288 M 150, 955 P2d 1362, 55 St. Rep. 276 (1998).

Lack of Reasonable Diligence Shown in Three-Year and Three-Month Delay in Diversion: Where the evidence, in litigation between the plaintiff and defendant to establish their relative rights to appropriated water, showed that the defendant's predecessor in interest filed a notice of appropriation for 30 cfs of water on May 30, 1973, but failed to divert the water to a sprinkler irrigation system until 3 years and 3 months later, the District Court did not err in holding that the defendant's predecessor failed to exercise reasonable diligence in diversion of the water. Under the rationale of Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation v. Intake Water Co., 171 M 416, 558 P2d 1110 (1976), the defendant was required to show there had been an ongoing effort to divert the water. The lack of parts for the sprinkler system notwithstanding, the record showed no ongoing effort to proceed to completion of the sprinkler system and the diversion. 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215, 40 St. Rep. 981 (1983).

Priority of Senior Main Stem Water Rights Over Junior Tributary Water Rights: Appellant owns water rights in Clear Creek dating to 1910. Petitioners have water rights in Rock Creek dating to 1896. Clear Creek is a tributary of Rock Creek. In 1970, appellant obtained a court order directing the Rock Creek Water Commissioner to "carry out" the Clear Creek water rights of appellant. Following the District Court order, the Water Commissioner honored in full the requests of appellant for water without regard to any priority in the relationship of the creeks' water rights. As a result, at times of water shortage, senior Rock Creek decreed waters are cut off. In 1977, petitioners filed this action to rescind the 1970 order and to direct the Water Commissioner to subject the Clear Creek water rights to the priorities of Rock Creek water rights. The District Court ruled that the 1970 court order, applied by the Water Commissioner to fulfill junior appropriations ahead of prior decreed rights, was improper. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's order and further stated that the order did not violate due process. The Supreme Court reasoned that the only rights affected by the District Court order were the rights of the parties before the court. Granite Ditch Co. v. Anderson, 204 M 10, 662 P2d 1312, 40 St. Rep. 630 (1983).

Chapter's Application to Rights Perfected Prior to Its Effective Date: Except where it indicates a contrary intent, this chapter applies to water rights perfected prior to the effective date of this chapter; and failure to comply with the terms of this chapter does not render a conveyance or reservation void but suspends ability to use the right until the statutorily mandated permission is granted by the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation. Castillo v. Kunnemann, 197 M 190, 642 P2d 1019, 39 St. Rep. 460 (1982), modifying, on rehearing, 38 St. Rep. 1618 (1981).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 497 inserted (5) concerning provisional permitting in absence of complete adjudication of water rights in source of supply; inserted (6) concerning legislative intent that state retain and exercise authority to regulate water use; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 24, Ch. 497, L. 1997, provided: "[Section 1] [85-2-101] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all permits and change authorizations issued by the department of natural resources and conservation after July 1, 1973."

1973 Title: The title of Ch. 452, L. 1973, read: "An act providing a system for the appropriation and use of surface and groundwater; providing a procedure for the determination and confirmation of existing water rights; establishing a system of centralized records of all water rights; repealing sections 89-121 through 89-123, 89-801 through 89-804, 89-807 through 89-816, 89-829 through 89-842, 89-844 and 89-845, 89-847 through 89-855, 89-857 through 89-864, 89-2912, 89-2913, 89-2919 through 89-2925, and 89-2935, R.C.M. 1947; amending sections 89-1001, 89-2911, 89-2915, 89-2917, and 89-2918, R.C.M. 1947."

Section Not Codified: Section 89-865, R.C.M. 1947, a short title clause, was not codified in the MCA. The clause has not been repealed and is still valid law. Reference may be made to sec. 1, Ch. 452, L. 1973.

ARM 36.16.101 Policy and purpose of water reservation rules.

Case Notes

Issuance of Permits for Ground Water on Indian Reservations Precluded Until Tribes' Federally Reserved Water Rights Defined and Quantified: The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) granted a permit for the use of ground water on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Despite prior holdings in In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073 (1996), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244 (1999), that the state does not have jurisdiction to issue new use permits prior to formal adjudication of the tribes' reserved water rights, DNRC contended that this case was distinguishable because the tribes' federally reserved water right concerning ground water is legally uncertain. However, the only federal authority cited by either party, Tweedy v. Tex. Co., 286 F. Supp. 383 (D.C. Mont. 1968), supported the conclusion that there is no distinction between surface water and ground water for purposes of determining what water rights are reserved because those rights are necessary to the purpose of an Indian reservation. Further, neither of the prior state cases excluded ground water. The tribes contended that as a sovereign nation, they should not be required to defend their water rights in piecemeal fashion before a hostile forum and that pursuant to 85-2-311 and the prior case law, the ground water permit was illegal. The Supreme Court agreed with the tribes and vacated the permit, finding no reason to limit the scope of the prior holdings by excluding ground water from the tribes' federally reserved water rights in this case. Two statutory methods for comprehensively adjudicating Indian reserved water rights already exist—a general inter sese adjudication or negotiations with the Montana Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission. Therefore, the tribes should not be required to defend their water rights by participating in the DNRC hearings process. Thus, DNRC cannot determine whether water is available on the Flathead Reservation, whether surface water or ground water, because DNRC cannot determine whether the issuance of permits would affect existing water rights until the tribes' preeminent water rights are defined and quantified. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Stults, 2002 MT 280, 312 M 420, 59 P3d 1093 (2002).

Quantification of Tribal Water Rights Required — 1997 Amendment Unconstitutional: In an effort to avoid the result created by In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073, 53 St. Rep. 777 (1996), the 1997 Legislature passed Senate Bill No. 97, which substantively eliminated the former protection of Indian reserved water rights provided by 85-2-311. The state conceded that the protection of existing water rights in Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont.

Const., includes water rights reserved for Indian reservations and contended that those rights were not affected by Senate Bill No. 97, but rather that those rights would be considered in that part of the analysis requiring that water be legally available. The state also pointed out the provisional nature of any water use permit and alleged that there were some uses that would not diminish instream flow and that use permits could thus be issued without affecting reserved Indian water rights, regardless of the quantification of those rights. However, under State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754 (1985), it was found that Indian reserved water rights are owned by the Indians, and because that ownership interest exists under federal law and does not depend on the use of the water, the Supreme Court was not persuaded that the state's permitting process might allow uses of Indian reserved water that in the long term might not diminish instream flows. The provisional nature of permits was not determinative either because use of water that may have been reserved by federal law for the tribes was no less impermissible simply because it was temporary and subject to termination following final quantification of the tribes' rights by adjudication or negotiation. Under the 1997 amendments, permits are still limited to water that is "legally available", but that phrase is not defined. Construing the phrase in a manner that sustains its constitutional validity, the Supreme Court interpreted "legally available" to mean that there is water available that, among other things, has not been federally reserved for Indian tribes. Therefore, as in In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, the state cannot determine whether water is legally available on the Flathead Reservation because it cannot determine whether the issuance of permits would affect existing water rights until the tribes' rights are quantified by a compact negotiation under 85-2-702 or by a general inter sese water rights adjudication. To allow the issuance of water use permits on the reservation prior to quantification of the tribes' pervasive reserved right would require use of water that might belong to the tribes, in violation of Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., which protects existing water rights whether adjudicated or not. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244, 56 St. Rep. 1356 (1999).

No Implied Severance of Water From School Trust Lands: Neither 77-6-115, nor the principles of the Water Use Act set forth in 85-2-101, nor the prior appropriation doctrine gives rise to an implied severance of water from land in the school trust land leases or estops the state from claiming title to the water rights on school trust land. Dept. of State Lands v. Pettibone, 216 M 361, 702 P2d 948, 42 St. Rep. 869 (1985).

Navigability for Title Purposes — Federal Test — Dearborn River Navigable: Federal law controlled the issue of whether the Dearborn River was, at the time Montana became a state, navigable for the purpose of determining title to its bed. Under federal law, rivers are navigable in law if they are navigable in fact, and they are navigable in fact if they were used or capable of being used, in their ordinary condition, as highways for commerce over which trade and travel were or could be conducted in the customary modes of trade and travel on the water at the time of the state's admission to the Union. Navigability in fact can be determined by using the log-floating test. That test was satisfied by evidence that in 1887, 2 years before Montana became a state, the Dearborn was used to float about 100,000 railroad ties and that in 1888 or 1889, one or two log drives a year were floated down the river, one of them containing 700,000 board feet. Title to the riverbed was thus in the federal government when Montana became a state in 1889 and was transferred to the State upon its admission to the Union. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984). (Annotator's note: Chapters 429, 556, and 599, L. 1985, pertained to recreational use of waterways and related issues.)

Public Recreational Use Rights on Dearborn River — Limits: Navigability for public use is governed by state law and is separate from the question of navigability under federal law for title purposes. The question is whether waters owned by the State under Art. IX, sec. 3(3), Mont. Const., are susceptible to recreational use by the public. The capability of use of the waters for recreational purposes determines the availability of the waters for recreational use by the public. Whether or not a private party owns the bed beneath the waters is irrelevant. The constitution and the Public Trust Doctrine bar a private party from interfering with the public's right to use of the surface of the waters owned by the State, and any surface waters that are capable of recreational use may be so used by the public without regard to streambed ownership or navigability for nonrecreational purposes. The public's recreational use right extends to the point of the high-water marks. The public does not have the right to cross over private property to reach waters upon which they have a recreational use right, though they may portage around barriers in the water in the least intrusive way possible, avoiding damage to any private property holder's rights. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d

163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984). (Annotator's note: Chapters 429, 556, and 599, L. 1985, pertained to recreational use of waterways and related issues.)

Public Use — Irrigation — Eminent Domain: Pursuant to Title 69, ch. 4, part 4, an agricultural landowner may request a utility to relocate an overhead utility line for the purpose of installing an improved irrigation system. The use of water in the irrigation of farmland is a public use for which the right of eminent domain will lie. McTaggart v. Mont. Power Co., 184 M 329, 602 P2d 992, 36 St. Rep. 2079 (1979).

"All Existing Rights": The right to acquire water rights is a valuable right, and its value often depends on its priority; hence, to deprive plaintiff of his priority by dismissal because petition was filed under former law is to deprive him of an existing and valuable water right. Gen. Agriculture Corp. v. Moore, 166 M 510, 534 P2d 859 (1975).

Beneficial Impoundment: Counterclaim against petition of irrigation district for additional appropriation of water was properly denied where evidence was uncontradicted that water was going to waste and that impoundment would be beneficial. Sunset Irrigation District v. Ailport, 166 M 11, 531 P2d 1349 (1974).

Private Beneficial Use a Public Use: Because Art. III, sec. 15, Mont. Const., declares a private beneficial use of water to be a public use, individuals who have put water to a beneficial use should not have their rights arbitrarily diluted, under claim of sovereign rights or otherwise. Paradise Rainbow v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 148 M 412, 421 P2d 717 (1966).

Applicability: Section 31, Ch. 391, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] applies to applications for an appropriation right in a closed basin filed on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective May 3, 2007.

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 8(2), Ch. 448, L. 2007, repealed sec. 11, Ch. 658, L. 1989, sec. 4, Ch. 740, L. 1991, and secs. 5 and 6, Ch. 123, L. 1999, which terminated the amendments to this section June 30, 2009. Effective May 8, 2007.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: (Temporary version) Chapter 70 in definition of appropriate in (a) at end inserted "for a beneficial use" and inserted (d) regarding instream flow to benefit fishery resource; in definition of beneficial use inserted (d) regarding instream flow to benefit fishery resource; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

(Temporary version) Chapter 85 in definition of appropriate in (a) at end after "water" inserted "for a beneficial use" and in (d) substituted "to maintain or enhance streamflows to benefit the fishery resource in accordance with 85-2-408" for "in the Upper Clark Fork River basin, to maintain and enhance streamflows to benefit the fishery resource in accordance with 85-2-439"; in definition of beneficial use in (d) substituted "a use of water through a change in appropriation right or lease for instream flow to benefit the fishery resource in accordance with 85-2-408" for "a use of water to maintain and enhance streamflows to benefit the fishery resource in the Upper Clark Fork River basin as part of the Upper Clark Fork River basin instream flow pilot program authorized under 85-2-439"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

(Version effective July 1, 2009) In definition of appropriate in (a) at end after "water" inserted "for a beneficial use" and inserted (c) including maintenance or enhancement of streamflows for fisheries; in definition of beneficial use inserted (c) including use of water through a change in appropriation right or lease for instream flow for fisheries; and made minor changes in style.

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose appropriate text.

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 9, Ch. 85, L. 2005, repealed sec. 14, Ch. 487, L. 1995, which terminated amendments to this section June 30, 2005. Effective March 24, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 78 inserted definition of developed spring; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2001.

Extension of Termination Date: Sections 5 through 7, Ch. 123, L. 1999, amended sec. 11, Ch. 658, L. 1989, and secs. 4 and 7, Ch. 740, L. 1991, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 658, L. 1989, and Ch. 740, L. 1991, to June 30, 2009. Effective March 19, 1999. Section 14, Ch. 487, L. 1995, provided a termination date of June 30, 2005, for one version of this section; however, the 1995 termination date was not extended by Ch. 123, L. 1999.

1997 Amendment: (All three versions) Chapter 497 in definition of existing right inserted "or "existing water right"" and inserted second sentence concerning water rights reserved under federal law and water rights created under state law; inserted definition of state water reservation; in definition of watercourse, near end, substituted "constructed" for "manmade"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 418 deleted definition of Board that read: ""Board" means the board of natural resources and conservation provided for in 2-15-3302"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

(Temporary version) Chapter 487 in definition of appropriate inserted (d) to include the maintenance and enhancement of streamflows in the Upper Clark Fork basin; in definition of beneficial use inserted (d) to include the maintenance and enhancement of streamflows in the upper Clark Fork basin; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995, and terminates June 30, 2005.

(Version effective July 1, 1999) In definition of appropriate inserted (c) to include the maintenance and enhancement of streamflows in the Upper Clark Fork basin; in definition of beneficial use inserted (c) to include the maintenance and enhancement of streamflows in the Upper Clark Fork basin; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999, and terminates June 30, 2005.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Severability: Section 11, Ch. 487, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 487, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to all applications for changes in appropriation rights, permits, and water reservations received by the department of natural resources and conservation after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 14, 1995.

1993 Amendments: Chapter 370 inserted definitions of correct and complete and substantial credible information; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

Chapter 629 inserted definition of late claim. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution provides that all existing rights to the use of any waters for any useful or beneficial purpose are recognized and confirmed; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution requires the Legislature to provide for the administration, control, and regulation of water rights and to establish a system of centralized records for such rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature established a procedure for the general adjudication of existing rights to the use of water and provided in section 85-2-226, MCA, that the failure to file a claim of existing right on or before the deadline established under section 85-2-221, MCA, would establish a conclusive abandonment of the right; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court, in In the Matter of the Adjudication of the Water Rights Within the Yellowstone River, 253 Mont. 167, 832 P.2d 1210 (1992), has determined that the failure to file a statement of claim to an existing right to the use of water on or before April 30, 1982, resulted in the forfeiture of that right; and

WHEREAS, it has come to the attention of the Legislature that the forfeiture of water rights for failure to timely file a claim has in some instances caused hardship, and the Legislature accordingly desires to provide water rights claimants with one more opportunity to file a water rights claim in the general adjudication; and

WHEREAS, in so doing, the Legislature recognizes that the adjudication process will not be completed for many years but that a substantial amount of progress has already occurred in the adjudication, specifically in the area of water rights compacts with Indian tribes and the federal government and in decrees and stipulations involving individual claimants, and thus the Legislature believes that it is necessary to ensure that parties who have been recognized as having filed claims on or before April 30, 1982, and holders of federal reserved water rights are not adversely affected by the inclusion of new parties in the adjudication by subjecting the right to file those claims in remission to certain terms and conditions; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide protection for timely filed claimants from incurring additional costs or from being adversely affected by justifiable reliance on the presumption of abandonment; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide a conclusive adjudication of existing water rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature recognizes that according a privilege to file additional statements of claim presents a potential for abuse by those who may attempt to refile previously adjudicated claims, and the Legislature thus believes that the courts should deal harshly with any abuses by such measures as, without limitation, the imposition of sanctions under [former] Rule 11, Montana Rules of Civil Procedure [now superseded]; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature determines that the deadline for filing water right claims as provided in this bill appropriately balances the interests at stake in the adjudication.

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds it is appropriate to make the following amendments to sections 85-2-102, 85-2-211 [now repealed], 85-2-213, 85-2-221, 85-2-225, 85-2-226, 85-2-234, 85-2-237, and 85-2-306, MCA, in order to provide for the acceptance of late claims to the use of water under the conditions set forth in this bill. Additionally, the Legislature directs the Water Policy Committee, in coordination with the Department of Justice, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, and the Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission, to conduct an interim study regarding certain late claim issues."

Severability: Section 11, Ch. 370, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 370, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 1 through 8] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications and objections pending on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 16, 1993] that are subject to the provisions of Title 85, chapter 2."

Saving Clause: Section 11, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] does not affect proceedings that were begun before [passage and approval of this act] [approved May 11, 1993] in which relief for damages have been sought based upon the diversion, impoundment, or withdrawal of water without a water right established under state law."

Severability — Partial Nonseverability: Section 12, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "(1) If a part of [this act] is invalid, all valid parts that are severable from the invalid part remain in effect. If a part of [this act] is invalid in one or more of its applications, the part remains in effect in all valid applications that are severable from the invalid applications.

(2) It is the intent of the legislature that each part of [this act] is essentially dependent upon [section 4], which amends 85-2-221, and that if one part of [section 4], except subsection (3)(f)(ii), is held unconstitutional or invalid, all other parts of [this act] are invalid."

1991 Amendments — Name Change: Section 2, Ch. 28, L. 1991, directed the Code Commissioner to change the name of the Fish and Game Commission to the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission wherever the name appears in the MCA. Accordingly, the name was changed in this section as directed.

Chapter 308 inserted definition of salvage.

Chapter 543 inserted definition of watercourse.

Chapter 805 in definition of ground water, after "water", substituted "that is beneath the ground surface" for "beneath the land surface or beneath the bed of a stream, lake, reservoir, or other body of surface water, and which is not part of that surface water". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 308, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in order to provide guidance to the department of natural resources and conservation concerning the adoption of rules to allow the appropriation, use, and change of use of salvaged water. The legislature directs the department of natural resources and conservation to adopt rules that promote the conservation and efficient use of water by implementing the provisions of this bill."

1989 Amendment: In definition of appropriate inserted (c) regarding water leasing; in definition of beneficial use inserted (c) regarding water use pursuant to lease; inserted definition of Commission; and made minor changes in phraseology and form. Amendment effective May 11, 1989, and terminates June 30, 1993.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2)(b) expanding the definition of beneficial use to include water leasing; inserted definition of change in appropriation right; and deleted former (12) that read: ""Slurry" means a mixture of water and insoluble material."

Administrative Rules

ARM 36.12.101 Definitions — Water Use Act.

Case Notes

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

Promulgation of Definition of "Place of Storage" Rendering Declaratory Judgment Moot: Based on complaints from other water users, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) determined that plaintiff had created a place of storage for water on plaintiff's property without DNRC permission and demanded that plaintiff cease its storage activities and seek an application to change its water rights pursuant to ARM 36.12.1901, which requires filing of an application to change a water right when an applicant desires to change the place of storage of a water right. Plaintiff sought a declaratory judgment on grounds that because DNRC rules did not define "place of storage", the DNRC was attempting to enforce an ostensible rule that was not lawfully promulgated and was therefore unenforceable. The District Court dismissed plaintiff's claim with prejudice, and plaintiff appealed. However, prior to the decision of the appeal in this case, the DNRC properly promulgated a rule defining "place of storage" that included plaintiff's irrigation pumping pit, so plaintiff's claim that the DNRC relied on an improperly promulgated rule to disallow plaintiff's continued use of the irrigation pumping pit without permission lost any practical purpose for the parties and was moot and incapable of repetition. The Supreme Court therefore declined to address the merits of plaintiff's claim and affirmed the District Court's dismissal of plaintiff's claim because the District Court reached the proper conclusion, albeit for a different reason. Serena Vista, LLC v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2008 MT 65, 342 M 73, 179 P3d 510 (2008).

Post-1973 Evidence Unpersuasive as to Adjudication of Existing Water Right: The purpose of statewide water rights adjudication is to adjudicate those rights as they existed on July 1, 1973, the effective date of the Montana Water Use Act. Therefore, the Water Court did not err in refusing to consider evidence pertaining to a water right claimant's actions taken after 1973 as showing a lack of intent to abandon the water right. In re Adjudication of Clark Fork River Drainage, 254 M 11, 833 P2d 1120, 49 St. Rep. 591 (1992).

"Beneficial Use": No matter how a water right is expressed in the decrees of the Water Court, that expression of amount is not the final determining factor. Beneficial use is the basis, the measure, and the limit of all rights to the use of water. McDonald v. St., 43 St. Rep. 576 (1986), rehearing denied, 220 M 519, 722 P2d 598, 43 St. Rep. 1397 (1986).

"Water" — Diffuse Surface Water: In light of the common-law rules pertaining to appropriation of diffuse surface water and the 1977 amendment of the definition of "water" so as to include diffuse surface water, it was reasonable for the appellant to believe that diffuse surface water was not subject to the provisions of the Water Use Act in 1975. State ex rel. Wilson v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 199 M 189, 648 P2d 766, 39 St. Rep. 1294 (1982).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Existing Right to Appropriate Distinguished From Valid Appropriation: When a corporation posted and filed notices of appropriation as required by section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), it acquired an "existing right" to appropriate water. However, this "existing right" was not synonymous with a valid appropriation and would not ripen into such an appropriation until the remaining requirements under section 89-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), were met. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation v. Intake Water Co., 171 M 416, 558 P2d 1110 (1976).

Slough — Natural Watercourse: A slough naturally followed a channel which was cut down in gravel and rock, and was fed by natural springs, seepage, surface drainage and wastewater from a canal. Such a slough constituted a natural watercourse and was subject to appropriation. Meine v. Ferris, 126 M 210, 247 P2d 195 (1952).

Diffused Surface Water Defined — Not Subject to Appropriation: The essential characteristics of diffused surface waters are that their flows are short-lived and that the waters are spread over the ground and not concentrated or confined in flows of legal watercourses or bodies of water conforming to the definition of lakes or ponds. Diffused surface waters in a gulch on land above where a natural channel has developed are not subject to appropriation. Doney v. Beatty, 124 M 41, 220 P2d 77 (1950).

"Watercourse" Defined:

A "watercourse", within the meaning of the water right laws, from which an appropriation for purposes of irrigation may be made, may consist of a well-defined channel into which water from a slough fed by irrigation of adjoining lands through seepage or through a ditch constructed by the owners of such lands for draining purposes finds its way, and which water through years of so flowing has acquired a permanent character as the natural drainage of the particular watershed. W. Side Ditch Co. v. Bennett, 106 M 422, 78 P2d 78 (1938). (See 1991 amendment.)

Where waters flowing in a channel with regularity from year to year were made to do so through the instrumentality of man and have through years of so flowing acquired a permanent character as the natural drainage of the watershed or where they come from springs formed from seepage or percolation or surface water collecting in a canyon or from wells accidentally developed while drilling for oil, etc., they constitute a watercourse. Popham v. Holloron, 84 M 442, 275 P 1099 (1929), distinguished in McGowan v. U.S., 206 F. Supp. 439 (D.C. Mont. 1962). (See 1991 amendment.)

Beneficial Use — Swimming Pool or Fishpond: Diversion of water to maintain a swimming pool or fishpond may have been for a beneficial use and hence the basis of a valid appropriation. Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936).

Appropriation on Private Land: An appropriation of water is not confined to waters flowing in streams upon public land but may be made from a stream flowing through privately owned land by invoking the aid of eminent domain proceedings, if necessary. Mettler v. Ames Realty Co., 61 M 152, 201 P 702 (1921).

Beneficial Use — Immediate Use Unnecessary: While the appropriation must be for some useful or beneficial purposes, the use to which the water is to be applied need not be immediate but may be prospective or contemplated. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Smith v. Duff, 39 M 382, 102 P 984 (1909); Miles v. Butte Elec. & Power Co., 32 M 56, 79 P 549 (1905); Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900).

Beneficial Use — Intent of Claimant: This section requires that, at the time of taking the initial steps, the claimant must have an intention to apply the water to a useful or beneficial purpose. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Smith v. Duff, 39 M 382, 102 P 984 (1909); Miles v. Butte Elec. & Power Co., 32 M 56, 79 P 549 (1905); Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900); Power v. Switzer, 21 M 523, 55 P 32 (1898).

Beneficial Use — Irrigation: Where a successor in interest of an appropriator of water greatly increased the amount of grass for pasture by irrigation, such use of the water was a useful and beneficial one within the meaning of the statute. Sayre v. Johnson, 33 M 15, 81 P 389 (1905).

85-2-103. Measurement of water.

Case Notes

New Trial to Lift Injunction on Water Use Properly Denied: As a result of defendant's negligent operation of an irrigation ditch and the risk associated with high volume flow in the ditch, the District Court enjoined defendant from a flow of more than 400 miner's inches through the ditch until defendant could prove that the ditch could safely transport more. Defendant sought a new trial to lift the injunction on grounds that new evidence stemming from the successful operation of the ditch since the trial could not have been presented earlier. The motion for a new trial was denied, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the evidence was new, the fact remained that varying flows when combined with other variables could still produce damaging results, so the evidence was insufficient to warrant a new trial. Graveley Simmental Ranch Co. v. Quigley, 2003 MT 34, 314 M 226, 65 P3d 225 (2003).

Water Right Limited to Carrying Capacity of Irrigation Ditch: Through the years, Quigley was granted three water rights for irrigation from Ophir Creek for 25, 100, and 800 miner's inches, for a total or 925 inches. However, Quigley's own 1928 survey and a 1930 District Court decision established that the carrying capacity of the irrigation ditch was 800 miner's inches, and that amount was confirmed by the District Court in the present case. Quigley appealed, claiming the right to transport the full 925 inches through the ditch at one time. The Supreme Court disagreed. Because it is elementary that a ditch cannot carry more water than its smallest dimensions allow, it was held that although Quigley had the right to divert 925 miner's inches, that right was subject to the ditch description stating that the ditch had a carrying capacity of 800 miner's inches. Since 1930, the description was unchallenged and relied on by Quigley to his benefit, and under res judicata, Quigley could not now complain of its inaccuracy. Graveley Simmental Ranch Co. v. Quigley, 2003 MT 34, 314 M 226, 65 P3d 225 (2003). See also Quigley v. McIntosh, 88 M 103, 290 P 266 (1930), and Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

"Beneficial Use": No matter how a water right is expressed in the decrees of the Water Court, that expression of amount is not the final determining factor. Beneficial use is the basis, the measure, and the limit of all rights to the use of water. McDonald v. St., 43 St. Rep. 576 (1986), rehearing denied, 220 M 519, 722 P2d 598, 43 St. Rep. 1397 (1986).

Expression of Water Rights in Volume Rather than Flow Rate — Not Unconstitutional: Even though almost every irrigation water right prior to the 1973 water use law was expressed in flow rate, the requirement of 85-2-234(5)(b) that the final decree state "the amount of water, rate, and volume, included in the right" is not unconstitutional under Article IX, sec. 3(1) of the Montana

Constitution. The amount, rate, and volume are at all times subject to the requirement of beneficial use. McDonald v. St., 43 St. Rep. 576 (1986), rehearing denied, 220 M 519, 722 P2d 598, 43 St. Rep. 1397 (1986).

Supreme Court Original Jurisdiction Over Declaratory Action Concerning Statewide Water Adjudication: The Supreme Court had power to determine an action for declaratory judgment involving the constitutionality of the requirement in 85-2-234 that final water decrees state "the amount of water, rate, and volume, included in the right". The issue affects all rights in the statewide adjudication process. Determination of the issue by the Supreme Court: (1) will provide guidance to the water court; (2) is in the interests of judicial economy; and (3) would serve the public policy of the state by expediting the determination of existing water rights. McDonald v. St., 43 St. Rep. 576 (1986), rehearing denied, 220 M 519, 722 P2d 598, 43 St. Rep. 1397 (1986).

Measurement of Water in Reservoir: Devices for measuring the water in a storage reservoir should be such that at a glance anyone may tell the exact number of acre-feet therein at any time, thus obviating the necessity of calling in engineers or others to measure it. The details of operation, presenting a practical or engineering problem rather than a judicial one, should properly be left to the parties interested; and if the court's intervention or assistance is required in that regard, a motion for modification of the decree should suffice. Fed. Land Bank v. Morris, 112 M 445, 116 P2d 1007 (1941).

One Miner's Inch Per Acre — Not Rule of Thumb: The trial court awarded a 3-acre-foot water right to be used over a 4-month irrigation season. This was the equivalent of one-half miner's inch continuous flow. Although the courts of this state have generally observed the rule of thumb of 1 miner's inch per acre, there is no law in Montana to this effect. The better rule is that the requirements of the lands in a particular locality for adaptable crops should fix the amount of a water right. Fed. Land Bank v. Morris, 112 M 445, 116 P2d 1007 (1941).

Water Right Decrees: For many years the courts in water right decrees have followed the custom of expressing water rights in terms of flow per unit of time without stating during how many hours or days the water could be taken or defining the volume of water which could be used. This may not be taken as an adjudication that appropriations were of an absolutely uninterrupted flow, thereby removing the established limitation of the appropriator's right to water actually taken and beneficially applied. Nor should this fact be interpreted as a right to expand appropriations to the detriment of subsequent appropriators. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

Measurement of Water for Irrigation: In the absence of a statute regulating the amount of water reasonably necessary for irrigation, the rule has generally been observed by the court to allow 1 inch an acre in fixing the amount required for economical use unless the evidence discloses that a greater or less amount is required. Further, the system of irrigation in common use in the locality, if reasonable and proper under existing conditions, is to be taken as the standard. However, an appropriator cannot be compelled to divert the water according to the most scientific method known. Worden v. Alexander, 108 M 208, 90 P2d 160 (1939).

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 285 in (2) at end of introductory clause after "council" substituted "may" for "shall". Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 275 inserted (2)(c) requiring environmental quality council to assist with interagency coordination related to Montana's water resources; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 275, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana's river and stream corridors and associated riparian areas play a critical role in supporting beneficial uses of water, agricultural production, fish and wildlife values, recreation opportunities, and related economic and aesthetic benefits; and

WHEREAS, Montana's river and stream corridors are experiencing tremendous pressure from increased use and development; and

WHEREAS, owners of land along Montana's rivers and streams, water users, and recreationists recognize the importance of maintaining and conserving these corridors and would increase their efforts to do so if they had information on relevant and affordable voluntary best management practices (BMPs); and

WHEREAS, although there are a variety of efforts at the federal, state, local, and watershed levels to address river and stream corridor issues, there is a continuing need to pool scarce resources, increase effectiveness through improved coordination of policies, data, and implementation, and provide a greater opportunity for innovative solutions such as voluntary BMPs; and

WHEREAS, Montana is fortunate to have a successful BMP and streamside management policy model that was developed by Montana's forestry community, with the assistance of the Environmental Quality Council, that can serve as an example for other river and streamside land uses; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Legislature's bipartisan Environmental Quality Council has a 28-year history of helping Montanans constructively solve complex and divisive natural resource issues and has the capability and the unique perspective to facilitate the compilation and dissemination of BMP information for river and streamside land uses and to assist with interagency coordination."

Streamside Corridor and Riparian Management: Section 2, Ch. 275, L. 1999, provided: "Streamside corridor and riparian management — coordination and dissemination of best management practice information. Consistent with its authorities set forth in Titles 75 and 85, the environmental quality council, in cooperation with affected and interested stakeholders, shall:

(1) review and summarize state, federal, and local policies and programs related to streamside corridor and riparian management in Montana and identify overlapping or conflicting goals or implementation mechanisms;

(2) coordinate with existing groups to evaluate existing streamside and riparian best management practices and existing educational and informational programs regarding the dissemination of information regarding voluntary BMPs, to ensure coordination in water quality protection efforts and consistency with 75-5-702 and 75-5-703; and

(3) coordinate with others to develop cost-effective mechanisms to compile and disseminate the conclusions from activities conducted pursuant to subsections (1) and (2) and in doing so, maximize the likely implementation of the practices."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 45 in (3)(d), at end, substituted "water information system maintained by the natural resource information system under 90-15-305" for "water resources data management system maintained by the department under 85-2-112".

1995 Amendments: Chapter 418 in (2)(b), after "department", deleted "of natural resources and conservation"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 545 in (1) deleted former first four sentences that read: "There is a permanent water policy committee of the legislature. The committee consists of eight members. The senate committee on committees and the speaker of the house of representatives shall each appoint four members on a bipartisan basis. The committee shall elect its chairman and vice-chairman"; at beginning of first sentence of (1), in (2), in introductory clause, and in (3), in introductory clause, substituted "environmental quality council" for "committee"; substituted (4) regarding staff assistance for former language that read: "The environmental quality council shall provide staff assistance to the committee. The committee may contract with experts and consultants, in addition to receiving assistance from the environmental quality council, in carrying out its duties under this section"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

1995 Transition: Section 81, Ch. 545, L. 1995, provided: "(1) The members of the legislative council, as provided in 5-11-101, the members of the legislative finance committee, as provided in 5-12-202, the members of the legislative audit committee, as provided in 5-13-202, and the members of the environmental quality council, as provided in 5-16-101, must be appointed as soon as possible following [the effective date of this section] [effective April 27, 1995].

(2) To implement the changes provided in [this act], the office of the legislative council, the office of budget and program planning, and the department of administration shall establish all necessary authorizations during the accounting preparation process known as the "turnaround" process, beginning in April or May 1995, to administer the several appropriations made by any means to programs of the legislative branch agencies consolidated under [sections 3 and 4] [5-2-503 and 5-2-504] for fiscal year 1996 or 1997 or the biennium ending June 30, 1997, as appropriations to a single legislative agency while maintaining the specific identification, legislative intent, and purpose for which the appropriations were made. During this transition, the executive director may authenticate documents as required to accomplish the purposes of

[this act]. Appropriate changes on the statewide budgeting and accounting system and the payroll, personnel, and position control system must also be made and authorized as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act].

(3) Personnel and property of the environmental quality council are transferred to the legislative services division effective July 1, 1995."

1985 Amendment: In (2)(a) near middle, after "environmental quality council", inserted "of the state library"; and in (2)(b) near beginning, substituted "state library" for "department of administration", and near end substituted "library's" for "department's".

1993 Amendment: Chapter 478 in (3)(b) substituted "renewable resource grant and loan program" for "water development program". Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Late Claim Interim Study — Water Policy Committee: Section 10, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "(1) The water policy committee, in coordination with the department of justice, the department of natural resources and conservation, and the reserved water rights compact commission, shall conduct an interim study analyzing the need for and desirability and impacts of allowing the remission of forfeited water rights in addition to the remissions authorized under the provisions of [this act] [Ch. 629, L. 1993]. The study must analyze the impacts of additional forfeiture remission on:

(a) the general stream adjudication process, including but not limited to the issues of adequacy and Montana's and the federal government's concurrent water rights adjudication jurisdiction;

(b) the federal government and Indian tribes regarding existing and future negotiated water rights compacts, including but not limited to the issues of equal protection;

(c) timely claimants' water use;

(d) timely claimants' legal rights, including but not limited to constitutional requirements regarding the taking of property;

(e) the potential reduction in agricultural production resulting from not granting additional forfeiture remissions and the associated social and economic impacts;

(f) the issue of fairness to both late and timely claimants;

(g) the potential increased costs to the state and to late and timely claimants;

(h) potential losses in revenue to the state resulting from the state's failure to file claims to existing water rights on or before April 30, 1982;

(i) implications involving the state's trust responsibilities;

(j) potential litigation against the state by private parties; and

(k) impacts on municipal and county governments resulting from late claims.

(2) The study must include an analysis of the potential for identifying individuals or classes of individuals whose additional forfeiture remission could be authorized in a manner that would have an acceptable impact on those issues identified under subsection (1). The classes of late claimants include but are not limited to previously decreed water rights holders and classes established according to filing date.

(3) The study must be completed in consultation with other relevant state and federal agencies, relevant groups and organizations, and other interested and affected citizens.

(4) The water policy committee shall report the results of the study to the 54th legislature by October 1, 1994. The report must include any legislative or other policy options recommended by the water policy committee."

1991 Amendment: In (3)(e) substituted "as provided in 5-11-210" for "not less than once every biennium". Amendment effective March 20, 1991.

Study of Dam Safety and Water Reservation Laws — 1991: Section 7, Ch. 659, L. 1991, provided for a study of dam safety and water reservation laws and regulations by the Water Policy Committee, with the cooperation of the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 573, L. 1985, provided: "WHEREAS, the Select Committee on Water Marketing was commissioned by the 1983 Legislature to undertake a study of the advantages and disadvantages of water marketing; and

WHEREAS, the Select Committee in completing its study determined that Montana needs to address broader questions of water policy in order to secure Montana's interests in allocation and management of state waters; and

WHEREAS, the Select Committee has presented a comprehensive package of recommendations that must be considered as a whole; and

WHEREAS, these recommendations serve to revise Montana's water policy in order to maximize Montana's authority over management of state waters and other natural resources and to conserve water for existing and future beneficial uses by Montanans.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds that this legislation and other recommendations of the Select Committee on Water Marketing constitute an appropriate revision of state water policy necessary to secure Montana's interests for present and future benefit to Montanans."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 45 deleted former (4) that read: "(4) in cooperation with other state agencies, institutions, colleges, and universities, establish and maintain a centralized and efficient water resources data management system sufficient to make available and readily accessible, in a usable format, to state agencies and other interested persons, information on the state's water resources, out-of-state water resources that affect the state, existing and potential uses, and existing and potential demand. All other state agencies, institutions, and colleges and universities shall cooperate with the department in the development and maintenance of this system"; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (1), after "adopted", deleted "by the board". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (4) requiring the Department to establish and maintain a centralized water resources data management system.

1983 Amendment: Deleted "declarations" before "claims" twice in (2) and once in (3); in (5) after "filing" deleted "declarations with the department or"; and inserted (6) requiring the Department to adopt rules necessary to reject, modify, or condition permit applications in highly appropriated basins or subbasins.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 370 (Ch. 448, L. 1983) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation in sections 1 and 17.

The intent is to provide the Department with the authority to adopt rules necessary to reject, modify, or condition water use permit applications in highly appropriated basins or subbasins. A rule may only be adopted under this section upon a petition signed by a certain percentage of water users in the source of supply or by direction of the Legislature. The petition must allege certain facts showing the need for the adoption of a rule. The Department must act on the petition within 60 days by: denying the petition and providing reasons to the petitioners; informing the petitioners that additional study of the allegations is necessary before denying or proceeding with the petition; or initiating the rulemaking proceeding. The rulemaking procedure must follow the notice requirements of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act, and in addition the Department must publish notice of the rulemaking hearing once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in which the source is located and also serve an individual copy of the notice on any known water right holder in the source of supply according to the Department's records.

This bill also delegates rulemaking authority to the Board of Natural Resources and Conservation [functions now transferred to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation] in section 2.

The intent is to provide the Board with the authority to adopt, through rules, fees to be paid by applicants, petitioners, and others for services provided. Fees could be adopted for: rulemaking hearings to reject, modify, or condition water use permit applications in highly appropriated basins or subbasins; administrative hearings conducted by the Department to settle objections to permit or change applications; costs incurred during the field investigation of a complaint against a permittee and related revocation proceedings; and for costs incurred in the field verification of issued and completed permits and change approvals."

1981 Amendment: Added "subject to the powers and duties of the supreme court under 3-7-204" to (1).

Limit on Rulemaking Authority: Section 3, Ch. 256, L. 2011, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), the department of natural resources and conservation may not adopt rules to implement the provisions of 85-2-306(3) for ground water wells that are exempt from permitting until October 1, 2012.

(2) The department may adopt rules to implement amendments to 85-2-306(3) that were passed and approved by the 62nd legislature for:

(a) appropriations by a local governmental fire agency organized under Title 7, chapter 33, provided that the appropriation is used only for emergency fire protection; or

(b) nonconsumptive appropriations for geothermal heating or cooling exchange applications." Effective April 21, 2011, and terminates June 30, 2013.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 161 in (2)(b) at end substituted "85-2-306" for "85-2-306(1)". Amendment effective April 7, 2005.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (1), (2), (2)(b), (3), (4)(a), in two places, and (4)(b) substituted "department" for "board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 543 inserted (4) concerning controls on chronically dewatered watercourse.

Chapter 805 at end of (2)(b) substituted "the limitation contained in 85-2-306(1)" for "100 gallons a minute". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 543, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required to provide guidance to the board of natural resources and conservation [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] in adopting rules to implement the provisions of [this act]. The legislature understands that many Montana watercourses or portions of watercourses suffer chronic dewatering. The legislature further understands that this dewatering severely impairs important beneficial uses of those watercourses, including but not limited to fisheries and agricultural, industrial, municipal, and recreational uses. It is the intent of the legislature, where reasonable and practical, to identify those watercourses or portions of watercourses where chronic dewatering significantly impairs these beneficial uses. It is also the intent of the legislature to require measuring devices on diversions in chronically dewatered watercourses or portions of watercourses to ensure that appropriators withdraw only the amounts they are entitled to withdraw under valid appropriative rights and water use permits."

1985 Statement of Intent — Section Numbering: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 573, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is needed for House Bill 680 [Ch. 573, L. 1985] because section 21 [section 22] extends the authority of the board [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] and the department of natural resources and conservation to adopt rules relating to the provisions of the bill. Such extension of authority would include the authority to adopt rules relating to the implementation of water reservations on the Missouri River basin under section 15 [section 16, 85-2-331] and relating to the leasing of water under section 12 [section 13, 85-2-141].

In their implementation of this bill, the long-range goal of the board and the department must be to conserve and protect the water resources of Montana for the use of all Montanans. Since agricultural uses of water constitute the largest uses by far, and a healthy economy of the state depends upon agriculture, the agricultural uses of water in Montana must be particularly conserved and protected.

In developing rules implementing this bill, and in entering into lease agreements with potential water users under section 12 [section 13, 85-2-141], it is the intent of the legislature that the department establish leasing rates which are commercially reasonable and take into account the financial abilities of a particular sector of the economy to lease water at various rates. Accordingly, it is contemplated that leasing rates for agricultural uses of water will be considerably lower than rates for industrial uses, as an example.

It is also the intent of the legislature that water be made available through the leasing program at minimal cost to potential users who may wish to benefit from a water use project of a third party. An example would be an irrigation district or a municipality in Montana that may desire to tap into a pipeline conveying water out of state. Provision for such incidental beneficial uses is authorized under section 12(8) [section 13(8), 85-2-141(8)] of the bill.

In entering into a lease of water, the department shall include a provision in the lease that other existing or planned uses of water in Montana will be fully protected during a low-water year. All of the criteria listed in 85-2-311 must be applied and considered by the department before it decides to enter into a lease of water.

In the implementation of water reservations in the Missouri River basin, it is the intent of the legislature that applicants for agricultural reservations be given equal treatment and opportunity to reserve water as that afforded applicants for instream uses. To the extent possible, equal treatment and opportunity includes the provision of financial resources and technical assistance to such applicants.

If an application for a slurry pipeline is received by the department of natural resources and conservation under the Montana Major Facility Siting Act, it is the intent of the legislature that the department and board of natural resources and conservation [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] shall consider and document the potential adverse economic impacts, if any, on railroads and railroad employment as required by 75-20-301(3) and 75-20-503 [now repealed]. The board shall also, to the extent feasible, require mitigation of these adverse impacts."

In the course of its passage through the Legislature, Ch. 573, L. 1985, was amended and consequently certain sections were renumbered. The statement of intent attached to the bill was not amended to reflect the renumbering. For clarity, the annotator has inserted in brackets, following each section number reference, the proper section number. If a section was codified, the annotator has also included the Montana Code Annotated number assigned to that section.

1983 Amendment: Substituted (1), authorizing Board of Natural Resources and Conservation to prescribe public service fees or charges, for the former text, which read: "The board may prescribe fees or service charges for any public service rendered by the department under this chapter, including fees for the filing of applications or for the issuance of permits and certificates. There shall be no fees for the filing of declarations or for any action taken by the department at the request of the water judge or for the issuance of certificates of existing rights."; in (2)(b) after "maximum" substituted "appropriation" for "yield".

Amendment effective April 1, 2009.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 457 in (3) inserted second sentence concerning independent county attorney action and third sentence concerning voluntary compliance provisions of subsection (4); in (4) at end substituted "must extend over a period of at least 7 days and may not exceed 30 working days" for "may not exceed 3 working days"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 30, 2001.

1991 Amendment: In (1), after "use the water", inserted "or violating a provision of this chapter, it may, after reasonable attempts have failed to obtain voluntary compliance as provided in subsection (4)"; inserted (1)(c) providing for injunctions; at beginning of (2) inserted "Upon the issuance of an order or injunction"; at end of (3) inserted "or violation"; inserted (4) concerning voluntary compliance; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 27, 1991.

Case Notes

No Private Right of Action to Enforce Civil Penalties Under Water Use Act: Defendant water and wastewater system operator was granted a provisional permit to pump ground water to service various businesses and residences in a water district, conditioned upon final state approval. However, defendant began pumping ground water before final approval was granted, and plaintiffs sought to have the District Court impose civil penalties against defendant for violations of the Montana Water Use Act. The District Court declined plaintiffs' request, and plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court noted that this section provides for judicial enforcement of the Act through actions initiated by the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, the Attorney General, or a County Attorney. However, the Montana Water Use Act does not create a private right of action for enforcement of its civil penalty provisions. The District Court was affirmed. Faust v. Util. Saving Clause: Section 2, Ch. 100, L. 2005, was a saving clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 487 in temporary version inserted (1) regarding recovery of fees in hearings and decisions involving the Upper Clark Fork basin. Amendment effective April 14, 1995, and terminates June 30, 2005.

Severability: Section 11, Ch. 487, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 487, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to all applications for changes in appropriation rights, permits, and water reservations received by the department of natural resources and conservation after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 14, 1995.

Case Notes

No Injunction for Ground Water Pumping Violation When Water Use Permit Granted — Request for Attorney Fees Moot: Defendant water and wastewater system operator was granted a provisional permit to pump ground water to service various businesses and residences in a water district, conditioned upon final state approval. However, defendant began pumping ground water before final approval was granted, and plaintiffs sought an injunction to stop the pumping and sought attorney fees in connection with the request for injunctive relief. Defendant moved for summary dismissal on grounds that plaintiffs did not have standing to enforce the Montana Water Use Act. The District Court agreed and dismissed plaintiffs' complaint, and plaintiffs appealed. About 2 weeks before the appeal was filed, the state granted final approval of defendant's permit. The Supreme Court held that issuance of the final permit rendered moot plaintiffs' request for injunctive relief and for attorney fees as well, including attorney fees under the private attorney general doctrine. The District Court was affirmed. Faust v. Util. Solutions, LLC, 2007 MT 326, 340 M 183, 173 P3d 1183 (2007).

Previous Judgment Conclusive: After the Supreme Court reversed the District Court order and reinstated the DNRC order, appellants petitioned the District Court for an award of attorney fees in their favor, contending that they, rather than the Monfortons, were the "prevailing party" under 85-2-125 since Monfortons' claim for attorney fees was denied in Mont. Power Co. v. Carey, 211 M 91, 685 P2d 336, 41 St. Rep. 1233 (1984). The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's denial of appellants' petition, holding that the question regarding attorney fees had been fully considered, determined, and adjudged in the earlier appeal. With that action, every issue, including the question of award of attorney fees, was determined, and that judgment is conclusive. Mont. Power Co. v. Carey, 216 M 275, 700 P2d 989, 42 St. Rep. 803 (1985).

85-2-141. Water leasing program.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 416 inserted (2)(c) authorizing the department to contract with the United States to acquire water rights for water held in federal reservoirs; in (3)(b) at beginning after "Fort Peck" inserted "Tiber, Canyon Ferry, Hungry Horse, Koocanusa, or Yellowtail", before "between" substituted "a contract" for "an agreement", and after "water" deleted "and the sharing of revenue with the state"; deleted former (3)(c) that read: "(c) Tiber, Canyon Ferry, Hungry Horse, or Yellowtail reservoir if and as long as there is an agreement between the department and the federal government concerning the acquisition of water and sharing of revenue with the state from one or more of these reservoirs"; in (3)(c)(ii) near middle before "between" substituted "a contract" for "an agreement" and at end after "water" deleted "and the sharing of revenue with the state"; deleted former (4) that read: "(4) Water may be leased for any beneficial use. The amount of water that can be leased under this program for all beneficial uses may not exceed 50,000 acre-feet"; inserted (4) providing that the state may lease up to 1 million acre-feet of water from certain reservoirs, but the total leased may not exceed 1 million acre-feet, and that the state may lease up to 50,000 acre-feet from the reservoirs for beneficial use outside the state; in (8) in first sentence near beginning before "agreement" inserted "lease"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 3, 2007.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (1) deleted second sentence that read: "Water leases issued under this program must be approved by the board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Preamble and Applicability: The preamble to Ch. 573, L. 1985, provided: "WHEREAS, the Select Committee on Water Marketing was commissioned by the 1983 Legislature to undertake a study of the advantages and disadvantages of water marketing; and

WHEREAS, the Select Committee in completing its study determined that Montana needs to address broader questions of water policy in order to secure Montana's interests in allocation and management of state waters; and

WHEREAS, the Select Committee has presented a comprehensive package of recommendations that must be considered as a whole; and

WHEREAS, these recommendations serve to revise Montana's water policy in order to maximize Montana's authority over management of state waters and other natural resources and to conserve water for existing and future beneficial uses by Montanans.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds that this legislation and other recommendations of the Select Committee on Water Marketing constitute an appropriate revision of state water policy necessary to secure Montana's interests for present and future benefit to Montanans."

Section 27, Ch. 573, L. 1985, provided: "This act applies to all permit applications, change in appropriation right applications, water sales and lease applications, and reservation applications filed and pending with the department on July 1, 1985, but upon which a hearing under Title 85, chapter 2, has not yet commenced."

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 543, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required to provide guidance to the board of natural resources and conservation [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] in adopting rules to implement the provisions of [this act]. The legislature understands that many Montana watercourses or portions of watercourses suffer chronic dewatering. The legislature further understands that this dewatering severely impairs important beneficial uses of those watercourses, including but not limited to fisheries and agricultural, industrial, municipal, and recreational uses. It is the intent of the legislature, where reasonable and practical, to identify those watercourses or portions of watercourses where chronic dewatering significantly impairs these beneficial uses. It is also the intent of the legislature to require measuring devices on diversions in chronically dewatered watercourses or portions of watercourses to ensure that appropriators withdraw only the amounts they are entitled to withdraw under valid appropriative rights and water use permits."

Part 2
Adjudication of Water Rights

Part Compiler's Comments

Collection of Outstanding Water Adjudication Fees — Appeals: Section 8, Ch. 319, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] does not affect the department's ability to address appeals filed pursuant to former 85-2-276 or the collection of fees from a water right owner who did not pay the water adjudication fee provided for in former 85-2-276 as of [the effective date of this act] [effective July 1, 2007]. The department of natural resources and conservation shall turn over any debt to the department of revenue for collection pursuant to Title 17, chapter 4. If efforts to collect the debt are not successful, the department of revenue may file a lien against the water right in the county where the water is put to beneficial use after notifying each entity enumerated on the water right."

Rules of Procedure: The rules of procedure for the Water Courts for the state of Montana are set forth in full under 85-2-231.

Pre-1973 Law Applicable to "Existing Rights": The Montana Water Use Act, Ch. 452, L. 1973, preserves "existing rights", and thus future determinations and adjudications will require reference to sections repealed by the 1973 law. Immediately following this material are casenotes pertaining to many of the repealed sections.

89-801. What waters may be appropriated. (1) The right to the use of the unappropriated water of any river, stream, ravine, coulee, spring, lake, or other natural source of supply may be acquired by appropriation, and an appropriator may impound flood, seepage, and waste waters in a reservoir and thereby appropriate the same.

(2) But the unappropriated waters of the streams and portions of streams hereafter named shall be subject to appropriation by the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] of the state of Montana in such amounts only as may be necessary to maintain stream flows necessary for the preservation of fish and wildlife habitat. Such uses shall have a priority of right over other uses until the district court in which lies the major portions of such stream or streams shall determine that such waters are needed for a use determined by said court to be more beneficial to the public. The unappropriated water of other streams and rivers not named herein may be set aside in the future for appropriation by the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] upon consideration and recommendation of the water resources board, fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission], state soil conservation committee, the state board of health and approval of the legislature.

89-801.1. Established rights of use unaffected. Nothing herein contained shall in any way affect or diminish any rights to the use of the waters of such streams or portions of streams heretofore established nor any legal or statutory rights given in connection with such established uses.

History: En. Sec. 2, Ch. 345, L. 1969.

89-801.2. Notice of appropriation. The appropriation hereby authorized shall be made by filing a written notice of appropriation in the office of the county clerk and recorder of each county through which flows the river on which the appropriation is made, and by filing a copy of such notice with the director of the Montana water resources board. The notice shall state the quantity of water claimed, measured as provided in Title 89, R.C.M. 1947, the purpose for which it is claimed, the name of the appropriator, and the date of appropriation.

History: En. Sec. 3, Ch. 345, L. 1969.

89-802. Appropriation must be for a useful purpose — abandonment. The appropriation must be for some useful or beneficial purpose, and when the appropriator or his successor in interest abandons and ceases to use the water for such purpose, the right ceases; but questions of abandonment shall be questions of fact, and shall be determined as other questions of fact.

89-807. First in time, first in right. As between appropriators the one first in time is first in right.

History: En. Sec. 5, p. 131, L. 1885; re-en. Sec. 1254, 5th Div. Comp. Stat. 1887; re-en. Sec. 1885, Civ. C. 1895; re-en. Sec. 4845, Rev. C. 1907; re-en. Sec. 7098, R.C.M. 1921. Cal. Civ. C. Sec. 1414.

89-810. Notice of appropriation. Any person hereafter desiring to appropriate the waters of a river, or stream, ravine, coulee, spring, lake, or other natural source of supply concerning which there has not been an adjudication of the right to use the waters, or some part thereof, must post a notice in writing in a conspicuous place at the point of intended diversion, stating therein:

1. The quantity of water claimed, measured as hereinafter provided;
2. The purpose for which it is claimed and place of intended use;
3. The means of diversion, with size of flume, ditch, pipe, or aqueduct, by which he intends to divert it;
4. The date of appropriation;
5. The name of the appropriator.

Within twenty days after the date of appropriation the appropriator shall file with the county clerk of the county in which such appropriation is made a notice of appropriation, which, in addition to the facts required to be stated in the posted notice, as hereinbefore prescribed, shall contain the name of the stream from which the diversion is made, if such stream have a name, and if it have not, such a description of the stream as will identify it, and an accurate description of the point of diversion of such stream, with reference to some natural object or permanent monument. The notice shall be verified by the affidavit of the appropriator or someone in his behalf, which affidavit must state that the matters and facts contained in the notice are true.

History: En. Sec. 6, p. 131, L. 1885; re-en. Sec. 1255, 5th Div. Comp. Stat. 1887; re-en. Sec. 1886, Civ. C. 1895; re-en. Sec. 4847, Rev. C. 1907; amd. Sec. 3, Ch. 228, L. 1921; re-en. Sec. 7100, R.C.M. 1921. Cal. Civ. C. Sec. 1415.

89-811. Diligence in appropriating. Within forty days after posting such notice, the appropriator must proceed to prosecute the excavation or construction of the work by which the water appropriated is to be diverted, and must prosecute the same with reasonable diligence to completion. If the ditch or flume, when constructed, is inadequate to convey the amount of water claimed in the notice aforesaid, the excess claimed above the capacity of the ditch or flume shall be subject to appropriation by any other person, in accordance with the provisions of this chapter.

History: En. Sec. 7, p. 132, L. 1885; re-en. Sec. 1256, 5th Div. Comp. Stat. 1887; re-en. Sec. 1887, Civ. C. 1895; re-en. Sec. 4848, Rev. C. 1907; re-en. Sec. 7101, R.C.M. 1921. Cal. Civ. C. Sec. 1416.

89-812. Effect of failure. A failure to comply with the provisions of this chapter deprives the appropriator of the right to the use of water as against a subsequent claimant who complies therewith, but by complying with the provisions of this chapter the right to the use of the water shall relate back to the date of posting the notice.

History: En. Sec. 8, p. 132, L. 1885; re-en. Sec. 1257, 5th Div. Comp. Stat. 1887; re-en. Sec. 1888, Civ. C. 1895; re-en. Sec. 4849, Rev. C. 1907; re-en. Sec. 7102, R.C.M. 1921. Cal. Civ. C. Sec. 1419.

89-813. Record of declaration. Persons who have heretofore acquired rights to the use of water shall, within six (6) months after the publication of this chapter, file in the office of the county clerk of the county in which the water right is situated, a declaration in writing, except notice be already given of record as required by this chapter, or a declaration in writing be already filed as required by this section, containing the same facts as required in the notice provided for record in section 89-810 of this chapter, and verified as required in said last-mentioned section, in cases of notice of appropriation of water; provided, that a failure to comply with the requirements of this section shall in nowise work a forfeiture of such heretofore acquired rights, or prevent any such claimant from establishing such rights in the courts. From and after July 1, 1967, the county clerk and recorder shall forward to the water resources board a copy of any instrument of water appropriation or instrument transferring any water appropriation which is filed as provided in this section.

History: En. Sec. 9, p. 132, L. 1885; re-en. Sec. 1258, 5th Div. Comp. Stat. 1887; re-en. Sec. 1889, Civ. C. 1895; re-en. Sec. 4850, Rev. C. 1907; re-en. Sec. 7103, R.C.M. 1921; amd. Sec. 6, Ch. 158, L. 1967.

89-829. Procedure for appropriating waters of adjudicated streams. (1) Any person hereafter desiring to appropriate the waters of a river, or stream, ravine, coulee, spring, lake, or other natural source of supply concerning which there has been an adjudication of rights between appropriators or claimants, as contemplated in section 89-839, shall:

(a) employ a competent engineer to make a survey of the ditch, or aqueduct, whereby the water is to be conveyed from the source of supply, or the dam or other work whereby the water is to be impounded, or both; or

(b) cause to be prepared an aerial photograph with a drawing thereon showing the course of the proposed ditch or aqueduct, or the location of the proposed dam or other work, or both, together with a description of the course of said ditch or the location of said dam attached thereto; and the appropriators shall file with the clerk of the court in the county in which the water is appropriated a petition giving the amount of water sought to be appropriated, a description by name or otherwise of the watercourse or body from which he intends to appropriate the water, and a general description of the ditch or aqueduct, stating its size, length, and capacity, showing the proposed means of appropriation and use of the water, and also the place of use thereof. If the means of appropriation be a reservoir by which the water is to be impounded, the petition shall state the location and size thereof, together with the contemplated manner of its construction and the means of conveying the water to the place of contemplated use, and the contemplated use.

(2) There shall be filed with the petition a map or aerial photograph as hereinbefore provided showing the point of, and means of diversion, and the course of the ditch or aqueduct to its terminus, and if a reservoir, the contour line thereof, the height and width of the dam, the point and means of discharge therefrom, and the spillway. If the appropriator shall intend to mingle the waters appropriated from one stream with another, or shall intend to deposit the waters impounded in a reservoir into a stream, he shall so state.

(3) The appropriator shall declare in his petition that the water rights sought by him shall be subject to, and that in the use thereof he shall be bound by the terms of any decree theretofore rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction adjudicating the waters of such river, stream, ravine, coulee, spring, lake, or other natural source of supply, or, any body of water to which the same may be tributary, provided that water stored in a reservoir pursuant to an appropriation hereunder which is subsequent to an adjudication of waters in a flowing stream when so released from storage shall not be considered as a part of the natural flow of said adjudicated stream.

(4) The appropriator shall, as near as may be, give the names of all appropriators or claimants who have, or appear to have, rights in the source of supply, from which the appropriation is sought, and whose rights may be in anywise affected by the appropriation, and in the petition the petitioner shall be named as plaintiff, and all other parties as defendants.

89-831. Appearance — default — decree. If any defendant shall not appear within twenty days after the service of summons upon him, it shall be deemed by the court that he has no objection to the court granting the appropriation sought by the plaintiff, and the defendant so failing to appear shall be deemed in default. Any defendant may appear by motion, demurrer, or answer, as in civil action. The procedure in civil actions shall be followed in all proceedings under the terms of this act; provided, that when the pleadings are settled the court shall summarily proceed to try and determine the case. Evidence may be offered by the parties as in civil actions. At the conclusion of the trial, the court may enter an interlocutory or permanent decree allowing the appropriation sought, either in whole or in part, subject to all prior rights as adjudicated, and subject to the terms of all prior decrees, or may make any other order deemed proper in the premises. If no objections are filed the court shall enter such decree as the facts warrant.

History: En. Sec. 6, Ch. 228, L. 1921; re-en. Sec. 7121, R.C.M. 1921.

89-832. Decree subject to prior adjudicated rights. If the defendants, or any of them, do not appear, their adjudicated rights which are prior in time to plaintiff's right shall in nowise be affected by the court's order. The court shall in every case, if an appropriation be awarded plaintiff, provide that the same shall be subject to all adjudicated rights which are prior in time to plaintiff's rights, and the plaintiff shall be bound by the terms of all prior decrees with respect to water rights in the proper order of his priority as if he had been a party to the decree originally.

History: En. Sec. 7, Ch. 228, L. 1921; re-en. Sec. 7122, R.C.M. 1921; amd. Sec. 1, Ch. 38, L. 1927.

89-834. Decree to govern conditions of performance of work. The court may provide by interlocutory decree awarding the appropriation, the condition under which the ditch, aqueduct, dam, or other work, necessary to the complete appropriation, shall be done and the time within which the same shall be completed until the conditions imposed are complied with. Upon a full compliance with the terms prescribed by the court, it shall enter its order and decree establishing the appropriation and fixing the date thereof, which, if the appropriator shall have been diligent in complying with the court order, shall be the date of the filing of the petition. The court may fix a later date if the facts warrant.

History: En. Sec. 9, Ch. 228, L. 1921; re-en. Sec. 7124, R.C.M. 1921.

89-839. Effect of decree upon subsequent appropriations. Whenever there shall have been an adjudication of the rights between appropriators or claimants to any stream or any other water supply in this state, in any district court of the state, or the United States court, in an action prosecuted in good faith between such appropriators or claimants to determine their respective rights to the use of such waters, and which decree is based upon evidence introduced, and not upon stipulations or admissions of the parties, such adjudication and decree, or certified copies thereof, shall, as against all persons appropriating or diverting any of the waters of the said stream or other water supply, after the date of such decree, in an action relating to such waters, be prima facie evidence of the facts therein found, determined, and decreed, respecting the rights of parties to said action to the use of the waters of said stream or other water supply.

History: En. Sec. 1, Ch. 95, L. 1905; re-en. Sec. 4867, Rev. C. 1907; re-en. Sec. 7128, R.C.M. 1921.

89-842. Appropriations pending litigation subject to decree. At such time as there may be legal proceedings instituted by the owner or owners of any water right or water rights in any stream, spring, creek, canyon, river, or ravine, before any court of competent jurisdiction, all subsequent appropriations made in any such streams, creeks, springs, canyons, rivers, or ravines will be subject to such suit as may be instituted and shall not date prior to the date of the beginning of said suit, and will be subject to the rulings and decisions thereunder.

History: En. Sec. 3, Ch. 185, L. 1907; re-en. Sec. 4870, Rev. C. 1907; re-en. Sec. 7131, R.C.M. 1921.

89-847. Declaration of policy as to adjudication of waters of the state. It is hereby declared to be the policy of this state and necessary for the welfare of the state and its citizens, that the waters of this state and especially interstate streams arising out of the state be investigated and adjudicated as soon as possible in order to protect the rights of water users in this state and negotiate interstate compacts in relation thereto, and that the state water conservation board make investigations to secure necessary information and initiate and carry on actions therefor.

89-848. Water conservation board may bring action to adjudicate waters. The state water conservation board is hereby authorized to bring action to adjudicate the waters of any stream or of any stream and its tributaries in any county traversed by said stream.

History: En. Sec. 2, Ch. 185, L. 1939; amd. Sec. 7, Ch. 280, L. 1965.

89-849. Appointment of referee to take testimony. In said actions the state water conservation board, or in any action pending for the adjudication of a water right, any party thereto, may make application to the court for the appointment of some competent person or persons to act as a referee or referees in said cause and to take testimony therein, and the court may appoint a referee or referees who shall proceed as herein set forth. In said order of reference the court may submit to said referee or referees any or all issues of fact in said cause.

History: En. Sec. 3, Ch. 185, L. 1939; amd. Sec. 8, Ch. 280, L. 1965.

89-851. Duties of water conservation board — scope of examination of streams — surveys, reports, maps and plats may be introduced as evidence. The state water conservation board shall either before or after the bringing of such action do all things, make all surveys, and perform all services required by said board in the securing of all necessary information and making same available to persons who may be interested therein including the courts of this state. The state water conservation board or some qualified employee may proceed to make an examination of any stream or streams as required by said board and the works diverting therefrom, said examination to include the measurement of the discharge of said stream and of the carrying capacity of the various ditches and canals, and examination of the irrigated lands and an approximate measurement of the lands irrigated from the various ditches and canals, and to take such other steps and gather such other data and information as may be essential to the proper understanding of the relative rights of the parties interested, which said observation and measurement shall be reduced to writing and made a matter of record, and it shall be the duty of the state water conservation board to make or cause to be made such maps or plats thereof as deemed necessary or shall be required. Any or all such surveys, reports, maps and plats may be furnished to the judge of said court or the referee or referees mentioned herein and may be introduced as evidence in such proceedings; provided that the costs and expenses incurred in carrying out the provisions of this section shall be paid by the state water conservation board.

89-853. Report of referee — recognition of decreed water rights. The report of the said referee or referees shall contain findings of fact upon the issues submitted but shall not contain conclusions of law. All evidence before said referee shall be transcribed and submitted to the court with the findings of such referees. In proceedings described herein, all vested and decreed water rights shall be herein recognized.

History: En. Sec. 7, Ch. 185, L. 1939.

89-854. District court procedure. After the conclusion of the taking of such testimony the said referee or referees shall file their findings of fact with the clerk of the district court wherein said action is pending which findings of fact shall remain on file and subject to investigation by parties interested therein. The clerk of court shall notify the parties or their attorneys by mail upon the filing of such findings of fact by the referee or referees. The parties shall have thirty days from the mailing of such notices during which time any party to said action may file in said court objections or exceptions to any such findings of fact. As to any findings to which no exceptions are filed, same may be adopted by the court as findings of said court. As to any findings to which objections are filed, the court shall consider such proposed findings together with the evidence in relation thereto and may adopt, reject, or modify such findings. The court may upon request or of its own motion make additional findings in said cause. All conclusions of law shall be determined by the court in the same manner as conclusions of law are determined by the court in any action to be tried before the court.

History: En. Sec. 8, Ch. 185, L. 1939.

89-2912. Rights to use. Rights to surface water where the date of appropriation precedes January 1, 1962, shall take priority over all prior or subsequent ground water rights. The application of ground water to a beneficial use prior to January 1, 1962 is hereby recognized as a water right. Beneficial use shall be the extent and limit of the appropriative right. As to appropriations of ground water completed on and after January 1, 1962, any and all rights must be based upon the filing provisions hereinafter set forth, and as between all appropriators of surface or ground water on and after January 1, 1962, the first in time is first in right. The right to use ground water may be obtained without a well, as by subirrigation and other natural processes, and appropriations by such means are provided for under section 89-2913. Appropriative rights shall relate only to quantities of water for beneficial uses and not to water levels, means of use, or ease of withdrawal; and appropriative rights shall not apply to minimal household use as provided in section 89-2915.

History: En. Sec. 2, Ch. 237, L. 1961.

89-2913. Filing — notice of appropriation — notice of completion. (a) The administrator shall prepare and publish forms for the filing by appropriators with the county clerks. They shall be known as a "notice of appropriation" and a "notice of completion," respectively. The notice of appropriation shall require, and provide space for, answers to such questions as: (1) the name and address of the appropriator; (2) the beneficial use for which the appropriation is made, including a description of the lands to be benefited if for irrigation; (3) the rate of use in gallons per minute of ground water claimed; (4) the annual period (inclusive dates) of intended use; (5) the probable or intended date of first beneficial use; (6) the probable or intended date of commencement and completion of the well or wells; (7) the location, type, size and depth of the well or wells contemplated; (8) the probable or estimated depth of the water table or artesian aquifer; (9) the name, address and license number (if any) of the driller engaged; and (10) such other similar information as may be useful in carrying out the policy of this act.

The notice of completion shall require answers to the same sort of questions as required for the notice of appropriation, except that for the most part it shall inquire as to accomplished facts concerning the well or means of withdrawal, including information as to the static level of water in the casing or the shut-in pressure if the well flows naturally; the capacity of the well in gallons per minute by pumping or by natural flow; the approximate draw down or pumping level of the well; the approximate surface elevation at the well head; the casing record of the well; the drilling log showing the character and thickness of all formations penetrated; the depth to which the well is drilled; and similar information.

For the benefit of persons obtaining (or desiring to obtain) ground water without a well (as by subirrigation and other natural processes) a specially prepared "notice of completion" shall be provided, enabling such persons to describe the means of using ground water and to estimate the amount of water so used, and requiring such other similar information as shall be pertinent to this particular class of user. The administrator shall distribute said forms to the county clerks.

(b) On and after January 1, 1962, any person desiring to appropriate ground water may complete a notice of appropriation and file it with the county clerk of the county in which the appropriation is located.

(c) Upon the filing of a notice of appropriation, the county clerk shall transmit a copy thereof to the administrator, and to the Montana bureau of mines and geology, retaining the original on file locally.

(d) After filing a notice of appropriation, in order to acquire a right based thereon, the person must, within ninety (90) days, commence actual excavation and diligently prosecute construction of a well and, upon its completion, file a notice of completion with the county clerk of the county in which the appropriation is located. The county clerk shall handle and transmit such filed notices as in the case of a filed notice of appropriation.

(e) A failure to file a notice of appropriation deprives the appropriator of his right to relate his date of appropriation back, and results in the dating of his appropriation as of when he files a notice of completion. Until a notice of completion is filed with respect to any use of ground water instituted after January 1, 1962, no right to that use of water shall be recognized. However, in the case of uses instituted prior to January 1, 1962 and diligently prosecuted to completion on or after that date, the date of appropriation shall relate back to the date of commencement of construction, upon the filing of a notice of completion.

(f) Persons required to file well logs and other information under the laws governing the conservation of oil and gas and who do so in compliance therewith, shall be deemed to have complied with all of the filing requirements of this act in so far as it applies to such particular oil and gas wells, salt water disposal wells, and injection wells. The date of appropriation in such cases shall be the date that written notice of intention to drill is given to the oil and gas conservation commission of the state of Montana.

(g) It shall be the responsibility of the driller of each well to fill out the notice of completion for the appropriator, and the latter shall be responsible for its filing.

(h) Persons who had put ground water to a beneficial use, including subirrigation or other natural process, prior to January 1, 1962 had a four (4) year period after January 1, 1962 to file a "declaration of vested ground water rights" in the office of the county clerk of the county in which the claimed right was situated. The right to file a "declaration of vested ground water rights" expired on January 1, 1966; therefore, any person desiring to file on ground water put to beneficial use prior to January 1, 1962, but not filed on by December 31, 1965 may file a "notice of completion." The appropriator's right will commence on the date the notice is filed, except as hereinafter provided.

The county clerk shall transmit copies to the office of the administrator and the bureau of mines and geology. The administrator shall attend to filing copies in any other counties affected by the appropriation.

The "declaration of vested ground water rights" as provided for, to be filed on from January 1, 1962 to January 1, 1966 shall be taken and received in all courts of this state as prima facie evidence of the statements therein contained.

Failure to comply with this requirement shall in no wise work a forfeiture of such rights, or prevent any such claimant from establishing such rights in the courts, but he must maintain the burden of proving such unrecorded rights. Provided, however, that persons who have filed the water well log form, provided for in sections 1 and 2 of chapter 58, session laws of Montana, 1957, shall be deemed to have complied with the requirements of this section. These latter forms may be returned to the county clerks by the administrator for the purpose of correction or for the entry of material facts necessary to fully complete the filing.

89-2925. Appropriation must be for a useful purpose — abandonment. The appropriation must be for some beneficial purpose and when the appropriator or his successor in interest abandons and ceases to use the water for such purpose, the right ceases; but questions of abandonment shall be questions of fact and shall be determined as other questions of fact.

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

Public Recreation and Conservation Interests in Water Adjudication Proceedings—Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Not Exclusive Representative: After the Water Court issued a temporary preliminary decree for the Big Hole River Basin, the objector filed timely objections to the claims of several claimants and requested a hearing. The Water Court granted summary judgment to the claimants on the basis that the objector lacked standing to file objections to the claims. The Supreme Court reversed. The Water Court erred in holding that under 85-2-223, only the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks may represent public recreation and conservation interests in water rights adjudications. Section 85-2-223 does not prohibit other entities from filing objections. No statutory or regulatory restrictions exist regarding who may file an objection to a water rights claim contained in a temporary preliminary decree. Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Beaverhead Water Co., 2011 MT 151, 361 Mont. 77, 255 P.3d 179.

Water Rights Adjudication — Standing to Object to Preliminary Decree: After the Water Court issued a temporary preliminary decree for the Big Hole River Basin, the objector filed timely objections to the claims of several claimants and requested a hearing. The Water Court granted summary judgment to the claimants on the basis that the objector lacked standing to file objections to the claims. Although the objector had sufficiently alleged environmental and recreational interests of its members that were distinct from those of the general public, the Water Court concluded such interests were not sufficient to demonstrate standing because the objector lacked ownership of a water right. The Supreme Court reversed. The Water Court erroneously applied the "good cause" requirement contained in 85-2-233 to require an ownership interest in a water right. When a party has met all common-law and statutory requirements for standing and has shown that its interest in the use of water has been affected by the decree, that party is entitled to object to a preliminary decree under 85-2-233. Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Beaverhead Water Co., 2011 MT 151, 361 Mont. 77, 255 P.3d 179.

No Right of Hydroelectric Facility to Make Free Appropriation of Water on State-Owned Land: A hydroelectric facility does not have the right to make free appropriation of water on and within state-owned land without paying compensation to the state. PPL Mont., LLC v. St., 2010 MT 64, 355 Mont. 402, 229 P.3d 421, distinguishing Smith v. Deniff, 24 Mont. 20, 60 P 398 (1900), U.S. v. Conrad Invest. Co., 156 F 123 (D.C. Mont. 1907), and Mattson v. Mont. Power Co., 2009 MT 286, 352 Mont. 212, 215 P.3d 675. See also Prentice v. McKay, 38 Mont. 114, 98 P 1081 (1909).

Following the Montana Supreme Court's decision, PPL appealed to the United States Supreme Court. The United States Supreme Court reversed the Montana court's ruling, holding that the Montana court had not properly considered the rivers in question on a segment-by-segment basis and had not determined whether they were navigable in fact at the time of statehood. The United States Supreme Court remanded the case for proceedings consistent with its opinion. PPL Montana, LLC v. Montana, 565 US __, 132 S Ct 1215, 182 L Ed 2d 77 (2012).

New Trial to Lift Injunction on Water Use Properly Denied: As a result of defendant's negligent operation of an irrigation ditch and the risk associated with high volume flow in the ditch, the District Court enjoined defendant from a flow of more than 400 miner's inches through the ditch until defendant could prove that the ditch could safely transport more. Defendant sought a new trial to lift the injunction on grounds that new evidence stemming from the successful operation of the ditch since the trial could not have been presented earlier. The motion for a new trial was denied, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the evidence was new, the fact remained that varying flows when combined with other variables could still produce damaging results, so the evidence was insufficient to warrant a new trial. Graveley Simmental Ranch Co. v. Quigley, 2003 MT 34, 314 M 226, 65 P3d 225 (2003).

Water Right Limited to Carrying Capacity of Irrigation Ditch: Through the years, Quigley was granted three water rights for irrigation from Ophir Creek for 25, 100, and 800 miner's inches, for a total or 925 inches. However, Quigley's own 1928 survey and a 1930 District Court decision established that the carrying capacity of the irrigation ditch was 800 miner's inches, and that amount was confirmed by the District Court in the present case. Quigley appealed, claiming the right to transport the full 925 inches through the ditch at one time. The Supreme Court disagreed. Because it is elementary that a ditch cannot carry more water than its smallest dimensions allow, it was held that although Quigley had the right to divert 925 miner's inches, that right was subject to the ditch description stating that the ditch had a carrying capacity of 800 miner's inches. Since 1930, the description was unchallenged and relied on by Quigley to his benefit, and under res judicata, Quigley could not now complain of its inaccuracy. Graveley Simmental Ranch Co. v. Quigley, 2003 MT 34, 314 M 226, 65 P3d 225 (2003). See also Quigley v. McIntosh, 88 M 103, 290 P 266 (1930), and Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

No Right of Appeal Except From Final Judgment: There is no right of appeal granted to a water right claimant under the state water rights adjudication process except from a final decree entered under 85-2-234. In re Adjudication of Sage Creek Water Rights, 234 M 243, 763 P2d 644, 45 St. Rep. 1876 (1988).

State Water Court — Jurisdiction to Adjudicate Indian Reserved Water Rights: In an original proceeding to determine jurisdiction over controversies involving federal water rights of the Water Court over Indian tribes and water flowing through state reservations, the Supreme Court held that Article I of the Montana Constitution does not bar state jurisdiction to adjudicate Indian reserved water rights. With the 1952 McCarran amendment, the U.S. Congress diminished the scope of absolute federal jurisdiction over controversies involving federal water rights by allowing state courts concurrent jurisdiction to adjudicate federal water rights. In Colo. River Water Conserv. District v. U.S., 424 US 800 (1976), the U.S. Supreme Court held that the McCarran amendment applied to Indian water rights. The state Legislature's enactment of the Water Use Act (Title 85, ch. 2) pursuant to Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., constitutes a valid and binding consent of the people of Montana to Congress' grant of state jurisdiction over Indian reserved water rights. State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754, 42 St. Rep. 1856 (1985), followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986).

Water Use Act — Adjudication of Federal and Indian Reserved Water Rights:

The Montana Water Use Act (Title 85, ch. 2) is adequate on its face to adjudicate federal reserved water rights. Although federal reserved rights differ from state appropriative rights in origin, determination of priority date, and quantification standards, the Water Use Act recognizes the distinction between federal reserved rights and state-created appropriative rights. As the Act permits each different class of water rights to be treated differently, the Act is adequate to allow for adjudication of federal reserved rights. State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754, 42 St. Rep. 1856 (1985), followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986).

The Montana Water Use Act (Title 85, ch. 2) is adequate on its face to adjudicate Indian reserved water rights. Although state appropriative water rights and Indian reserved water rights differ in origin and definition, the Water Use Act, as amended, permits the Water Court to treat Indian reserved water rights differently from state appropriative rights. The Water Use

Act does not state explicitly that the Water Court shall apply federal law in adjudicating Indian reserved rights; however, state courts are required to follow federal law with regard to those water rights. State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754, 42 St. Rep. 1856 (1985), followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986).

State Court Jurisdiction Over Federal and Indian Water Rights: The McCarran Amendment, 43 U.S.C. §666, granting state courts jurisdiction over the United States in litigation involving a comprehensive adjudication of water rights, removed "whatever limitations the enabling acts or federal policy may have originally placed on state court jurisdiction" over the adjudication of Indian water rights in actions brought by the United States on behalf of an Indian tribe as well as in actions brought by an Indian tribe itself. Assuming that the state adjudication procedure is adequate and complies with state law, dismissal of adjudication actions filed in federal District Court out of deference to state adjudication proceedings was proper. Ariz. v. San Carlos Apache Tribe, 463 US 545, 77 L Ed 2d 837, 103 S Ct 3201 (1983), reversing N. Cheyenne Tribe v. Adsit, 668 F2d 1080 (9th Cir. 1982); followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986).

WHAT WATERS MAY BE APPROPRIATED

Water Rights by Prescription — Hostile Use Required: Where the plaintiffs brought an action against the decedent's estate, claiming a prescriptive right to water diverted by the decedent's descendants, the District Court did not err in holding that the requirement of hostile use of the water would be applied to determine whether the water had been acquired by prescription. Without such a requirement, the holder of a water right could be deprived of that right without notice. In the case before the court, use of the water could not be said to be hostile unless the defendants were deprived of the water in question at a time when they actually had need of it. Language in the opinion in Cook v. Hudson, 110 M 263, 103 P2d 137 (1940), appearing to abrogate the requirement of hostile use, is expressly disapproved. Grimsley v. Estate of Spencer, 206 M 184, 670 P2d 85, 40 St. Rep. 1585 (1983).

Waters of Tributary: The waters of a tributary belong to the stream into which the tributary flows to the extent of prior appropriations. Granite Ditch Co. v. Anderson, 204 M 10, 662 P2d 1312, 40 St. Rep. 630 (1983).

Valid Water Right Not Affected by Release of Surplus to Junior User: Defendants' predecessor in interest began using water in the amount of 110 gallons a minute from Mahle Spring in 1917 for domestic, stock, and irrigation purposes. Mahle Spring flows into Ashley Creek. In 1958, defendants completed construction of a dam whose purpose was to stabilize their water supply only, not to increase the amount of water appropriated. In April 1973, defendants filed notice of completion of ground water appropriation without well, claiming 110 gallons a minute. In 1957, plaintiff's predecessor in interest began using water from Ashley Creek. At times, when Ashley Creek dried up, defendants agreed to release water from the dam. In 1978, plaintiff obtained a water use permit for Ashley Creek. Subsequently, defendants refused to release any water from the dam. Plaintiff filed an action to adjudicate the parties' water rights and to enjoin defendants from interfering with the flow of Ashley Creek. The Montana Supreme Court upheld the District Court's ruling that defendants are entitled to 110 gallons a minute with a priority date of 1917 and that plaintiff is entitled only to the excess over that. The court denied plaintiff's claim that defendants were estopped from asserting a superior claim, reasoning that the release of the water did not cause plaintiff's predecessor in interest to change her position for the worse because the defendants had already established a valid claim to the water and thus the release was either a mere gratuity or a release of surplus water. In the absence of evidence that defendant was not simply releasing surplus water, the court also denied plaintiff's claim of laches. Finally, the court denied plaintiff's claim that the release from the dam was evidence that defendants were not making beneficial use of all the water since the District Court findings indicated that the defendants' total claim was fully justified. Bagnell v. Lemery, 202 M 238, 657 P2d 608, 40 St. Rep. 58 (1983).

Adverse Use — Expansion of Water Right: Plaintiff had title by conveyance to 132/142 part of a water right, with defendant having the remaining part. Because the defendant insisted on and did use one-half of the water right against plaintiff's wishes for 15 years and because plaintiff stated he needed all the water during that time, the defendant established a claim to half of the water through adverse possession. Firestone v. Bradshaw, 157 M 181, 483 P2d 716 (1971).

Adverse Use — Elements — Burden of Proof: In order to acquire a water right by adverse use or by prescription (prior to 1953), the proof must show all the following elements: that the use has been continuous for 10 years, exclusive, open, under a claim of right, hostile, and an invasion of another's rights, which the latter had a chance to prevent. The burden of proving an adverse use rests upon the party alleging it. Smith v. Krutar, 153 M 325, 457 P2d 459 (1969); King v. Schultz, 141 M 94, 375 P2d 108 (1962); Havre Irrigation Co. v. Majerus, 132 M 410, 318 P2d 1076 (1957); Lamping v. Diehl, 126 M 193, 246 P2d 230 (1952); Irion v. Hyde, 107 M 84, 81 P2d 353 (1938).

Adverse Use — Not Peaceable and Uninterrupted: During the period of defendant's asserted adverse use, the plaintiff attempted to prevent defendant's use of water by destroying pipes and headgates placed on a ditch by the defendant. Therefore, the defendant's use was not peaceable or uninterrupted as required for a claim of adverse use. Smith v. Krutar, 153 M 325, 457 P2d 459 (1969).

Adverse Use — Prerequisites: There are three basic prerequisites for establishing adverse use: (1) that the claimant use water at a time when plaintiff needs it; (2) that the claimant use water in such a substantial manner as to notify plaintiff that he is being deprived of water to which he is entitled; and (3) that during all of that period, plaintiff could have maintained an action against him for so using the water. Smith v. Krutar, 153 M 325, 457 P2d 459 (1969); King v. Schultz, 141 M 94, 375 P2d 108 (1962); Havre Irrigation Co. v. Majerus, 132 M 410, 318 P2d 1076 (1957).

Adverse Use — Prior Decree as Res Judicata: Because the criteria for the doctrine of res judicata were met, a water right by adverse use could not be established based on a period prior to the entry of a water rights decree. Smith v. Krutar, 153 M 325, 457 P2d 459 (1969).

Adverse Use — Diversion System as Evidence: Evidence of a water line and diversion system on defendant's land to divert water on defendant's land to plaintiff's land amply supported a conclusion that plaintiff was the owner of a water right by reason of title by prescription. O'Connor v. Brodie, 153 M 129, 454 P2d 920 (1969).

Appropriation on Private Land:

Without the permission of the defendant, the plaintiff constructed a ditch over land of the defendant. The plaintiff's trespass did not give rise to a right to an easement over the defendant's land or to water from the spring. Jones v. Hanson, 133 M 115, 320 P2d 1007 (1958).

An appropriation of water is not confined to waters flowing in streams upon public land but may be made from a stream flowing through privately owned land by invoking the aid of eminent domain proceedings, if necessary. Mettler v. Ames Realty Co., 61 M 152, 201 P 702 (1921).

Sections 89-801 through 89-805, 89-807 through 89-828, and 89-839 through 89-844, R.C.M. 1947, do not and cannot authorize a person to go upon the private property of another for the purpose of making an appropriation, except by condemnation proceedings. Prentice v. McKay, 38 M 114, 98 P 1081 (1909), explained in Connolly v. Harrel, 102 M 295, 57 P2d 781 (1936).

The mere fact that water has its source on land owned by a plaintiff does not of itself give him the exclusive right therein so as to prevent others from acquiring rights to it under the laws of the state. Quinlan v. Calvert, 31 M 115, 77 P 428 (1904).

A trespasser on riparian land cannot lawfully exercise any right to water on such land or acquire any right therein by virtue of the provisions of this chapter. Smith v. Denniff, 24 M 20, 60 P 398 (1900), distinguished in Dept. of State Lands v. Pettibone, 216 M 361, 702 P2d 948, 42 St. Rep. 869 (1985).

Adverse Use — Parties to the Action: In order to acquire title to a water right by adverse possession, those claiming to be the legal owners of the water right must be made parties. Forrester v. Rock Island Oil Co., 133 M 333, 323 P2d 597 (1958).

Limitation on Rights: The rights of an appropriator of water are limited to the natural condition of the stream at the time the appropriation is made. Jones v. Hanson, 133 M 115, 320 P2d 1007 (1958).

Adverse Use — Not Adverse: The defendant used water from a stream during periods of spring runoff in years of above average rainfall, believed the water so used would percolate back into the stream, and used the water on isolated land, making discovery of irrigation difficult. Such use was insufficient to establish a water right by adverse possession because it lacked the most vital element, namely, adverse use. Havre Irrigation Co. v. Majerus, 132 M 410, 318 P2d 1076 (1957).

Impounding Floodwater and Wastewater: Where plaintiff had over the years constructed a series of dikes in order to spread water over his land that would flow down a dry gully after the melting of snow or a heavy rainfall, he had a prior right to the extent that his project was finished. He who first diverts the water to a beneficial use has the prior right thereto where the right is based upon the custom and practice of the early settlers and where there was no compliance with the statute. Midkiff v. Kincheloe, 127 M 324, 263 P2d 976 (1953). (See, however, the dissenting opinion in the case in which it was contended that the waters were floodwaters and wastewaters that the defendant had a right to impound in a stock reservoir, 127 M 324, 263 P2d 976 (1953).)

Slough — Natural Watercourse: A slough naturally followed a channel which was cut down in gravel and rock, and was fed by natural springs, seepage, surface drainage and wastewater from a canal. Such a slough constituted a natural watercourse and was subject to appropriation. Meine v. Ferris, 126 M 210, 247 P2d 195 (1952).

Diffused Surface Water Defined — Not Subject to Appropriation: The essential characteristics of diffused surface waters are that their flows are short-lived and that the waters are spread over the ground and not concentrated or confined in flows of legal watercourses or bodies of water conforming to the definition of lakes or ponds. Diffused surface waters in a gulch on land above where a natural channel has developed are not subject to appropriation. Doney v. Beatty, 124 M 41, 220 P2d 77 (1950).

Ownership of Land Where Water Has Source: Seepage water that has its rise along the bed of a stream and forms a natural accretion thereto belongs to that stream as part of its source of supply, and the ownership of land where water has its source does not necessarily give the exclusive right to use such water to the landowner so as to prevent others from acquiring rights therein. Woodward v. Perkins, 116 M 46, 147 P2d 1016 (1944), distinguished in Forrester v. Rock Island Oil & Ref. Co., 133 M 333, 323 P2d 597 (1958).

Seepage and Wastewaters:

Although seepage water that has its rise along the bed of a stream and forms a natural accretion thereto belongs to the stream as a part of its source of supply, the same as do feeder springs, and an appropriator of water on such stream has the right to all such tributary flow even as against the owner of the land, the conducting of water from upper reaches of a tributary to "potholes" and "reservoirs" and then capturing the seepage therefrom in ditches is insufficient proof of creating a new supply for an additional water right. Woodward v. Perkins, 116 M 46, 147 P2d 1016 (1944), distinguished in Forrester v. Rock Island Oil & Ref. Co., 133 M 333, 323 P2d 597 (1958).

Where water seeping from irrigated lands finds its way into a drain ditch and is collected there, it is subject to appropriation. Wills v. Morris, 100 M 514, 50 P2d 862 (1935), distinguished in McGowan v. U.S., 206 F. Supp. 439 (D.C. Mont. 1962).

While wastewaters are subject to appropriation, the owner of the land from which such water flows has the right to use his land as he pleases and may therefore change the flow to suit his purpose, provided the changes are not made maliciously or arbitrarily to the detriment of the appropriator in the enjoyment of his right. Newton v. Weiler, 87 M 164, 286 P 133 (1930).

Prior to the amendment of this section (Ch. 228, L. 1921), there was no statutory provision for the appropriation of flood, seepage, and wastewaters and therefore no right could be acquired as to such vagrant or fugitive waters as against the owner who sought to recapture them. But where such waters had passed beyond the control of the owner, they became abandoned personalty that could be taken up and used by the person first in the field. Popham v. Holloron, 84 M 442, 275 P 1099 (1929), distinguished in McGowan v. U.S., 206 F. Supp. 439 (D.C. Mont. 1962).

Interference With Prior Rights — Burden: Primary rights to the use of water in a stream are those of appropriators of its natural flow, and the burden is upon a subsequent storage claimant (in the instant case, defendant State Water Conservation Board, precursor to the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) or upon one who uses a watercourse as part of his distribution system of developed or alien waters to affirmatively disprove interference with prior rights in a suit to enjoin such interference. Allendale Irrigation Co. v. St. Water Conservation Bd., 113 M 436, 127 P2d 227 (1942).

Storage and Use of Floodwater or Wastewater: Under Art. III, sec. 15, 1889 Mont. Const., the sites for reservoirs for collecting and storing water constitute a public use intended to conserve rather than waste water so that the arid lands of the state may be made productive. The appropriation of water in a reservoir to conserve water flowing in an otherwise dry coulee, only at heavy rains or spring runoff, entitles the owner to fill the reservoir to its full capacity to the extent of his appropriation, only once a year. The state laws that apply to acquisition of running water apply to storage and use of floodwater or wastewater—first in time, first in right. Fed. Land Bank v. Morris, 112 M 445, 116 P2d 1007 (1941).

Adverse Use — Open and Notorious But Not Adverse: Although the defendant used water rightfully subject to the plaintiff's prior right, he failed to tell anyone of his adverse claim or show possession so as to give the plaintiff notice of his adverse claim. Use may be open and notorious yet still not adverse. Cook v. Hudson, 110 M 263, 103 P2d 137 (1940), distinguished and overruled in Grimsley v. Estate of Spencer, 206 M 184, 670 P2d 85 (1983).

Appropriation on Indian Lands:

Defendant's contention that an appropriation of a water right was made on Indian lands prior to opening for settlement and therefore initiated by trespass and hence void could not be sustained because the provision of the Crow Indian treaty of 1868 that white men should be excluded from Indian lands is directory and not mandatory. Whites could be excluded if inimical to Indian welfare, it being discretionary with those charged with protecting Indian rights to take action against whites invading without the consent of the tribe. The Indian land became public domain subject to squatter's rights after ratification of agreement for settlement in 1891. Cook v. Hudson, 110 M 263, 103 P2d 137 (1940), distinguished and overruled on other grounds in Grimsley v. Estate of Spencer, 206 M 184, 670 P2d 85 (1983).

By the treaty of May 7, 1868, between the United States and the Crow Indians, establishing the Crow Indian Reservation, the federal government impliedly reserved to itself the waters thereon for irrigation and other purposes for use by the Indians, hence they were not subject to appropriation by others. The right to use water appurtenant to lands on an Indian reservation and held by Indians under trust patents is property of the United States, and state courts are without jurisdiction to enter a decree affecting such right, but when an Indian becomes seized of a fee simple title after removal of a trust patent, the conveyance of land transfers the right to use the water appurtenant to the land. Anderson v. Spear-Morgan Livestock Co., 107 M 18, 79 P2d 667 (1938).

Water Right to Be Personal Property When Considered Independently of Land: While a water right partakes of the nature of real estate, it is not land in any sense, and when considered alone for the purpose of taxation and independently of the land to which it is appurtenant, it is personal property. Brady Irrigation Co. v. Teton County, 107 M 330, 85 P2d 350 (1938); Verwolf v. Low Line Irrigation Co., 70 M 570, 227 P 68 (1924).

Adverse Use — Permissive Use: The claim of adverse use of a water right cannot be initiated until the owner of the superior right is deprived of the benefit of its use in such a substantial manner as to notify him that his rights are being invaded; mere use of the water during the statutory period alone is not sufficient, but it must appear that during such entire period an action could have been maintained against the claimant by the party against whom it is made. Permissive use negates the possibility of adverse use. Irion v. Hyde, 107 M 84, 81 P2d 353 (1938).

Tributary of Stream: Evidence in a water right suit that water flowed in a creek only in times of flood and that except at such times, the water therein never reached the point where it joined another creek, supported a finding that the former was not a tributary of the latter. Anderson v. Spear-Morgan Livestock Co., 107 M 18, 79 P2d 667 (1938).

Right to Use Increased Supply: Where one claims to have increased the flow of water in a stream and therefore claims he is entitled to use such increase, he must show that the increase was occasioned through his exertions and not through any accessions to the stream brought about through the process of nature, as by percolating or seepage waters that would have found their way to the stream in any event. W. Side Ditch Co. v. Bennett, 106 M 422, 78 P2d 78 (1938).

"Watercourse" Defined:

A "watercourse", within the meaning of the water right laws, from which an appropriation for purposes of irrigation may be made, may consist of a well-defined channel into which water from a slough fed by irrigation of adjoining lands through seepage or through a ditch constructed by the owners of such lands for draining purposes finds its way, and which through years of so flowing has acquired a permanent character as the natural drainage of the particular watershed. W. Side Ditch Co. v. Bennett, 106 M 422, 78 P2d 78 (1938).

Where waters flowing in a channel with regularity from year to year were made to do so through the instrumentality of man and have through years of so flowing acquired a permanent character as the natural drainage of the watershed, or where they come from springs formed from seepage or percolation, from surface water collecting in a canyon, or from wells accidentally developed while drilling for oil, etc., they constitute a watercourse. Popham v. Holloron, 84 M 442, 275 P 1099 (1929), distinguished in McGowan v. U.S., 206 F. Supp. 439 (D.C. Mont. 1962).

Rules and Customs Prior to 1885:

Prior to the adoption of the first water right statutes in 1885, appropriations of water were made pursuant to the rules and customs of the early California settlers, and under them the essential elements of an appropriation made in 1871 were a completed ditch and the application of the water through it to a beneficial use. Missoula Light & Water Co. v. Hughes, 106 M 355, 77 P2d 1041 (1938).

The essential features of an appropriation of water made prior to L. 1885, p. 130, were a completed ditch and the application of water to a beneficial use. Maynard v. Watkins, 55 M 54, 173 P 551 (1918).

Appropriation Made on Public Domain by Settler: A settler on lands that were a part of the public domain could make a valid appropriation of water thereon. Galahan v. Lewis, 105 M 294, 72 P2d 1018 (1937).

Appropriator Not Owner of Water — Sale of Water: An appropriator of water does not become the owner of the water but only of the right to use it. He may not sell the water to another to be used by the purchaser when not in use by the appropriator. Galahan v. Lewis, 105 M 294, 72 P2d 1018 (1937).

Conveyance of Right as Appurtenance: When land is conveyed, including the appurtenances, any water rights theretofore enjoyed are transferred. When the grantor later purports to convey the water right only, the latter deed does not constitute severance of the water right, as it adds nothing to the conveyance theretofore made. Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936).

Prescription — Adverse Use — Burden of Proof: To establish acquisition of a water right by adverse use or prescription, the claimant has the burden of showing that his use of the water deprived the prior appropriator of water at times when the latter actually needed it. Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936).

Property Right — After Perfection: Where a water right has once been fully perfected, i.e., where there was a diversion of the water and its application to a beneficial use, it becomes a property right of which the owner may be divested only in some legal manner. Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936).

Rights of Licensee: Where one goes upon land of another with the latter's verbal consent for the purpose of making an appropriation of water, posts his notice of appropriation, diverts the water through the landowner's ditch, and applies it to a beneficial use on his own land, he becomes a licensee, not a trespasser, and revocation of a license to construct a ditch does not necessarily affect the licensee's right to the water carried by the ditch. Connolly v. Harrel, 102 M 295, 57 P2d 781 (1936).

Water Rights and Ditches Separate Rights: Water rights and ditch rights are separate and distinct property rights, i.e., one may own a water right without a ditch right or a ditch right without a water right. Connolly v. Harrel, 102 M 295, 57 P2d 781 (1936).

Adverse Use — Irrigation Company's Distribution: For more than 10 years before the commencement of an action an irrigation company asserted that the water right acquired by the plaintiff's deed was not superior to the water right acquired by a holder of the company's capital stock. Upon this theory the irrigation company made a pro rata distribution of available water to its shareholders and the plaintiff, the plaintiff accepting the water distribution with full knowledge of the irrigation company's position. The irrigation company's possession of the water was thereby open, notorious, continuous, exclusive, adverse, and hostile with respect to the plaintiff's claim of right. Verwolf v. Low Line Irrigation Co., 70 M 570, 227 P 68 (1924).

Adverse Use — Payment of Taxes on Land Not Required: One is not required to pay all the taxes for the period of prescription upon the land to which a water right is appurtenant in order to acquire title to a water right by adverse possession. Verwolf v. Low Line Irrigation Co., 70 M 570, 227 P 68 (1924).

Source of Right: An appropriator of water derives his right from the state and not from the national government, the use of waters flowing in natural streams in Montana being subject to state regulation and control. Mettler v. Ames Realty Co., 61 M 152, 201 P 702 (1921).

Land Qualifications Unnecessary for Appropriation: An appropriator of water need not be either an owner or in possession of land to make a valid appropriation for irrigation purposes. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Smith v. Denniff, 24 M 20, 60 P 398 (1900), distinguished in Dept. of State Lands v. Pettibone, 216 M 361, 702 P2d 948, 42 St. Rep. 869 (1985); Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900).

Method of Procedure: Sections 89-810 and 89-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), provide all the steps necessary to be taken by one seeking to make an appropriation of water, and one who proceeds under them, instead of under the rules and customs of the early settlers, has a completed appropriation when the work on his ditch or canal is finished and before the water is actually applied to its intended use. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912).

Public Service Corporation: A public service corporation, organized for the purpose of constructing an irrigation system and selling or renting water to reclaim arid lands, has a completed appropriation of water when its distributing system is finished and when the corporation is ready to deliver water to users upon demand and offers to do so. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912).

Statute to Apply Only to Public Lands: Sections 89-801 through 89-805, 89-807 through 89-828, and 89-839 through 89-844, R.C.M. 1947 (in part since repealed and in part contained in Title 85, ch. 2), apply only to appropriations made on the public lands of the United States or of the state and to such as are made by individuals who have riparian rights, either as owners of riparian lands or through grants from such owners. Prentice v. McKay, 38 M 114, 98 P 1081 (1909). See Alaska Juneau Gold Min. Co. v. Ebner Gold Min. Co., 239 F 638 (9th Cir. 1917).

Title Obtained by Appropriation: Title cannot be acquired to the corpus of waters flowing in a stream but only to the use thereof. Norman v. Corbley, 32 M 195, 79 P 1059 (1905).

Adverse Use — Contract to Use Water: A controversy between a mill and a mining company over water in a creek was settled by a contract in which the mining company had a right to a specified amount plus a further amount that was over and above that necessary for the mill. The mill went out of business, and the mining company used all the water from the creek. Because the mining company had a right under the contract to the water not used by the mill, it could not be said that the mining company was acting adversely with respect to the mill's water right. Smith v. Hope, 18 M 432, 45 P 632 (1882).

APPROPRIATION FOR USEFUL PURPOSE — ABANDONMENT

Forty Years of Nonuse as Raising Rebuttable Presumption of Intent to Abandon: In litigation to establish plaintiff's and defendant's respective priorities to water appropriated from Big Coulee Creek, the evidence showed that neither had used previously appropriated water for a period of at least 40 years. Thus, the District Court did not err in holding that under section 89-802, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the appropriation rights of both parties had been abandoned for lack of use of the water. While abandonment of a water right is a question of fact, nonuse for a period of at least 40 years raises, in effect, a rebuttable presumption of abandonment. A claim that the predecessors of the parties could not afford to use the water by irrigating their land did not excuse the failure to use the water or rebut the presumption of abandonment since economics could excuse nearly every otherwise abandoned water right. 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215, 40 St. Rep. 981 (1983), followed in In re Adjudication of Clark Fork River Drainage, 254 M 11, 833 P2d 1120, 49 St. Rep. 591 (1992), in which nonuse for 23-plus years was sufficient to constitute a presumption of abandonment despite the fact that the water right was carried as an asset on the county's books during the period of nonuse, and In re Adjudication of Existing Rights to Use of All Water, Both Surface & Underground, Within Clark Fork River Drainage Above Blackfoot River, 274 M 340, 908 P2d 1353, 52 St. Rep. 1264 (1995), in which continuous nonuse of water for a mining claim for over 50 years raised a rebuttable presumption of abandonment, despite claimant's contention that the cyclical nature of the mining industry and its uncertain economics were reason enough to explain the long period of nonuse. See also Axtell v. M.S. Consulting, 1998 MT 64, 288 M 150, 955 P2d 1362, 55 St. Rep. 276 (1998).

Abandonment by Nonuse: Under section 89-802, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), 75 years of nonuse is sufficient to provide "clear evidence" of abandonment of the unused portion of a water right. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980).

Intent to Abandon — Nonuse of Ditch: Mere nonuse of a ditch appurtenant to a water right is not sufficient to establish abandonment. There must be concurrent intent to abandon. Shammel v. Vogl, 144 M 354, 396 P2d 103 (1964), followed in Rieman v. Anderson, 282 M 139, 935 P2d 1122, 54 St. Rep. 286 (1997).

Beneficial Use — Measurement of Water:

For many years the courts in water right decrees have followed the custom of expressing water rights in terms of flow per unit of time without stating during how many hours or days the water could be taken or defining the volume of water which could be used. This may not be taken as an adjudication that appropriations were of an absolutely uninterrupted flow, thereby removing the established limitation of the appropriator's right to water actually taken and beneficially applied. Nor should this fact be interpreted as a right to expand appropriations to the detriment of subsequent appropriators. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

In the absence of a statute regulating the amount of water reasonably necessary for irrigation, the rule has generally been observed by the courts to allow 1 inch an acre in fixing the amount required for economical use, unless the evidence discloses that a greater or lesser amount is required. Further, the system of irrigation in common use in the locality, if reasonable and proper under existing conditions, is to be taken as the standard. But an appropriator cannot be compelled to divert the water according to the most scientific method known. Worden v. Alexander, 108 M 208, 90 P2d 160 (1939).

The rights of appropriators of water may not be measured entirely by what they claimed in their notices of appropriation but must be measured by their beneficial use thereof over reasonable periods. Consideration must be given to the extent and manner of their use, the character of the land upon which used, and the general necessities of the case, as well as whether streams were furnished by usual rains or snows, extraordinary rain or snowfall, or by springs or seepage. Irion v. Hyde, 107 M 84, 81 P2d 353 (1938), followed in 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215, 40 St. Rep. 981 (1983).

Neither the appropriator of water nor one to whom a right is decreed owns the corpus of any part of the flow of a stream. He is entitled only to the beneficial use of the amount of water called for by his appropriation or the decree when he has need therefor, provided his distributing system has a sufficient capacity to carry that amount; if incapable of carrying that amount, his right is measured by the capacity of his system of distribution regardless of his needs. Tucker v. Missoula Light & Ry., 77 M 91, 250 P 11 (1926).

"Abandonment" Defined: Before it may be said that the owner of a water right has abandoned it, there must be the necessary concurrence of act and intent to abandon. He must have relinquished it because he no longer desired to possess it. Irion v. Hyde, 107 M 84, 81 P2d 353 (1938).

Beneficial Use — Swimming Pool or Fishpond: Diversion of water to maintain a swimming pool or fishpond may have been for a beneficial use and hence the basis of a valid appropriation. Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936).

Abandonment — Essential Elements: Abandonment of a water right is a voluntary act, and to constitute it there must be a concurrence of act and intent. Neither the relinquishment of possession or the intent not to resume it for a beneficial use is alone sufficient to bring about its abandonment. Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936); Thomas v. Ball, 66 M 161, 213 P 597 (1923); Tucker v. Jones, 8 M 225, 19 P 571 (1888).

Abandonment — Trespassers: Plaintiff's predecessors in interest for 13 years used a water right acquired by a desert land entryman after the entry had been canceled and thus were trespassers upon the public domain. That fact did not deprive the plaintiff from resuming the use of the water upon acquiring possession, unaffected by any junior rights which came into being in the meantime, since there is no law enforcing abandonment of a vested water right as a penalty for exercising it as a trespasser. Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936).

Abandonment — Resumption: Where use of water is abandoned and resumed, use vests from the date of resumption. Galiger v. McNulty, 80 M 339, 260 P 401 (1927); O'Shea v. Doty, 68 M 316, 218 P 658 (1923).

Abandonment — Burden of Proof — Nonuse: One who claims an abandonment of a water right has the burden of proving it by a preponderance of clear and definite evidence. Where the only evidence was nonuse for 7 years, whereupon its use was resumed by the owner and the water right later sold to another, the resumption and sale were evidence that abandonment was not intended. Thomas v. Ball, 66 M 161, 213 P 597 (1923).

Beneficial Use — Irrigation:

Respecting the use of water for purposes of irrigation, the ultimate question in every case is how much will supply the actual needs of the prior claimant under existing conditions. Conrow v. Huffine, 48 M 437, 138 P 1094 (1914).

Where a successor in interest of an appropriator of water greatly increased the amount of grass for pasture by irrigation, such use of the water was a useful and beneficial one within the meaning of this section. Sayre v. Johnson, 33 M 15, 81 P 389 (1905).

Beneficial Use — Immediate Use Unnecessary: While the appropriation must be for some useful or beneficial purposes, the use to which the water is to be applied need not be immediate but may be prospective or contemplated. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Smith v. Duff, 39 M 382, 102 P 984 (1909); Miles v. Butte Elec. & Power Co., 32 M 56, 79 P 549 (1905); Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900).

Beneficial Use — Intent of Claimant:

This section requires that, at the time of taking the initial steps, the claimant must have an intention to apply the water to a useful or beneficial purpose. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Smith v. Duff, 39 M 382, 102 P 984 (1909); Miles v. Butte Elec. & Power Co., 32 M 56, 79 P 549 (1905); Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900); Power v. Switzer, 21 M 523, 55 P 32 (1898).

As every appropriation must be made for a beneficial or useful purpose, it becomes the duty of the courts to try the question of the claimant's intent by his acts and the circumstances surrounding his possession of the water, its actual or contemplated use, and the purposes thereof. Smith v. Duff, 39 M 382, 102 P 984 (1909); Miles v. Butte Elec. & Power Co., 32 M 56, 79 P 549 (1905); Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900).

Unused Excess Not Appropriated: The diversion of water for domestic purposes in excess of what is required and allowing such excess to overflow lands without any intention of irrigating and without any intention of using such excess for any useful purpose does not constitute an appropriation of the excess. Power v. Switzer, 21 M 523, 55 P 32 (1898).

Abandonment of Ditch — No Effect on Water Right: An appropriation was made from a creek, turned into a ditch, and eventually used at placer mines. Years later the appropriator abandoned the ditch, returned the water to the creek, and recaptured it for irrigation use. The abandonment of the ditch was not an abandonment of the entire water right. Meagher v. Hardenbrook, 11 M 385, 28 P 451 (1891).

Abandonment — Insufficient Supply: Defendant's appropriation for placer mining was not abandoned by his failure to use the appropriation for 5 years, as there was not enough water to work the mines during those years. McCauley v. McKeig, 8 M 389, 21 P 22 (1889).

CHANGE OF POINT OF DIVERSION — CHANGE OF USE

Change in Place of Diversion — Water Exchange Prevented: The defendants, upstream subsequent appropriators with respect to the plaintiff, diverted all the waters of a creek. Further downstream but still above the plaintiff, the defendants replenished the creek with water from a canal. The plaintiff could not change his diversion to a point upstream of the defendants because of the injury resulting to the defendants. Thompson v. Harvey, 164 M 133, 519 P2d 963 (1974).

Change in Use — Appurtenant to Land:

After purchasing an adjoining tract of land with an appurtenant water right, a farmer proceeded to irrigate all of his land with the newly purchased water right. This change in use resulted in the water right becoming appurtenant to all of the land. Spaeth v. Emmett, 142 M 231, 383 P2d 812 (1963).

Neither a change in the place of diversion of water nor a change in its use from mining to agriculture, or vice versa, affects its appropriation. Thomas v. Ball, 66 M 161, 213 P 597 (1923). See also Galiger v. McNulty, 80 M 339, 260 P 401 (1927); Whitcomb v. Murphy, 94 M 562, 23 P2d 980 (1933); Thrasher v. Mannix & Wilson, 95 M 273, 26 P2d 370 (1933); Loyning v. Rankin, 118 M 235, 165 P2d 1006 (1946).

Actual diversion of water and its beneficial use existing, prospective, or in contemplation constitute an appropriation, which is not affected by a change in the point of diversion or place of use. Wheat v. Cameron, 64 M 494, 210 P 761 (1922).

Under section 89-803, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the location of a flume maintained over the land of another, as well as the use of the water flowing through it, may be changed, provided the change adds no new burdens to the servient estate or causes additional damage thereto. Pioneer Min. Co. v. Bannack Gold Min. Co., 60 M 254, 198 P 748 (1921).

Burden of Proof of Injury:

For a period of more than 50 years the defendant accumulated water rights and used them wherever and whenever needed to irrigate 34,000 acres of land. The burden was on the plaintiffs to show that they had been injured or prejudiced by such changing use. Forrester v. Rock Island Oil & Ref. Co., 133 M 333, 323 P2d 597 (1958).

The party who claims to have been injured by another's change in place of diversion of water right has the burden of alleging and proving the injury. Thrasher v. Mannix & Wilson, 95 M 273, 26 P2d 370 (1933); Lokowich v. Helena, 46 M 575, 129 P 1063 (1913); Hansen v. Larsen, 44 M 350, 120 P 229 (1911).

Change in Place of Use — Decree Not Detailed:

A water rights decree failed to describe the particular acreage to be irrigated and expressed the water rights in terms of flow per unit of time without stating during how many such units of time water could be taken. Adjudicated owners could not expand the use of water to additional lands or in length of time to the injury of subsequent appropriators. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940), followed in Cate v. Hargrave, 209 M 265, 680 P2d 952, 41 St. Rep. 697 (1984).

The conclusiveness of a judgment as res judicata in a water right suit between the same parties or their successors in interest in a prior action is not impaired by the alleged fact that in authorizing a change of place of use or point of diversion, the judgment violated the provisions of section 89-803, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Brennan v. Jones, 101 M 550, 55 P2d 697 (1936).

Extent of Use in Terms of Flow Per Unit of Time: The fact that for many years the courts in water right decrees have followed the custom of expressing water rights in terms of flow per unit of time without stating during how many hours or days the water could be taken or defining the volume of water which could be used may not be taken as an adjudication that appropriations were of an absolutely uninterrupted flow, thereby removing the established limitation of the appropriator's right to water actually taken and beneficially applied, or to expand appropriations to the detriment of subsequent appropriators. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

Change of Use — Sale: Appropriations not originally made for the purpose of sale may have their use changed to that purpose if subsequent appropriators are not thereby injured. Sherlock v. Greaves, 106 M 206, 76 P2d 87 (1938).

Change in Use — Outside of Watershed: Pursuant to an earlier water rights decree, the defendant irrigated land outside the watershed of the source. When the defendant brought additional lands outside the watershed under irrigation with this water right, the plaintiffs could not claim they were injured by this change in use. Their lands were either within the watershed of the source or higher than the defendant's irrigated land and would not benefit from percolating waters from his land. Thrasher v. Mannix & Wilson, 95 M 273, 26 P2d 370 (1933).

Change in Use — Sale of Water Not in Use: An appropriator of a water right for placer mining purposes attempted to convey to another a right to use the waters when not being used for mining. Although an appropriator may change the use of his appropriation, he may not sell it in the interim when the water is not being used. Galiger v. McNulty, 80 M 339, 260 P 401 (1927); Creek v. Bozeman Water Works Co., 15 M 121, 38 P 459 (1894).

Use of Any of Several Ditches: Where an owner of a water right had several ditches for the irrigation of his lands, he had a right to use any of them at which he had a headgate so long as other users were not injured thereby. Tucker v. Missoula Light & Ry., 77 M 91, 250 P 11 (1926).

Change in Place of Diversion or Use — Who May Complain: Only a subsequent appropriator being injured may complain that a prior appropriator's change in place of diversion or use is affecting subsequent rights. Carlson v. Helena, 43 M 1, 114 P 110 (1911).

Change in Place of Diversion and Use — Placer Mining: The successors of an appropriation of water appropriated for placer mining purposes cannot so change its use as to deprive lower appropriators of their rights, already acquired, in the use of the water for irrigating purposes. Head v. Hale, 38 M 302, 100 P 222 (1909).

Change in Place of Use — Deprivation of Subsequent Right: After the defendant used his water right for placer mining purposes the water was turned into a gulch, whereupon the plaintiff appropriated it for irrigation purposes. The defendant then changed the place of use of his water right, resulting in the water no longer being returned to the gulch. Such change in use was unlawful as it absolutely deprived the plaintiff of his subsequent right. Gassert v. Noyes, 18 M 216, 44 P 959 (1896).

Change in Use — Mining to Irrigation: A water right was abandoned for mining purposes, the water returned to its original channel, and then recaptured by the original owner to be used for irrigation purposes. This change in use was lawful. Meagher v. Hardenbrook, 11 M 385, 28 P 451 (1891).

CHANNELING APPROPRIATED WATER TO ANOTHER STREAM — RECLAIMING WATER

Canal Water Turned Into Slough — Amount That May Be Reclaimed: The defendant permitted waters from a canal and spring to run in a slough and then used the slough as a waterway. The defendant could reclaim from the slough only that amount of water equal to what he put in. Meine v. Ferris, 126 M 210, 247 P2d 195 (1952).

Seepage Water Potholed and Recaptured: Since seepage water which has its rise along the bed of a stream and forms a natural accretion thereto belongs to the stream as a part of its source of supply, the same as do feeder springs, and an appropriator of water on such stream has the right to all such tributary flow even as against the owner of the land, the conducting of water from upper reaches of a tributary to "potholes" and "reservoirs" and then capturing the seepage therefrom in ditches is insufficient proof of creating a new supply for an additional water right. Woodward v. Perkins, 116 M 46, 147 P2d 1016 (1944), distinguished in Forrester v. Rock Island Oil & Ref. Co., 133 M 333, 323 P2d 597 (1958).

Percolation From Irrigation on Adjacent Lands: While under section 89-804, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), one may employ the natural channel of a stream for the conveyance of water which he has developed and reclaim it if the rights of prior appropriators are not thereby diminished in quantity or deteriorated in quality, the rule has no application where an increase in the flow of the stream results solely by percolation from irrigation on adjacent lands. West Side Ditch Co. v. Bennett, 106 M 422, 78 P2d 78 (1938); State ex rel. Mungas v. District Court, 102 M 533, 59 P2d 71 (1936); Rock Creek Ditch & Flume Co. v. Miller, 93 M 248, 17 P2d 1074, 89 ALR 200 (1933); Beaverhead Canal Co. v. Dillon Elec. Power & Light Co., 34 M 135, 85 P 880 (1906).

Deterioration in Quality Prohibited: While section 89-804, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorizes an appropriator to turn water into the channel of a stream other than the one from which he appropriates, he may do so only if the waters in the stream the channel of which he thus uses are not deteriorated in quality to the detriment of a prior appropriator thereof. Missoula Pub. Serv. Co. v. Bitter Root Irrigation District, 80 M 64, 257 P 1038 (1927).

Developed Water Supply — Burden of Proof as to Amount: One who claims to have developed a water supply has the burden of proving the amount developed, especially when it is mingled with a water supply to which another is entitled. Spaulding v. Stone, 46 M 483, 129 P 327 (1912); Smith v. Duff, 39 M 382, 102 P 984 (1909).

Drainage Ditch — Interception of Stream's Source: In order to catch seepage water from irrigated land, the defendant constructed a drainage ditch that paralleled and intersected a stream. Because the ditch intercepted seepage water that was a source of supply for the stream, the defendant did not develop a new water supply to which he was entitled. Spaulding v. Stone, 46 M 483, 129 P 327 (1912).

FIRST IN TIME, FIRST IN RIGHT

Priority of Senior Main Stem Water Rights Over Junior Tributary Water Rights: Appellant owns water rights in Clear Creek dating to 1910. Petitioners have water rights in Rock Creek dating to 1896. Clear Creek is a tributary of Rock Creek. In 1970, appellant obtained a court order directing the Rock Creek Water Commissioner to "carry out" the Clear Creek water rights of appellant. Following the District Court order, the Water Commissioner honored in full the requests of appellant for water without regard to any priority in the relationship of the creeks' water rights. As a result, at times of water shortage, senior Rock Creek decreed waters are cut off. In 1977, petitioners filed this action to rescind the 1970 order and to direct the Water Commissioner to subject the Clear Creek water rights to the priorities of Rock Creek water rights. The District Court ruled that the 1970 court order, applied by the Water Commissioner to fulfill junior appropriations ahead of prior decreed rights, was improper. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's order and further stated that the order did not violate due process. The Supreme Court reasoned that the only rights affected by the District Court order were the rights of the parties before the court. Granite Ditch Co. v. Anderson, 204 M 10, 662 P2d 1312, 40 St. Rep. 630 (1983).

Prior Rights: Where plaintiff had over the years constructed a series of dikes in order to spread over his land the water which would flow down a dry gully after the melting of snow or a heavy rainfall, he had a prior right to the extent that his project was finished. He who first diverts the water to a beneficial use has the prior right thereto where the right is based upon the custom and practice of the early settlers and where there was no compliance with the statutes. Midkiff v. Kincheloe, 127 M 324, 263 P2d 976 (1953). (See, however, the dissenting opinion in the case in which it was contended that the waters were floodwaters and wastewaters which the defendant had a right to impound in a stock reservoir, 127 M 324, 263 P2d 976 (1953).)

Temporary Suspension of Prior Right: When the one holding the prior right does not need the water, such prior right is temporarily suspended and the next right in the order of priority may use the water until such time as the prior appropriator's needs justify his demanding that the junior appropriator give way to his superior claim. Cook v. Hudson, 110 M 263, 103 P2d 137 (1940), distinguished and overruled on other grounds in Grimsley v. Estate of Spencer, 206 M 184, 670 P2d 85 (1983).

Contractual Relation or Privity: The doctrine that where the possessor of a water right claims the right as of the date on which it was initiated by another person, he must show some contractual relation or privity between himself and such other person was not modified to the extent of holding that the possessor of the land may be presumed to be the owner of the right by the decision in Wills v. Morris, 100 M 514, 50 P2d 862 (1935). Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936).

Abandonment — Resumption: Where use of water is abandoned and resumed, use vests from the date of resumption. Galiger v. McNulty, 80 M 339, 260 P 401 (1927); O'Shea v. Doty, 68 M 316, 218 P 658 (1923).

Priority of Appropriation: Priority of appropriation of water confers superiority of right, without reference to the character of the use, whether natural or artificial. Mettler v. Ames Realty Co., 61 M 152, 201 P 702 (1921); Meine v. Ferris, 126 M 210, 247 P2d 195 (1952).

APPROPRIATION BY UNITED STATES

Method of Procedure: The United States must proceed, in making appropriations of water from nonnavigable streams of this state, as a corporation or individual. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912). See U.S. v. Burley, 172 F 615 (9th Cir. 1909); Burley v. U.S., 179 F 1 (9th Cir. 1910). See also Mettler v. Ames Realty Co., 61 M 152, 201 P 702 (1921).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER SECTION 89-810, R.C.M. 1947
NOTICE OF APPROPRIATION

Insufficient Notice of Appropriation Not Prima Facie Evidence:
Deeds do not qualify as notices of appropriation under section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Even if deeds were to be considered as notices, the deeds in question are fatally defective and inadmissible as evidence of an appropriation because they were executed with unsworn acknowledgments, rather than with verified affidavits as required by section 89-810. The Supreme Court reaffirmed that it has strictly construed the provisions of section 89-814, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and that any nonconformance with section 89-810 renders the notice of appropriation inadmissible as evidence. Olsen v. McQueary, 212 M 173, 687 P2d 712, 41 St. Rep. 1669 (1984).

In enacting section 89-814, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the Legislature established a reward for those parties who comply with section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), by considering a notice of appropriation as prima facie evidence of a claimed water right. However, the former section is to be construed strictly. If the notice does not comply with section 89-810 it is of no evidentiary value. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980). See also Shammel v. Vogl, 144 M 354, 396 P2d 103 (1964); Galahan v. Lewis, 105 M 294, 72 P2d 1018 (1937); Peck v. Simon, 101 M 12, 52 P2d 164 (1935).

Extent of Right Measured by Beneficial Use: The rights of the parties are not to be measured entirely by what they claimed in their appropriation notices. They are to be measured by their beneficial use over a reasonable period of time. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980); Irion v. Hyde 107 M 84, 81 P2d 353 (1938).

Defective Notice of Appropriation: Where a notice of appropriation was dated 1886, referred to acts taking place in 1886, and was recorded in 1886, but the notary's certificate was dated 1885, it is obvious from the instrument itself that the date in the notary's certificate was a clerical error, and the notice may be received as prima facie evidence of a right dating from 1886. Shammel v. Vogl, 144 M 354, 396 P2d 103 (1964).

Rebuttal of Prima Facie Evidence: A notice of appropriation meeting the requirements of section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and filed in 1886 was admissible in evidence and entitled to be treated as prima facie evidence under section 89-814, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), but was not sufficient in itself to establish a water right from that date when its efficacy was destroyed by the claimant's own statement that he first used the water in 1961. Shammel v. Vogl, 144 M 354, 396 P2d 103 (1964).

Insufficient Notice: When a water rights notice was made 16 years before the enactment of section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), when the notice stated a point of diversion different from that claimed by the plaintiff and when it failed to state where or when the water was to be used, the notice was insufficient to establish a water right. Stearns v. Benedick, 126 M 272, 247 P2d 656 (1952).

Date of Appropriation Where Statute Not Complied With: When a ditch was not constructed within a reasonable time after the date of the notice of appropriation, the date of appropriation would not relate back to the date of the notice but would date from the time the water was actually used. Clausen v. Armington, 123 M 1, 212 P2d 440 (1949).

Record of Notice — Prima Facie Evidence: The record of notice of appropriation of water conforming to the provisions of section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and filed as provided therein is prima facie evidence of its contents. Anderson v. Spear-Morgan Livestock Co., 107 M 18, 79 P2d 667 (1938). See Vidal v. Kensler, 100 M 592, 51 P2d 235 (1935).

Compliance With Statute Not Required for Valid Appropriation: A valid appropriation of water may be acquired even where there has been no compliance with the statute regulating appropriations by record, if the water has actually been diverted and applied to a beneficial use.

Compliance with section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is important only with regard to the doctrine of "relation back". Vidal v. Kensler, 100 M 592, 51 P2d 235 (1935). See also Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980); Clausen v. Armington, 123 M 1, 212 P2d 440 (1949); Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897).

Fixing Date in Decree: There is no valid objection to the fixing of an arbitrary date of appropriation in a decree unless another appropriator can show that his right precedes the date fixed, instead of being subsequent to it as shown by the decree. Vidal v. Kensler, 100 M 592, 51 P2d 235 (1935), followed in 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215, 40 St. Rep. 981 (1983).

Lack of Recorded Notice — Oral Testimony: To sustain a water right based on oral testimony, as against a recorded notice, the testimony should be clear, unambiguous, and convincing. Vidal v. Kensler, 100 M 592, 51 P2d 235 (1935).

Date of Appropriation When Notice Defective: Appropriators of water were denied the right to relate back the life of their appropriation to the date of posting their notice of appropriation because their recorded notice was rendered ineffective by a fatally defective verification. Since the evidence showed that they put water on their land for a beneficial purpose on or about a certain time, their right bore the date as of such time. Musselshell Valley Farming & Livestock Co. v. Cooley, 86 M 276, 283 P 213 (1929).

Verification of Notice:

A water right, when acquired by appropriation, amounts to a grant by the United States or the state, and the appropriator is in position of a grantee. The affidavit required by statute to be attached to a notice of appropriation serves the same purpose as and is of equal dignity with an acknowledgment. Where an appropriation was made by a firm composed of two brothers and the affidavit accompanying the notice of appropriation was verified by one of them, a grantee, as notary public, the verification was void and the notice was not entitled to record. Musselshell Valley Farming & Livestock Co. v. Cooley, 86 M 276, 283 P 213 (1929).

A notice of location of a water right is fatally defective unless it is verified in conformity with this section. Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897).

Essentials to Complete Appropriation Under Old Rule Prior to Act of 1885: The essential features of an appropriation of water made prior to L. 1885, p. 130, were a completed ditch and the application of water to a beneficial use. Maynard v. Watkins, 55 M 54, 173 P 551 (1918).

Essentials to Complete Appropriation by Statutory Method: To secure a completed appropriation of water under section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), notice must be posted and filed as herein required; and under section 89-811, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), work must be commenced within 40 days after the notice is posted, and it must be prosecuted with reasonable diligence and be actually completed. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912).

Two Methods of Appropriating Water: Since 1885, two distinct methods of appropriating water are prescribed: one, by complying with the rules and customs of the early settlers; the other, by complying with the terms of the statute. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912).

Delay in Recording Appropriation: Where an appropriation of the waters of a stream for irrigating purposes was actually made by the plaintiff in the year 1880 and the water used continuously ever since but no record of the appropriation was made until 1891, such water right is superior to the one acquired and recorded by the defendant in 1889. Salazar v. Smart, 12 M 395, 30 P 676 (1892).

DILIGENCE IN APPROPRIATING

Lack of Reasonable Diligence Shown in Three-Year and Three-Month Delay in Diversion: In litigation between the plaintiff and defendant to establish their relative rights to appropriated water, the evidence showed that the defendant's predecessor in interest filed a notice of appropriation for 30 cfs of water on May 30, 1973, but failed to divert the water to a sprinkler irrigation system until 3 years and 3 months later. The District Court did not err in holding that the defendant's predecessor failed to exercise reasonable diligence in diversion of the water. Under the rationale of Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation v. Intake Water Co., 171 M 416, 558 P2d 1110 (1976), the defendant was required to show there had been an ongoing effort to divert the water. The lack of parts for the sprinkler system notwithstanding, the record showed no ongoing effort to proceed to completion of the sprinkler system and the diversion. 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215, 40 St. Rep. 981 (1983), followed in In re Adjudication of Musselshell River Rights, 255 M 43, 840 P2d 577, 49 St. Rep. 866 (1992).

Diligence in Appropriating Following Notice of Appropriation Under Former Law: The requirement found in section 89-811, R.C.M. 1947, repealed in 1973, that the claimant within 40 days "proceed to prosecute the excavation or construction . . . with reasonable diligence" is not confined to the commencement of actual onsite work, but it requires steady ongoing effort in good faith to prosecute the construction of the project. Diligence is a question of fact to be determined on a case-by-case basis. In this case, making surveys and geologic investigations, completing plans, entering into cooperative agreements, soil testing, core drilling, land and easement acquisition, obtaining financing, and entering into a contract for construction were sufficient. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980). See also Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation v. Intake Water Co., 171 M 416, 558 P2d 1110 (1976).

Date of Appropriation Where Statute Is Not Complied With: When a ditch was not constructed within a reasonable time after the date of notice of an appropriation, the date of appropriation would not relate back to the date of the notice but rather would date from the time the water was actually used. Clausen v. Armington, 123 M 1, 212 P2d 440 (1949).

Completion of Appropriation: The steps necessary to be taken to make a completed appropriation of water are: posting notice, filing it with the County Clerk, commencing construction of a ditch within 40 days after posting notice, prosecuting such work with reasonable diligence, and actual completion of the work of construction. Anderson v. Spear-Morgan Livestock Co., 107 M 18, 79 P2d 667 (1938).

Completion of Ditch — Reasonable Diligence: An appropriator of water filed a proper notice of appropriation on November 20, 1894, and shortly thereafter commenced construction of a ditch but had to suspend operations because of freezing weather. He did not work continuously on the ditch during the year 1895. Irrigation from the ditch began in the spring of 1896. In view of the length and size of the ditch, a finding that he did not proceed with reasonable diligence was unwarranted. Anderson v. Spear-Morgan Livestock Co., 107 M 18, 79 P2d 667 (1938).

EFFECT OF FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH STATUTORY LAW

Date of Appropriation Where Statute Is Not Complied With:

When a ditch was not constructed within a reasonable time after the date of notice of an appropriation, the date of appropriation would not relate back to the date of the notice but rather would date from the time the water was actually used. Clausen v. Armington, 123 M 1, 212 P2d 440 (1949).

A prior appropriator may acquire a valid water right by a completed ditch, actual diversion of the water, and its application to a beneficial use without complying with the statute. This appropriation is good against everyone except an appropriator who complies with the appropriation statute before the first claimant has applied the water to a beneficial use. Vidal v. Kensler, 100 M 592, 51 P2d 235 (1935). See also Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980); Clausen v. Armington, 123 M 1, 212 P2d 440 (1949); Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897).

Appropriators of water were denied the right to relate back the life of their appropriation to the date of posting their notice of appropriation because their recorded notice was rendered ineffective by a fatally defective verification. Since the evidence showed that they put water on their land for a beneficial purpose on or about a certain time, their right bore the date as of such time. Musselshell Valley Farming & Livestock Co. v. Cooley, 86 M 276, 283 P 213 (1929).

Of two claimants of water, neither of whom had complied with the statute, he who first completes his ditch and puts it to a beneficial use has the prior right, although he began to build his ditch after the ditch of the other claimant had been commenced. Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897).

Delay in Recording Notice: Notices of appropriation of water not recorded within the time provided in the saving clause found in the original recording act (L. 1885, p. 131), while prima facie evidence of the extent of the rights where the statute was complied with, are of no evidentiary value in proving the amount and date of an appropriation. Galahan v. Lewis, 105 M 294, 72 P2d 1018 (1937).

Doctrine of "Relation Back":

Before the doctrine of relation applies, a completed appropriation must have been effected. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912).

One who complies with the statutes regulating the appropriation of water acquires a right which relates back to the date of the posting of his notice of location. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897).

Under the doctrine of "relation back", as between two persons digging ditches at the same time and prosecuting work thereon with reasonable diligence to completion, the one who first began work had the prior right, even though the other had completed his first. Wright v. Cruse, 37 M 177, 95 P 370 (1908); but see Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897).

Purpose of Act: The purpose and object of the Legislature was merely to define the conditions upon which the appropriator of water could have the advantage of the doctrine of relation back. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897).

"Appropriator": The word "appropriator" is not susceptible of any greater or narrower force than the word "claimant", as used in the California Civil Code relating to water rights. Therefore, no distinction can be drawn between the California Water Right Act and that of Montana. Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897).

RECORD OF DECLARATION

Delay in Recording Appropriation: Where an appropriation of the waters of a stream for irrigating purposes was actually made by the plaintiff in the year 1880 and the water used continuously ever since but no record of the appropriation was made until 1891, plaintiff's water right is superior to one acquired and recorded by the defendant in 1889. Salazar v. Smart, 12 M 395, 30 P 676 (1892).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER SECTION 89-814, R.C.M. 1947
RECORD PRIMA FACIE EVIDENCE

Insufficient Notice of Appropriation Not Prima Facie Evidence:

Deeds do not qualify as notices of appropriation under section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Even if deeds were to be considered as notices, the deeds in question are fatally defective and inadmissible as evidence of an appropriation because they were executed with unsworn acknowledgments, rather than with verified affidavits as required by section 89-810. The Supreme Court reaffirmed that it has strictly construed the provisions of section 89-814, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and that any nonconformance with section 89-810 renders the notice of appropriation inadmissible as evidence. Olsen v. McQueary, 212 M 173, 687 P2d 712, 41 St. Rep. 1669 (1984).

In enacting section 89-814, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the Legislature established a reward for those parties who comply with section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), by considering a notice of appropriation as prima facie evidence of a claimed water right. However, 89-814 is to be construed strictly. If the notice does not comply with section 89-810, it is of no evidentiary value. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980). See also Shammel v. Vogl, 144 M 354, 396 P2d 103 (1964); Galahan v. Lewis, 105 M 294, 72 P2d 1018 (1937); Peck v. Simon, 101 M 12, 52 P2d 164 (1935).

Additional Burden of Proof Beyond Prima Facie Showing: The defendant's introduction into evidence of three notices of appropriation established a prima facie case but did not completely discharge his burden of proof. The defendant still had the burden of showing that all water claimed had been put to a beneficial use within a reasonable period of time. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980).

Contents of Record: The record of notice of appropriation of water conforming to the provisions of section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and filed as provided in that section, is prima facie evidence of its contents. Anderson v. Spear-Morgan Livestock Co., 107 M 18, 79 P2d 667 (1938); Wills v. Morris, 100 M 514, 50 P2d 862 (1935).

RIGHTS SETTLED IN ONE ACTION

Sufficiency of Decree: A water rights decree entered by the District Court was not insufficient because it failed to specify the exact acreage to which the water rights were appurtenant, the seasonal and hourly limitations on the water rights, and the exact points of diversion. Designation of the owners of the water rights, their priority dates, the amount of the awards in miner's inches, and the source of the water was sufficient. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980).

Quieting Title: An action under Montana law to determine relative rights and priorities of parties claiming interests in waters of a stream, while in personam, is in effect one to quiet title to real property. Sain v. Mont. Power Co., 84 F2d 126 (9th Cir. 1936).

Appeal Lying From Part of Judgment: Where two or more parties are awarded a water right under the terms of the decree, each of them recovers a judgment against the other or others; such a judgment is divisible into parts, and therefore an appeal lies from a part thereof. Wills v. Morris, 100 M 504, 50 P2d 858 (1935).

Damages for Wrongful Diversion of Water:

Where several parties have diverted water so as to injure the crops of another, they cannot be held jointly liable for the acts of each other nor can they be sued in one action for the entire damage, with or without an apportionment of the damage. Howell v. Bent, 48 M 268, 137 P 49 (1913).

Section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), does not apply to an action at law for damages for the wrongful diversion of water, where there is no allegation in the complaint that would authorize the court to grant equitable relief and there is no evidence to show that the plaintiff is entitled to such relief. Miles v. Du Bey, 15 M 340, 39 P 313 (1895). See Howell v. Bent, 48 M 268, 137 P 49 (1913).

Rights of Parties Defendant:

The first provision of section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is permissive only. Thus, there was no presumption that the respective interests of joint owners in an undivided water right had been adjudicated among themselves in a suit in which their predecessors were codefendants, in the absence of a showing to that effect upon the face of the decree or the judgment roll. Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

The Legislature, in enacting section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not state that it intended to compel parties, made defendants to a water right suit pursuant to its provisions, to litigate their respective titles as between themselves. Further, it is doubtful that the Legislature has the power to coerce them to do so. Sloan v. Byers, 37 M 503, 97 P 855 (1908). See Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

Equitable Actions: Section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), contemplates equitable actions only, in which relative priorities and conflicting rights of all parties may be settled and where the damages claimed are a mere incident. Howell v. Bent, 48 M 268, 137 P 49 (1913); Miles v. Du Bey, 15 M 340, 39 P 313 (1895).

Pleadings:

The District Court may settle the relative priorities and rights of all the parties to a water right suit in one judgment only when pleadings have been framed so as to justify such settlement. Sloan v. Byers, 37 M 503, 97 P 855 (1908), distinguished and followed in Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

The provision of section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is permissive and not mandatory. Sloan v. Byers, 37 M 503, 97 P 855 (1908), distinguished and followed in Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

All Parties Antagonists: In an action to settle the relative priorities and rights of the parties to the use of the waters of a stream, every party to the suit is an antagonist of every other party. McNinch v. Crawford, 30 M 297, 76 P 698 (1904). See Sloan v. Byers, 37 M 503, 97 P 855 (1908); Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

Injunction: Property owners having the right to divert the waters of a creek for irrigation purposes may join in a suit to restrain a third person from diminishing the volume of water to the use of which they are entitled. Beach v. Spokane Ranch & Water Co., 25 M 379, 65 P 111 (1901).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER SECTION 89-829, R.C.M. 1947 PROCEDURE FOR APPROPRIATING WATERS OF ADJUDICATED STREAMS

Exclusive Method: The method prescribed by sections 89-829 through 89-838, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), for making an appropriation of the waters of an adjudicated stream is exclusive as to appropriations made after the passage of that act. Hanson v. So. Side Canal Users Assoc., 167 M 210, 537 P2d 325 (1975); Donich v. Johnson, 77 M 229, 250 P 963 (1926); Anaconda Nat'l Bank v. Johnson, 75 M 401, 244 P 141 (1926).

Filing of Petition — "Existing Right": On November 30, 1972, the plaintiff filed a petition to appropriate water from an adjudicated stream pursuant to section 89-829, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). This filing was the first step leading to "use" and was thereby preserved under Art. IX, sec. 3, 1972 Mont. Const., as an "existing right". Gen. Agriculture Corp. v. Moore, 166 M 510, 534 P2d 859 (1975).

Diversion Into Fishpond Without Outlet Constituting Unauthorized New Appropriation: After the appointment of a Water Commissioner, there never was more than enough water in an adjudicated stream to supply the needs of the parties under their adjudicated rights. Thus, a diversion of water from the stream by one of them into a fishpond that had no outlet constituted an attempted new appropriation under this section. In the absence of a decree establishing a new use, the diversion was unauthorized and therefore properly prohibited by an order of court in a proceeding under section 89-1015, R.C.M. 1947 (85-5-301). Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

Extent of Rights:

When a water right is allowed under the provisions of section 89-829, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and sections 89-830 through 89-838, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), it is governed by all the provisions of the decree by which the waters in the stream were adjudicated, just as if the new appropriator had been a party to that decree. The new appropriator has the right to use the waters in the order of his juniority and divert them as of the date of his appropriation when he does not interfere with the superior rights of others. Quigley v. McIntosh, 88 M 103, 290 P 266 (1930).

Where there is an appropriator of water from an adjudicated stream who is simply a junior appropriator who may use the water subject to the superior rights of others, the decree should contain provisions respecting the use of the water as between senior and junior appropriators consistent with those contained in the original decree. The decree should also contain restrictions, such as that the new appropriator should cease to divert water when the volume of water flowing in the stream is equal to or less than that of the prior decreed rights. Quigley v. McIntosh, 88 M 103, 290 P 266 (1930).

Purpose: One seeking to appropriate water from an adjudicated stream under section 89-829, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and sections 89-830 through 89-838, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), may do so upon compliance with the conditions prescribed without regard to whether the water sought to be appropriated is a part of the normal flow or excess or surplus water, i.e., water flowing in the stream in addition to adjudicated waters. The purpose of the act is to provide security for those whose rights have theretofore been adjudicated and to compel the new appropriator to take his water right subject to the prior rights fixed, after litigation, by the decree of a competent court. Quigley v. McIntosh, 88 M 103, 290 P 266 (1930).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER SECTION 89-835, R.C.M. 1947 ADJUDICATING RIGHTS OF PERSONS NOT PARTY TO DECREE

"May" Not Mandatory: The provision of section 89-835, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), declaring that a claimant may petition the District Court for an order making him a party to the decree and establishing his right thereunder, is not mandatory in the sense that if such party fails to take advantage of the permission granted, he will be barred from thereafter complaining. State ex rel. McKnight v. District Court, 111 M 520, 111 P2d 292 (1941).

Trial Court Ignoring Predecessor's Claim: In a water right suit plaintiff relied upon the decree entered in a former action involving the same right as res judicata, in which defendants' predecessor had appeared and answered making claim to a certain right. However, the trial court had failed to make disposition of the claim and apparently ignored it. Thus, defendants were not barred by the former decree from having their right adjudicated. Missoula Light & Water Co. v. Hughes, 106 M 355, 77 P2d 1041 (1938).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER SECTION 89-839, R.C.M. 1947 EFFECT OF DECREE UPON SUBSEQUENT APPROPRIATIONS

Stipulation of Parties:

This section could not relate to water rights acquired prior to its passage and approval and does not attempt to make decrees binding upon subsequent appropriators but merely makes them "prima facie evidence of the facts therein found". It is applicable only to decrees in actions "prosecuted in good faith" and "based upon evidence introduced and not upon stipulations or admissions of the parties". State ex rel. McKnight v. District Court, 111 M 520, 111 P2d 292 (1941).

Under this section the court in water right suits is not bound by a stipulation of the parties as to the general character and quality of the soil of their respective lands or the amount of water required for their successful and economical irrigation. Allen v. Petrick, 69 M 373, 222 P 451 (1924).

Decrees Showing Anticipation of Future Needs: When the intention is made manifest, the court must take into consideration prospective or future needs in entering a water right decree, and mere description of lands does not justify the extended use of water in the absence of recitals in the pleadings and decree and proof in the record that appropriation is made in anticipation of future needs. In reviewing the acts of the Water Commissioner in distributing water, in a proceeding under section 89-1015, R.C.M. 1947 (85-5-301), reasonable diligence must be shown to have been exercised since entry of the decree in developing such needs. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

Inapplicable in Contempt Proceeding to Enforce Original Decree: A plaintiff instituted a contempt proceeding to enforce a 1914 water rights decree against a successor in interest of a party to the decree. As the contempt proceeding was not being brought against persons appropriating water subsequent to the decree, this section was inapplicable. Delmoe v. District Court, 100 M 131, 46 P2d 39 (1935).

APPROPRIATIONS OF WATER SUBJECT TO PRIOR DECREES ADJUDICATING RIGHTS

Appropriations From Adjudicated Streams: This section, regulating the method by which appropriations of water from adjudicated streams could be made, was not exclusive, but sections 89-829 through 89-838, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), amendatory thereof, were exclusive. Donich v. Johnson, 77 M 229, 250 P 963 (1926).

EFFECT OF DECREE

Presumption of Correctness When Relied Upon: Where, in a suit for damage to crops resulting from wrongful diversion of water, the judgment in a former suit between the same parties was relied on in aid of the plea of res judicata, the disputable presumption is that the proceedings in the previous suit were regular under section 93-1301-7, R.C.M. 1947 (26-1-602). Cocanougher v. Mont. Life Ins. Co., 103 M 536, 64 P2d 845 (1936).

Water Rights Order and Extension: Pursuant to Montana Supreme Court Order No. 14833 (July 13, 1979), every person asserting a claim to an existing right for the use of water prior to July 1, 1973, was ordered to file a statement of claim for the right with the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation no later than January 1, 1982. Failure to file a claim will result in a conclusive presumption that the water right or claimed water right has been abandoned. See In re Water Rights Order, 36 St. Rep. 1228 (1979) (apparently not reported in Montana Reports). The filing deadline was extended to April 30, 1982, with the court stating that no more extensions would be granted. See Supreme Court Order 14833 (Dec. 7, 1981).

Case Notes

Post-1973 Evidence Unpersuasive as to Adjudication of Existing Water Right: The purpose of statewide water rights adjudication is to adjudicate those rights as they existed on July 1, 1973, the effective date of the Montana Water Use Act. Therefore, the Water Court did not err in refusing to consider evidence pertaining to a water right claimant's actions taken after 1973 as showing a lack of intent to abandon the water right. In the implementation of this subsection, the department shall provide reimbursement to each county treasurer for the reasonable additional costs incurred by the treasurer arising from the inclusion of the order required by this section. The department shall be reimbursed for such costs from the water right adjudication account created by 85-2-241"; deleted former (2) and (3) that read: "(2) (a) To ensure that all persons who failed to file a claim of existing right under 85-2-221(1) are provided notice of the opportunity to file a claim on or before July 1, 1996, as provided in 85-2-221(3), the department shall provide notice as follows:

(i) It shall, in October 1993, April and October 1994, April and October 1995, and April 1996, cause a notice of the right to file a claim in accordance with 85-2-221(3) to be published in all daily newspapers in the state and in at least one newspaper in each county in the state.

(ii) It shall, in October 1993, April and October 1994, April and October 1995, and April 1996, provide copies of the notice, in writing, to the press services with offices located in Helena.

(iii) It shall, by October 1993, provide copies of the notice to the United States attorney general and to all Indian tribes in Montana.

(iv) It shall cause copies of the notice to be posted in a conspicuous location in each county courthouse and department field office in the state and to be maintained in that location through July 1, 1996.

(v) It may also, in its discretion, provide notice in any other manner that will effectuate the purposes of 85-2-221(3).

(b) The water court shall include notice of 85-2-221(3) in all notices, decrees, or orders issued pursuant to 85-2-231 or 85-2-232 after July 1, 1993, until July 1, 1996.

(3) Notice given in accordance with subsection (2) must at a minimum indicate that any claim of existing right not filed with the department before April 30, 1982, may be filed by physically filing it with the department on or before July 1, 1996, or sending it by United States mail, postmarked on or before July 1, 1996. Additionally, the notice must indicate that under 85-2-226, a failure to file or mail the claim results in the forfeiture for all time of any existing rights to the use of water that are not claimed in accordance with the provisions of 85-2-221"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 629 inserted (2) and (3) regarding notice requirements applicable to additional filing period. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution provides that all existing rights to the use of any waters for any useful or beneficial purpose are recognized and confirmed; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution requires the Legislature to provide for the administration, control, and regulation of water rights and to establish a system of centralized records for such rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature established a procedure for the general adjudication of existing rights to the use of water and provided in section 85-2-226, MCA, that the failure to file a claim of existing right on or before the deadline established under section 85-2-221, MCA, would establish a conclusive abandonment of the right; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court, in In the Matter of the Adjudication of the Water Rights Within the Yellowstone River, 253 Mont. 167, 832 P.2d 1210 (1992), has determined that the failure to file a statement of claim to an existing right to the use of water on or before April 30, 1982, resulted in the forfeiture of that right; and

WHEREAS, it has come to the attention of the Legislature that the forfeiture of water rights for failure to timely file a claim has in some instances caused hardship, and the Legislature accordingly desires to provide water rights claimants with one more opportunity to file a water rights claim in the general adjudication; and

WHEREAS, in so doing, the Legislature recognizes that the adjudication process will not be completed for many years but that a substantial amount of progress has already occurred in the adjudication, specifically in the area of water rights compacts with Indian tribes and the federal government and in decrees and stipulations involving individual claimants, and thus the Legislature believes that it is necessary to ensure that parties who have been recognized as having filed claims on or before April 30, 1982, and holders of federal reserved water rights are not adversely affected by the inclusion of new parties in the adjudication by subjecting the right to file those claims in remission to certain terms and conditions; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide protection for timely filed claimants from incurring additional costs or from being adversely affected by justifiable reliance on the presumption of abandonment; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide a conclusive adjudication of existing water rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature recognizes that according a privilege to file additional statements of claim presents a potential for abuse by those who may attempt to refile previously adjudicated claims, and the Legislature thus believes that the courts should deal harshly with any abuses by such measures as, without limitation, the imposition of sanctions under [former] Rule 11, Montana Rules of Civil Procedure [now superseded]; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature determines that the deadline for filing water right claims as provided in this bill appropriately balances the interests at stake in the adjudication.

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds it is appropriate to make the following amendments to sections 85-2-102, 85-2-211 [now repealed], 85-2-213, 85-2-221, 85-2-225, 85-2-226, 85-2-234, 85-2-237, and 85-2-306, MCA, in order to provide for the acceptance of late claims to the use of water under the conditions set forth in this bill. Additionally, the Legislature directs the Water Policy Committee, in coordination with the Department of Justice, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, and the Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission, to conduct an interim study regarding certain late claim issues."

Saving Clause: Section 11, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] does not affect proceedings that were begun before [passage and approval of this act] [approved May 11, 1993] in which relief for damages have been sought based upon the diversion, impoundment, or withdrawal of water without a water right established under state law."

Severability — Partial Nonseverability: Section 12, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "(1) If a part of [this act] is invalid, all valid parts that are severable from the invalid part remain in effect. If a part of [this act] is invalid in one or more of its applications, the part remains in effect in all valid applications that are severable from the invalid applications.

(2) It is the intent of the legislature that each part of [this act] is essentially dependent upon [section 4], which amends 85-2-221, and that if one part of [section 4], except subsection (3)(f)(ii), is held unconstitutional or invalid, all other parts of [this act] are invalid."

"May" Not Mandatory: The provision of section 89-835, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), declaring that a claimant may petition the District Court for an order making him a party to the decree and establishing his right thereunder, is not mandatory in the sense that if such party fails to take advantage of the permission granted, he will be barred thereafter from complaining. State ex rel. McKnight v. District Court, 111 M 520, 111 P2d 292 (1941).

Trial Court Ignoring Predecessor's Claim: The plaintiff relied, in a water right suit, upon the decree entered in a former action involving the same right as res judicata, in which defendants' predecessor had appeared and answered making claim to a certain right. However, the trial court had failed to make disposition of the claim and apparently had ignored it. Thus, defendants were not barred by the former decree from having their right adjudicated. Missoula Light & Water Co. v. Hughes, 106 M 355, 77 P2d 1041 (1938).

Quieting Title: Action under section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), to determine relative rights and priorities of parties claiming interests in waters of a stream, while in personam, is in effect one to quiet title to real property. Sain v. Mont. Power Co., 84 F2d 126 (9th Cir. 1936).

Appeal From Part of Judgment: Under section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), where two or more parties are awarded a water right under the terms of the decree, each of them recovers a judgment against the other or others; such a judgment is divisible into parts, and therefore an appeal lies from a part thereof. Wills v. Morris, 100 M 504, 50 P2d 858 (1935).

Damages for Wrongful Diversion of Water:

Under section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), where several parties have diverted water so as to injure the crops of another, they cannot be held jointly liable for the acts of each other nor can they be sued in one action for the entire damage, with or without an apportionment of the damage. Howell v. Bent, 48 M 268, 137 P 49 (1913).

Section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not apply to an action at law for damages for the wrongful diversion of water where there is no allegation in the complaint that would authorize the court to grant equitable relief and where there is no evidence to show that the plaintiff is entitled to such relief. Miles v. Du Bey, 15 M 340, 39 P 313 (1895). See Howell v. Bent, 48 M 268, 137 P 49 (1913).

Equitable Actions: Section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), contemplates equitable actions only, in which relative priorities and conflicting rights of all parties may be settled and where the damages claimed are a mere incident. Howell v. Bent, 48 M 268, 137 P 49 (1913); Miles v. Du Bey, 15 M 340, 39 P 313 (1895).

Rights of Parties Defendant:

The first provision of section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is permissive only. Thus, there was no presumption that the respective interests of joint owners in an undivided water right had been adjudicated among themselves in a suit in which their predecessors were codefendants, in the absence of a showing to that effect upon the face of the decree or the judgment roll. Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

The Legislature, in enacting section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not state that it intended to compel parties, made defendants to a water right suit pursuant to its provisions, to litigate their respective titles as between themselves. Further, it is doubtful that the Legislature has the power to coerce them to do so. Sloan v. Byers, 37 M 503, 97 P 855 (1908), followed in Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

Pleadings:

Under section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the District Court may settle the relative priorities and rights of all the parties to a water right suit in one judgment only when pleadings have been framed so as to justify such settlement. Sloan v. Byers, 37 M 503, 97 P 855 (1908), distinguished and followed in Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

The provision of section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), is permissive and not mandatory. Sloan v. Byers, 37 M 503, 97 P 855 (1908), distinguished and followed in Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

All Parties Antagonists: Under section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), every party in an action to settle the relative priorities and rights of the parties to the use of the waters of a stream is an antagonist to every other party. McNinch v. Crawford, 30 M 297, 76 P 698 (1904). See Sloan v. Byers, 37 M 503, 97 P 855 (1908); Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

Injunction: Under section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), property owners having the right to divert the waters of a creek for irrigation purposes may join in a suit to restrain a third person from diminishing the volume of water to the use of which they are entitled. Beach v. Spokane Ranch & Water Co., 25 M 379, 65 P 111 (1901).

85-2-217. Suspension of adjudication.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 5 in third and fourth sentences extended effective date of suspension and approval from July 1, 2009, to July 1, 2013. Amendment effective February 19, 2009.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 103 in third and fourth sentences extended period from July 1, 2005, until July 1, 2009. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 44 in third sentence, in two places, substituted "July 1, 2005" for "July 1, 1999"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Chapter 497 in second and sixth sentences, near middle, inserted "federal non-Indian and Indian"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 22, Ch. 497, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 23, Ch. 497, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

1991 Amendment: In two places substituted July 1, 1999, for July 1, 1993; and made minor change in style. Amendment effective May 17, 1991.

1987 Amendment: Extended suspension period by substituting "1993" for "1987" in two places.

1985 Amendment: Changed 1985 to 1987 in two places.

Select Committee Bill: Chapter 667, L. 1985, was introduced at the request of the Select Committee on Indian Affairs (now Law and Justice Interim Committee). See Committee report published December 1984 by the Montana Legislative Council.

1981 Amendment: Deleted "From the time of filing the petition required in 85-2-211 until July 1, 1982, and" from the beginning of the section; substituted "proceedings" for "actions" before "to generally adjudicate" in the first sentence; substituted "and federal reserved water rights of those tribes and federal agencies which are negotiating" for "from a source of water in question under this part" in the first sentence; deleted "unless an action is commenced or is pending by or on behalf of an Indian tribe to adjudicate water from that source other than as provided for in Title 85, chapter 2. In such case, the suspension is maintained only if the action is dismissed or if the parties to the action stipulate to the suspension during compact negotiations of all further proceedings in the action except the determination of jurisdictional issues and an order is so issued" after "are suspended" in the first sentence; added the last five sentences describing procedures to terminate suspension of state water rights adjudication proceedings if no compact on reserved water rights is approved by the state and tribes or federal agencies by July 1, 1985.

Case Notes

Supreme Court Jurisdiction Over Water Court — Not Barred by Suspension Provision: After the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Ariz. v. San Carlos Apache Tribe, 463 US 545, 77 L Ed 2d 837, 103 S Ct 3201 (1983), that the McCarran amendment, 43 U.S.C. §666, removed "whatever limitations the enabling acts or federal policy may have originally placed on state court jurisdiction" over the adjudication of Indian water rights, the state requested that the Montana Supreme Court exercise its powers of supervisory control over the state Water Court concerning the adjudication of federal reserved water rights. In assuming jurisdiction, the Supreme Court ruled that the request for supervisory control is not barred by the suspension provisions of this section, as the present proceeding will not generally adjudicate any Indian reserved water rights or any federal reserved water rights. This proceeding will consider the following issues: (1) is the state Water Court prohibited from exercising jurisdiction over Indian reserved water rights based on the disclaimer clause of Art. I of the Montana Constitution or otherwise; (2) is the Montana Water Use Act, Title 85, ch. 2, adequate to adjudicate Indian reserved water rights; and (3) is the Montana Water Use Act adequate to adjudicate federal reserved water rights held, on its own behalf, by the United States or any of its agencies. State ex rel. Greely v. Water Court, 214 M 143, 691 P2d 833, 41 St. Rep. 2373 (1984).

State Court Jurisdiction Over Federal and Indian Water Rights: The McCarran amendment, 43 U.S.C. §666, granting state courts jurisdiction over the United States in litigation involving a comprehensive adjudication of water rights, removed "whatever limitations the enabling acts or federal policy may have originally placed on state court jurisdiction" over the adjudication of Indian water rights in actions brought by the United States on behalf of an Indian tribe as well as in actions brought by an Indian tribe itself. Assuming that the state adjudication procedure is adequate and complies with state law, dismissal of adjudication actions filed in federal District Court out of deference to state adjudication proceedings was proper. Ariz. v. San Carlos Apache Tribe, 463 US 545, 77 L Ed 2d 837, 103 S Ct 3201 (1983), reversing N. Cheyenne Tribe v. Adsit, 668 F2d 1080 (9th Cir. 1982); followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986).

85-2-218. Process and criteria for designating priority basins or subbasins.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 651, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is provided for this bill because the legislature desires to indicate to the Montana water courts and the department of natural resources and conservation the basins that should receive priority adjudication efforts.

The legislature finds and determines the basins described in I through IX below to be priority basins. The basins are selected according to the criteria in section 10 [85-2-218] of this bill and the priority provided for the Milk River basin in 85-2-321. They are listed by geographical areas because it is assumed priority basins are needed in each area to ensure efficient use of water court and department staff. The legislature recognizes that deviations from the order of priority provided may be necessary to ensure efficiency in the adjudication process, that the water judge may vary efforts from area to area based on available resources, and that additional priority basins may be added upon petition to and determination by the water judge.

I. Basins in the Billings area:

Yellowstone River from Bridger Creek to the Clark's Fork of the Yellowstone River (43QJ)

Yellowstone River above and including Bridger Creek (43B)

Sweet Grass Creek (43BV)

Stillwater River (43C)

Boulder River tributary of Yellowstone River (43BJ)

Clark's Fork of the Yellowstone River (43D)

Yellowstone River between the Clark's Fork of the Yellowstone River and the Bighorn River (43Q)

II. Basins in the Bozeman area:

Madison River (41F)

Gallatin River (41H)

Shields River (43A)

Ruby River (41C)

Beaverhead River (41B)

Red Rock River (41A)

Big Hole River (41D)
III. Basins in the Glasgow area:
Rock Creek tributary of the Milk River (40N)
Frenchman Creek (40L)
Milk River below Whitewater Creek including Porcupine Creek (40O)
Beaver Creek tributary of the Milk River (40M)
Whitewater Creek (40K)
Dry Creek (40D)
Missouri River between the Musselshell River and Fort Peck Dam (40E)
IV. Basins in the Havre area:
Sage Creek (40G)
Milk River between Fresno Reservoir and Whitewater Creek (40J)
Peoples Creek (40I)
Willow Creek (41N)
Teton River (41O)
Sun River (41K)
V. Basins in the Helena area:
Dearborn River (41U)
Clark Fork above the Blackfoot River (76G)
Boulder River tributary of the Jefferson River (41E)
Jefferson River (41G)
Missouri River above Holter Dam (41I)
VI. Basins in the Kalispell area:
Milk River above Fresno Reservoir (40F)
Big Sandy Creek (40H)
Yaak River (76B)
Fisher River (76C)
Kootenai River (76D)
Clark Fork below Flathead Lake (76N)
South Fork of the Flathead River (76J)
Middle Fork of the Flathead River (76I)
Swan River (76K)
Flathead River above Flathead Lake (76LJ)
VII. Basins in the Lewistown area:
Milk River between Fresno Reservoir and Whitewater Creek (40J)
Judith River (41S)
Musselshell River above Roundup (40A)
Musselshell River below Roundup (40C)
Flatwillow Creek including Box Elder Creek (40B)
VIII. Basins in the Miles City area:
Beaver Creek tributary of the Little Missouri River (39G)
Yellowstone River between the Tongue River and the Powder River (42K)
Little Missouri River above Little Beaver Creek (39F)
Rosebud Creek (42A)
Little Beaver Creek (39FJ)
Box Elder Creek (39E)
Yellowstone River below Powder River (42M)
IX. Basins in the Missoula area:
Rock Creek tributary of the Clark Fork River (76E)
Flint Creek (76GJ)
Clark Fork between the Blackfoot River and the Flathead River (76M)
Bitterroot River (76H)
Blackfoot River (76F)

The legislature intends by the amendment to 85-2-243 in section 8 of this bill that it be interpreted to restrict the department to utilize funds that have been appropriated for the adjudication program. The department's funding level in adjudicating water claims for the 1987-89 biennium is as specifically set forth in House Bill No. 2."

85-2-221. Filing of claim of existing water right — filing late claim.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 629 inserted (3) and (4) establishing a procedure for filing of late claims. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution provides that all existing rights to the use of any waters for any useful or beneficial purpose are recognized and confirmed; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution requires the Legislature to provide for the administration, control, and regulation of water rights and to establish a system of centralized records for such rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature established a procedure for the general adjudication of existing rights to the use of water and provided in section 85-2-226, MCA, that the failure to file a claim of existing right on or before the deadline established under section 85-2-221, MCA, would establish a conclusive abandonment of the right; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court, in In the Matter of the Adjudication of the Water Rights Within the Yellowstone River, 253 Mont. 167, 832 P.2d 1210 (1992), has determined that the failure to file a statement of claim to an existing right to the use of water on or before April 30, 1982, resulted in the forfeiture of that right; and

WHEREAS, it has come to the attention of the Legislature that the forfeiture of water rights for failure to timely file a claim has in some instances caused hardship, and the Legislature accordingly desires to provide water rights claimants with one more opportunity to file a water rights claim in the general adjudication; and

WHEREAS, in so doing, the Legislature recognizes that the adjudication process will not be completed for many years but that a substantial amount of progress has already occurred in the adjudication, specifically in the area of water rights compacts with Indian tribes and the federal government and in decrees and stipulations involving individual claimants, and thus the Legislature believes that it is necessary to ensure that parties who have been recognized as having filed claims on or before April 30, 1982, and holders of federal reserved water rights are not adversely affected by the inclusion of new parties in the adjudication by subjecting the right to file those claims in remission to certain terms and conditions; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide protection for timely filed claimants from incurring additional costs or from being adversely affected by justifiable reliance on the presumption of abandonment; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide a conclusive adjudication of existing water rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature recognizes that according a privilege to file additional statements of claim presents a potential for abuse by those who may attempt to refile previously adjudicated claims, and the Legislature thus believes that the courts should deal harshly with any abuses by such measures as, without limitation, the imposition of sanctions under [former] Rule 11, Montana Rules of Civil Procedure [now superseded]; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature determines that the deadline for filing water right claims as provided in this bill appropriately balances the interests at stake in the adjudication.

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds it is appropriate to make the following amendments to sections 85-2-102, 85-2-211 [now repealed], 85-2-213, 85-2-221, 85-2-225, 85-2-226, 85-2-234, 85-2-237, and 85-2-306, MCA, in order to provide for the acceptance of late claims to the use of water under the conditions set forth in this bill. Additionally, the Legislature directs the Water Policy Committee, in coordination with the Department of Justice, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, and the Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission, to conduct an interim study regarding certain late claim issues."

Late Claim Interim Study — Water Policy Committee: Section 10, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "(1) The water policy committee, in coordination with the department of justice, the department of natural resources and conservation, and the reserved water rights compact commission, shall conduct an interim study analyzing the need for and desirability and impacts of allowing the remission of forfeited water rights in addition to the remissions authorized under the provisions of [this act] [Ch. 629, L. 1993]. The study must analyze the impacts of additional forfeiture remission on:

(a) the general stream adjudication process, including but not limited to the issues of adequacy and Montana's and the federal government's concurrent water rights adjudication jurisdiction;

(b) the federal government and Indian tribes regarding existing and future negotiated water rights compacts, including but not limited to the issues of equal protection;

(c) timely claimants' water use;

(d) timely claimants' legal rights, including but not limited to constitutional requirements regarding the taking of property;

(e) the potential reduction in agricultural production resulting from not granting additional forfeiture remissions and the associated social and economic impacts;

(f) the issue of fairness to both late and timely claimants;

(g) the potential increased costs to the state and to late and timely claimants;

(h) potential losses in revenue to the state resulting from the state's failure to file claims to existing water rights on or before April 30, 1982;

(i) implications involving the state's trust responsibilities;

(j) potential litigation against the state by private parties; and

(k) impacts on municipal and county governments resulting from late claims.

(2) The study must include an analysis of the potential for identifying individuals or classes of individuals whose additional forfeiture remission could be authorized in a manner that would have an acceptable impact on those issues identified under subsection (1). The classes of late claimants include but are not limited to previously decreed water rights holders and classes established according to filing date.

(3) The study must be completed in consultation with other relevant state and federal agencies, relevant groups and organizations, and other interested and affected citizens.

(4) The water policy committee shall report the results of the study to the 54th legislature by October 1, 1994. The report must include any legislative or other policy options recommended by the water policy committee."

Saving Clause: Section 11, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] does not affect proceedings that were begun before [passage and approval of this act] [approved May 11, 1993] in which relief for damages have been sought based upon the diversion, impoundment, or withdrawal of water without a water right established under state law."

Severability — Partial Nonseverability: Section 12, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "(1) If a part of [this act] is invalid, all valid parts that are severable from the invalid part remain in effect. If a part of [this act] is invalid in one or more of its applications, the part remains in effect in all valid applications that are severable from the invalid applications.

(2) It is the intent of the legislature that each part of [this act] is essentially dependent upon [section 4], which amends 85-2-221, and that if one part of [section 4], except subsection (3)(f)(ii), is held unconstitutional or invalid, all other parts of [this act] are invalid."

Water Rights Order and Extension: Pursuant to Montana Supreme Court Order No. 14833 (July 13, 1979), every person asserting a claim to an existing right for the use of water prior to July 1, 1973, was ordered to file a statement of claim for the right with the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation no later than January 1, 1982. Failure to file a claim will result in a conclusive presumption that the water right or claimed water right has been abandoned. See In re Water Rights Order, 36 St. Rep. 1228 (1979) (apparently not reported in Montana Reports). The filing deadline was extended to April 30, 1982, with the court stating that no more extensions would be granted. See Supreme Court Order 14833 (Dec. 7, 1981).

85-2-222. Exemptions.

Case Notes

Water Right Held Through Pre-1973 Mesne Conveyances — Summary Judgment Incorrectly Granted — Abandonment of Right Factually Dependent: Duncan, who lived on a tract of land in Madison County, used water from a spring located on property (the large parcel) now owned separately from the parcel (the small parcel) lived on by Duncan. In 1950, Duncan conveyed all the property in what is now the large and small parcels to Baker. In 1951, Baker divided the property, conveying the large parcel and all appurtenances to Halse and reserving the small parcel for herself. Baker made no express reservation of water rights with the reserved property, and the deed to Halse conveying the large parcel made no express grant of water rights. For the next 10 years, Baker made no use of the house located on the small parcel. In 1961, Baker conveyed the small parcel to the Hunts, expressly conveying water rights on the property. In 1963, Halse filed a declaration of vested ground water rights for the "total flow of all springs" located on the large parcel. Fosseco, who acquired the large parcel from Halse, conveyed it, through mesne conveyances, to M.S. Consulting. The Hunts conveyed the small parcel, through mesne conveyances, to the Axtells. All uses of the water were for livestock and domestic use. In 1993, the Axtells filed a notice of water rights with the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation. M.S. Consulting subsequently served the Axtells with notice that their water rights would be cut off in 45 days, and the Axtells brought an action to enjoin the discontinuance of their water supply. The District Court granted summary judgment for the Axtells, and M.S. Consulting appealed. The Supreme Court reviewed the background of the prior appropriation law in Montana, noting that because the current statutes recognize existing water rights, the law before the 1973 statutes were enacted is still the law with regard to water rights acquired before 1973. The Supreme Court reviewed the pre-1973 law and concluded that the water rights appurtenant to all the property passed to Baker but that there was a factual issue whether, as a result of Baker's nonuse of the property and its water rights for over 10 years, Baker had abandoned the water rights conveyed to her by Duncan. If the abandonment occurred, there was no reservation of conveyance and no right to use of the water after that period of nonuse. The issue of abandonment, the Supreme Court noted, depended in turn upon several other issues, such as whether Baker intended to abandon her water right. The Supreme Court also agreed with M.S. Consulting that several other issues of fact raised by the company may also exist, although it noted that these other issues were only material if the District Court ruled a particular way on the question of abandonment. Because there were genuine issues of material fact, the Supreme Court held that the District Court erred in granting summary judgment to the Axtells. Axtell v. M.S. Consulting, 1998 MT 64, 288 M 150, 955 P2d 1362, 55 St. Rep. 276 (1998).

85-2-223. Public recreational uses.

Case Notes

Public Recreation and Conservation Interests in Water Adjudication Proceedings—Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Not Exclusive Representative: After the Water Court issued a temporary preliminary decree for the Big Hole River Basin, the objector filed timely objections to the claims of several claimants and requested a hearing. The Water Court granted summary judgment to the claimants on the basis that the objector lacked standing to file objections to the claims. The Supreme Court reversed. The Water Court erred in holding that under 85-2-223, only the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks may represent public recreation and conservation interests in water rights adjudications. Section 85-2-223 does not prohibit other entities from filing objections. No statutory or regulatory restrictions exist regarding who may file an objection to a water rights claim contained in a temporary preliminary decree. Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Beaverhead Water Co., 2011 MT 151, 361 Mont. 77, 255 P.3d 179.

Water Rights Adjudication — Standing to Object to Preliminary Decree: After the Water Court issued a temporary preliminary decree for the Big Hole River Basin, the objector filed timely objections to the claims of several claimants and requested a hearing. The Water Court granted summary judgment to the claimants on the basis that the objector lacked standing to file objections to the claims. Although the objector had sufficiently alleged environmental and recreational interests of its members that were distinct from those of the general public, the Water Court concluded such interests were not sufficient to demonstrate standing because the objector lacked ownership of a water right. The Supreme Court reversed. The Water Court erroneously applied the "good cause" requirement contained in 85-2-233 to require an ownership interest in a water right. When a party has met all common-law and statutory requirements for standing and has shown that its interest in the use of water has been affected by the decree, that party is entitled to object to a preliminary decree under 85-2-233. Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Beaverhead Water Co., 2011 MT 151, 361 Mont. 77, 255 P.3d 179.

Fish, Wildlife, and Recreational Purposes as Valid Basis for Appropriative Water Use — Diversion Not Requisite Element of Appropriation When Diversion Not Required — Bean Lake Overruled: The Water Court ruled that five pre-1973 water rights claims based on diversions for fish, wildlife, or recreation were potentially invalid based on the holding in In re Water Rights in Dearborn Drainage, 234 M 331, 766 P2d 228 (1988), commonly known as the Bean Lake decision, because under Montana law before 1973, no appropriation right was recognized for fish, wildlife, or recreation except through a Murphy right statute. The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks appealed. The Supreme Court noted that the common-law elements of a valid appropriation are intent, notice, diversion, and application to a beneficial use and held that to the extent that the Bean Lake decision suggests that diversions for fish, wildlife, or recreation are not beneficial uses, that case is overruled. The court went on to address the Bean Lake rationale that claims for the nondiversionary use of water for fish, wildlife, or recreation are not recognized under the prior appropriation doctrine, noting that although most traditional uses necessitate a diversion for application to a beneficial use, the prior appropriation doctrine's history supports the holding that a diversion is not a requisite element of an appropriation when it is not a physical necessity for application to a beneficial use. Thus, instream and inlake appropriations for beneficial uses may be valid when the purpose does not require a diversion.

Beneficial use rather than diversion is the touchstone of the prior appropriation doctrine. Montana has validated nondiversionary appropriations, so Montana law prior to 1973 cannot be said to absolutely require a diversion for a valid appropriation of water. The conclusion in the Bean Lake decision that the framers of the 1972 Montana Constitution did not accept fish, wildlife, or recreation uses as a valid basis for appropriative water rights is not reflected in the convention transcripts, which indicate that it was the fear of future limitations on fish, wildlife, and recreation rights, rather than a belief that those rights did not exist, that led to the deletion of proposed constitutional language specifically referencing those uses. Therefore, the Bean Lake conclusion that prior to 1973, Montana did not recognize appropriations for fish, wildlife, and recreation, whether diversionary or nondiversionary, was overruled. In re Adjudication of Existing Water Rights of Basin 41I, 2002 MT 216, 311 M 327, 55 P3d 396 (2002), distinguished in Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Beaverhead Water Co., 2011 MT 151, 361 Mont. 77, 255 P.3d 179.

State's Claim Asserted in Good Faith — Attorney Fees Not Allowed: Under the American rule that a party in a civil action is generally not entitled to attorney fees absent a specific contractual or statutory provision, the party who prevailed against the state in a case involving the public's recreational water use rights is not entitled to such fees. The Montana Water Use Act provides that the adjudication process is adversarial in nature and does not determine that the prevailing party in an ordinary water dispute is entitled to attorney fees. Dept. of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks v. Mont. Stockgrowers Ass'n, Inc., 240 M 39, 782 P2d 898, 46 St. Rep. 1925 (1989). The American rule was applied in First Nat'l Bank of Glasgow v. First Sec. Bank of Mont., 260 M 38, 857 P2d 726, 50 St. Rep. 931 (1993).

State's Right to a Pre-1973 Appropriation Use Right to Bean Lake for Recreation, Fish, and Wildlife: As part of the statewide water rights adjudication process, the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks filed a claim for a pre-1973 "use" water right appropriation for recreation, fishing, and wildlife purposes in the waters of Bean Lake. The Department had stocked the lake, maintained the fishery resource, made studies of lake surface levels and fish population, and enforced rules relating to motor boats, and the public had made general use of the lake. The Department had been involved with the lake since 1933 and in 1964 obtained a warranty deed to 16.33 acres abutting the lake. The Department's use of the lake was beneficial within the meaning of the appropriation doctrine, but the Water Court correctly denied the claim because of a lack of diversion, intent, and notice. It is clear that under Montana law before 1973, no appropriation right was recognized for recreation, fish, and wildlife purposes, except through a Murphy right statute. The prevailing legal theory was that some form of diversion or capture of water was necessary for an appropriation, though some forms of nondiversionary water rights were given appropriation status. Since the law recognized no appropriation, the Department and public could not have intended one and adverse appropriators could not have had notice of a claim. In re Water Rights in Dearborn Drainage, 234 M 331, 766 P2d 228, 45 St. Rep. 1948 (1988), overruled in In re Adjudication of Existing Water Rights of Basin 41I, 2002 MT 216, 311 M 327, 55 P3d 396 (2002). Use Right of State in Bean Lake — Standing of Stockgrowers Association to Enter Suit — General Test for Any Association: As part of the statewide water rights adjudication process, the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks filed a claim for a pre-1973 "use" water right appropriation for recreation, fishing, and wildlife purposes in the waters of Bean Lake. The Montana Stockgrowers Association was a proper party in the case. The Water Court required statewide notice and invitation for others to appear. The Association stated that its members could be affected, and the two other potential appropriators in Bean Lake were members of the Association. The Supreme Court adopted the following as the test to determine the standing of an association to appear as a party on behalf of its members: (1) its members would otherwise have standing in their own right; (2) the interests it seeks to protect are germane to the organization's purpose; and (3) neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members in the suit. In re Water Rights in Dearborn Drainage, 234 M 331, 766 P2d 228, 45 St. Rep. 1948 (1988).

Water Right of State in Bean Lake — Drainage Adjudication Process — Appealability of State's Claim Under Finality of Decision Rules: As part of the statewide water rights adjudication process, the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks filed a claim for a pre-1973 "use" water right appropriation for recreation, fishing, and wildlife purposes in the waters of Bean Lake. In recent consolidated cases relating to drainage areas, the Supreme Court dismissed appeals because a certificate had not been obtained under former Rule 54(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). In effect, the court held that the causes were not final for purposes of appeal. In this case, the court accepted jurisdiction under its power of general supervisory control over the Water Courts. The Department had filed 15 to 17 similar claims in various drainages, the same issues would recur, and a decision in the present case would help speed the water adjudication process. In re Water Rights in Dearborn Drainage, 234 M 331, 766 P2d 228, 45 St. Rep. 1948 (1988).

Determination of Public's Right to Use Dearborn River — Standing of Coalition of Citizens: In action for determination of the public's right to use the Dearborn River, whether the Montana Coalition for Stream Access, Inc., had standing to bring suit was immaterial because the Department of State Lands (functions now transferred to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) and the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks were also plaintiffs. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Judicial Notice of Maps and Descriptions on Appeal: In a dispute over control of an irrigation district's headgate, the Supreme Court permitted submission on appeal of government survey descriptions and maps that had not been introduced as evidence at trial. The court reasoned: first, that the commission comments to Rule 201, Montana Rules of Evidence, indicate that published maps or charts are included within the Rule's scope; and second, that maps and descriptions are acceptable articles of evidence by which to show a water right in the adjudication process. Case Notes

Constitutional Validity of Conclusive Presumption of Water Right Abandonment: The legislative definition of water right abandonment set out in this section, based on failure to file a timely claim of an existing right, does not require any individualized determinations but rather applies to all persons who filed after the deadline. Water Court hearings were available to make the individual determination as to whether the deadline was met. As established in U.S. v. Locke, 471 US 84, 85 L Ed 2d 64, 105 S Ct 1785 (1985), a Legislature can enact substantive rules of law that treat property as forfeited under conditions that the common law would not consider sufficient to indicate abandonment. The legislative choice to make the presumption of abandonment conclusive rather than rebuttable is constitutionally permissible. In re Adjudication of Existing Yellowstone River Water Rights, 253 M 167, 832 P2d 1210, 49 St. Rep. 413 (1992), distinguishing Vlandis v. Kline, 412 US 441, 37 L Ed 2d 63, 93 S Ct 2230 (1973).

Duty to File Water Rights — Due Process Satisfied: The objective of the Legislature in enacting this section was to meet the mandate of Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., to establish a system of centralized records for the administration of water rights. Before water rights could be adjudicated statewide, it was essential that existing rights be firmly established. This section provides a reasonable means of compelling comprehensive participation, extinguishing duplicative and exaggerated rights, and ridding local records of stale, unused water claims. The filing duty was not burdensome, unreasonable, or unrelated to the legitimate and proper legislative objective. Procedural due process considerations were sufficiently addressed through: (1) ample published and personal notice over a 4-year period; (2) an expanded opportunity to file a claim through an extension of the filing deadline; (3) an adequate opportunity for each claimant to show that he did not intend to abandon or forfeit water rights; and (4) an opportunity for all late claimants to request an evidentiary hearing with the Water Court to determine whether the deadline had in fact been missed. In re Adjudication of Existing Yellowstone River Water Rights, 253 M 167, 832 P2d 1210, 49 St. Rep. 413 (1992).

Forfeiture of Water Rights Not Considered Unjust Taking Without Compensation: Former water rights holders who forfeited their rights through failure to meet the filing deadline contended that this section was an unconstitutional taking without just compensation under state and federal laws because invalidating existing water rights for failure to file extended beyond what was reasonably necessary to preserve the public welfare. However, the deprivation occurred only as the result of the appropriators' neglect or the neglect of their predecessors and not as the result of excessive or unreasonable state action. This section does not result in taking property without just compensation because the state is not required to compensate the owner for the consequences of the owner's own neglect. In re Adjudication of Existing Yellowstone River Water Rights, 253 M 167, 832 P2d 1210, 49 St. Rep. 413 (1992). See also Texaco, Inc. v. Short, 454 US 516, 70 L Ed 2d 738, 102 S Ct 781 (1982).

Forfeiture of Water Rights Not Impairment of Contracts: Former water rights holders who forfeited their rights through failure to meet the filing deadline contended that this section constituted an impairment of contracts by rendering invalid water rights upon which substantial contractual relationships were based. However, failure to demonstrate the existence of any specific contract, let alone its impairment, was fatal to the impairment of contracts claim under either the state or federal constitution. In re Adjudication of Existing Yellowstone River Water Rights, 253 M 167, 832 P2d 1210, 49 St. Rep. 413 (1992).

Forfeiture of Water Rights Not Violative of Equal Protection: Former water rights holders who forfeited their rights through failure to meet the filing deadline contended that this section violated constitutional equal protection guarantees by imposing an arbitrary deadline that unreasonably divided water claimants into two classes: one class of persons who retained their rights and another, late claimants, who lost their rights without opportunity to show good cause for the late filing. This classification was alleged to have resulted in discrimination against late filers who in good faith attempted to meet the statutory filing deadline. The Supreme Court found that this section does not create different classes and that all claimants were treated equally, provided equal notice, and given equal time to file by the given deadline. Any alleged classification was created by the late filers' own negligence, and the equal protection challenge failed. In re Adjudication of Existing Yellowstone River Water Rights, 253 M 167, 832 P2d 1210, 49 St. Rep. 413 (1992).

No Constitutional Protection for Pre-1973 Water Rights: Appellants who forfeited their water rights for failing to file a timely claim pursuant to this section contended that Art. IX, sec. 3, subsection (1), Mont. Const., provided a guarantee of existing water rights and that while the Legislature may constitutionally affirm and protect existing water rights, those rights may not be statutorily forfeited or extinguished. The Supreme Court held that that subsection does not establish immunity from sovereign powers for pre-1973 water rights. Water rights, like other property rights, are protected against unreasonable state action but do not have indefeasible status. The Legislature may enact constitutionally sound regulations, including the requirement for property owners to take affirmative actions to maintain their water rights. In re Adjudication of Existing Yellowstone River Water Rights, 253 M 167, 832 P2d 1210, 49 St. Rep. 413 (1992).

2005 Amendment: Chapter 17 in (4) near beginning after "municipal use" deleted "from a water classified by the board of environmental review before January 1, 1999, as A-Closed under administrative rule is a unique water suited to municipal water use and that such a claim"; in (4)(d)(i) after "emergency" inserted "municipal water supply"; inserted (4)(d)(iii) allowing application of the water right to any other department-approved use; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 213 in (3) at beginning inserted "Subject to the provisions of subsection (4)"; and inserted (4) making a legislative finding, in regard to a determination of abandonment under subsection (3), that a water right claimed for municipal use to water classified as A-Closed is a unique water suited to municipal water use and the claim is presumed to not be abandoned if any part of the water right has been used and there is evidence that there is a filtration waiver under federal law, of diversion or conveyance structures for future use of the water right, of a study including an assessment that using the water right is feasible and the amount of the water right is reasonable for future needs, or of facilities connected to the municipal water supply system to apply the water right to an emergency or supplemental municipal water supply. Amendment effective March 30, 1999.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 213, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, waters classified A-Closed pursuant to ARM 17.30.621 represent the highest quality waters in Montana; and

WHEREAS, almost all A-Closed drainages originate in remote, largely inaccessible, alpine settings that afford maximum natural protection for water quality; and

WHEREAS, there is either no habitation or development or extremely limited habitation or development in A-Closed drainages; and

WHEREAS, the existing municipal water rights in each of those drainages have been used for municipal supply purposes and will be needed in many of the drainages; and

WHEREAS, the high elevation alpine settings of A-Closed drainages provide gravity flowing systems that reduce the need for pumping facilities and related energy costs for Montana citizens; and

WHEREAS, the superior mineral, radiological, and microbiological quality of A-Closed waters renders them especially suitable as a raw source of municipal drinking water; and

WHEREAS, there are few gravity flow alternative sources for high quality municipal water, and therefore the loss of the right to use these high quality waters would result in the loss of a unique and irreplaceable natural resource.

THEREFORE, the 56th Legislature of the State of Montana finds that it is appropriate to enact legislation to establish a limited presumption of nonabandonment for municipal water rights situated in A-Closed basins."

Severability: Section 2, Ch. 213, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 7, Ch. 174, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1989 Amendment: At beginning inserted "For purposes of adjudicating rights pursuant to this part"; after "85-2-221" inserted "or an amended claim of existing right"; and inserted second sentence providing that modified preliminary decree supersedes claim of existing right until issuance of final decree. Amendment effective April 21, 1989.

Saving Clause: Section 9, Ch. 604, L. 1989, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 10, Ch. 604, L. 1989, was a severability clause.

Retroactive and Prospective Applicability: Section 11, Ch. 604, L. 1989, provided: "(1) [This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all temporary preliminary decrees and preliminary decrees that have been issued by the Montana water courts and prospectively to all decrees issued on or after [the effective date of this act] [effective April 21, 1989].

(2) A person whose existing rights are determined in a temporary preliminary decree or a preliminary decree issued before [the effective date of this act] [effective April 21, 1989] may petition the water judge for relief concerning any matter in the decree prior to enforcement of the decree."

Case Notes

Water Right Held Through Pre-1973 Mesne Conveyances — Summary Judgment Incorrectly Granted — Abandonment of Right Factually Dependent: Duncan, who lived on a tract of land in Madison County, used water from a spring located on property (the large parcel) now owned separately from the parcel (the small parcel) lived on by Duncan. In 1950, Duncan conveyed all the property in what is now the large and small parcels to Baker. In 1951, Baker divided the property, conveying the large parcel and all appurtenances to Halse and reserving the small parcel for herself. Baker made no express reservation of water rights with the reserved property, and the deed to Halse conveying the large parcel made no express grant of water rights. For the next 10 years, Baker made no use of the house located on the small parcel. In 1961, Baker conveyed the small parcel to the Hunts, expressly conveying water rights on the property. In 1963, Halse filed a declaration of vested ground water rights for the "total flow of all springs" located on the large parcel. Fosseco, who acquired the large parcel from Halse, conveyed it, through mesne conveyances, to M.S. Consulting. The Hunts conveyed the small parcel, through mesne conveyances, to the Axtells. All uses of the water were for livestock and domestic use. In 1993, the Axtells filed a notice of water rights with the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation. M.S. Consulting subsequently served the Axtells with notice that their water rights would be cut off in 45 days, and the Axtells brought an action to enjoin the discontinuance of their water supply. The District Court granted summary judgment for the Axtells, and M.S. Consulting appealed. The Supreme Court reviewed the background of the prior appropriation law in Montana, noting that because the current statutes recognize existing water rights, the law before the 1973 statutes were enacted is still the law with regard to water rights acquired before 1973. The Supreme Court reviewed the pre-1973 law and concluded that the water rights appurtenant to all the property passed to Baker but that there was a factual issue whether, as a result of Baker's nonuse of the property and its water rights for over 10 years, Baker had abandoned the water rights conveyed to her by Duncan. If the abandonment occurred, there was no reservation of conveyance and no right to use of the water after that period of nonuse. The issue of abandonment, the Supreme Court noted, depended in turn upon several other issues, such as whether Baker intended to abandon her water right. The Supreme Court also agreed with M.S. Consulting that several other issues of fact raised by the company may also exist, although it noted that these other issues were only material if the District Court ruled a particular way on the question of abandonment. Because there were genuine issues of material fact, the Supreme Court held that the District Court erred in granting summary judgment to the Axtells. Axtell v. M.S. Consulting, 1998 MT 64, 288 M 150, 955 P2d 1362, 55 St. Rep. 276 (1998).

Additional Burden of Proof Beyond Prima Facie Showing: The defendant's introduction into evidence of three notices of appropriation established a prima facie case but did not completely discharge his burden of proof. The defendant still had the burden of showing that all water claimed had been put to a beneficial use within a reasonable period of time. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980).

Insufficient Notice of Appropriation Not Prima Facie Evidence: In enacting section 89-814, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the Legislature established a reward for those parties who comply with section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), by considering a notice of appropriation as prima facie evidence of a claimed water right. However, the former section is to be construed strictly. If the notice does not comply with section 89-810, it is of no evidentiary value. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980). See also Shammel v. Vogl, 144 M 354, 396 P2d 103 (1964); Galahan v. Lewis, 105 M 294, 72 P2d 1018 (1937); Peck v. Simon, 101 M 12, 52 P2d 164 (1935).

Contents of Record of Notice: The record of notice of appropriation of water conforming to the provisions of section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and filed as provided therein is prima facie evidence of its contents. Anderson v. Spear-Morgan Livestock Co., 107 M 18, 79 P2d 667 (1938); Wills v. Morris, 100 M 514, 50 P2d 862 (1935). See Vidal v. Kensler, 100 M 592, 51 P2d 235 (1935).

Delay in Recording Notice: Notices of appropriation of water not recorded within the time provided in the saving clause found in the original recording act (L. 1885, p. 131) are of no evidentiary value in proving the amount and date of an appropriation in case of noncompliance. Galahan v. Lewis, 105 M 294, 72 P2d 1018 (1937).

Verification of Notice:

A water right, when acquired by appropriation, amounts to a grant by the United States or the state, and the appropriator is in position of a grantee. The affidavit required by statute to be attached to a notice of appropriation serves the same purpose as and is of equal dignity with an acknowledgment. Where an appropriation was made by a firm composed of two brothers and the affidavit accompanying the notice of appropriation was verified by one of them, a grantee, as notary public, the verification was void and the notice was not entitled to record. Musselshell Valley Farming & Livestock Co. v. Cooley, 86 M 276, 283 P 213 (1929).

A notice of location of a water right is fatally defective unless it is verified in conformity with section 89-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897).

85-2-228. Federal reserved water rights with priority date of July 1, 1973, or later — process and adjudication — purpose.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 497 in (4), near end before "reserved water right", inserted "federal"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 22, Ch. 497, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 23, Ch. 497, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

Effective Date: Section 4, Ch. 343, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval." Approved April 4, 1991.

85-2-231. Temporary preliminary and preliminary decree.

Compiler's Comments

Contingent Voidness Repealed: Section 9, Ch. 319, L. 2007, repealed sec. 15, Ch. 288, L. 2005, a contingent voidness section concerning fiscal year line item appropriations to fund Montana's water adjudication program. Effective July 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 288 inserted (6) concerning examining claims in basins that were verified. Amendment effective July 1, 2005, and terminates June 30, 2020.

Contingent Voidness: Section 15, Ch. 288, L. 2005, provided: "If at least $2 million is not appropriated in a line item for each fiscal year from state sources other than the water adjudication account provided for in [section 7] [85-2-280], for the purposes of funding Montana's water adjudication program, then [this act] is void."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 174 substituted (2)(c) regarding issuance of an interlocutory decree for former language that read: "This section does not prevent the water judge from issuing an interlocutory decree or other temporary decree, pursuant to 85-2-321 or as provided in subsection (1) of this section, or if such a decree is otherwise necessary for the orderly administration of water rights prior to the issuance of a preliminary decree"; in (3), at beginning, inserted "temporary", near middle, after "supply of water", inserted "or any claim or group of claims", near end, before "preliminary", inserted "temporary", and at end deleted "or portions of the same decree"; in (4), at beginning, inserted "temporary preliminary decree" and deleted second sentence that read: "The water judge shall include in the preliminary decree the contents of a compact negotiated under the provisions of part 7 that has been approved by the legislature and the tribe or federal agency"; in (5), near middle of first sentence after "preliminary decree", deleted "set forth in subsections (1) and (3)"; deleted (6) that read: "(6) In issuing a subsequent preliminary decree, the water judge shall incorporate the temporary preliminary decree for the basin as modified by objections and hearings. The temporary preliminary decree or preliminary decree, as modified after objections and hearings, is enforceable and administrable according to its terms among parties ordered under 85-2-406. The preliminary decree, as modified after objections and hearings, shall upon issuance supersede and replace the temporary preliminary decree"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 28, 1997.

1989 Amendment: Inserted (1) authorizing Water Judge to issue temporary preliminary decree if necessary for orderly adjudication or administration of water rights; in (1)(c) inserted "or as provided in subsection (1) of this section"; inserted (6) requiring Water Judge in issuing preliminary decree to incorporate temporary preliminary decree, as modified, after objections and hearings and providing that preliminary decree, as modified, supersedes and replaces temporary preliminary decree; and made minor changes in form. Amendment effective April 21, 1989.

Severability: Section 6, Ch. 605, L. 1989, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 8, Ch. 605, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies to any temporary preliminary decree or preliminary decree issued on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 21, 1989.

1985 Amendments: Chapter 394 in (1)(d) near end after "temporary decree", inserted "pursuant to 85-2-321 or", and after "decree is", inserted "otherwise".

Chapter 667 near end of (3) after "agency", deleted "whether or not it has been ratified by congress".

Select Committee Bill: Chapter 667, L. 1985, was introduced at the request of the Select Committee on Indian Affairs (now Law and Justice Interim Committee). See Committee report published December 1984 by the Montana Legislative Council.

1981 Amendment: Deleted "Within a reasonable time after the close of the filing period" at the beginning of (1); inserted (1)(c) requiring water judge to consider the contents of an approved compact or filings for federal and Indian reserved rights when issuing a preliminary decree; added the material beginning with "The preliminary decree shall be issued . . ." in (1)(d); inserted (2) authorizing water judge to issue a preliminary decree for a hydrologically interrelated portion of a water division at a time different from the issuance of other preliminary decrees or portions of the same decree; substituted "approved by the legislature and the tribe or federal agency" for "agreed upon by the parties to the compact" in (3).

Code Commissioner Correction: Because of rearrangement of sec. 27, Ch. 697, L. 1979, the Code Commissioner, 1979, added the words "negotiated under the provisions of part 7" to the last sentence of (2).

Rules of Procedure: Rules of procedure (including Rules 1 through 9 of the following) for the Water Courts for the state of Montana were approved by Supreme Court order on October 29, 1981, became effective on March 1, 1982, and apply to all proceedings in the Water Courts on or after that date. Rule 10 was approved and became effective on February 9, 1984. The complete text of the rules follows:

RULES OF THE WATER COURTS FOR THE STATE OF MONTANA

RULE 1. PURPOSE OF RULES AND SUMMARY OF ADJUDICATION PROCESS

Rule 1(a). Authority of Montana water court. The Montana water court has a statutory obligation and the exclusive authority to adjudicate claims of existing water rights. The Montana supreme court establishes these special Montana water court rules of practice and procedure to guide the adjudication of pre-July 1, 1973 water rights.

Rule 1(b). The adjudication process. Briefly, the adjudication process consists of the following steps:

(1) upon order of the Montana supreme court, the filing of statements of claim for uses of water that existed prior to July 1, 1973;

(2) a review of the submitted claim and accompanying materials for clarity and completeness with editing to allow entry into computerized storage;

(3) the compiling of the claim information into a centralized record system by the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (hereinafter referred to as the department);

(4) under the direction of the water court pursuant to §85-2-243, MCA, the department's examination of claims and the reporting of facts, data, and issues pertaining to the claims as set forth in these rules;

(5) the issuance, by the water court, of interlocutory, temporary preliminary, or preliminary decrees based upon the information on the sworn claims, data submitted by the department, additional information obtained by the water judge, and, where appropriate, the contents of approved compacts or the filings for Indian and federal reserved water rights;

(6) the notice and opportunity for interested persons to review and object to the interlocutory, temporary preliminary, or preliminary decrees for good cause;

(7) judicial hearing by the water court on issues raised in these proceedings;

(8) the issuance, by the water court, of final decrees based upon the previous decrees and the judicial determinations made upon hearings; and,

(9) the opportunity for interested parties to review and appeal the final decrees under §85-2-235, MCA.

Rule 2. WATER COURT PRACTICE AND PROCEDURES

Rule 2(a). Citation. These rules shall be known as the Water Right Adjudication Rules and may be cited as Rule __, W.R.Adj.R.

Rule 2(b). Application of other rules. Unless the context of these Rules requires otherwise, the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure (M.R.Civ.P.), the Montana Rules of Evidence (M.R.Evid.), and the Montana Uniform District Court Rules govern the practice of the water courts. Unless the context requires otherwise, the definitions in Rule 2, W.R.C.E.R. apply to these Rules.

Rule 2(c). Water court. The term "water court" in these practice and procedure rules includes water judges and water masters.

Rule 3. ISSUING A DECREE. The chief water judge shall issue an order of reference assigning a basin to a water master. The water master shall review the department's summary report. The water master shall advise the chief water judge in writing when the decree is ready for issuance. If the chief water judge is not satisfied with the decree, the chief water judge may make the necessary modifications and issue the decree. If the water court modifies a claim abstract during the summary report review, it must state its reasons in writing and the department shall place that documentation in the claim file. Upon determination that the decree is ready for issuance, the chief water judge will issue an order for the department to proceed with printing all of the abstracts of existing water rights to be included in the decree. The order shall identify the type of decree to be issued.

Rule 4. PRELIMINARY, TEMPORARY PRELIMINARY, OR OTHER INTERLOCUTORY DECREE. "Preliminary decree," as used in these rules, means a preliminary decree issued in accordance with §85-2-231, MCA. Any other decree of a water court, not a final decree under §85-2-234, MCA, shall be considered a temporary preliminary decree or interlocutory decree.

Rule 5. PROCEDURE FOR FILING OBJECTION TO PRELIMINARY OR TEMPORARY PRELIMINARY DECREES.

Rule 5(a). Notice of objection. The water judge shall provide notice of the objection period in accordance with §85-2-232, MCA. Notices of objection must be filed in compliance with §85-2-233, MCA. The water court shall provide objection forms. The objector shall include a statement of:

(1) the findings and conclusions with which the objector disagrees;

(2) the elements or part of the claim abstract which the objector believes should be modified; and

(3) the grounds and evidence on which the objection is based.

Rule 5(b). Service of objection. The objector must mail a completed copy of the objection to each claimant and complete the certificate of mailing on the objection form before filing the original objection with the water court. If the objector is the sole claimant on the claim, no certificate of mailing is necessary.

Rule 5(c). Filing of objection. Objections must be filed within 180 days after entry of the decree. The water judge may, for good cause shown, extend this time limit up to two additional 90-day periods if application for an extension is made prior to the expiration of the original 180-day period or any extension of it. Section 85-2-233(2), MCA.

Rule 5(d). Extension of objection period. Applications for extensions may be made on forms supplied by the water court. An extension for one objector in a basin is an extension for all other objectors. Any order of extension shall state the specific calendar date on which the period of extension ends.

Rule 6. NOTICE OF THE FILING OF AN OBJECTION AND OPPORTUNITY TO FILE COUNTEROBJECTION.

Rule 6(a). Notice. Pursuant to §85-2-233, MCA, the water court shall notify each person whose claim received an objection that an objection was filed. The notice shall set forth the name of each objector and shall allow an additional 60 days for the person whose claim received an objection to file a counterobjection to any claim of the objector in the decree. Counterobjections are limited to those claims included within the specific decree issued by the water court.

Rule 6(b). Counterobjection. Counterobjections must be filed in compliance with §85-2-233, MCA. The water court shall provide counterobjection forms. The counterobjector shall include a statement of:

(a) the elements or part of the claim abstract which the counterobjector believes should be modified; and

(b) the grounds and evidence on which the counterobjection is based.

Rule 6(c). Service and filing. The counterobjector must mail a copy of the completed counterobjection to the claimants of the claim to which the counterobjection is filed and complete the certificate of mailing on the counterobjection form before filing the original counterobjection with the water court.

Rule 7. ISSUE REMARKS. If not otherwise resolved by the objection process, the water court shall review, resolve, and remove all issue remarks appearing on the abstracts of any claim as directed by §§85-2-247 through 85-2-250, MCA.

Rule 8. CLAIMS CALLED IN ON MOTION OF THE WATER COURT. The water court may issue such orders on its own motion as may be reasonably required to allow it to determine whether a claim accurately reflects its claimed pre-July 1, 1973 beneficial use. The order calling any claim in on motion shall state the basis of the water court's decision to review the claim and shall identify the elements of the claim and the issues to be reviewed. In reviewing claims called in on its own motion, the water court shall generally follow the procedures set forth in §85-2-248, MCA.

Rule 9. NOTICE THAT OBJECTIONS AND COUNTEROBJECTIONS HAVE BEEN FILED AND OPPORTUNITY TO FILE NOTICE OF INTENT TO APPEAR.

Rule 9(a). Objection list. After expiration of the time for filing counterobjections, the water court shall compile an objection list which identifies all claims to which objections or counterobjections were filed, all issue remarks reported by the department, and any claim which the court knows at the time of the compilation of the list will be called in on the court's own motion. The water court shall notify in writing each party named in the water court decree or the successor in interest as documented in the department's centralized record system that the objection list has been compiled, where the objection list can be reviewed, and from where copies of the objection list, objections, counterobjections, and issue remarks may be obtained. The written notice shall set a date on or before which persons other than the claimants, objectors, or counterobjectors to a particular claim shall file a notice of intent to appear with the water court. The water court shall notify the Montana Attorney General, and may also notify other interested parties identified in §85-2-232, MCA, and other water users that the objection list has been prepared. The clerk or person designated by the water judge to mail the written notice shall make a general certificate of mailing certifying that a copy of the notice has been placed in the U.S. Mail, postage prepaid, addressed to each party required to be served the notice. The certificate shall be conclusive evidence of due legal notice that objections and counterobjections have been filed. The notice may also be published once in at least one newspaper of general circulation in the area where the basin, subbasin, or drainage is located.

Rule 9(b). Notice of intent to appear. Any person other than the claimant or objector who intends to appear and participate in further proceedings for any claims or issues included on the objection list must file a notice of intent to appear in compliance with §85-2-233, MCA. The water court shall provide notice of intent to appear forms. The person filing a notice of intent to appear shall specify the claim number and include a statement of the appearing person's legal rights that might be affected by the resolution of the objections or issues involving the specified claim, and the purposes for which further participation is sought. Persons who file notices of intent to appear as provided in this rule shall receive notice of all future proceedings involving the claims specified in their notice and are entitled to participate in the resolution of the issues associated with those claims.

Rule 10. MOTIONS TO AMEND. Pursuant to §85-2-233(6), MCA, claimants may file motions to amend their own claims and objectors may file motions to amend their own objections. A motion to amend must specify the requested amendment and the grounds for such amendment. Upon review, the water court will determine the notice required pursuant to §85-2-233(6), MCA, and issue an appropriate order.

Rule 11. MASTERS.

Rule 11(a). Appointment. Water judges may appoint one or more water masters for the water court or for a particular water division, basin, subbasin, or case.

Rule 11(b). Order of reference. The order of reference to a master may specify or limit the master's powers or may direct the master to report only upon particular issues or to do or perform particular acts or to receive or report evidence only, and may fix the time or place for beginning or closing the hearings before the filing of the master's report. Subject to the specifications or limitations stated in the order, the master has and shall exercise the power to regulate all proceedings in every hearing before the master and to take all measures necessary and proper for the efficient performance of the master's duties specified under the order.

Rule 11(c). Powers and duties. The water master has the general powers and duties granted a master by [former] Rule 53(c), (d), and (e), M.R.Civ.P. [now superseded].

Rule 12. DEPARTMENT ASSISTANCE.

Rule 12(a). Direction. The water court may at any time direct the department to provide such information and assistance as may be required by the water court to adjudicate claims of existing rights, as provided in §85-2-243, MCA.

Rule 12(b). Requests for assistance.

(1) All water court requests for department assistance issued after the expiration of the notice of intent to appear filing period and directed at the adjudication of a specific claim or claims contained in the decree shall be made in writing, delivered to the department, and served upon all parties in the water court proceeding that are identified on the water court service list involving the claim or claims which are the subject of the request for assistance. The request for assistance shall:

(i) state the basis for the request for assistance. If the request for assistance has been initiated at the request of the department, the water court's written request for assistance shall identify the information conveyed to the water court by the department and the department employee who conveyed the information to the water court;

(ii) specify the elements of each water right claim or claims to be reviewed by the department;

(iii) if known, identify the department employee who will conduct the review;

(iv) notify all persons on the water court service list of their right to submit written information to the department concerning the elements of the water right claim or claims being reviewed by the department and shall require all persons who submit information to mail a complete copy to all persons on the water court service list;

(v) specify a time period for completion of the department's review and the submission of the department's memorandum; and

(vi) direct the department to file the original memorandum with the water court and mail a complete copy of the memorandum to all persons on the water court service list.

(2) The department must document all contact with the claimant or any other person regarding the water right claim as provided in Rules 43 and 44 W.R.C.E.R. All persons on the water court service list are entitled to notice and reasonable opportunity to be present during any field investigation conducted in conjunction with the request for assistance.

(3) If necessary during the course of the review, the department may communicate in writing with the presiding water judge or water master to discuss the substance of the review being conducted by the department. All such communication and court response must be in writing with full service upon all persons on the water court service list.

Rule 12 (c). Field investigations. Upon written order of the water court, the department shall conduct field investigations of claims. Unless otherwise directed by the water court, a field investigation shall be conducted with the claimant or a claimant's representative in attendance. The other persons on the water court service list may attend for the purpose of observing the department's field investigation.

(1) The water court's written order for field investigation shall:

(i) state the basis for the order;

(ii) specify the elements of each water right claim or claims to be field investigated by the department;

(iii) if known, identify the department employee who will conduct the field investigation;

(iv) specify a time period for completion of the field investigation and the submission of the department's field investigation report; and

(v) direct the department to file the original field investigation report with the water court and mail a complete copy of the report to all persons on the water court service list.

(2) When the water court orders a field investigation, the department shall contact the claimant or the claimant's representative to establish the date and time of the field investigation and, when necessary, to arrange access. The date and time for the field investigation shall be confirmed through a letter from the department to the claimant with a copy sent to the water court, the person who has arranged access, and all other persons on the water court service list.

(3) The department shall send its confirmation letter at least 20 days before the intended date of the field investigation. The 20-day notice period may be shortened by order of the water court, or waived by written agreement of all persons on the water court service list.

(4) The field investigation data will be documented in accord with Rules 43 and 44 W.R.C.E.R. The department shall file the original field investigation report with the water court and mail a complete copy of the report, including a certificate of mailing, to all persons on the water court service list.

(5) If necessary, the department may communicate in writing with the presiding water judge or water master to discuss the substance of the field investigation. All such written communication must be served upon all persons on the water court service list.

(6) The water court may set a deadline for parties to comment on the department's final memoranda for requests for assistance or on the department's field investigation reports.

(7) This Rule does not limit the authority of the water court to issue appropriate orders under the provisions of [former] Rule 34, M.R.Civ.P. [now superseded], or Rule 614, M.R.Evid.

Rule 13. DEPARTMENT DATA.

Rule 13(a). Admissibility. In any proceedings before the water court, any investigative reports, data, or other written information produced or promulgated by the department during examination or under the direction of the water court pursuant to §85-2-243, MCA, shall be admissible without further foundation and not subject to the hearsay objection in situations where the department is not itself a party. Due provisions shall be made by the water court to allow any party to cross-examine the department employee who provided the assistance under §85-2-243, MCA, and to controvert the report, data, or other information by other evidence.

Rule 13(b). Limitations. If the department fails to comply with the protocols specified in Rule 12, W.R.Adj.R., the water court, upon appropriate motion by any party, may issue an order prohibiting or limiting the department employee's testimony at a hearing on the water right claim, and may strike all or portions of the memorandum prepared in response to the request for assistance or a field investigation report prepared by the department.

Rule 14. CONTINUANCES. Requests for continuance of any hearing or proceedings in the water court must be made in accordance with the Uniform District Court Rules, and served upon all interested parties not less than 5 days before the date set for hearing or proceedings. The water court will grant the continuance upon a substantial showing of good cause. The water court may grant an untimely request for a continuance upon a showing of exigent circumstances.

Rule 15. DISCOVERY. Parties may obtain discovery as provided by the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure. The water court, upon motion of a party or on its own initiative, may enter an order controlling or directing the course of discovery.

Rule 16. SETTLEMENT CONFERENCES AND MEDIATION. The water court may require parties to participate in settlement conferences or may assign the matter to a mediator. In the event the water court assigns an outside mediator, the parties shall share and pay the expense of hiring the mediator as directed by the water court.

Rule 17. SETTLEMENTS.

Rule 17(a). Approval required. The water court is not bound by settlement agreements. Any settlement reached by the parties is subject to review and approval by the water court. Settlement includes the documents filed by a claimant in cases where the claimant is the only party.

Rule 17(b). Expansion of claim. If a settlement seeks to enlarge or expand an element of a claim and the documentation provided by the parties does not include sufficient evidence to meet the burden of proof, the water court shall provide notice to the settling parties of the deficient documentation and allow reasonable time for the parties to file additional supporting evidence. If sufficient evidence to meet the burden of proof is not presented within the time allowed, the water court shall not enlarge or expand the element of the claim.

Rule 17(c). Reduction of claim. The claimant of a water right claim may waive the advantage of §85-2-227, MCA. If a claimant agrees to reduce or limit an element of a claim, the water court does not need to determine whether the burden of proof has been met. The water court may accept a claimant's requested reduction or limitation without further presentation of evidence, unless there is an unresolved issue remark on the claim, in which case §85-2-248, MCA, must be applied.

Rule 18. PRETRIAL CONFERENCE. Pretrial conferences shall be conducted in accordance with and governed by [former] Rule 16, M.R.Civ.P. [now superseded], and Uniform District Court Rule 5, insofar as the same is applicable to procedures in the water courts. Final pretrial conferences shall be the rule rather than the exception. The water court may order such preliminary pretrial conferences as may serve to expedite formulation of issues of law or fact or the course of the litigation.

Rule 19. BURDEN OF PROOF. A properly filed Statement of Claim for Existing Water Right is prima facie proof of its content pursuant to §85-2-227, MCA. This prima facie proof may be contradicted and overcome by other evidence that proves, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the elements of the claim do not accurately reflect the beneficial use of the water right as it existed prior to July 1, 1973. This is the burden of proof for every assertion that a claim is incorrect including for claimants objecting to their own claims.

Rule 20. NO RIGHT TO JURY TRIAL. Right to trial by jury does not exist in this adjudication of existing water rights.

Rule 21. HEARINGS.

Rule 21(a). Subpoenas. The parties may procure the attendance of witnesses before the water court by the issuance and service of subpoenas as provided in [former] Rule 45, M.R.Civ.P. [now superseded]. Failure by any person, without adequate excuse, to obey a subpoena served upon that person may subject that person to the consequences, penalties, and remedies provided in [former] Rules 37 and 45, M.R.Civ.P. [now superseded].

Rule 21(b). Recordings. All hearings held before the water court may be recorded by audio tape, audio-visual, stenographic, electronic, or other appropriate means. If a hearing was held before a water master, the water master shall file a transcript or recording of the proceedings and of the evidence and the original exhibits.

Rule 21(c). Procedure in evidentiary hearings involving only the claimant. In an evidentiary hearing involving only the claimant, the order of procedure shall be:

(1) introductory and explanatory remarks by the water court;

(2) discussion of the format of the proceeding;

(3) testimony of the department and introduction of any report, data, or other written information prepared by the department;

(4) cross-examination of the department by the claimant;

(5) opening statement of the claimant;

(6) introduction of evidence and testimony by the claimant and the claimant's witnesses;

(7) closing statement of the claimant; and

(8) optional briefing schedule for the claimant.

Rule 21(d). Procedure in evidentiary hearing involving the claimants and other parties. In an evidentiary hearing involving the claimant and other parties, the order of procedure shall be formulated during the final prehearing conference as required by [former] Rule 16(d), M.R.Civ.P. [now superseded], and included in the final prehearing order.

Rule 21(e). Modification of abstract. Following the conclusion of the evidentiary hearing and the expiration of any post-hearing briefing schedule, the water court shall review the evidence in the record, render its written decision in accordance with the burden of proof set forth in Rule 19, W.R.Adj.R., and modify the abstract of each applicable claim in accordance with the written decision.

Rule 21(f). Enforcement. Until a water judge adopts or modifies a master's report, any claim modified by the master's report may not be enforced under Rule 31, W.R.Adj.R.

Rule 22. SANCTIONS. If a claimant, objector, or intervenor fails to appear at a scheduled conference or hearing, or fails to comply with an order issued by the water court, the water court, upon motion, or its own initiative, may issue such orders of sanction with regard thereto as are just. Sanctions applied against claimants may include termination of the claim; or modification of the claim to conform with data provided by the department, information obtained by the court, or information included in an objection. Sanctions applied against objectors and intervenors may include dismissal of the objector or intervenor from the proceeding.

Rule 23. MASTER'S REPORT. As stated in [former] Rule 53(e), M.R.Civ.P. [now superseded], the master shall prepare a report upon the matters submitted to the master by the order of reference. If required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law, the master shall set them forth in the report. The master shall file the report with the clerk of the water court unless otherwise directed by the order of reference. The clerk of the water court shall serve notice of the filing and a copy of the report on all parties who appeared before the master and who were not previously dismissed from the proceeding. At the discretion of the water court, notice of the filing and a copy of the master's report may also be given to other claimants or other persons not otherwise appearing before the master in that proceeding.

Subject to [former] Rule 6, M.R.Civ.P. [now superseded], any party to the proceeding before the master may file written objections with the water court within 10 days after the service date of the notice of filing of the master's report. In more complex cases, the water master may enlarge the objection period to 30 days. Upon request, a 10-day extension to the objection period may be freely granted. Any party filing objections shall also serve a copy of the objections upon the other parties on the service list. A hearing will not be held on the objections unless requested by a party or deemed necessary by the water judge. The water judge shall accept the master's findings of fact unless they are clearly erroneous. After reviewing the report, the water judge may adopt, modify, or reject the report, in whole or in part, or may receive further evidence or recommit it with instructions.

Rule 24. FINAL DECREES.

Rule 24(a). Issuance. A final decree shall be issued for a basin, subbasin, or drainage after all objections, counterobjections, and issue remarks have been resolved; all motions to amend and on motion proceedings have been completed; and the requirements of §85-2-237(1), MCA, within the water division have been satisfied.

Rule 24(b). Notice of entry. Notice of entry of a final decree shall be sent to all parties named in the decree whose rights are stated, determined or affected thereby. The notice of entry of the final decree shall also be published once in a newspaper of general circulation in the area where the basin, subbasin, or drainage set forth in the decree is located.

Rule 24(c). Inspection of final decree. The notice of entry of final decree shall be in writing, and shall state where in the water division and for what period of time a copy of the final decree may be examined by the parties or interested persons. Any person may obtain a copy of the final decree upon payment of a fee covering the cost of printing or electronic copying.

Rule 25. APPEALS. Appeals to the Montana supreme court by those parties entitled to an appeal under §85-2-235, MCA, shall be taken in the manner specified in [former] Rule 72, M.R.Civ.P. [now superseded], and made within the time frames permitted in Rule 5, M.R.App.P. The notice of appeal shall be in the form prescribed by Rule 4(c), M.R.App.P. The notice of appeal must also include a specific listing of all water right numbers for which the appeal is taken. Within 30 days of the filing of the notice of appeal, the water court may revise the caption of the proceeding to reflect the current status and posture of the parties, file a copy with the clerk of supreme court, and serve a copy on the parties.

Rule 26. SPLIT CLAIMS. The water court may split claims into separate claims at any time prior to the final decree upon request of the claimants, or on its own initiative. The remarks in Rule 38(b), W.R.C.E.R. or similar remarks may be added.

Rule 27. PUBLIC NOTICE OF ADJUDICATION PROCEEDINGS. The water court may provide notice of adjudication proceedings to the public through direct mail, newspaper advertising, public meetings, radio and television, the internet, or by other means.

Rule 28. PERPETUATION OF TESTIMONY. A person who desires to perpetuate testimony regarding the historical beneficial use of any water right claim filed in accordance with §85-2-221, MCA, may file a verified petition with the water court. The procedure set forth in [former] Rule 27, M.R.Civ.P. [now superseded], shall be followed, but each reference in that rule to the district court shall refer to the water court and notice to expected adverse parties shall be served by mail to the most recently updated address documented in the department's centralized record system. If the completed deposition is filed with the water court, it may be placed in the claim file of the claim involved in the deposition. If more than one claim is involved, the deposition will be placed in the lowest numbered claim file of the claims involved and a notice of that filing location shall be inserted in the other claim files involved in the deposition. Alternatively, the depositions may be placed in the case file containing the verified petition and a notice of filing location shall be placed in the file of the claims identified in the deposition.

Rule 29. MISCELLANEOUS FEES. The chief water judge shall periodically establish a schedule of fees for copies of filed and microfiche documents and for fax and other electronic transmissions that do not exceed the highest fee charged for similar services by the state law library, clerks of court, or the department.

Rule 30. LATE CLAIM ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS AND EXPENSES. On or before July 1 of each odd numbered year, the chief water judge shall establish a schedule of administrative costs and expenses to assess against late claimants as required by §85-2-225, MCA. The assessment shall be determined by calculating the number of hours a water judge or master works on a late claim and multiplying that number against a uniform hourly rate. The uniform hourly rate shall be derived by dividing the water court's annual budget by 2080 hours and dividing that quotient by the number of FTEs authorized by the legislature for the water court. If late claims are consolidated and reviewed with non-late claims and the time devoted to the late claim cannot be separately assessed to a late claim, the water court shall prorate the assessment to fairly allocate the costs of working on a late claim. Unless the fees are waived by the water court, the minimum assessment will be $20.00. If the assessment is not paid within 60 days after notice is provided, the water court shall hold a show cause hearing to determine why the late claim or claims should not be terminated for failing to pay the assessment. If the assessment is not paid or adequate explanation provided, the claim may be terminated. Late claim costs and expenses will not be assessed against withdrawn or terminated claims.

Rule 31. WATER COURT DECREE ENFORCEMENT. Upon written request from a district court, water court decrees may be enforced pursuant to §§3-7-212, 85-2-406(3) and (4), and 85-5-101, MCA.

Rule 31(a). Preliminary procedure. Upon receipt of a district court request for enforcement, the water court shall:

(1) determine the scope of the enforcement project and project staffing in consultation with the department; and

(2) assess the status of all proceedings within the proposed enforcement area to confirm that all objections have been resolved and that the decree is ready for enforcement.

Rule 31(b). Identification of diversions and instream uses. If the decree is ready for enforcement, the water court will:

(1) identify every diversion and instream use within the enforcement area;

(2) map diversions and instream uses as needed;

(3) identify ditch names as necessary;

(4) note any point of diversion discrepancies or other issues that might adversely affect the distribution of water under the water court's tabulation of existing water rights; and

(5) notify the claimant of these discrepancies or issues. The water court may resolve any discrepancy or issue through the procedures set forth in §§85-2-233(6) and 85-2-248, MCA.

Rule 31(c). Public meetings. The water court may conduct public meetings on any proposed decree enforcement.

Rule 31(d). Tabulations. The water court shall provide tabulations of existing water rights within the proposed enforcement area to the district courts.

Rule 31(e). Controversies. If a water distribution controversy arises on a source that is included in the enforcement project, a dissatisfied water user may file a complaint with the district court pursuant to §85-5-301, MCA, and petition the district court to certify the matter to the chief water judge pursuant to §85-2-406(2)(b), MCA.

Rule 32. ASSISTANCE TO DISTRICT COURTS. The water court may assist the district courts in developing water user billing systems, water commissioner training, and any other requirement to facilitate the distribution of water under the water court decree and tabulations.

85-2-232. Availability of temporary preliminary or preliminary decree.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 526 inserted (1)(g) providing that the water court's notice of the opportunity to object must contain information on the right to appeal a water court decision. Amendment effective April 28, 2005.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 389 in (4) inserted second sentence requiring fee to be deposited in state general fund. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 197 in (1)(c) and (1)(d) inserted language requiring Water Judge to serve by mail a notice of availability of the temporary preliminary decree or preliminary decree; at end of (1)(b), (1)(d), and (1)(e) inserted language providing for notice of availability of decrees to be sent to successors of the original owners of water rights; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 23, 1995.

1989 Amendment: In four places, before "preliminary decree", inserted "temporary preliminary decree or"; in three places inserted "within the decreed basin"; in (1), after "decree", inserted "issued for a basin" and in third sentence, before "permit", deleted "beneficial water use" and after "permit" inserted "to beneficially use water within the decreed basin"; inserted (2) requiring publication of a notice of availability of preliminary decree in three newspapers where basin is located for 3 consecutive weeks before final decree is issued; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 21, 1989.

Severability: Section 6, Ch. 605, L. 1989, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 8, Ch. 605, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies to any temporary preliminary decree or preliminary decree issued on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 21, 1989.

1983 Amendment: In first sentence of (1), after "existing right" inserted "and to the purchaser under contract for deed, as defined in 70-20-115, of property in connection with which a claim of existing right has been filed".

2005 Amendment: Chapter 526 in (5)(a) in first sentence near middle after "records" inserted "and shall notify the attorney general"; and inserted (11) providing that issue remarks must be resolved before the issuance of a final decree. Amendment effective April 28, 2005.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 174 in (1)(a), in introductory clause, substituted "subsection (9)" for "subsection (7)"; in (1)(c), at end of first sentence, inserted "issued before March 28, 1997"; inserted (1)(d) setting out allowable reasons for objecting or counterobjecting to a matter contained in a prior decree; in (2), at beginning, substituted "Objections" for "If a hearing is requested, the request"; inserted (3) regarding notification of parties whose claim received an objection; in (4), at beginning, substituted "Objections and counterobjections" for "The request for a hearing"; in (5)(a), in first sentence after "filing", substituted "counterobjections under subsection (3)" for "objections and upon timely receipt of a request for a hearing" and after "preliminary decree" substituted "or that person's successor as documented in the department records that objections and counterobjections have been filed" for "that a hearing has been requested" and in fifth sentence, after "conducted", inserted "in the same manner"; inserted (5)(b) allowing the parties to participate in settlement conferences or mediation; inserted (6) regarding public notice provisions; in (10) substituted "subsection (9)" for "subsection (7)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 28, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 421 in (1)(a) inserted "and subject to the provisions of subsection (7)"; inserted (1)(b) defining good cause shown; in (3), after "must", deleted "contain a precise statement of the findings and conclusions in the temporary preliminary decree or preliminary decree with which the department or person requesting the hearing disagrees"; inserted (7) concerning dismissal of objection pertaining to previously decreed element; inserted (8) concerning applicability of subsection (7); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 13, 1995.

1989 Amendment: At beginning of (1)(a) substituted language requiring a hearing, upon showing of good cause, on objection to temporary preliminary or preliminary decree for "Upon objection to the"; in (1)(a)(ii) inserted "temporary preliminary decree or"; in (1)(a)(iii) substituted "within the basin entitled to receive notice under 85-2-232(1)" for language entitling person showing good cause to a hearing before judge; inserted (1)(a)(iv) requiring hearing, upon showing of good cause, on objection to decree by any person claiming use of water from sources in other basins hydrologically connected to sources in decreed basin and who is entitled to statutory notice; inserted (1)(b) providing that a person does not waive right to preliminary decree by failing to object to temporary preliminary decree and outlining under what circumstances a person who was a party when an objection was previously litigated and resolved in a temporary preliminary decree may subsequently raise an objection in a preliminary decree; in first sentence of (2) increased filing time from "90 days" to "180 days", before "entry" deleted "notice of" and inserted "temporary preliminary decree or" and in second sentence, after "limit", substituted "up to two" for "an", substituted "90-day periods" for "90 days", and after "made" substituted "prior to expiration of the original 180-day period or any extension of it" for "within 90 days after notice of entry of the preliminary decree"; in (3) and (4), before "preliminary decree", inserted "temporary preliminary decree or"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 21, 1989.

Applicability: Section 8, Ch. 605, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies to any temporary preliminary decree or preliminary decree issued on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 21, 1989.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (5) barring a subsequent cause of action upon failure to object to a preliminary decree in a compact negotiated and ratified with an Indian tribe or the federal government; and inserted (6) describing procedures following invalidation of a compact with an Indian tribe or federal agency.

1981 Amendment: Increased the additional time extension from 30 to 90 days in (2).

Standing to Challenge Award of Water Right: A party has standing to challenge a water right only if it conflicts with those granted to him. Thus, he has no standing to challenge a right to water from a source in which he has no water right. However, he may challenge a water right from a source from which he has a water right whether the challenged right is prior or subsequent to his own. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. 85-2-234. Final decree.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 526 in (1) near middle after "held" inserted "and on the final resolution of all issue remarks, as defined in 85-2-250" and deleted former second sentence that read: "If no request for a hearing is filed within the time allowed, the preliminary decree automatically becomes final, and the water judge shall enter it as the final decree." Amendment effective April 28, 2005.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 629 near beginning of (3), after "persons", substituted "who have filed a claim in accordance with 85-2-221" for "required by 85-2-221 to file a claim for an existing right"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution provides that all existing rights to the use of any waters for any useful or beneficial purpose are recognized and confirmed; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution requires the Legislature to provide for the administration, control, and regulation of water rights and to establish a system of centralized records for such rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature established a procedure for the general adjudication of existing rights to the use of water and provided in section 85-2-226, MCA, that the failure to file a claim of existing right on or before the deadline established under section 85-2-221, MCA, would establish a conclusive abandonment of the right; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court, in In the Matter of the Adjudication of the Water Rights Within the Yellowstone River, 253 Mont. 167, 832 P.2d 1210 (1992), has determined that the failure to file a statement of claim to an existing right to the use of water on or before April 30, 1982, resulted in the forfeiture of that right; and

WHEREAS, it has come to the attention of the Legislature that the forfeiture of water rights for failure to timely file a claim has in some instances caused hardship, and the Legislature accordingly desires to provide water rights claimants with one more opportunity to file a water rights claim in the general adjudication; and

WHEREAS, in so doing, the Legislature recognizes that the adjudication process will not be completed for many years but that a substantial amount of progress has already occurred in the adjudication, specifically in the area of water rights compacts with Indian tribes and the federal government and in decrees and stipulations involving individual claimants, and thus the Legislature believes that it is necessary to ensure that parties who have been recognized as having filed claims on or before April 30, 1982, and holders of federal reserved water rights are not adversely affected by the inclusion of new parties in the adjudication by subjecting the right to file those claims in remission to certain terms and conditions; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide protection for timely filed claimants from incurring additional costs or from being adversely affected by justifiable reliance on the presumption of abandonment; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide a conclusive adjudication of existing water rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature recognizes that according a privilege to file additional statements of claim presents a potential for abuse by those who may attempt to refile previously adjudicated claims, and the Legislature thus believes that the courts should deal harshly with any abuses by such measures as, without limitation, the imposition of sanctions under [former] Rule 11, Montana Rules of Civil Procedure [now superseded]; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature determines that the deadline for filing water right claims as provided in this bill appropriately balances the interests at stake in the adjudication.

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds it is appropriate to make the following amendments to sections 85-2-102, 85-2-211 [now repealed], 85-2-213, 85-2-221, 85-2-225, 85-2-226, 85-2-234, 85-2-237, and 85-2-306, MCA, in order to provide for the acceptance of late claims to the use of water under the conditions set forth in this bill. Additionally, the Legislature directs the Water Policy Committee, in coordination with the Department of Justice, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, and the Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission, to conduct an interim study regarding certain late claim issues."

Saving Clause: Section 11, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] does not affect proceedings that were begun before [passage and approval of this act] [approved May 11, 1993] in which relief for damages have been sought based upon the diversion, impoundment, or withdrawal of water without a water right established under state law."

Severability — Partial Nonseverability: Section 12, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "(1) If a part of [this act] is invalid, all valid parts that are severable from the invalid part remain in effect. If a part of [this act] is invalid in one or more of its applications, the part remains in effect in all valid applications that are severable from the invalid applications.

(2) It is the intent of the legislature that each part of [this act] is essentially dependent upon [section 4], which amends 85-2-221, and that if one part of [section 4], except subsection (3)(f)(ii), is held unconstitutional or invalid, all other parts of [this act] are invalid."

1989 Amendment: Inserted (4) relating to tabulation of water rights and their priorities in final decree; and inserted (8) relating to correction of clerical mistakes in final decree.

Severability: Section 2, Ch. 426, L. 1989, was a severability clause.

Retroactive and Prospective Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 426, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all final decrees that have been issued by the Montana water courts and prospectively to all final decrees issued on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective October 1, 1989.

1987 Amendment: In (5)(b), after "water", deleted "rate, and volume" and after "right" inserted "as follows"; and inserted (5)(b)(i) through (5)(b)(iii) requiring final water decree to state amount of water by flow rate for direct flow rights, by volume for rights not susceptible to flow rate measurement, or by flow rate and volume for rights determined by Water Judge to require both. Amendment applies retroactively to decrees issued by a Water Judge under Title 85, ch. 2. part 2, after April 30, 1982.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 438, L. 1987, provided: "The legislature intends that water rights should not be quantified in a temporary preliminary, preliminary, or final decree except as historically defined in Montana and except where a water judge determines that quantification of both volume and flow rate are required to adequately administer the right. For example, most irrigation water rights have been defined in Montana only by flow rate, reservoir rights have been commonly defined by volume, and hydropower rights have been defined by both flow rate and volume. The courts retain discretionary power to quantify water rights in terms of their historic definitions. It is the intent of the legislature that the water judges exercise their discretionary power on all existing and future decrees to reduce, to the extent possible, objections to water rights that have not historically been defined by volume."

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 438, L. 1987, provided: "This act applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all decrees issued by a water judge under Title 85, chapter 2, part 2, after April 30, 1982."

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2) requiring terms of compact to be included in the final decree; in (3) inserted "and of any federal agency or Indian tribe possessing water rights arising under federal law, required by 85-2-702 to file claims"; in (4) inserted "federal agency, and Indian tribe"; in (5) inserted "arising under the laws of the state of Montana"; and inserted (6) listing requirements for a final decree for a person, tribe, or federal agency possessing federal water rights.

Select Committee Bill: Chapter 667, L. 1985, was introduced at the request of the Select Committee on Indian Affairs (now Law and Justice Interim Committee). The Legislature did not adopt the exact version proposed by the Committee. See Committee report published December 1984 by the Montana Legislative Council.

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

District Court Error in Restraining Use of Contracted Irrigation Water: Micks contracted to purchase the right to 775 acre-feet of water from the Deadman's Basin Water Users Association, to be appropriated from the Deadman's Basin Reservoir, in order to irrigate a hay crop. In April 2000, the District Court appointed two Water Commissioners to distribute the reservoir water pursuant to a rotation plan. In August 2000, the District Court, on its own motion, found that the water level in the reservoir had reached a critical level, that the remaining water was necessary to maintain domestic, municipal, stock, and wildlife usage, and that the irrigation of crops from the river was prohibited as long as the reservoir level remained critically low. Micks determined that he had used only 431 acre-feet of his contracted 775 acre-feet, and based on his limited usage and other reasons, he presumed that the District Court prohibition did not apply to him, so he continued to irrigate his hay crop. Micks' continued irrigation was discovered, and he was ordered by the District Court to show cause why he should not be held in contempt for failure to comply with the prohibition order. Micks requested that the District Court reconsider its order, but the request was denied, so Micks appealed. The Supreme Court noted that under Mildenberger v. Galbraith, 249 M 161, 815 P2d 130 (1991), and Baker Ditch Co. v. District Court, 251 M 251, 824 P2d 260 (1992), the jurisdiction to interpret and determine existing water rights rests exclusively with the Water Courts and that although the District Court has the authority to supervise the distribution of previously adjudicated water or to enforce an existing water decree and may in certain cases fill in a pre-1973 decree with further delineations, such as time or season of use and acreage of application, in this case, the District Court made a priority determination regarding domestic and irrigation water consumption based on the court's own inclinations, exceeding its authority to simply fill in a water decree with further delineations. Micks' contract unambiguously required a pro rata reduction in water distribution when an inadequate amount existed to satisfy outstanding water purchase contracts. Therefore, the District Court erred as a matter of law when it employed a first come, first served policy in contravention of the water contract. Denial of Micks' motion to reconsider the prohibition order was reversible error, and his motion to restrain the Water Commissioners from interfering with use of Deadman's Basin Reservoir irrigation water to which he was entitled should have been granted. In re Petition of Deadman's Basin Water Users Ass'n to Appoint Water Comm'r to Distribute Stored Water, 2002 MT 15, 308 M 168, 40 P3d 387 (2002).

Jurisdiction of District Court to "Update" Old Water Rights Decree — Statute Governing Complaints by Dissatisfied Users Inapplicable: Pursuant to a previous writ of supervisory control, a remand to the District Court, and findings entered by the Senior Water Master, the Supreme Court found that the Order Authorizing Updated Decree, entered by the judges of the Fourth Judicial District in January of 1989, was beyond the jurisdiction of the District Court. The order was intended to deal with the problem of a 1902 water rights decree by a District Court, in which the judge adjudicated 27 water rights on Carlton Creek, that had become so brittle with age and damaged by time that the decree could not be readily handled. In the process of updating and reissuing the 1902 order, the Supreme Court found that the Fourth Judicial District Judges had actually made a de facto adjudication of water rights in an overly appropriated drainage and that that adjudication had been undertaken without notice and hearing to the holders of certain of those water rights. Citing Mildenberger v. Galbraith, 249 M 161, 815 P2d 130 (1991), and Baker Ditch Co. v. District Court, 251 M 251, 824 P2d 260 (1992), the Supreme Court held that under subsection (6) of this section, it is within the sole jurisdiction of the Water Court to determine such things as priority dates, flow rates, place of use, and means of diversion with respect to a water right. The Supreme Court also held that the matters adjudicated by the decree were not within the scope of matters cognizable under 85-5-301 because that section concerns the correct administration of a water rights decree while the Updated Decree attempts to change the terms of the decree itself. For these reasons, the Supreme Court vacated the 1989 Updated Decree. State ex rel. Jones v. District Court, 283 M 1, 938 P2d 1312, 54 St. Rep. 460 (1997).

No Right of Appeal Except From Final Judgment: There is no right of appeal granted to a water right claimant under the state water rights adjudication process except from a final decree entered under this section. In re Adjudication of Sage Creek Water Rights, 234 M 243, 763 P2d 644, 45 St. Rep. 1876 (1988).

"Beneficial Use": No matter how a water right is expressed in the decrees of the Water Court, that expression of amount is not the final determining factor. Beneficial use is the basis, the measure, and the limit of all rights to the use of water. McDonald v. St., 43 St. Rep. 576 (1986), rehearing denied, 220 M 519, 722 P2d 598, 43 St. Rep. 1397 (1986).

Expression of Water Rights in Volume Rather than Flow Rate — Not Unconstitutional: Even though almost every irrigation water right prior to the 1973 water use law was expressed in flow rate, the requirement of 85-2-234(5)(b) that the final decree state "the amount of water, rate, and volume, included in the right" is not unconstitutional under Article IX, sec. 3(1) of the Montana Constitution. The amount, rate, and volume are at all times subject to the requirement of beneficial use. McDonald v. St., 43 St. Rep. 576 (1986), rehearing denied, 220 M 519, 722 P2d 598, 43 St. Rep. 1397 (1986).

Supreme Court Original Jurisdiction Over Declaratory Action Concerning Statewide Water Adjudication: The Supreme Court had power to determine an action for declaratory judgment involving the constitutionality of the requirement in 85-2-234 that final water decrees state "the amount of water, rate, and volume, included in the right". The issue affects all rights in the statewide adjudication process. Determination of the issue by the Supreme Court: (1) will provide guidance to the water court; (2) is in the interests of judicial economy; and (3) would serve the public policy of the state by expediting the determination of existing water rights. McDonald v. St., 43 St. Rep. 576 (1986), rehearing denied, 220 M 519, 722 P2d 598, 43 St. Rep. 1397 (1986).

Appeal of Water Court Order Regarding Two Parties Before Final Decree — Rule 54(b) Certification of Tort Issues: A Water Court order awarding priorities between two parties is a final and appealable order even though the basin-wide adjudication has not been completed. It is necessary that the parties' respective irrigation water allowances be determined without their having to wait for the basin-wide decree before appealing to the Supreme Court. The fact that trespass and damage claims have not yet been decided does not deprive the Supreme Court of jurisdiction to hear the appeal. The Water Court properly entered a Rule 54(b) certification. The determination of these claims is beyond the jurisdiction of the Water Court, but they cannot be decided until the water rights are resolved. Hill v. Merrimac Cattle Co., Inc., 211 M 479, 687 P2d 59, 41 St. Rep. 1504 (1984).

"All Existing Rights": The right to acquire water rights is a valuable right, and its value often depends on its priority. Hence, to deprive plaintiff of his priority by dismissal because the petition was filed under former law is to deprive him of an existing and valuable water right. Gen. Agriculture Corp. v. Moore, 166 M 510, 534 P2d 859 (1975).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Amount of Water Appropriated — Lack of Capacity at Diversion Point: An appropriator could not acquire a right to more water than his ditch would carry, if the ditch could not carry more than the headgate capacity. Because of lack of capacity at the diversion point, the Supreme Court rejected as inherently improbable evidence of a greater appropriation and reduced the award on the basis of its independent review of the transcript. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979). Rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980).

Sufficiency of Decree: Under section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), a decree is sufficiently definite if it designates the owners of the various water rights, their priority dates, the amount of the awards in miner's inches, and the source of the water. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979). Rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980).

Collateral Attack: A decree giving an appropriator the right to use water on certain named land outside the drainage area where appropriated could not be attacked in a later proceeding on the ground that appropriator had never applied water to that land. McIntosh v. Graveley, 159 M 72, 495 P2d 186 (1972).

Date of Appropriation Where Statute Is Not Complied With:

Where a ditch was not constructed within a reasonable time after date of notice of appropriation, the date of appropriation would not relate back to the date of such notice but would date from the time the water was actually used. Clausen v. Armington, 123 M 1, 212 P2d 440 (1949).

A prior appropriator may acquire a valid water right by a completed ditch, actual diversion of the water, and its application to a beneficial use without complying with the statute and have a right which is good against everyone, except against an appropriator who complies with the statute before the first claimant has applied the water to a beneficial use. Vidal v. Kensler, 100 M 592, 51 P2d 235 (1935); Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897).

Of two claimants of water, neither of whom had complied with the statute, he who first completes his ditch and puts it to a beneficial use has the prior right, although he began to build his ditch after the ditch of the other claimant had been commenced. Murray v. Tingley, 20 M 260, 50 P 723 (1897), but see Wright v. Cruse, 37 M 177, 95 P 370 (1908).

Extent of Use in Terms of Flow Per Unit of Time: The fact that for many years the courts in water right decrees have followed the custom of expressing water rights in terms of flow per unit of time without stating during how many hours or days the water could be taken or defining the volume of water which could be used may not be taken as an adjudication that appropriations were of an absolutely uninterrupted flow, thereby removing the established limitation of the appropriator's right to water actually taken and beneficially applied, or to expand appropriations to the detriment of subsequent appropriators. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

Beneficial Use — Measurement of Water:

The rights of appropriators of water may not be measured entirely by what they claimed in their notices of appropriation but must be measured by their beneficial use thereof over reasonable periods; consideration must be given to the extent and manner of their use, the character of the land upon which used, and the general necessities of the case, as well as whether the stream is furnished by usual rains or snows, extraordinary rain or snowfall, or by springs or seepage. Irion v. Hyde, 107 M 84, 81 P2d 353 (1938).

Neither the appropriator of water nor one to whom a right is decreed owns the corpus of any part of the flow of a stream. He is entitled only to the beneficial use of the amount of water called for by his appropriation or the decree when he has need for it, provided his distributing system has a sufficient capacity to carry that amount. If it is incapable of carrying that amount, his right is measured by the capacity of his system of distribution regardless of his needs. Tucker v. Missoula Light & Ry., 77 M 91, 250 P 11 (1926).

Quieting Title: An action under Montana law to determine relative rights and priorities of parties claiming interests in waters of a stream, while in personam, is in effect one to quiet title to real property. Sain v. Mont. Power Co., 84 F2d 126 (9th Cir. 1936).

Fixing Date in Decree: There is no valid objection to the fixing of an arbitrary date of appropriation in a decree unless another appropriator can show that his right antedates the date fixed, instead of being subsequent thereto as shown by the decree. Vidal v. Kensler, 100 M 592, 51 P2d 235 (1935).

Appeal Lying From Part of Judgment: Where two or more parties are awarded a water right under the terms of the decree, each of them recovers a judgment against the other or others; such a judgment is divisible into parts and therefore an appeal lies from a part thereof. Wills v. Morris, 100 M 504, 50 P2d 858 (1935).

Date of Appropriation When Notice Is Defective: Appropriators of water were denied the right to relate back the life of their appropriation to the date of posting their notice of appropriation because their recorded notice was rendered ineffective by a fatally defective verification. Because the evidence showed that they put water on their land for a beneficial purpose on or about a certain time, their right bore the date as of that time. Musselshell Valley Farming & Livestock Co. v. Cooley, 86 M 276, 283 P 213 (1929).

Water Necessary Per Acre: The question as to what amount of water is necessary per acre for irrigation is one of fact and never one of law, notwithstanding the adoption of the rule generally in this state to allow an inch to the acre, in the absence of evidence warranting a greater or lesser award. Tucker v. Missoula Light & Ry., 77 M 91, 250 P 11 (1926).

Beneficial Use — Irrigation: Respecting the use of water for purposes of irrigation, the ultimate question in every case is how much will supply the actual needs of the prior claimant under existing conditions. Conrow v. Huffine, 48 M 437, 138 P 1094 (1914).

Land Qualifications Unnecessary for Appropriation:

An appropriator of water need not be either an owner or in possession of land to make a valid appropriation for irrigation purposes. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Smith v. Denniff, 24 M 20, 60 P 398 (1900), distinguished in Dept. of State Lands v. Pettibone, 216 M 361, 702 P2d 948, 42 St. Rep. 869 (1985); Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900).

The right to the use of water may be owned without regard to the title to lands on which the water is to be used. Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900).

Beneficial Use — Intent of Claimant: As every appropriation must be made for a beneficial or useful purpose, it becomes the duty of the courts to try the question of the claimant's intent by his acts and the circumstances surrounding his possession of the water, its actual or contemplated use, and the purposes thereof. Smith v. Duff, 39 M 382, 102 P 984 (1909); Miles v. Butte Elec. & Power Co., 32 M 56, 79 P 549 (1905); Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900).

Rights of Parties Defendant: The Legislature, in enacting section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not state that it intended to compel parties, made defendants to a water right suit pursuant to its provisions, to litigate their respective titles as between themselves. Further, it is doubtful that the Legislature has the power to coerce them to do so. Sloan v. Byers, 37 M 503, 97 P 855 (1908), followed in Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

Determination of Final Water Rights Judgment Under Rule — Appeal From Water Court: Former Rule 54(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), provides for and allows a water right claimant to seek and procure from the Water Court an express direction for the entry of a final judgment as to his claim upon the express determination of the Water Court that there is no just reason for delay. Such action under former Rule 54(b) constitutes a final judgment within the meaning of this section, which provides for appeals from the Water Court. In re Adjudication of Sage Creek Water Rights, 234 M 243, 763 P2d 644, 45 St. Rep. 1876 (1988).

Appeal of Water Court Order Regarding Two Parties Before Final Decree — Former Rule 54(b) Certification of Tort Issues: A Water Court order awarding priorities between two parties is a final and appealable order even though the basin-wide adjudication has not been completed. It is necessary that the parties' respective irrigation water allowances be determined without their having to wait for the basin-wide decree before appealing to the Supreme Court. The fact that trespass and damage claims have not yet been decided does not deprive the Supreme Court of jurisdiction to hear the appeal. The Water Court properly entered a former Rule 54(b) certification. The determination of these claims is beyond the jurisdiction of the Water Court, but they cannot be decided until the water rights are resolved. Hill v. Merrimac Cattle Co., Inc., 211 M 479, 687 P2d 59, 41 St. Rep. 1504 (1984).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Standing to Challenge Award of Water Right: A party has standing to challenge a water right only if it conflicts with those granted to him. Thus, he has no standing to challenge a right to water from a source in which he no water right. However, he may challenge a water right from a source from which he has a water right whether the challenged right is prior or subsequent to his own. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979). Rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980).

Contingent Voidness Repealed: Section 9, Ch. 319, L. 2007, repealed sec. 15, Ch. 288, L. 2005, a contingent voidness section concerning fiscal year line item appropriations to fund Montana's water adjudication program. Effective July 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 288 inserted (1)(c) concerning basins that were verified and not examined; inserted (10) concerning limit on types of claims identified in basin that was initially verified; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005, and terminates June 30, 2020.

Contingent Voidness: Section 15, Ch. 288, L. 2005, provided: "If at least $2 million is not appropriated in a line item for each fiscal year from state sources other than the water adjudication account provided for in [section 7] [85-2-280], for the purposes of funding Montana's water adjudication program, then [this act] is void."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 629 at beginning of (1) inserted "After July 1, 1996"; in (1)(a), after "issued", deleted "by the water courts"; inserted (1)(b) that read: "(b) for basins for which claims have been filed under 85-2-221(3)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution provides that all existing rights to the use of any waters for any useful or beneficial purpose are recognized and confirmed; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution requires the Legislature to provide for the administration, control, and regulation of water rights and to establish a system of centralized records for such rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature established a procedure for the general adjudication of existing rights to the use of water and provided in section 85-2-226, MCA, that the failure to file a claim of existing right on or before the deadline established under section 85-2-221, MCA, would establish a conclusive abandonment of the right; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court, in In the Matter of the Adjudication of the Water Rights Within the Yellowstone River, 253 Mont. 167, 832 P.2d 1210 (1992), has determined that the failure to file a statement of claim to an existing right to the use of water on or before April 30, 1982, resulted in the forfeiture of that right; and

WHEREAS, it has come to the attention of the Legislature that the forfeiture of water rights for failure to timely file a claim has in some instances caused hardship, and the Legislature accordingly desires to provide water rights claimants with one more opportunity to file a water rights claim in the general adjudication; and

WHEREAS, in so doing, the Legislature recognizes that the adjudication process will not be completed for many years but that a substantial amount of progress has already occurred in the adjudication, specifically in the area of water rights compacts with Indian tribes and the federal government and in decrees and stipulations involving individual claimants, and thus the Legislature believes that it is necessary to ensure that parties who have been recognized as having filed claims on or before April 30, 1982, and holders of federal reserved water rights are not adversely affected by the inclusion of new parties in the adjudication by subjecting the right to file those claims in remission to certain terms and conditions; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide protection for timely filed claimants from incurring additional costs or from being adversely affected by justifiable reliance on the presumption of abandonment; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide a conclusive adjudication of existing water rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature recognizes that according a privilege to file additional statements of claim presents a potential for abuse by those who may attempt to refile previously adjudicated claims, and the Legislature thus believes that the courts should deal harshly with any abuses by such measures as, without limitation, the imposition of sanctions under [former] Rule 11, Montana Rules of Civil Procedure [now superseded]; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature determines that the deadline for filing water right claims as provided in this bill appropriately balances the interests at stake in the adjudication.

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds it is appropriate to make the following amendments to sections 85-2-102, 85-2-211 [now repealed], 85-2-213, 85-2-221, 85-2-225, 85-2-226, 85-2-234, 85-2-237, and 85-2-306, MCA, in order to provide for the acceptance of late claims to the use of water under the conditions set forth in this bill. Additionally, the Legislature directs the Water Policy Committee, in coordination with the Department of Justice, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, and the Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission, to conduct an interim study regarding certain late claim issues."

Saving Clause: Section 11, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] does not affect proceedings that were begun before [passage and approval of this act] [approved May 11, 1993] in which relief for damages have been sought based upon the diversion, impoundment, or withdrawal of water without a water right established under state law."

Severability — Partial Nonseverability: Section 12, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "(1) If a part of [this act] is invalid, all valid parts that are severable from the invalid part remain in effect. If a part of [this act] is invalid in one or more of its applications, the part remains in effect in all valid applications that are severable from the invalid applications.

(2) It is the intent of the legislature that each part of [this act] is essentially dependent upon [section 4], which amends 85-2-221, and that if one part of [section 4], except subsection (3)(f)(ii), is held unconstitutional or invalid, all other parts of [this act] are invalid."

Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 586, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-209 [sic, 1-2-109], to all preliminary decrees and final decrees that have been issued by the Montana water courts prior to [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 21, 1989.

Severability: Section 3, Ch. 586, L. 1989, was a severability clause.

Effective Date: Section 5, Ch. 586, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] is effective on the latest date on which any of the following occur:

(1) passage and approval of [this act] [approved April 20, 1989], [Senate Bill No. 169 (LC 683)] [Chapter 605, approved April 21, 1989] or [Senate Bill No. 166 (LC 684)] [Chapter 604, approved April 21, 1989]; or

(2) a final determination of failure to receive passage and approval of [Senate Bill No. 169 (LC 683)] or [Senate Bill No. 166 (LC 684)]."

The department's funding level in adjudicating water claims for the 1987-89 biennium is as specifically set forth in House Bill No. 2."

Water Right Claim Examination Rules: In response to In re Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 226 M 221, 740 P2d 1096, 44 St. Rep. 604 (1987), the Supreme Court approved an order July 7, 1987, adopting water right claim examination rules. The 1987 rules were subsequently amended by orders of the Montana Supreme Court and became effective on January 15, 1991. The 1991 rules are available at the Montana State Law Library. However, another revision to the rules occurred as a result of the Supreme Court's order in Cause No. 86-397. The current rules became effective on December 5, 2006, and are available on the Montana Supreme Court's website.

Case Notes

No Departmental Rulemaking Authority Regarding Water Claims — Jurisdiction in Water Courts — Rulemaking Reserved to Supreme Court: Legislation in 1979 placed the procedure for adjudication of water claims in the Water Courts and reserved the power of rulemaking with respect to pending judicial proceedings to the Supreme Court. Lacking express legislative authority, neither the Board (functions now transferred to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) nor Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has any rulemaking authority with respect to procedures in the adjudication of water rights before the Water Courts, and the Montana Administrative Procedure Act does not supply such authority. Functions of the Department respecting water claims are limited to rendering assistance to the Water Judges as set out in 85-2-243. Attorney General's Opinions

Water Adjudication Program Not Void Given Sufficient Line Item Appropriations to Avoid Voidness: A contingent voidness clause attached to legislation establishing the water adjudication account required that at least $2 million each fiscal year be appropriated to the water adjudication account by line item appropriation. Although the line item appropriations were directed to two agencies instead of being included in a single programmatic line item, the Attorney General concluded that more than $2 million had been appropriated from state sources other than the water adjudication account to avoid the contingent voidness provision. 51 A.G. Closed Basin Case Study: Section 23, Ch. 391, L. 2007, provided: "(1) (a) The Montana bureau of mines and geology, provided for in 20-25-211, shall review, assess for scientific accuracy, and compile and summarize ground water studies that have been conducted in the last 20 years in closed basins or subbasins in Montana that may have a bearing on better understanding the water balance in these basins with respect to potential ground water withdrawal impacts on surface water. The bureau of mines and geology shall also study the extent to which ground water withdrawals may result in net depletion of surface water in a closed basin or in specific areas of a closed basin.

(b) After compilation of the information, the bureau of mines and geology shall present recommendations to the appropriate legislative interim committee regarding any additional studies that would help to assess the water balance in closed basins or subbasins with respect to potential ground water withdrawal impacts on surface waters.

(2) The bureau of mines and geology shall conduct a case study to gather and develop data to determine the adequacy of any additional recommended minimum standards and criteria for hydrogeologic assessments, as defined in [section 15] [85-2-361], associated with ground water withdrawals and the range of impacts of those withdrawals on surface water and ground water resources. The department of natural resources and conservation shall coordinate with the bureau of mines and geology with regard to surface water monitoring and other elements of the case study as necessary.

(3) The case study must be conducted in basins closed pursuant to sections 85-2-330, 85-2-336, 85-2-341, 85-2-343, or 85-2-344. The bureau of mines and geology shall ensure that at each site involved in the case study the following, at a minimum, is accomplished to provide the necessary scientific data and information to policymakers:

(a) an appropriate number of monitoring wells are drilled or available to provide scientifically defensible data;

(b) aquifer testing and recovery testing is conducted at the site;

(c) water quality samples are collected from each pumping or primary well at the beginning of the case study and at the end of the case study;

(d) if information or data has already been collected for the site, the information is reviewed, analyzed, and verified by the bureau of mines and geology;

(e) if the site has an established system, that the established system is monitored under its current or planned operating conditions; and

(f) any other information is collected that the bureau of mines and geology determines is necessary to determine recommendations for additional minimum standards and criteria for hydrogeologic assessments, as defined in [section 15] [85-2-361], associated with ground water withdrawals and the range of impacts those withdrawals have on surface water and ground water resources.

(4) In addition to the requirements of subsection (3), the bureau of mines and geology shall develop a system to compile existing aquifer testing data, as well as data resulting from hydrogeologic assessments, as defined in [section 15] [85-2-361], and monitoring activities.

(5) The department of natural resources and conservation shall coordinate with the bureau of mines and geology to provide surface water measurements, as appropriate, when a well located at a case study site is pumped.

(6) The bureau of mines and geology shall:

(a) provide updates to the appropriate legislative interim committee throughout the interim related to the progress of the review pursuant to subsection (1) and the case study pursuant to subsections (2) through (5), data trends, if any, and other information necessary to assist the legislative interim committee in developing any necessary policy recommendations;

(b) upon request, provide updates to the ground water assessment steering committee provided for in 2-15-1523; and

(c) submit a report to the appropriate legislative interim committee and the 61st legislature providing a detailed analysis of the results of the review and case study."

Case Study — Requirements for Participation — Fee: Section 24, Ch. 391, L. 2007, provided: "(1) (a) Participants in the case study that are proposing a new ground water appropriation are subject to the requirements of [sections 14 through 21] [75-5-410, 85-2-360 through 85-2-364, 85-2-368, and 85-2-369].

(b) Up to a maximum of 10 sites that are the result of a new appropriation or a change in appropriation right may be included in the case study provided for in [section 23] [not codified]. If there are more than 10 entities wishing to participate in the case study, the bureau of mines and geology shall select participants to ensure that to the extent possible each closed basin is represented and as many different scenarios are represented as necessary to ensure a scientifically accurate analysis.

(c) If there are fewer than 10 entities wishing to participate or if there is a scenario that is not represented by case study participants that is necessary to ensure a scientifically accurate analysis, the bureau of mines and geology may request cooperation and participation from entities that hold appropriation rights for wells within closed basins.

(d) Entities that had an application pending with the department of natural resources and conservation on April 11, 2006, must be given the option to participate in the case study before the bureau accepts other requests for participation.

(2) The bureau of mines and geology, in cooperation with the appropriate legislative interim committee, shall notify each of the entities described in subsection (1)(d), in writing, of the opportunity to participate in the case study and the requirements for participation.

(3) To participate in the case study, a participant shall agree:

(a) that the use of a ground water well in accordance with an application submitted pursuant to [section 14] [85-2-360] does not grant or give the participant an appropriation right;

(b) to allow the installation of monitoring wells and shall allow access for monitoring and review purposes;

(c) if monitoring or test wells exist at the site, to allow the bureau of mines and geology access to those wells for monitoring and review purposes;

(d) to allow for the measurement of pumping at the primary pumping well, including any plumbing requirements necessary to ensure an accurate analysis of pumping records and of the impacts, if any, resulting from pumping of the well;

(e) that the participant is responsible for costs associated with drilling the primary pumping well, maintenance associated with the well, and other costs reasonably related to the normal operation of a pumping well in the absence of the case study; and

(f) to pay a fee of $15."

Department Authorized to Condition Permits: The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has authority to grant conditional use permits under 85-2-312 when restrictions are necessary to protect the rights of prior appropriators or are used to impose time limits to perfect a water right under the permit. Mont. Power Co. v. Carey, 211 M 91, 685 P2d 336, 41 St. Rep. 1233 (1984).

1899 Appropriation — Testimony of Persons on Land Showing Beneficial Use: Where the plaintiffs filed a water rights action, seeking a decree that they were entitled to the use of 500 miner's inches of water a year, the District Court did not err in finding that that amount was reasonably required for irrigation purposes. While that amount of water, as specified in the statement of appropriation filed by the plaintiffs' predecessor in interest, cannot be dispositive of the issue, under the rationale of Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), the Supreme Court could not say that the evidence produced at trial did not support the District Court's decree. That evidence consisted primarily of testimony of men who worked and knew the land in question, and that testimony, under the rationale of Fed. Land Bank v. Morris, 112 M 445, 116 P2d 1007 (1941), constituted substantial evidence. Grimsley v. Estate of Spencer, 206 M 184, 670 P2d 85, 40 St. Rep. 1585 (1983).

Water Rights by Prescription — Hostile Use Required: Where the plaintiffs brought an action against the decedent's estate, claiming a prescriptive right to water diverted by the decedent's descendants, the District Court did not err in holding that proof of hostile use of the water is a required element of acquisition of water rights by prescription. Without such a requirement, the holder of a water right could be deprived of that right without notice. In the case before the court, use of the water could not be said to be hostile unless the defendants were deprived of the water in question at a time when they actually had need of it. Language in the opinion in Cook v. Hudson, 110 M 263, 103 P2d 137 (1940), appearing to abrogate the requirement of hostile use, is expressly disapproved. Grimsley v. Estate of Spencer, 206 M 184, 670 P2d 85, 40 St. Rep. 1585 (1983).

Findings and Conclusions as to Water Rights Held Inadequate — Judgment Vacated and Remanded: When a midstream and downstream water user filed suit against the upstream user to have the District Court declare the relative water rights of the parties, the findings of fact and conclusions of law entered by the District Court were so bare and inadequate as to provide no basis for meaningful appellate review. Because it could not be determined from the District Court's bare conclusions (i.e., that the parties had failed to prove their case by a preponderance of the evidence and had abandoned their rights) what the factual or evidentiary basis for the District Court's decision was, the Supreme Court vacated the judgment as to all of the three parties, remanded the case to the District Court, and directed it to enter findings and conclusions reflective of the evidence presented at trial and the legal contentions of the parties. 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 193 M 229, 631 P2d 690, 38 St. Rep. 1048 (1981).

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

No Right of Hydroelectric Facility to Make Free Appropriation of Water on State-Owned Land: A hydroelectric facility does not have the right to make free appropriation of water on and within state-owned land without paying compensation to the state. PPL Mont., LLC v. St., 2010 MT 64, 355 Mont. 402, 229 P.3d 421, distinguishing Smith v. Deniff, 24 Mont. 20, 60 P 398 (1900), U.S. v. Conrad Invest. Co., 156 F 123 (D.C. Mont. 1907), and Mattson v. Mont. Power Co., 2009 MT 286, 352 Mont. 212, 215 P.3d 675. See also Prentice v. McKay, 38 Mont. 114, 98 P 1081 (1909).

Following the Montana Supreme Court's decision, PPL appealed to the United States Supreme Court. The United States Supreme Court reversed the Montana court's ruling, holding that the Montana court had not properly considered the rivers in question on a segment-by-segment basis and had not determined whether they were navigable in fact at the time of statehood. The United States Supreme Court remanded the case for proceedings consistent with its opinion. PPL Montana, LLC v. Montana, 565 US __, 132 S Ct 1215, 182 L Ed 2d 77 (2012).

School Trust Land Water Rights Owned by State: In a case involving a dispute over ownership of water rights on state school trust lands, the Supreme Court ruled that title to the surface and ground water rights on school trust lands vests in the state and that the lessee, in making appropriations on and for school trust sections, is acting on behalf of the state. It is only through state action that the lessee is on the land, and Montana law expressly provides that the lessee shall be reimbursed for all capital expenditures made in putting the water to beneficial use. The state is the beneficial user of the water, and its duty as trustee of the school trust lands prohibits it from alienating any interest in the land without receiving full compensation for it or from giving up control over the water rights. Dept. of State Lands v. Pettibone, 216 M 361, 702 P2d 948, 42 St. Rep. 869 (1985).

No Prescriptive Use of Water Found: The Water Court was correct in holding that Merrimac did not prove its claim of prescriptive use to the waters of Martin Creek and Davis Creek from the 1800s through 1980. Merrimac did not acquire adverse possession through 1973 since the water use was based on an accommodation between the parties. In 1973, the Water Use Act eliminated the right to acquire a water-use right by prescription. Merrimac was not entitled to a fractional share of water on the ground that Merrimac had always used one-third of the waters of Martin Creek and Davis Creek since Merrimac never deprived Hill of his water supply. There was no adverse taking. Hill v. Merrimac Cattle Co., Inc., 211 M 479, 687 P2d 59, 41 St. Rep. 1504 (1984).

Water Use Act Exclusive Procedure for Acquisition: Where the defendant in litigation to establish priority in appropriations was held to have abandoned his claim to a water right because of the lack of his predecessor's reasonable diligence in applying the water to a beneficial use, the District Court erred in holding that the defendant nevertheless had a "use" right as of 1976. The Water Use Act of 1973 contains the exclusive procedure for acquisition of water rights after 1973. Nothing in the record shows the defendant complied with the statutory procedures. No right to any use of any water is therefore to be recognized in the defendant. 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215, 40 St. Rep. 981 (1983), followed in In re Adjudication of Musselshell River Rights, 255 M 43, 840 P2d 577, 49 St. Rep. 866 (1992).

Yellowstone River Compact Filings — In Wyoming — Priority Date: The Yellowstone River Compact, signed by Montana, North Dakota, and Wyoming and ratified by Congress, has the status of a treaty, and Montana water law statutes are subordinate to it. Utah International, Inc. (Utah) filed a Wyoming application to appropriate water, as required by the Compact because Wyoming was the state of diversion (Montana being the state of ultimate use of the water). Utah then filed the same information in Montana, and Montana assigned the date of the Wyoming filing as the priority date in conformity with Wyoming law. Intake Water Company did not attack the Wyoming filing but claimed mandamus should issue requiring Montana to assign the Montana filing date as the priority date. Montana correctly assigned the Wyoming filing date as the priority date, as required by the Compact, and mandamus would not issue, since there was no clear legal duty for Montana to assign the Montana filing date as the priority date. State ex rel. Intake Water Co. v. Bd. of Nat'l Resources & Conserv., 197 M 482, 645 P2d 383, 39 St. Rep. 717 (1982).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Ownership of Land Where Water Has Source: Seepage water which has its rise along the bed of a stream and forms a natural accretion thereto belongs to that stream as part of its source of supply, and the ownership of land where water has its source does not necessarily give the exclusive right to use such water to the landowner so as to prevent others from acquiring rights therein. Woodward v. Perkins, 116 M 46, 147 P2d 1016 (1944), distinguished in Forrester v. Rock Island Oil & Ref. Co., 133 M 333, 323 P2d 597 (1958).

Beneficial Use — Measurement of Water:

The rights of appropriators of water may not be measured entirely by what they claimed in their notices of appropriation but must be measured by their beneficial use thereof over reasonable periods; consideration must be given to the extent and manner of their use, the character of the land upon which used, and the general necessities of the case, as well as whether the stream is furnished by usual rains or snows, extraordinary rain or snowfall, or by springs or seepage. Irion v. Hyde, 107 M 84, 81 P2d 353 (1938).

Neither the appropriator of water nor one to whom a right is decreed owns the corpus of any part of the flow of a stream. Each is entitled only to the beneficial use of the amount of water called for by his appropriation or the decree when he has need for water, provided his distributing system has a sufficient capacity to carry that amount. If the distribution system is incapable of carrying that amount, his right is measured by the capacity of his system of distribution regardless of his needs. Tucker v. Missoula Light & Ry., 77 M 91, 250 P 11 (1926). (Annotator's note: For additional cases pertaining to courts' interpretation of beneficial use, see the annotations under 85-2-102.)

Appropriator Not Owner of Water — Sale of Water: An appropriator of water does not become the owner thereof but only of the right to use it; he may not sell the water to another to be used by the purchaser when not in use by the appropriator. Galahan v. Lewis, 105 M 294, 72 P2d 1018 (1937).

Appropriation on Private Land:

An appropriation of water is not confined to waters flowing in streams upon public land but may be made from a stream flowing through privately owned land by invoking the aid of eminent domain proceedings, if necessary. Mettler v. Ames Realty Co., 61 M 152, 201 P 702 (1921).

Sections 89-801 through 89-805, 89-807 through 89-828, and 89-839 through 89-844, R.C.M. 1947, do not and cannot authorize a person to go upon the private property of another for the purpose of making an appropriation, except by condemnation proceedings. Prentice v. McKay, 38 M 114, 98 P 1081 (1909), explained in Connolly v. Harrel, 102 M 295, 57 P2d 781 (1936).

The mere fact that water has its source on land owned by a plaintiff does not of itself give him the exclusive right therein so as to prevent others from acquiring rights to it under the laws of the state. Quinlan v. Calvert, 31 M 115, 77 P 428 (1904).

Source of Right: An appropriator of water derives his right from the state and not from the national government, the use of waters flowing in natural streams in Montana being subject to state regulation and control. Mettler v. Ames Realty Co., 61 M 152, 201 P 702 (1921).

Land Qualifications Unnecessary for Appropriations:

An appropriator of water need not be either an owner or in possession of land to make a valid appropriation for irrigation purposes. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912); Smith v. Denniff, 24 M 20, 60 P 398 (1900), distinguished in Dept. of State Lands v. Pettibone, 216 M 361, 702 P2d 948, 42 St. Rep. 869 (1985); Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900).

The right to the use of water may be owned without regard to the title to lands on which the water is to be used. Toohey v. Campbell, 24 M 13, 60 P 396 (1900).

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 213 in (4)(a) at beginning inserted "Subject to subsection (4)(b)"; inserted (4)(b) regarding requirements for an appropriation permit on national forest system lands; inserted (4)(c) defining national forest system lands; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2007.

Chapter 391 in (1) in exception clause inserted reference to 85-2-369; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 3, 2007.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 391, L. 2007, provided: "WHEREAS, it is the policy of this state to encourage the wise use of the state's water resources by making them available for appropriation and to provide wise utilization, development, and conservation of the water of the state for the maximum benefit of its people with the least possible degradation of the state's natural aquatic ecosystems; and

WHEREAS, there has been confusion regarding ground water issues in closed basins and the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation needs guidance from the Legislature on how to proceed; and

WHEREAS, the basin closure laws were passed to protect senior appropriators while the state water adjudication is ongoing; and

WHEREAS, ground water development in closed basins should be able to proceed as long as the applicant collects the necessary scientific information to determine if there will be an adverse effect on a prior appropriator and takes the necessary actions to mitigate or prevent any adverse effects on a prior appropriator; and

WHEREAS, it is critical that the Legislature develop state water policies in a way that protects the prior appropriation doctrine while at the same time protecting the quality of Montana's water and the ability to appropriate water consistent with section 85-1-101, MCA, and Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution; and

WHEREAS, augmentation is statutorily authorized for the Clark Fork River Basin only; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has developed administrative rules and applied augmentation through these administrative rules to all basins even though not specifically statutorily authorized; and

WHEREAS, administrative rules and rulemaking must comply with section 2-4-305, MCA, and may not engraft material not contemplated by the Legislature; and

WHEREAS, this bill provides definitions and a new procedure for mitigation and aquifer recharge."

Applicability: Section 31, Ch. 391, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] applies to applications for an appropriation right in a closed basin filed on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective May 3, 2007.

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 391, L. 2007, was a severability clause.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 574 inserted (2) requiring the adoption of rules for determining whether an application is correct and complete; in (4) inserted second sentence requiring that the determination of whether an application is correct and complete be based on rules in effect at the time the application is submitted; in (5) at end of first sentence inserted "within 180 days" and inserted second and third sentences concerning identification and notice related to application defects; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 78 in first sentence substituted "85-2-306" for "85-2-306(1) through (3)" and at end of third sentence after "offices" deleted "and the offices of the county clerk and recorders"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 422 in first sentence after "withdrawal, or" inserted "related"; after fourth sentence substituted fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth sentences relating to correction in defects in an application for "The department shall return a defective application for correction or completion, together with the reasons for returning it. An application does not lose priority of filing because of defects if the application is corrected, completed, and refiled with the department within 30 days after its return to the applicant or within a further time as the department may allow. If an application is not corrected and completed within 30 days or within a further time as the department allows, up to 3 months, the priority date of the application shall be the date of refiling the application with the corrections with the department. An application not corrected within 3 months shall be terminated"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 23, 1999.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 370 in (1) inserted fourth sentence that read: "The applicant shall submit a correct and complete application." Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

Severability: Section 11, Ch. 370, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 370, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 1 through 8] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications and objections pending on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 16, 1993] that are subject to the provisions of Title 85, chapter 2."

1991 Amendment: Inserted (2) imposing a fee of $1 per acre-foot of ground water appropriated for deposit in the ground water assessment account. Amendment effective July 1, 1991, and terminates July 1, 1993.

1983 Amendment: Near beginning of first sentence changed reference from (1) and (2) to (1) through (3) of 85-2-306; in last sentence changed correction period for application to 3 months from 18 months.

Case Notes

Agency Prerogative to Repeal Administrative Rules as Long as Statute Not Violated — Repeal of Administrative Definition of Municipal Use in Water Use Act: Although the term "municipal use" is used repeatedly in the Water Use Act, the term was not statutorily defined. In 2005, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation adopted ARM 36.12.101 that defined municipal use as water appropriated by and provided for those in and around a municipality or unincorporated town. Under the rule, only a municipality or unincorporated town arguably qualified as an acceptable appropriator, when previously it was only necessary that water be appropriated for those in a municipality or unincorporated area. About 1 year after the rule was adopted, the Department sought to repeal the rule because the definition was not in keeping with the historical interpretation of the term by the Department and the Montana Water Court. Following repeal, plaintiffs requested that the District Court declare that repeal of the rule was invalid. The District Court held that by repealing the rule: (1) the definition of municipal use was rendered nebulous and unfairly accommodating of private developers' applications for water use permits; (2) the purpose of the basin closure law to protect and preserve existing water rights would be undermined, potentially threatening senior water rights in an already overappropriated basin; and (3) legislative intent was contravened and plaintiffs' water rights were placed in jeopardy. Plaintiffs' request was granted and repeal of the rule was declared invalid. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The court first determined that the issue was justiciable because it continued to present a controversy concerning the nature of water rights applications and because plaintiffs had a statutory right to challenge the repeal of the rule under 2-4-506, although plaintiffs had the burden to show that the repeal interfered with or impaired their legal rights or privileges or that repeal was implemented with an arbitrary or capricious disregard for the purpose of the implementing legislation as evidenced by the documented legislative intent. Plaintiffs did not meet their burden. The rule was not in effect long enough for plaintiffs to demonstrate that their rights or privileges were impaired or threatened by the repeal, and private entities had previously been granted municipal use permits. Additionally, plaintiffs failed to show that the repeal was arbitrary or capricious. It was the agency's prerogative to enact rules to aid in the permitting process and to repeal rules that were not of assistance as long as the agency does not violate 2-4-506. Lohmeier v. St., 2008 MT 307, 346 M 23, 192 P3d 1137 (2008).

Water Appropriation Application Amendments So Significant as to Constitute New Appropriations — Original Applications Considered Shams — New Applications Barred by Subbasin Closure: Just 10 days before the Legislature closed the Bitterroot River subbasin to new water appropriations in 1999, defendants submitted four appropriation applications to develop ponds on their property for the beneficial use of wildlife. All four applications were subsequently amended to variously revise volume and flow rates, proposed pond depth, points and means of diversion, place of use, and beneficial uses. Numerous parties objected to the proposed appropriations, including plaintiff, which moved to terminate the applications on grounds that the amendments were submitted in bad faith and were new applications and that deficiencies in the applications were not cured within the statutory time limit. A hearings examiner denied the motion to terminate the applications, but nevertheless denied the applications on numerous grounds. Defendants filed exceptions to the hearings examiner's decision, and the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation reversed the hearings examiner and granted all four applications. Plaintiff petitioned the District Court for review, and the court concluded that the Department erred in accepting and processing the amended applications after the subbasin closure and in other ways and denied the applications. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The amendments to the applications were not mere refinements, but constituted changes so significant that the amended applications bore such little resemblance to the original applications as to be considered shams. The nature and extent of the changes could be consistent only with new applications with new priority dates, which were prohibited by the subbasin closure. The Supreme Court noted that to hold otherwise would establish a precedent allowing a prospective appropriator to file a deficient application and later amend the application without penalty, thereby gaining an advantage over other appropriators and circumventing other restrictions associated with a subbasin closure. Bitterroot River Protective Ass'n, Inc. v. Siebel, 2005 MT 60, 326 M 241, 108 P3d 518 (2005).

Defective Filing — Yellowstone River Compact Filing — Priority Date: Corporation filed application in Wyoming, as required by the Yellowstone River Compact signed by Montana and Wyoming, to appropriate water in Wyoming for use in Montana. Montana notified corporation that it should also file the same information on Montana forms and that if it did so the corporation would retain the priority date of the date it filed in Wyoming. The corporation filed in Montana within 18 months of its Wyoming filing. This section gives Montana discretion to allow the applicant up to 18 months for a correction of a defective filing without losing the original filing date as the priority date. Thus, the corporation was entitled to have Montana, in its discretion, assign as a priority date the date of the Wyoming filing. Montana had no clear legal duty to do otherwise and was not subject to a mandate that it assign as the priority date the date of the Montana filing. (Annotator's note: Chapter 448, L. 1983, reduced the correction period from 18 months to 3 months (now 90 days).) State ex rel. Intake Water Co. v. Chapter 97 inserted (3)(a)(i)(B) regarding appropriation made by local government fire agency; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Interim Study of Issues Related to Ground Water Wells Exempt From Permitting: Section 2, Ch. 256, L. 2011, provided: "(1) The water policy interim committee, provided for in 5-5-231, shall conduct a study of:

(a) wells that are exempt from permitting pursuant to 85-2-306, including:

(i) determining the number of existing exempt wells and estimating the number of ground water wells that may be exempted from permitting over the next decade under current laws and regulations;

(ii) summarizing the types of beneficial uses to which water from exempt wells is applied;

(iii) analyzing the amount of water reasonably necessary for the various beneficial uses served by exempt wells compared to the current statutory limits for flow rate and volume;

(iv) exploring options to provide accurate measurement of water appropriated via exempt wells;

(v) examining enforcement options for exempt wells to ensure that they do not exceed statutory limits or disrupt the priority system for water right administration governed by the Water Use Act and the Montana constitution;

(vi) examining applicable research and analysis conducted by the ground water investigation program at the Montana bureau of mines and geology provided for in 85-2-525;

(vii) examining the historical treatment of exempt wells and the evolution of laws and rules governing exempt wells;

(viii) analyzing how the water appropriated by exempt wells may affect surface water appropriations, including existing claims, permits, certificates, and reservations; and

(ix) examining the legal options for integrating exempt wells into the principle that first in time is first in right when senior water rights are not fulfilled;

(b) the statutes, rules, programs, and policies employed by other prior appropriation states for exempt wells, including legal challenges;

(c) the adequacy of existing programs and tools for managing and mitigating the development of wells that would otherwise be exempt from permitting, including but not limited to controlled ground water areas created pursuant to Title 85, chapter 2, part 5, water mitigation banks, community water system incentives, and in-lieu-of-fee programs;

(d) the relationship between exempt wells and land use decisions, including the relationship between exempt wells and individual septic systems, the cost comparison of installing public water systems or extending existing water infrastructure, and the role of local governments in requiring alternatives to exempt wells; and

(e) the rulemaking authority of the department of natural resources and conservation in relation to the statutory policy and purpose provided for in 85-2-101.

(2) The committee shall prepare a report to submit to the 63rd legislature that provides clear policy direction and necessary legislation to guide Montana's policy regarding wells that may be exempt from the permitting process."

Limit on Rulemaking Authority: Section 3, Ch. 256, L. 2011, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), the department of natural resources and conservation may not adopt rules to implement the provisions of 85-2-306(3) for ground water wells that are exempt from permitting until October 1, 2012.

(2) The department may adopt rules to implement amendments to 85-2-306(3) that were passed and approved by the 62nd legislature for:

(a) appropriations by a local governmental fire agency organized under Title 7, chapter 33, provided that the appropriation is used only for emergency fire protection; or

(b) nonconsumptive appropriations for geothermal heating or cooling exchange applications." Effective April 21, 2011, and terminates June 30, 2013.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 86 in (2)(b) at end substituted "a rule promulgated pursuant to 85-2-506" for "an order issued pursuant to 85-2-507". Amendment effective March 25, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 213 in (1)(a) at beginning inserted exception clause; in (1)(b) near beginning after "works" inserted "water may be appropriated" and at end after "rights" inserted "or, if the ground water development works are on national forest system lands, with any prior written special use authorization required by federal law to occupy, use, or traverse national forest system lands for the purpose of diversion, impoundment, storage, transportation, withdrawal, use, or distribution of water under the certificate"; in (3)(c) near middle of first sentence after "notification" inserted "or a written federal special use authorization"; in (7)(a) at beginning of second sentence inserted "Subject to subsection (7)(b)"; inserted (7)(b) providing that if the impoundment or pit is on national forest system lands, an application is not correct and complete until the applicant has submitted proof of any written special use authorization required by federal law; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 161 inserted (2) pertaining to appropriating ground water according to a permit or an order; in (3)(c) in first sentence at end substituted "subsection (1)" for "this subsection"; in (4) in first sentence near end and in third sentence substituted "subsection (3)" for "subsection (1)"; in (5) in first sentence near beginning substituted "subsection (4)" for "this subsection"; in (6)(d) deleted former second sentence that read: "As used in this subsection, "perennial flowing stream" means a stream that historically has flowed continuously during all seasons of the year, during dry as well as wet years"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 7, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 78 in (1) inserted fourth sentence providing that the written notification does not create an easement, at end of sixth sentence after "department" substituted "through its offices" for "at its offices and at the offices of the county clerk and recorders", and in eighth sentence after "30 days" inserted "of notification of defects"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 250 inserted second and third sentences in (1) requiring person developing ground water source on another person's land to provide 30 days' written notice of proposed development and appropriation and at end of ninth sentence inserted "including proof of landowner notification as necessary under this subsection"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (4) substituted "department" for "board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 629 near beginning of second sentence of (2), after "claim", deleted "of existing water right"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution provides that all existing rights to the use of any waters for any useful or beneficial purpose are recognized and confirmed; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution requires the Legislature to provide for the administration, control, and regulation of water rights and to establish a system of centralized records for such rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature established a procedure for the general adjudication of existing rights to the use of water and provided in section 85-2-226, MCA, that the failure to file a claim of existing right on or before the deadline established under section 85-2-221, MCA, would establish a conclusive abandonment of the right; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court, in In the Matter of the Adjudication of the Water Rights Within the Yellowstone River, 253 Mont. 167, 832 P.2d 1210 (1992), has determined that the failure to file a statement of claim to an existing right to the use of water on or before April 30, 1982, resulted in the forfeiture of that right; and

WHEREAS, it has come to the attention of the Legislature that the forfeiture of water rights for failure to timely file a claim has in some instances caused hardship, and the Legislature

accordingly desires to provide water rights claimants with one more opportunity to file a water rights claim in the general adjudication; and

WHEREAS, in so doing, the Legislature recognizes that the adjudication process will not be completed for many years but that a substantial amount of progress has already occurred in the adjudication, specifically in the area of water rights compacts with Indian tribes and the federal government and in decrees and stipulations involving individual claimants, and thus the Legislature believes that it is necessary to ensure that parties who have been recognized as having filed claims on or before April 30, 1982, and holders of federal reserved water rights are not adversely affected by the inclusion of new parties in the adjudication by subjecting the right to file those claims in remission to certain terms and conditions; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide protection for timely filed claimants from incurring additional costs or from being adversely affected by justifiable reliance on the presumption of abandonment; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to provide a conclusive adjudication of existing water rights; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature recognizes that according a privilege to file additional statements of claim presents a potential for abuse by those who may attempt to refile previously adjudicated claims, and the Legislature thus believes that the courts should deal harshly with any abuses by such measures as, without limitation, the imposition of sanctions under [former] Rule 11, Montana Rules of Civil Procedure [now superseded]; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature determines that the deadline for filing water right claims as provided in this bill appropriately balances the interests at stake in the adjudication.

THEREFORE, the Legislature finds it is appropriate to make the following amendments to sections 85-2-102, 85-2-211 [now repealed], 85-2-213, 85-2-221, 85-2-225, 85-2-226, 85-2-234, 85-2-237, and 85-2-306, MCA, in order to provide for the acceptance of late claims to the use of water under the conditions set forth in this bill. Additionally, the Legislature directs the Water Policy Committee, in coordination with the Department of Justice, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, and the Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission, to conduct an interim study regarding certain late claim issues."

Saving Clause: Section 11, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] does not affect proceedings that were begun before [passage and approval of this act] [approved May 11, 1993] in which relief for damages have been sought based upon the diversion, impoundment, or withdrawal of water without a water right established under state law."

Severability — Partial Nonseverability: Section 12, Ch. 629, L. 1993, provided: "(1) If a part of [this act] is invalid, all valid parts that are severable from the invalid part remain in effect. If a part of [this act] is invalid in one or more of its applications, the part remains in effect in all valid applications that are severable from the invalid applications.

(2) It is the intent of the legislature that each part of [this act] is essentially dependent upon [section 4], which amends 85-2-221, and that if one part of [section 4], except subsection (3)(f)(ii), is held unconstitutional or invalid, all other parts of [this act] are invalid."

1991 Amendments: Chapter 769 in (1), at end of third sentence, inserted "and pay a filing fee"; and inserted (5) assessing a $10 filing fee for filing notice of completion and directing deposit of the fee in the ground water assessment account. Amendment effective July 1, 1991, and terminates July 1, 1993.

Chapter 805 in (1) and (2) substituted "35 gallons per minute or less, not to exceed 10 acre-feet per year" for "less than 100 gallons per minute". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1989 Amendment: In (1), after "person who has", deleted "either", inserted clause relating to a possessory interest, and after "or" inserted clause relating to another's rights in ground water development works. Amendment effective April 4, 1989.

1987 Amendment: In (1), in second sentence, inserted exception relating to combined appropriation, near end substituted "appropriator" for "county clerk and recorder in the county where the point of diversion or place of use is located for recordation", and deleted sentence that read: "After recordation, the clerk and recorder shall send the certificate to the appropriator"; and in (2) inserted last sentence concerning certificate issuance.

1985 Amendment: In (1) inserted first sentence limiting the appropriation of ground water to a person who has either exclusive property rights in the ground water development works or written consent of the person with those property rights.

1983 Amendment: Inserted second sentence of (2), dealing with existing water right under 85-2-221; in third sentence of (2) after "section" inserted "or the date of the filing of the claim of existing water right"; in (3) after "the appropriation is" inserted "less than 30 acre-feet per year and is".

1981 Amendments: Chapter 30 inserted "and the impoundment or pit is to be constructed on and will be accessible to a parcel of land that is owned or under the control of the applicant and that is 40 acres or larger" in the middle of (3).

Chapter 160 substituted "within 60 days after" for "before" in the third sentence of (3); inserted the fourth sentence in (3) requiring the Department to automatically issue a provisional permit upon receipt of a correct and complete stockwater provisional permit application; substituted "after a hearing" for "after processing the application" in the last sentence of (3); substituted "it may revoke the permit or require the permittee to modify the impoundment or pit and may then make" for "it may require the applicant to modify the construction of the impoundment or pit and issue" in the last sentence of (3).

Chapter 357 inserted "or developed spring" after "well" in two places in (1); substituted "maximum appropriation of less than 100 gallons per minute" for "maximum yield of less than 100 gallons a minute" in the first sentence of (1); inserted "with the department" after "notice of completion" in the second sentence of (1); substituted "the department shall review the notice and may, before issuing a certificate of water right, return a defective notice for correction or completion, together with the reasons for returning it" for "the department shall automatically issue a certificate of water rights" in the third sentence of (1); inserted the fourth, fifth, and sixth sentences in (1) relating to procedures when notice of ground water appropriation is defective; and inserted (2) describing procedures for issuance of a certificate of water right for a person who appropriates ground water by means of a well or developed spring, put to beneficial use between January 1, 1962, and July 1, 1973, and who did not file a required notice of completion.

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 30, L. 1981, provided: "This act applies to applications pending with the department on the effective date of this act, as well as applications filed with the department after the effective date of this act."

Subsection (1), sec. 7, Ch. 357, L. 1981, provided: "Subsection (2) of section 1 [sec. 1, Ch. 357, L. 1981, amending 85-2-306] applies to all notices of completion filed with the department after July 1, 1973."

Subsection (2), sec. 7, Ch. 357, L. 1981, provided: "Subsection (1) of section 1 [sec. 1, Ch. 357, L. 1981, amending 85-2-306], section 3 [sec. 3, Ch. 357, L. 1981, amending 85-2-310], and section 4 [sec. 4, Ch. 357, L. 1981, amending 85-2-311] apply to notices of completion and applications pending before the department and to those filed with the department after April 14, 1981."

2009 Amendment: Chapter 251 inserted (1) requiring notice of receipt of application for permit; in (2)(a) at beginning substituted "Within 120 days of the receipt" for "Upon receipt"; inserted (2)(a)(i) through (2)(a)(iii) relating to informal meeting, written preliminary determination, and conditions; in (2)(b) at beginning inserted introductory phrase, and near middle after "application" inserted reference to summary of preliminary determination and conditions; inserted (2)(c) requiring compliance with 85-2-310 if application is to be denied; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

Applicability: Section 9, Ch. 251, L. 2009, provided: "[This act] applies to applications received by the department after [the effective date of this act]." Effective July 1, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 70 in (1)(a) near beginning after "permit" inserted "or change in appropriation right"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

Saving Clause: Section 15, Ch. 70, L. 2005, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 370 at beginning of (1)(a) substituted "correct and complete application" for "proper application". Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

Severability: Section 11, Ch. 370, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 370, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 1 through 8] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications and objections pending on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 16, 1993] that are subject to the provisions of Title 85, chapter 2."

1987 Amendment: In (1) deleted requirement for publication for 2 consecutive weeks; and in (1)(b) and (2) deleted "last" before "date of publication".

1983 Amendments: Chapter 448, in (1)(a), reduced notice from 3 to 2 weeks; and in (2) reduced time of first filing from 30 to 15 days after notice.

Chapter 526, at end of (1)(b)(i), deleted "A notice shall also be served upon"; and inserted (1)(b)(ii) requiring the Department to serve by first-class mail timely notice of an application upon any purchaser under contract for deed of property that may be affected by the proposed appropriation.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "first-class" for "certified" before "mail" in the second sentence of (1).

Case Notes

Erroneous Grant of Writ of Mandate After Statement Issued That Statutory Water Permit Criteria Not Satisfied — Remand: In December 2005, plaintiff filed an application for a water use permit for construction of a municipal water system in a subdivision. In February 2007, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) issued a document directing that public notice be given of plaintiff's application. At this point in the application process, plaintiff's application was considered correct and complete. Parties objected to the application, but plaintiff settled with those parties. DNRC then sent plaintiff another application review form, and plaintiff provided additional requested information. By August 2007, more than 180 days had elapsed since the application was filed, but DNRC had still not taken action on it. In December 2007, plaintiff filed for a writ of mandate to require DNRC to issue a water use permit. Shortly after the petition for a writ was filed, DNRC issued a statement of opinion stating the plaintiff had failed to satisfy certain criteria under 85-2-311, and moved to quash the petition for a writ. Nevertheless, in May 2008, the District Court concluded that once DNRC made the decision that plaintiff's application was correct and complete and took no further action, the only remaining option was the ministerial option of granting the permit. Therefore, the writ of mandate was issued directing DNRC to grant the permit to plaintiff. DNRC appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The District Court erroneously granted the writ of mandate because the writ was issued after DNRC had already issued a statement that plaintiff failed to satisfy the statutory application criteria by a preponderance of the evidence. Because the statement of opinion was issued, even if in error, that action could not be undone by a writ of mandate regardless of the writ's propriety or whether DNRC had statutory or jurisdictional authority to issue the opinion. Additionally, the District Court erred in concluding that DNRC had a legal duty to issue a permit in this case. Once plaintiff's application was correct and complete, DNRC had a clear legal duty to process the application in a timely manner. DNRC failed to process the application and could have been commanded to make a decision one way or the other as soon as the timeframes lapsed, but issuance of the permit does not become a clear legal duty until objections are resolved and the applicant has proven all 85-2-311 criteria by a preponderance of the evidence. As set out in the statement of opinion, plaintiff had not satisfied all the criteria, so DNRC was under no legal duty to issue the permit. Thus, the writ of mandate was reversed and the case was remanded for further proceedings to allow plaintiff to request a hearing with DNRC regarding the application. Bostwick Properties, Inc. v. 2003 Amendment: Chapter 574 in (5) inserted second and third sentences requiring the adoption of rules delineating the components of a correct and complete objection and requiring certain information in an objection related to instream flow water rights for fish, wildlife, and recreation; and in (6) at end after "under" substituted "this section and rules of the department" for "subsection (1), (2), or (4)". Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 422 in (1)(b), (2), and (4) substituted "indicating" for "tending to show"; in (5) in first sentence after "under this chapter shall" deleted "timely" and at end inserted "within the time period stated on the public notice associated with the application" and inserted last two sentences relating to defects and corrections of an objection; inserted (6) relating to when an objection is valid; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 23, 1999.

Severability: Section 6, Ch. 422, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 370 inserted (5) requiring objector to timely file correct and complete objection on form prescribed by Department. Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

Severability: Section 11, Ch. 370, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 370, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 1 through 8] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications and objections pending on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 16, 1993] that are subject to the provisions of Title 85, chapter 2."

1991 Amendment: In (1)(a), after "application", inserted "for a permit"; in (1)(b), after "objection", inserted "to an application for a permit" and after "that" substituted "one or more of the criteria in 85-2-311 are not met" for "there are no unappropriated waters in the proposed source, that the proposed means of appropriation are inadequate, that the property, water rights, or interests of the objector would be adversely affected by the proposed appropriation, that the proposed use of water is not a beneficial use, or that the proposed use will interfere unreasonably with other planned uses or developments for which a permit has been issued or for which water has been reserved"; inserted (2) requiring that in an application for change in appropriation rights, an objection must state name and address of objector and state that criteria in 85-2-402 are not met; inserted (3) providing that person has standing to file objection if property, water rights, or interests would be adversely affected by proposed appropriation; inserted (4) requiring that in an application for water reservation, an objection must state name and address of objector and state that criteria in 85-2-316 are not met; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1983 Amendment: Substituted (2) (see 1983 Session Law) for former text, which read: "The objection must state the name and address of the objector and facts tending to show that there are no unappropriated waters in the proposed source, that the proposed means of appropriation are inadequate, that the property, rights, or interests of the objector would be adversely affected by the proposed appropriation, or the objector may state any other objections to the proposed appropriation he considers pertinent."

Once plaintiff's application was correct and complete, DNRC had a clear legal duty to process the application in a timely manner. DNRC failed to process the application and could have been commanded to make a decision one way or the other as soon as the timeframes lapsed, but issuance of the permit does not become a clear legal duty until objections are resolved and the applicant has proven all 85-2-311 criteria by a preponderance of the evidence. As set out in the statement of opinion, plaintiff had not satisfied all the criteria, so DNRC was under no legal duty to issue the permit. Thus, the writ of mandate was reversed and the case was remanded for further proceedings to allow plaintiff to request a hearing with DNRC regarding the application. Bostwick Properties, Inc. v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2009 MT 181, 351 M 26, 208 P3d 868 (2009), following Beasley v. Flathead County Bd. of Adjustment, 2009 MT 120, 350 M 171, 205 P3d 812 (2009).

Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Not Required When Futile: The District Court concluded that plaintiffs were required to exhaust administrative remedies before seeking a declaratory judgment in District Court. However, pursuant to DeVoe v. Dept. of Revenue, 263 M 100, 866 P2d 228 (1993), the Supreme Court will not require exhaustion of administrative remedies when the act would be futile. Here, exhaustion of administrative remedies would have required plaintiffs to stand by while defendant processed an application for ground water that did not fall within the exception to the Upper Missouri River basin closure law in 85-2-343. Waiting for applications to be issued before challenging them administratively or judicially would have been ineffective in preventing immediate harm to surface water in the basin and would have deprived plaintiffs of a remedy and required participation in a costly administrative process to object to applications that were expressly prohibited by the basin closure law and defendant's own rules. Thus, the futility exception to the exhaustion requirement relieved plaintiffs from having to exhaust administrative remedies before seeking judicial review, and the District Court was reversed. Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2006 MT 72, 331 M 483, 133 P3d 224 (2006).

Improper Agency Interpretation of Basin Closure Language: The Legislature did not define the phrase "immediately or directly connected to surface water" in 85-2-340. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation interpreted the language to apply to ground water that induced surface water infiltration. However, that definition failed to account for impacts to surface water flow caused by the prestream capture of tributary ground water. The intent of the basin closure law was to protect senior water right holders and surface flows in the Upper Missouri River basin and other basins from reduced surface flows, and the Department's partial definition as it related to ground water was in contravention of legislative intent and did not provide sufficient protection to reasonably effectuate the purpose of the basin closure law. Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2006 MT 72, 331 M 483, 133 P3d 224 (2006).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Standing to Challenge Award of Water Right: A party has standing to challenge a water right only if it conflicts with those granted to him. Thus, he has no standing to challenge a right to water from a source in which he has no water right. However, he may challenge a water right from a source from which he has a water right whether the challenged right is prior or subsequent to his own. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979). Rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980). (See 1991 amendment.)

2009 Amendment: Chapter 251 in (1) near beginning after "permit" inserted "under 85-2-311" and substituted "or change in appropriation right" for "or change approval", increased period for hearing from 60 days to 90 days, and inserted third sentence allowing extension of 90-day period. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

Applicability: Section 9, Ch. 251, L. 2009, provided: "[This act] applies to applications received by the department after [the effective date of this act]." Effective July 1, 2009.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 422 in (1) in first sentence substituted "hold a contested case hearing, pursuant to Title 2, chapter 4, part 6" for "hold a public hearing" and substituted reference to service by first-class mail for reference to service by certified mail; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 23, 1999.

Severability: Section 6, Ch. 422, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 497 in (2)(a) inserted second sentence concerning priority of certified controversies; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 22, Ch. 497, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1985 Amendment: In (1), in first sentence, after "permit", inserted "or change approval under 85-2-402" and after "valid objection", deleted "to the issuance of the permit" and at end of first sentence inserted final clause concerning certification to District Court; and inserted (2) and (3) relating to Department's authority to certify to the District Court at any time prior to commencement or before conclusion of a hearing on objections to an application for a permit or change in appropriation right approval all factual and legal issues involving the adjudication or determination of the water rights at issue in the hearing.

Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 596, L. 1985, provided: "This act applies to all permit applications and changes in appropriation right applications filed and pending with the department on the effective date of this act [April 17, 1985] and upon which a proposal for a decision has not been issued by the department."

Failure to Participate in Water Court Hearing — Attorney Fees Assessed as Sanction for Defense of Unreasonable Appeal: Despite warnings from the Water Court of the consequences, plaintiffs chose not to participate in a Water Court hearing, thereby creating no record of their issues and preserving none of their arguments for appeal. They appealed anyway, contending that the Water Court's findings were in error. The Supreme Court first found that the findings and conclusions were correct, then sanctioned plaintiffs pursuant to former Rule 32, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), finding that defendant was entitled to attorney fees incurred in defending an appeal that was taken without any substantial or reasonable grounds, that delayed the case, and that wasted the resources of defendant and the Supreme Court. 2011 Amendment: Chapter 29 in (9)(c)(v) at beginning inserted exception clause; and inserted (10) regarding water marketing for the purpose of aquifer recharge or mitigation. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 251 deleted former (1) that read: "(1) The department shall grant, deny, or condition an application for a permit or change in appropriation right in whole or in part within 120 days after the last date of publication of the notice of application if no objections have been received and within 180 days if a hearing is held or objections have been received. However, in either case the time may be extended upon agreement of the applicant or, in those cases where an environmental impact statement must be prepared or in other extraordinary cases, may be extended by not more than 60 days upon order of the department. If the department orders the time extended, it shall serve a notice of the extension and the reasons for the extension by first-class mail upon the applicant and each person who has filed an objection as provided by 85-2-308"; inserted (1)(a) requiring hearing if department proposes to deny application; inserted (1)(b)(i) and (1)(b)(ii) relating to change of hearing examiner on request of applicant; inserted (2) relating to proposal to grant application after hearing on proposal to deny application; inserted (3) relating to grant of permit or change in appropriation right when there are no valid objections or objections are unconditionally withdrawn; inserted (4) relating to grant of permit or change in appropriation right after objections withdrawn with conditions; inserted (5) requiring grant or denial of permit within 90 days after administrative record closed; in (9)(c)(iv) substituted "(9)(c)(iii)" for "(4)(c)(iii)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

Applicability: Section 9, Ch. 251, L. 2009, provided: "[This act] applies to applications received by the department after [the effective date of this act]." Effective July 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 213 inserted (2) providing that if an application is to appropriate water with a point of diversion, conveyance, or place of use on national forest system lands, any application approved by the department is subject to any written special use authorization required by federal law; in (3) at beginning of first sentence inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2007.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 70 in (1) in first sentence near beginning after "permit" inserted "or change in appropriation right" and in second sentence after "extraordinary cases" inserted "may be extended by"; in (3) in first sentence near beginning after "permit" inserted "or change in appropriation right" and in second sentence near middle inserted "for a permit application"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

Chapter 337 in (4)(d) after "statement" substituted "costs or fees" for "fee"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 2005.

Saving Clause: Section 15, Ch. 70, L. 2005, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 22, Ch. 337, L. 2005, provided: "[This act] applies to environmental impact statements on which the agency responsible for preparation commenced preparation after December 31, 2004."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 422 in (1) and (2) substituted references to service by first-class mail for references to service by certified mail; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 23, 1999.

Severability: Section 6, Ch. 422, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

1991 Amendment: In (4)(c)(iii), in second sentence after "a reasonable time line", deleted "not to exceed 10 years from the time of issuance of a permit". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1987 Amendment: In (4)(a)(iii), in first sentence after "project plan", deleted "including, but not limited to, a reasonable time line for the completion of the project and the actual application of the water to a beneficial use, which may not exceed 10 years from the date of application, detailing", inserted "describing", and inserted last sentence concerning time line.

1985 Amendment — Applicability: Inserted (4) listing criteria under which the Department must find that an application filed after July 1, 1973, lacks good faith or shows no bona fide intent to appropriate water for a beneficial use.

Section 3, Ch. 399, L. 1985, read: "This act applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications filed after July 1, 1973."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 399, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is desirable for this bill because it authorizes the board of natural resources and conservation [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] to make rules on the new material enacted in the bill. The rules would implement section 1 [85-2-310(4)] of the bill, which establishes criteria for the department of natural resources and conservation to reject an application for a beneficial water use permit that is not in good faith or does not show a bona fide intent to appropriate water.

The intent is to adopt those rules necessary to implement the criteria listed in section 1 [85-2-310(4)]. Because the criteria are specific, the rulemaking authority would be limited to adopting rules:

(1) defining a proposed place of use;

(2) prescribing the contents of a detailed project plan and of a general project plan;

(3) defining reasonable time lines, not to exceed 10 years, for completion of projects; and

(4) prescribing the detailed information to implement criteria relative to applications for water use above that amount of water which will be used solely by the applicant."

1985 Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 399, L. 1985, read: "This act applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications filed after July 1, 1973."

1981 Amendment: Substituted "objections have been received" for "hearing is held" after "if no" in the first sentence of (1); inserted "or objections have been received" after "if a hearing is held" at the end of the first sentence of (1).

Case Notes

Erroneous Grant of Writ of Mandate After Statement Issued That Statutory Water Permit Criteria Not Satisfied — Remand: In December 2005, plaintiff filed an application for a water use permit for construction of a municipal water system in a subdivision. In February 2007, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) issued a document directing that public notice be given of plaintiff's application. At this point in the application process, plaintiff's application was considered correct and complete. Parties objected to the application, but plaintiff settled with those parties. DNRC then sent plaintiff another application review form, and plaintiff provided additional requested information. By August 2007, more than 180 days had elapsed since the application was filed, but DNRC had still not taken action on it. In December 2007, plaintiff filed for a writ of mandate to require DNRC to issue a water use permit. Shortly after the petition for a writ was filed, DNRC issued a statement of opinion stating the plaintiff had failed to satisfy certain criteria under 85-2-311, and moved to quash the petition for a writ. Nevertheless, in May 2008, the District Court concluded that once DNRC made the decision that plaintiff's application was correct and complete and took no further action, the only remaining option was the ministerial option of granting the permit. Therefore, the writ of mandate was issued directing DNRC to grant the permit to plaintiff. DNRC appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The District Court erroneously granted the writ of mandate because the writ was issued after DNRC had already issued a statement that plaintiff failed to satisfy the statutory application criteria by a preponderance of the evidence. Because the statement of opinion was issued, even if in error, that action could not be undone by a writ of mandate regardless of the writ's propriety or whether DNRC had statutory or jurisdictional authority to issue the opinion. Additionally, the District Court erred in concluding that DNRC had a legal duty to issue a permit in this case. Once plaintiff's application was correct and complete, DNRC had a clear legal duty to process the application in a timely manner. DNRC failed to process the application and could have been commanded to make a decision one way or the other as soon as the timeframes lapsed, but issuance of the permit does not become a clear legal duty until objections are resolved and the applicant has proven all 85-2-311 criteria by a preponderance of the evidence. As set out in the statement of opinion, plaintiff had not satisfied all the criteria, so DNRC was under no legal duty to issue the permit. Thus, the writ of mandate was reversed and the case was remanded for further proceedings to allow plaintiff to request a hearing with DNRC regarding the application. Bostwick Properties, Inc. v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2009 MT 181, 351 M 26, 208 P3d 868 (2009), following Beasley v. Flathead County Bd. of Adjustment, 2009 MT 120, 350 M 171, 205 P3d 812 (2009).

No Injunction for Ground Water Pumping Violation When Water Use Permit Granted — Request for Attorney Fees Moot: Defendant water and wastewater system operator was granted a provisional permit to pump ground water to service various businesses and residences in a water district, conditioned upon final state approval. However, defendant began pumping ground water before final approval was granted, and plaintiffs sought an injunction to stop the pumping and sought attorney fees in connection with the request for injunctive relief. Defendant moved for summary dismissal on grounds that plaintiffs did not have standing to enforce the Montana Water Use Act. The District Court agreed and dismissed plaintiffs' complaint, and plaintiffs appealed. About 2 weeks before the appeal was filed, the state granted final approval of defendant's permit. The Supreme Court held that issuance of the final permit rendered moot plaintiffs' request for injunctive relief and for attorney fees as well, including attorney fees under the private attorney general doctrine. The District Court was affirmed. Faust v. Util. Solutions, LLC, 2007 MT 326, 340 M 183, 173 P3d 1183 (2007).

85-2-311. Criteria for issuance of permit.

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 213 in (1)(e) at end after "beneficial use" inserted "or if the proposed use has a point of diversion, conveyance, or place of use on national forest system lands, the applicant has any written special use authorization required by federal law to occupy, use, or traverse national forest system lands for the purpose of diversion, impoundment, storage, transportation, withdrawal, use, or distribution of water under the permit"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2007.

Chapter 391 in (5) at beginning inserted "Subject to 85-2-360"; inserted (8) concerning application for ground water in closed basin; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 3, 2007.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 391, L. 2007, provided: "WHEREAS, it is the policy of this state to encourage the wise use of the state's water resources by making them available for appropriation and to provide wise utilization, development, and conservation of the water of the state for the maximum benefit of its people with the least possible degradation of the state's natural aquatic ecosystems; and

WHEREAS, there has been confusion regarding ground water issues in closed basins and the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation needs guidance from the Legislature on how to proceed; and

WHEREAS, the basin closure laws were passed to protect senior appropriators while the state water adjudication is ongoing; and

WHEREAS, ground water development in closed basins should be able to proceed as long as the applicant collects the necessary scientific information to determine if there will be an adverse effect on a prior appropriator and takes the necessary actions to mitigate or prevent any adverse effects on a prior appropriator; and

WHEREAS, it is critical that the Legislature develop state water policies in a way that protects the prior appropriation doctrine while at the same time protecting the quality of Montana's water and the ability to appropriate water consistent with section 85-1-101, MCA, and Article IX, section 3, of the Montana Constitution; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has developed administrative rules and applied augmentation through these administrative rules to all basins even though not specifically statutorily authorized; and

WHEREAS, administrative rules and rulemaking must comply with section 2-4-305, MCA, and may not engraft material not contemplated by the Legislature; and

WHEREAS, this bill provides definitions and a new procedure for mitigation and aquifer recharge."

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 391, L. 2007, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 31, Ch. 391, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] applies to applications for an appropriation right in a closed basin filed on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective May 3, 2007.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 497 in (1) inserted first, second, and third sentences concerning issuance of permit before adjudication of source of supply, lack of presumption that applicant cannot meet criteria, and alteration of terms and conditions of existing right; in (1)(a)(i) substituted "is water physically available" for "are unappropriated waters in the source of supply"; deleted former (1)(a)(i) that read: "(i) at times when the water can be put to the use proposed by the applicant"; deleted (1)(a)(iii) that read: "(iii) during the period in which the applicant seeks to appropriate, in the amount requested and that is reasonably available"; inserted (1)(a)(ii) concerning legal availability of water; in (1)(b) inserted "under an existing water right, a certificate, a permit, or a state water reservation" and inserted "In this subsection (1)(b), adverse effect must be determined based on a consideration of an applicant's plan for the exercise of the permit that demonstrates that the applicant's use of the water will be controlled so the water right of a prior appropriator will be satisfied"; deleted former (1)(e) that read: "(e) the proposed use will not interfere unreasonably with other planned uses or developments for which a permit has been issued or for which water has been reserved"; deleted former (3)(b) that read: "(b) the rights of a prior appropriator will not be adversely affected"; in (4)(a), near middle of first sentence, inserted "federal non-Indian and Indian"; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 497, L. 1997, provided: "The legislature intends that the Montana Supreme Court's decision in In the Matter of the Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit Nos. 66459-76L, Ciotti, 64988-g76L, Starner; and Application for Change of Appropriation Water Right No. G15152-s761, Pope, 53 St. Rep. 777 at 784, 923 P.2d 1073, be negated by the passage and approval of this bill. The legislature further intends that the portion of the district court decision in United States v. DNRC (1st Judicial District, Montana, June 15, 1987), No. 50612, (see also the concurring opinion in the Montana Supreme Court's decision in In the Matter of the Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit Nos. 66459-76L Ciotti, 64988-g76L, Starner; and Application for Change of Appropriation Water Right No. G15152-s761, Pope, 53 St. Rep. 777 at 784, 923 P.2d 1073), determining that in the absence of a quantification of existing water rights, the department of natural resources and conservation does not have the authority to issue a permit for a new water application when questions of senior conflicting claims are raised, be negated by the passage and approval of this bill, specifically by the passage and approval of the amendments to 85-2-311. A statement of intent is desired for this bill in order to provide guidance to the department under 85-2-311 concerning implementation and interpretation of the physical availability of water and reasonable legal availability of water criteria. To find that water is available for the issuance of a permit, the department shall require a three-step analysis involving the following factors: identify physical water availability, identify existing legal demands on the source of supply, and compare and analyze the physical water supply at the proposed point of diversion with the existing legal demands on the source of supply."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (2), in third sentence, substituted "department of environmental quality" for "department of health and environmental sciences"; in (5) substituted "U.S. natural resources conservation service" for "U.S. soil conservation service"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

1993 Amendments: Chapter 370 near beginning of (1) and (5) substituted "preponderance of evidence" for "substantial credible evidence"; and in (5), near beginning after "applicant", inserted "in addition to other evidence demonstrating that the criteria of subsection (1) have been met", before "hydrologic" deleted "independent", after "including" inserted "but not limited to", after "information developed by the" inserted "applicant, the", and at end, after "studies", deleted "demonstrating that the criteria are met". Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

Chapter 460 in (1), near beginning, substituted "subsections (3) and (4)" for "subsections (2) and (3)" and substituted "preponderance of evidence" for "substantial credible evidence"; inserted (1)(g) concerning water quality, (1)(h) concerning classification of water, and (1)(i) concerning effluent limitations; inserted (2) requiring that a valid objection be made before an applicant needs to prove that the permit criteria have been met; in (4), near end, substituted "subsection (4)" for "subsection (3)"; in (4)(b)(i) substituted "subsection (1) or (3)" for "subsection (1) or (2)"; in (4)(c) substituted "subsections (4)(b)(ii) and (4)(b)(iii)" for "subsections (3)(b)(ii) and (3)(b)(iii)"; near beginning of (5) substituted "preponderance of evidence" for "substantial credible evidence"; inserted (7) allowing the Department to adopt rules; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 1993.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 460, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the bill gives the department of natural resources and conservation authority to adopt administrative rules. The bill adds statutory criteria for the department to consider in the processing of an application for a permit, change authorization, controlled ground water area, or basin closure. In adopting rules implementing this bill and in interpreting the new statutory language, it is the intent of the legislature that the department and board of natural resources and conservation [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] should assess the magnitude, character, duration, and geographical extent of the projected effects on the uses of water as classified and utilize this assessment in a practical manner."

Section 7, Ch. 460, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 370, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 1 through 8] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications and objections pending on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 16, 1993] that are subject to the provisions of Title 85, chapter 2."

Section 8, Ch. 460, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 1 and 3] [85-2-311 and 85-2-402] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications for a permit or change in appropriation right that the department has not noticed out for objection as of [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 21, 1993.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 432 at end of (1)(a) inserted "at the proposed point of diversion"; near end of (1)(a)(iii), before "available", inserted "reasonably"; inserted (1)(f) relating to possessory interest; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 4, 1989.

Chapter 495 in (1) substituted "subsections (2) and (3)" for "subsections (2) through (4)"; inserted (4) relating to evidence necessary to meet the substantial credible evidence standard; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 11, 1989.

1985 Amendment: In (1) near beginning, after "(2)", changed "and (3)" to "through (4)"; in (2) reduced the threshold for issuance of a permit under this subsection from 10,000 acre-feet or 15 cubic feet per second to 4,000 acre-feet and 5.5 cubic feet per second and substituted "the applicant proves by clear and convincing evidence that" for "it affirmatively finds"; in (2)(b) at beginning, deleted "the applicant has proven by clear and convincing evidence that"; after (2)(c)(ii), deleted former (2)(a)(iii)(C) that read: "the economic feasibility of the project"; in (2)(c)(iii) after "quality", deleted "and potability"; inserted (2)(c)(iv) prohibiting the Department from issuing a permit for an appropriation of 4,000 or more acre-feet of water per year and 5.5 or more cubic feet per second of water unless the applicant proves that, based on the effects on the quantity and quality of water for existing beneficial uses in the supply source, the proposed appropriation is a reasonable use; deleted former (2)(b) that read: "A permit for an appropriation for a diversion for a consumptive use of 10,000 or more acre-feet of water a year or 15 or more cubic feet per second of water under this subsection may not be issued unless the department petitions the legislature and the legislature affirms the findings of the department"; inserted (3) establishing criteria to allow the out-of-state transportation and use of public water; and in (4) inserted "use" after "impoundment" three times and after "impound" once, and in first sentence at end, changed "null and void" to "invalid".

1985 Applicability: Section 27, Ch. 573, L. 1985, provided: "This act applies to all permit applications, change in appropriation right applications, water sales and lease applications, and reservation applications filed and pending with the department on July 1, 1985, but upon which a hearing under Title 85, chapter 2, has not yet commenced."

1983 Amendments: Chapter 448, in (1)(b) after "the" inserted "water".

Chapter 706 made the following changes: at beginning of (1), inserted "Except as provided in subsections (2) and (3)"; at end of (1), after "if" inserted "the applicant proves by substantial credible evidence that the following criteria are met"; deleted former (6) and (7), which read: "(6) an applicant for an appropriation of 10,000 acre-feet a year or more and 15 cubic feet per second or more proves by clear and convincing evidence that the rights of a prior appropriator will not be adversely affected;

(7) except as provided in subsection (6), the applicant proves by substantial credible evidence the criteria listed in subsections (1) through (5)."; and inserted (2) and (3) requiring the Department to issue a permit to appropriate water if the rights of a prior appropriator will not be adversely affected and the proposed means of diversion, construction, and operation of the appropriation works are adequate.

Temporary Changes Made Permanent: Section 7, Ch. 706, L. 1983, provided that the amendments made by Ch. 706 were to terminate on July 1, 1985. Section 23, Ch. 573, L. 1985, amended sec. 7, Ch. 706, L. 1983, to provide that only one section (Ch. 706, sec. 4), that established the Select Committee on Water Marketing, would terminate on July 1, 1985. Thus, the amendments to this section made by Ch. 706, L. 1983 (set forth below in the 1983 amendment note), are now permanent, except insofar as the section was further amended in 1985.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "diversion, construction, and operation of the appropriation works" for "diversion or construction" in (3); substituted "and" for "or" after "a year or more" in (6); added (7) relating to required burden of proof.

Erroneous Grant of Writ of Mandate After Statement Issued That Statutory Water Permit Criteria Not Satisfied — Remand: In December 2005, plaintiff filed an application for a water use permit for construction of a municipal water system in a subdivision. In February 2007, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) issued a document directing that public notice be given of plaintiff's application. At this point in the application process, plaintiff's application was considered correct and complete. Parties objected to the application, but plaintiff settled with those parties. DNRC then sent plaintiff another application review form, and plaintiff provided additional requested information. By August 2007, more than 180 days had elapsed since the application was filed, but DNRC had still not taken action on it. In December 2007, plaintiff filed for a writ of mandate to require DNRC to issue a water use permit. Shortly after the petition for a writ was filed, DNRC issued a statement of opinion stating the plaintiff had failed to satisfy certain criteria under 85-2-311, and moved to quash the petition for a writ. Nevertheless, in May 2008, the District Court concluded that once DNRC made the decision that plaintiff's application was correct and complete and took no further action, the only remaining option was the ministerial option of granting the permit. Therefore, the writ of mandate was issued directing DNRC to grant the permit to plaintiff. DNRC appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The District Court erroneously granted the writ of mandate because the writ was issued after DNRC had already issued a statement that plaintiff failed to satisfy the statutory application criteria by a preponderance of the evidence. Because the statement of opinion was issued, even if in error, that action could not be undone by a writ of mandate regardless of the writ's propriety or whether DNRC had statutory or jurisdictional authority to issue the opinion. Additionally, the District Court erred in concluding that DNRC had a legal duty to issue a permit in this case. Once plaintiff's application was correct and complete, DNRC had a clear legal duty to process the application in a timely manner. DNRC failed to process the application and could have been commanded to make a decision one way or the other as soon as the timeframes lapsed, but issuance of the permit does not become a clear legal duty until objections are resolved and the applicant has proven all 85-2-311 criteria by a preponderance of the evidence. As set out in the statement of opinion, plaintiff had not satisfied all the criteria, so DNRC was under no legal duty to issue the permit. Thus, the writ of mandate was reversed and the case was remanded for further proceedings to allow plaintiff to request a hearing with DNRC regarding the application. Bostwick Properties, Inc. v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2009 MT 181, 351 M 26, 208 P3d 868 (2009), following Beasley v. Flathead County Bd. of Adjustment, 2009 MT 120, 350 M 171, 205 P3d 812 (2009).

Agency Prerogative to Repeal Administrative Rules as Long as Statute Not Violated — Repeal of Administrative Definition of Municipal Use in Water Use Act: Although the term "municipal use" is used repeatedly in the Water Use Act, the term was not statutorily defined. In 2005, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation adopted ARM 36.12.101 that defined municipal use as water appropriated by and provided for those in and around a municipality or unincorporated town. Under the rule, only a municipality or unincorporated town arguably qualified as an acceptable appropriator, when previously it was only necessary that water be appropriated for those in a municipality or unincorporated area. About 1 year after the rule was adopted, the Department sought to repeal the rule because the definition was not in keeping with the historical interpretation of the term by the Department and the Montana Water Court. Following repeal, plaintiffs requested that the District Court declare that repeal of the rule was invalid. The District Court held that by repealing the rule: (1) the definition of municipal use was rendered nebulous and unfairly accommodating of private developers' applications for water use permits; (2) the purpose of the basin closure law to protect and preserve existing water rights would be undermined, potentially threatening senior water rights in an already overappropriated basin; and (3) legislative intent was contravened and plaintiffs' water rights were placed in jeopardy. Plaintiffs' request was granted and repeal of the rule was declared invalid. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The court first determined that the issue was justiciable because it continued to present a controversy concerning the nature of water rights applications and because plaintiffs had a statutory right to challenge the repeal of the rule under 2-4-506, although plaintiffs had the burden to show that the repeal interfered with or impaired their legal rights or privileges or that repeal was implemented with an arbitrary or capricious disregard for the purpose of the implementing legislation as evidenced by the documented legislative intent. Plaintiffs did not meet their burden. The rule was not in effect long enough for plaintiffs to demonstrate that their rights or privileges were impaired or threatened by the repeal, and private entities had previously been granted municipal use permits. Additionally, plaintiffs failed to show that the repeal was arbitrary or capricious. It was the agency's prerogative to enact rules to aid in the permitting process and to repeal rules that were not of assistance as long as the agency does not violate 2-4-506. Lohmeier v. St., 2008 MT 307, 346 M 23, 192 P3d 1137 (2008).

Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Not Required When Futile: The District Court concluded that plaintiffs were required to exhaust administrative remedies before seeking a declaratory judgment in District Court. However, pursuant to DeVoe v. Dept. of Revenue, 263 M 100, 866 P2d 228 (1993), the Supreme Court will not require exhaustion of administrative remedies when the act would be futile. Here, exhaustion of administrative remedies would have required plaintiffs to stand by while defendant processed an application for ground water that did not fall within the exception to the Upper Missouri River basin closure law in 85-2-343. Waiting for applications to be issued before challenging them administratively or judicially would have been ineffective in preventing immediate harm to surface water in the basin and would have deprived plaintiffs of a remedy and required participation in a costly administrative process to object to applications that were expressly prohibited by the basin closure law and defendant's own rules. Thus, the futility exception to the exhaustion requirement relieved plaintiffs from having to exhaust administrative remedies before seeking judicial review, and the District Court was reversed. Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2006 MT 72, 331 M 483, 133 P3d 224 (2006).

Improper Agency Interpretation of Basin Closure Language: The Legislature did not define the phrase "immediately or directly connected to surface water" in 85-2-340. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation interpreted the language to apply to ground water that induced surface water infiltration. However, that definition failed to account for impacts to surface water flow caused by the prestream capture of tributary ground water. The intent of the basin closure law was to protect senior water right holders and surface flows in the Upper Missouri River basin and other basins from reduced surface flows, and the Department's partial definition as it related to ground water was in contravention of legislative intent and did not provide sufficient protection to reasonably effectuate the purpose of the basin closure law. Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2006 MT 72, 331 M 483, 133 P3d 224 (2006).

Water Appropriation Application Amendments So Significant as to Constitute New Appropriations — Original Applications Considered Shams — New Applications Barred by Subbasin Closure: Just 10 days before the Legislature closed the Bitterroot River subbasin to new water appropriations in 1999, defendants submitted four appropriation applications to develop ponds on their property for the beneficial use of wildlife. All four applications were subsequently amended to variously revise volume and flow rates, proposed pond depth, points and means of diversion, place of use, and beneficial uses. Numerous parties objected to the proposed appropriations, including plaintiff, which moved to terminate the applications on grounds that the amendments were submitted in bad faith and were new applications and that deficiencies in the applications were not cured within the statutory time limit. A hearings examiner denied the motion to terminate the applications, but nevertheless denied the applications on numerous grounds. Defendants filed exceptions to the hearings examiner's decision, and the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation reversed the hearings examiner and granted all four applications. Plaintiff petitioned the District Court for review, and the court concluded that the Department erred in accepting and processing the amended applications after the subbasin closure and in other ways and denied the applications. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The amendments to the applications were not mere refinements, but constituted changes so significant that the amended applications bore such little resemblance to the original applications as to be considered shams. The nature and extent of the changes could be consistent only with new applications with new priority dates, which were prohibited by the subbasin closure. The Supreme Court noted that to hold otherwise would establish a precedent allowing a prospective appropriator to file a deficient application and later amend the application without penalty, thereby gaining an advantage over other appropriators and circumventing other restrictions associated with a subbasin closure. Bitterroot River Protective Ass'n, Inc. v. Siebel, 2005 MT 60, 326 M 241, 108 P3d 518 (2005).

Issuance of Permits for Ground Water on Indian Reservations Precluded Until Tribes' Federally Reserved Water Rights Defined and Quantified: The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) granted a permit for the use of ground water on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Despite prior holdings in In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073 (1996), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244 (1999), that the state does not have jurisdiction to issue new use permits prior to formal adjudication of the tribes' reserved water rights, DNRC contended that this case was distinguishable because the tribes' federally reserved water right concerning ground water is legally uncertain. However, the only federal authority cited by either party, Tweedy v. Tex. Co., 286 F. Supp. 383 (D.C. Mont. 1968), supported the conclusion that there is no distinction between surface water and ground water for purposes of determining what water rights are reserved because those rights are necessary to the purpose of an Indian reservation. Further, neither of the prior state cases excluded ground water. The tribes contended that as a sovereign nation, they should not be required to defend their water rights in piecemeal fashion before a hostile forum and that pursuant to this section and the prior case law, the ground water permit was illegal. The Supreme Court agreed with the tribes and vacated the permit, finding no reason to limit the scope of the prior holdings by excluding ground water from the tribes' federally reserved water rights in this case. Two statutory methods for comprehensively adjudicating Indian reserved water rights already exist—a general inter sese adjudication or negotiations with the Montana Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission. Therefore, the tribes should not be required to defend their water rights by participating in the DNRC hearings process. Thus, DNRC cannot determine whether water is available on the Flathead Reservation, whether surface water or ground water, because DNRC cannot determine whether the issuance of permits would affect existing water rights until the tribes' preeminent water rights are defined and quantified. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Stults, 2002 MT 280, 312 M 420, 59 P3d 1093 (2002).

Quantification of Tribal Water Rights Required — 1997 Amendment Unconstitutional: In an effort to avoid the result created by In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073, 53 St. Rep. 777 (1996), the 1997 Legislature passed Senate Bill No. 97, which substantively eliminated the former protection of Indian reserved water rights provided by this section. The state conceded that the protection of existing water rights in Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., includes water rights reserved for Indian reservations and contended that those rights were not affected by Senate Bill No. 97, but rather that those rights would be considered in that part of the analysis requiring that water be legally available. The state also pointed out the provisional nature of any water use permit and alleged that there were some uses that would not diminish instream flow and that use permits could thus be issued without affecting reserved Indian water rights, regardless of the quantification of those rights. However, under State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754 (1985), it was found that Indian reserved water rights are owned by the Indians, and because that ownership interest exists under federal law and does not depend on the use of the water, the Supreme Court was not persuaded that the state's permitting process might allow uses of Indian reserved water that in the long term might not diminish instream flows. The provisional nature of permits was not determinative either because use of water that may have been reserved by federal law for the tribes was no less impermissible simply because it was temporary and subject to termination following final quantification of the tribes' rights by adjudication or negotiation. Under the 1997 amendments, permits are still limited to water that is "legally available", but that phrase is not defined. Construing the phrase in a manner that sustains its constitutional validity, the Supreme Court interpreted "legally available" to mean that there is water available that, among other things, has not been federally reserved for Indian tribes. Therefore, as in In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, the state cannot determine whether water is legally available on the Flathead Reservation because it cannot determine whether the issuance of permits would affect existing water rights until the tribes' rights are quantified by a compact negotiation under 85-2-702 or by a general inter sese water rights adjudication. To allow the issuance of water use permits on the reservation prior to quantification of the tribes' pervasive reserved right would require use of water that might belong to the tribes, in violation of Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., which protects existing water rights whether adjudicated or not. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244, 56 St. Rep. 1356 (1999).

State May Not Grant Water Use Permits on Indian Lands When Reserved Tribal Rights Not Quantified: The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation objected to the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) issuing new water use permits to nontribal members owning land in fee on the reservation. The tribes argued that this section clearly states that an applicant for a water use permit has to demonstrate that the proposed use will not unreasonably interfere with a planned use for which the water has been reserved and that such a showing cannot be made by an applicant until the tribes reserved rights are quantified by a compact negotiated with the state pursuant to 85-2-702. The Supreme Court held that this section does include Indian reserved water rights and that an applicant cannot show that there will be no adverse impact on tribal rights until those rights have been quantified by a negotiated compact with the state. Therefore, DNRC does not have jurisdiction to issue new use permits prior to formal adjudication of the tribes' reserved water rights. (See 1997 amendment.) In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073, 53 St.

Rep. 777 (1996), followed in Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244, 56 St. Rep. 1356 (1999). See also State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754 (1985).

Beneficial Impoundment: Counterclaim against petition of irrigation district for additional appropriation of water was properly denied where evidence was uncontradicted that water was going to waste and that impoundment would be beneficial. 85-2-312. Terms of permit.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 213 in (1)(a) near middle of third sentence after "85-2-311" inserted "and subject to subsection (1)(b)"; inserted (1)(b) providing that if the permit is to use water with a point of diversion, conveyance, or place of use on national forest system lands, the permit is subject to any written special use authorization required by federal law; in (3) at beginning of second sentence after "If" substituted "commencement of the appropriation works, completion of construction, or the actual application of water to the proposed beneficial use" for "a permit"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2007.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 422 in (3) deleted next to last sentence that read: "The department may not accept a request for extension of time that is filed less than 30 days prior to the time limit specified in the permit"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 23, 1999.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 370 substituted language in (3) providing requirement that Department establish process for extension of time limits for commencing appropriation works, for completion of construction, and for application of water to proposed use, prohibiting acceptance by Department of request for time extension if filed less than 30 days prior to time limit in permit, and specifying that permits not completed within time limit or extension are void upon lapse of time limit for former text that read: "The department may, upon a showing of good cause, extend time limits specified in the permit for commencement of the appropriation works, completion of construction, and actual application of the water to the proposed beneficial use. All requests for extensions of time must be by affidavit and must be filed with the department prior to the expiration of the time limit specified in the permit or any previously authorized extension of time. The department may issue an order temporarily extending the time limit specified in the permit for 120 days or until the department has completed its action under this section, whichever is greater. Upon receipt of a proper request for extension of time, the department shall prepare a notice containing the facts pertinent to the request for extension of time and shall publish the notice in a newspaper of general circulation in the area of the source. The department may serve notice by first-class mail upon any public agency or other person the department determines may be interested in or affected by the request for extension of time. The department shall hold a hearing on the request for extension of time on its own motion or if requested by an interested party. The department may grant the extension of time in the absence of a hearing if no requests for a hearing are received and the extension of time is granted as requested, or the department may grant the extension of time in a modified form by following the process established in 85-2-310(2). Subsequent extensions of time may be made in the same manner." Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 370, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 85-2-312 grants the department of natural resources and conservation rulemaking authority to establish a procedure for extending time limits for completing work under a water use permit. The legislature intends that the department provide necessary procedural and substantive safeguards to protect existing water users and permitholders from adverse impacts that may be caused by extending time limits for perfecting new water uses."

1991 Amendment: Deleted (5) that read: "(5) The department shall provide to the county clerk and recorder of the county wherein the point of diversion or place of use is located quarterly reports and an annual summary report of all water right permits, certificates, and change approvals issued by the department within the county". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1987 Amendment: In (2), at beginning, substituted "The department shall specify in the permit or in any authorized extension of time provided in subsection (3), the time limits" for "The department may limit the time", deleted last sentence that read: "For good cause shown by the permittee, the department may in its discretion reasonably extend time limits", and inserted last sentence concerning required Department considerations in issuing permit or authorized extension of time; and inserted (3) relating to grant of extension of time for commencement of appropriation works.

1985 Amendment: In (1) in third sentence, at beginning changed "It" to "The department" and after "necessary", substituted "to satisfy the criteria listed in 85-2-311" for "to protect the rights of other appropriators".

1983 Amendment: In (3), after "sent to the" substituted "permittee" for "county clerk and recorder in the county where the point of diversion or place of use is located for recordation"; deleted last sentence of (3), which read: "After recordation, the clerk and recorder shall send the permit to the permittee."; and inserted (4) requiring that the Department provide to the County Clerk and Recorder of a county where the diversion point or place of use is located quarterly and annual reports of all water rights permits, certificates, and change approvals issued by the Department within the county.

Department Authorized to Condition Permits: The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has authority to grant conditional use permits under 85-2-312 when restrictions are necessary to protect the rights of prior appropriators or are used to impose time limits to perfect a water right under the permit. Mont. Power Co. v. Carey, 211 M 91, 685 P2d 336, 41 St. Rep. 1233 (1984). (Annotator's note: Chapter 573, L. 1985, amended this section to provide that the Department may restrict permits when necessary to satisfy the criteria in 85-2-311).

Permit Conditions Supported by Substantial Credible Evidence: In a proceeding for a permit, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation granted the permit but reduced both the quantity of water to be appropriated and the time period during which the water could be appropriated. The Supreme Court upheld these restrictions based on a review of substantial expert testimony which indicated that the water supply was inadequate to sustain the proposed appropriations, along with existing senior rights, without the restrictions imposed by the Department. Mont. Power Co. v. Carey, 211 M 91, 685 P2d 336, 41 St. Rep. 1233 (1984).

No Injunction for Ground Water Pumping Violation When Water Use Permit Granted — Request for Attorney Fees Moot: Defendant water and wastewater system operator was granted a provisional permit to pump ground water to service various businesses and residences in a water district, conditioned upon final state approval. However, defendant began pumping ground water before final approval was granted, and plaintiffs sought an injunction to stop the pumping and sought attorney fees in connection with the request for injunctive relief. Defendant moved for summary dismissal on grounds that plaintiffs did not have standing to enforce the Montana Water Use Act. The District Court agreed and dismissed plaintiffs' complaint, and plaintiffs appealed. About 2 weeks before the appeal was filed, the state granted final approval of defendant's permit. The Supreme Court held that issuance of the final permit rendered moot plaintiffs' request for injunctive relief and for attorney fees as well, including attorney fees under the private attorney general doctrine. The District Court was affirmed. Faust v. Util. Solutions, LLC, 2007 MT 326, 340 M 183, 173 P3d 1183 (2007).

Case Notes

Sufficient Probable Cause to Revoke Water Use Permit — Malicious Prosecution Claim Precluded — Summary Judgment Proper: The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation determined that plaintiff failed to comply with the conditions of a water use permit. After a show cause hearing, the hearings examiner did not issue a decision within the required 90 days, so plaintiff moved for dismissal with prejudice. The Department did not oppose dismissal but argued that it should be without prejudice because plaintiff was still in violation of the permit conditions. The hearings officer agreed and dismissed the revocation action without prejudice. Plaintiff then sued the Department for malicious prosecution. The Department moved for summary judgment, and the District Court granted the motion on grounds that plaintiff did not raise any genuine issues of material fact as to one of the elements of the malicious prosecution claim and on grounds that the Department was immune from suit because its actions were quasi-judicial. Plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court concluded that, as a matter of law, there was probable cause for the Department to revoke plaintiff's water use permit under 85-2-314 for not following the permit conditions and that because plaintiff could not prove a lack of probable cause for the Department's actions, the malicious prosecution claim failed and summary judgment was proper. Because the claim was properly summarily dismissed on administrative grounds, the Supreme Court never reached the issue of prosecutorial and quasi-judicial immunity. Blacktail Mtn. Ranch Co., LLC v. Dept. of Natural Resources & Conservation, 2009 MT 345, 353 M 149, 220 P3d 388 (2009), applying the elements of malicious prosecution set out in Plouffe v. The state conceded that the protection of existing water rights in Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., includes water rights reserved for Indian reservations and contended that those rights were not affected by Senate Bill No. 97, but rather that those rights would be considered in that part of the analysis requiring that water be legally available. The state also pointed out the provisional nature of any water use permit and alleged that there were some uses that would not diminish instream flow and that use permits could thus be issued without affecting reserved Indian water rights, regardless of the quantification of those rights. However, under State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754 (1985), it was found that Indian reserved water rights are owned by the Indians, and because that ownership interest exists under federal law and does not depend on the use of the water, the Supreme Court was not persuaded that the state's permitting process might allow uses of Indian reserved water that in the long term might not diminish instream flows. The provisional nature of permits was not determinative either because use of water that may have been reserved by federal law for the tribes was no less impermissible simply because it was temporary and subject to termination following final quantification of the tribes' rights by adjudication or negotiation. Under the 1997 amendments, permits are still limited to water that is "legally available", but that phrase is not defined. Construing the phrase in a manner that sustains its constitutional validity, the Supreme Court interpreted "legally available" to mean that there is water available that, among other things, has not been federally reserved for Indian tribes. Therefore, as in In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, the state cannot determine whether water is legally available on the Flathead Reservation because it cannot determine whether the issuance of permits would affect existing water rights until the tribes' rights are quantified by a compact negotiation under 85-2-702 or by a general inter sese water rights adjudication. To allow the issuance of water use permits on the reservation prior to quantification of the tribes' pervasive reserved right would require use of water that might belong to the tribes, in violation of Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., which protects existing water rights whether adjudicated or not. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244, 56 St. Rep. 1356 (1999).

1993 Amendment: Chapter 370 in first sentence, at end before "completed", deleted "properly", in second sentence, at end, substituted "was completed" for "has been properly completed in substantial accordance with the terms and conditions of the permit" and in third sentence, near beginning after "department", inserted "shall review the certified statement and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

1991 Amendment: Inserted second sentence requiring notification to contain certified statement by person with experience in design, construction, or operation of appropriation works that appropriation has been properly completed in accordance with permit; and deleted (2) that read: "(2) The department shall provide to the county clerk and recorder of the county wherein the point of diversion or place of use is located quarterly reports and an annual summary report of all certificates of water right issued by the department within the county". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Applicability: Section 14, Ch. 805, L. 1991, provided: "[Sections 7 and 8] [85-2-315 and 85-2-317], concerning certification by a person with experience in the design, construction, or operation of appropriation works, apply to all permits and change approvals issued after [the effective date of this act] [effective July 1, 1991]."

1983 Amendment: In (1), after "sent to the" substituted "permittee" for "county clerk and recorder in the county wherein the point of diversion or place of use is located for recordation"; deleted last sentence of (1), which read: "After recordation, the clerk and recorder shall send the certificate to the appropriator."; substituted (2) (see 1983 Session Law) for former text, which read: "Except as provided in 85-2-313, a certificate of water right in a particular source may not be issued prior to a general determination under part 2 of this chapter of existing rights in that source."

2007 Amendment: Chapter 213 inserted (3)(a) requiring rulemaking; inserted (3)(b) requiring submission of a correct and complete application; inserted (3)(c) regarding the application form; in (3)(d) near middle of fourth sentence after "environmental" substituted "analysis" for "impact statement"; in (4)(a) at beginning of introductory clause inserted exception clause and after "department" substituted "shall issue a state water reservation if" for "may not adopt an order reserving water unless"; in (4)(b) near middle of introductory clause after "department" substituted "shall issue a water reservation for withdrawal and transport for use outside the state if" for "may not adopt an order reserving water for withdrawal and transport for use outside the state unless"; in (6) in second sentence after "streams" substituted "are not subject to the limit under this subsection" for "may be allocated at the discretion of the department"; in (7) substituted "A state water reservation issued under this section has a priority of appropriation dating from the filing of a correct and complete application with the department" for "After the adoption of an order reserving waters, the department may reject an application and refuse a permit for the appropriation of reserved waters or may issue the permit subject to terms and conditions that it considers necessary for the protection of the objectives of the reservation"; deleted former (9) that read: "(9) Except as provided in 85-2-331, the priority of appropriation of a state water reservation and the relative priority of the reservation to permits with a later priority of appropriation must be determined according to this subsection (9), as follows:

(a) A state water reservation under this section has a priority of appropriation dating from the filing with the department of a notice of intention to apply for a state water reservation in a basin in which no other notice of intention to apply is currently pending. The notice of intention to apply must specify the basin in which the applicant is seeking a state water reservation.

(b) Upon receiving a notice of intention to apply for a state water reservation, the department shall identify all potential state water reservation applicants in the basin specified in the notice and notify each potential applicant of the opportunity to submit an application and to receive a state water reservation with the priority of appropriation as described in subsection (9)(a).

(c) To receive the priority of appropriation described in subsection (9)(a), the applicant shall submit a correct and complete state water reservation application within 1 year after the filing of the notice of intention to apply. Upon a showing of good cause, the department may extend the time for preparing the application.

(d) The department may by order subordinate a state water reservation to a permit or a certificate for ground water development issued pursuant to this part if:

(i) the permit application or the notice of completion of ground water development was accepted by the department before the date of the order granting the reservation;

(ii) the effect of subordinating the reservation to one or more permits or certificates for ground water development does not interfere substantially with the purpose of the reservation; and

(iii) in the case of a certificate for ground water development, the reservant consents to the subordination.

(e) The department shall by order establish the relative priority of state water reservations approved under this section that have the same day of priority. A state water reservation may not adversely affect any rights in existence at that time"; inserted (9) providing that a state water reservation may not adversely affect any rights in existence at that time and allowing the department to issue a state water reservation subject to terms, conditions, restrictions, and limitations; in (10) at beginning inserted "Upon issuing a state water reservation for the purpose of maintaining a minimum flow, level, or quality of water, the appropriation of water is complete. Except as provided in 85-20-1401"; in (11) at beginning of first sentence inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 70 in (13) in third sentence near beginning substituted "water right ownership update form" for "water right transfer certificate". Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 330 in (9)(d), after "permit", inserted "or a certificate for ground water development"; in (9)(d)(i), after "application", inserted "or the notice of completion of ground water development"; in (9)(d)(ii), after "permits", inserted "or certificates for ground water development"; inserted (9)(d)(iii) relating to consent to subordination of ground water development; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 1997.

Chapter 497 throughout section, in 16 places before reference to reservation, inserted "state water" and in 7 places, before "water reservation", inserted "state"; in (1), near middle, substituted "acquire a state water reservation" for "reserve waters"; in (11), in second sentence near beginning after "Reallocation of", deleted "reserved" and after "water" inserted "reserved pursuant to a state water reservation"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (1), in two places, (3), (4)(a), in two places, (4)(b), (4)(c), (5), (6), in two places, (8)(a), (9)(c), (9)(d), (9)(e), (10), in two places, (11), in four places, (13), and (14) substituted "department" for "board"; in (7), after "may", deleted "with the approval of the board"; in (12), in second sentence after "change", deleted "the board, upon notification by" and after "department" deleted "of its approval"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 370 at beginning of (3) substituted "a correct and complete application" for "an application"; in (4)(a) and (5), after "board", inserted "by a preponderance of evidence"; and at end of second sentence in (8)(b), after "agricultural purposes", substituted "describing how the reserved water was put to use" for "that the reserved water has been put to use in substantial accordance with the terms and conditions of the authorization to use reserved water". Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 370, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 1 through 8] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications and objections pending on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 16, 1993] that are subject to the provisions of Title 85, chapter 2."

1991 Amendment: In (8)(a), at end of first sentence after "approved use", inserted "and issue the applicant an authorization for the use"; inserted (8)(b) relating to notification of use of water and inspection for compliance with authorization; in (10) inserted last sentence relating to appropriation of undeveloped water; inserted (12) relating to approval of changes in reservations of water; and inserted (13) relating to transfers of water reservations. Amendment effective April 20, 1991.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 515, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all reservations of waters granted pursuant to 85-2-316."

1989 Amendment: Substituted (9) relating to determination of priority of appropriation of a water reservation and relative priority of the reservation to permits with a later priority for former (9) that read: "(9) A reservation under this section shall date from the date the order reserving the water is adopted by the board and shall not adversely affect any rights in existence at that time"; and made minor changes in phraseology and punctuation.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 389, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill to guide the board of natural resources and conservation [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] in the subordination of water reservations to junior water use permits. The legislature intends that the board amend the rules governing water reservations to clarify the procedure by which subordination, if necessary, will be undertaken and to ensure that any subordination occurs in a manner that results in a clear order of priority among all permits and reservations for use in the administration of water rights associated with the specific water source.

In amending the rules, the board should make clear that the matter of subordination may be considered only after a final decision has been made on all applications for water reservations from a specific water source. If the board determines that subordination should be considered, it may request that the department of natural resources and conservation prepare an analysis concerning the potential for subordination to interfere with the purpose of the reservation and the level at which substantial interference with the reservation would occur. Once the department's analysis is completed, all affected reservants, permitholders, and other interests are to be provided legal notice and the opportunity to appear before the board to present testimony and other evidence concerning subordination. Any board decision on the matter of subordination should be written as an order that includes findings of fact and conclusions of law.

After determining the level at which substantial interference with the purpose of a reservation would occur, the board may subordinate a reservation only to permits that in cumulative effect and in order of priority would not exceed the established level of interference. The board should consider priority dates in deciding which reservations are to be subordinated to which permits in order to avoid confusion about the priority of right to water among permits, between permits and reservations, and among reservations. For example, a reservation with a July 1, 1985, priority date should not be subordinated to a permit with a July 1, 1988, priority date without the reservation also being subordinated to a permit with a June 30, 1987, priority date. Also, a senior water reservation should not be subordinated to a permit without all junior reservations affected also being subordinated to the permit."

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 389, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] does not apply to existing water reservations or to water reservation applications filed with the department of natural resources and conservation before October 1, 1989."

1987 Amendment: In (2)(a), at end of introductory clause, substituted "basin where it is reserved, as described by the following basins" for "following river basins"; and inserted (2)(b) relating to water reservation outside a basin of diversion.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2) listing river basins in which water may be reserved only for existing or future beneficial uses; inserted (4)(b) through (4)(d) establishing criteria for reservation of water for withdrawal and transport for use outside the state; inserted (13) requiring the Department to develop an education program on the benefits and procedures for water reservation and provide technical assistance to agencies or political subdivisions applying for water reservation; and inserted (14) exempting reserved water from the state leasing program.

reservation applications filed and pending with the department on July 1, 1985, but upon which a hearing under Title 85, chapter 2, has not yet commenced."

1981 Amendments: Chapter 186 in (7) inserted "when requested by the districts" before "for rendering technical and administrative assistance", inserted "preparation and" before "processing of such applications", and added last two sentences requiring the Department to complete requested feasibility study and the Board to extend to a conservation district the time allowed to develop plan identifying projects utilizing water reservation.

Chapter 357 added the last sentence of (2) requiring an applicant to pay a reasonable proportion of the Department's cost of preparing environmental impact statement unless payment is waived by the Department.

1981 Applicability: Subsection (3), sec. 7, Ch. 357, L. 1981, provided: "Section 6 [sec. 6, Ch. 357, L. 1981, amending 85-2-316] applies to applications pending before the board on April 14, 1981, as well as applications filed with the board after April 14, 1981."

85-2-317. Limitation on appropriation of ground water.

Compiler's Comments

1991 Amendment: Substituted (1) providing that after July 1, 1991, Department may not approve a permit to appropriate ground water in excess of 3,000 acre-feet per year unless criteria in 85-2-311 are met and Legislature affirms decision after public hearings for former (1) that read: "(1) After May 7, 1979, no application for a permit to appropriate ground water in excess of 3,000 acre-feet per year may be granted, except pursuant to an act of the legislature permitting the specific appropriation". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Applicability: Section 14, Ch. 805, L. 1991, provided: "[Sections 7 and 8] [85-2-315 and 85-2-317], concerning certification by a person with experience in the design, construction, or operation of appropriation works, apply to all permits and change approvals issued after [the effective date of this act] [effective July 1, 1991]."

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 524, L. 1989, provided: "WHEREAS, agricultural and stockwater users in Musselshell County are experiencing water shortages during periods of low flow in the Musselshell River; and

WHEREAS, alternatives for additional water supplies, such as off-stream reservoir storage, would be very costly; and

WHEREAS, abandoned coal mines near Roundup could provide substantial supplemental water; and

WHEREAS, the 50th Montana Legislature authorized the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to issue an interim permit to the Deadman Basin Water Users Association to appropriate ground water in the mines; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation is preparing to issue an interim permit to the Deadman Basin Water Users Association for a small test withdrawal, after a thorough review of the project for any environmental effects; and

WHEREAS, the best interests of people in the Roundup area will be served by a credible and technically sound evaluation of whether the coal mines can provide significant supplemental water supplies without significant adverse environmental effects and without harm to other existing appropriators; and

WHEREAS, test appropriations proposed during the summers of 1990 and 1991 will require an interim permit for an amount exceeding 3,000 acre-feet per year, thereby requiring legislative approval pursuant to section 85-2-317, MCA."

Authorization to Issue Interim Permit to Appropriate Ground Water: Section 1, Ch. 524, L. 1989, provided: "Pursuant to 85-2-317(1), the department of natural resources and conservation may authorize an interim permit for a period ending no later than September 30, 1991, to the Deadman Basin water users association to appropriate ground water up to 6,000 acre-feet per year from abandoned coal mines in Musselshell County. The application and interim permit are subject to the remaining provisions of Title 85, chapter 2, part 3."

1987 Permits: Section 1, Ch. 138, L. 1987, authorized the Department to issue two permits to appropriate ground water exceeding 3,000 acre-feet per year according to application numbers 54092-g43D and 54124-g43D.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 138, L. 1987, provided: "WHEREAS, hydropower is a beneficial use of water that provides benefits to many Montana citizens; and

WHEREAS, applicants propose to use ground water from an existing well and from a new well located in Carbon County for generating hydropower; and

WHEREAS, the source of water for the wells is the Tensleep formation, a major aquifer with commonly reported flows in excess of 8 cubic feet per second; and

WHEREAS, the applicants and the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks have agreed to a provisional permit under conditions that ensure adequate flows for the nearby Bluewater Fish Hatchery; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has reviewed the applications and recommends approval of the application; and

WHEREAS, the ground water applied for exceeds 3,000 acre-feet per year for each well and therefore requires legislative approvals pursuant to section 85-2-317, MCA.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds it appropriate to authorize the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to issue two permits to the applicants for ground water appropriations in excess of 3,000 acre-fee per year."

Certain Abandoned Mine Workings — Authorization to Issue Permit to Appropriate Ground Water: Chapter 414, L. 1987, read: "WHEREAS, agricultural and stockwater users in Musselshell County are experiencing water shortages during periods of low flow in the Musselshell River; and

WHEREAS, alternatives for additional water supplies, such as off-stream reservoir storage, would be very costly; and

WHEREAS, abandoned coal mines near Roundup could provide substantial supplemental water; and

WHEREAS, the Deadman Basin Water Users Association has applied to the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation for a permit to appropriate approximately 13,000 acre-feet annually; and

WHEREAS, the use of this water would exceed 3,000 acre-feet per year and therefore requires legislative approval pursuant to 85-2-317, MCA.

THEREFORE, The Legislature of the State of Montana finds it appropriate to authorize the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to issue a permit to appropriate ground water to the Deadman Basin Water Users Association.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF MONTANA:

Section 1. Authorization to issue permit to appropriate ground water. Pursuant to 85-2-317(1), the department of natural resources and conservation may issue an interim permit for a period ending September 30, 1989, to appropriate ground water in excess of 3,000 acre-feet per year to the Deadman Basin water users association according to application number 61478-g40C for the purpose of conducting and evaluating a project to pump ground water from abandoned mine workings along the lower Musselshell River. The application is subject to the remaining provisions of Title 85, chapter 2, part 3.

Section 2. Coordination instruction. If House Bill No. 642, including the section of that bill repealing 85-2-317, is passed and approved, this act is void.

Section 3. Effective date. This act is effective July 1, 1987."

House Bill No. 642 was passed and approved as Ch. 535, L. 1987. As enacted, Ch. 535 did not repeal 85-2-317. Thus, this chapter is not void.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 460 at end of first sentence of (2), after "subbasin", inserted "or upon petition of the department of health and environmental sciences alleging facts under subsection (2)(d)"; inserted (2)(d) clarifying facts that must be alleged in the case of a petition filed by the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences; inserted (5) allowing the Department to adopt rules; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 1993.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 460, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the bill gives the department of natural resources and conservation authority to adopt administrative rules. The bill adds statutory criteria for the department to consider in the processing of an application for a permit, change authorization, controlled ground water area, or basin closure. In adopting rules implementing this bill and in interpreting the new statutory language, it is the intent of the legislature that the department and board of natural resources and conservation [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] should assess the magnitude, character, duration, and geographical extent of the projected effects on the uses of water as classified and utilize this assessment in a practical manner."

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 370 (Ch. 448, L. 1983) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation in sections 1 and 17.

The intent is to provide the Department with the authority to adopt rules necessary to reject, modify, or condition water use permit applications in highly appropriated basins or subbasins. A rule may only be adopted under this section upon a petition signed by a certain percentage of water users in the source of supply or by direction of the Legislature. The petition must allege certain facts showing the need for the adoption of a rule. The Department must act on the petition within 60 days by: denying the petition and providing reasons to the petitioners; informing the petitioners that additional study of the allegations is necessary before denying or proceeding with the petition; or initiating the rulemaking proceeding. The rulemaking procedure must follow the notice requirements of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act, and in addition the Department must publish notice of the rulemaking hearing once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation in which the source is located and also serve an individual copy of the notice on any known water right holder in the source of supply according to the Department's records.

This bill also delegates rulemaking authority to the Board of Natural Resources and Conservation [functions now transferred to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation] in section 2.

The intent is to provide the Board with the authority to adopt, through rules, fees to be paid by applicants, petitioners, and others for services provided. Fees could be adopted for: rulemaking hearings to reject, modify, or condition water use permit applications in highly appropriated basins or subbasins; administrative hearings conducted by the Department to settle objections to permit or change applications; costs incurred during the field investigation of a complaint against a permittee and related revocation proceedings; and for costs incurred in the field verification of issued and completed permits and change approvals."

1989 Amendment: In introductory clause of (1) inserted "or in the Little Missouri River basin"; substituted (1)(a) and (1)(b), relating to reservation above and below Fort Peck dam, for end of (1) that read: "July 1, 1989, except that applications for reservation of water below Fort Peck dam must be filed no later than July 1, 1991"; at end of (2) inserted "and the Little Missouri River basin"; at beginning of (3)(a) substituted "July 1, 1992" for "December 31, 1991"; at end of (3)(b) inserted "and in the Little Missouri River basin"; and in (4) inserted "in the Missouri River basin and a priority date of July 1, 1989, in the Little Missouri River basin". Amendment effective March 18, 1989.

1987 Amendment: At end of (1) inserted exception for water below Fort Peck Dam; at end of (3)(a) inserted "above Fort Peck dam"; inserted (3)(b) requiring Board before December 31, 1991, to make final determination on applications filed before July 1, 1989, for reservation of water in Missouri River above Fort Peck Dam; inserted (3)(c) requiring Board to determine which applications are above or below Fort Peck Dam; and in (4) inserted second sentence concerning subordination.

1985 Amendment: In (1) and (3) changed deadline for filing applications from July 1, 1987, to July 1, 1989; and in (3) changed deadline for final board determination from December 31, 1989, to December 31, 1991.

Applicability: Section 27, Ch. 573, L. 1985, provided: "This act applies to all permit applications, change in appropriation right applications, water sales and lease applications, and reservation applications filed and pending with the department on July 1, 1985, but upon which a hearing under Title 85, chapter 2, has not yet commenced."

Appropriation — Deadline Change: House Bill 952, L. 1985 (approved May 13, 1985), appropriated funds for water reservations in the upper Missouri River Basin, and changed the deadlines set forth in Ch. 573, L. 1985, for filing applications for water reservations and for action by the Board of Natural Resources & Conservation (functions now transferred to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) on reservation applications. The preamble to House Bill 952, L. 1985, read: "WHEREAS, the Select Committee on Water Marketing was commissioned by the 1983 Legislature to undertake a study of the advantages and disadvantages of water marketing; and

WHEREAS, the Select Committee in completing its study determined that Montana needs to address broader questions of water policy in order to protect Montana's interests in the allocation and management of state waters; and

WHEREAS, the Select Committee has presented a comprehensive series of recommendations that must be considered as a whole; and

WHEREAS, these recommendations serve to revise Montana's water policy in order to maximize Montana's authority over management of state waters and other natural resources and to conserve water for existing and future beneficial uses by Montanans; and

WHEREAS, many of these recommendations are embodied in House Bill No. 680, which is under consideration by the 49th Legislature, as well as contained in the Select Committee's final report; and

WHEREAS, funds are needed for various agencies of state government to implement these recommendations.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds it appropriate to allocate funds for the implementation of the recommendations and to further develop a comprehensive water policy."

Case Notes

Improper Agency Interpretation of Basin Closure Language: The Legislature did not define the phrase "immediately or directly connected to surface water" in this section. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation interpreted the language to apply to ground water that induced surface water infiltration. However, that definition failed to account for impacts to surface water flow caused by the prestream capture of tributary ground water. The intent of the basin closure law was to protect senior water right holders and surface flows in the Upper Missouri River basin and other basins from reduced surface flows, and the Department's partial definition as it related to ground water was in contravention of legislative intent and did not provide sufficient protection to reasonably effectuate the purpose of the basin closure law. Case Notes

Improper Agency Interpretation of Basin Closure Language: The Legislature did not define the phrase "immediately or directly connected to surface water" in 85-2-340. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation interpreted the language to apply to ground water that induced surface water infiltration. However, that definition failed to account for impacts to surface water flow caused by the prestream capture of tributary ground water. The intent of the basin closure law was to protect senior water right holders and surface flows in the Upper Missouri River basin and other basins from reduced surface flows, and the Department's partial definition as it related to ground water was in contravention of legislative intent and did not provide sufficient protection to reasonably effectuate the purpose of the basin closure law. Case Notes

Agency Prerogative to Repeal Administrative Rules as Long as Statute Not Violated — Repeal of Administrative Definition of Municipal Use in Water Use Act: Although the term "municipal use" is used repeatedly in the Water Use Act, the term was not statutorily defined. In 2005, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation adopted ARM 36.12.101 that defined municipal use as water appropriated by and provided for those in and around a municipality or unincorporated town. Under the rule, only a municipality or unincorporated town arguably qualified as an acceptable appropriator, when previously it was only necessary that water be appropriated for those in a municipality or unincorporated area. About 1 year after the rule was adopted, the Department sought to repeal the rule because the definition was not in keeping with the historical interpretation of the term by the Department and the Montana Water Court. Following repeal, plaintiffs requested that the District Court declare that repeal of the rule was invalid. The District Court held that by repealing the rule: (1) the definition of municipal use was rendered nebulous and unfairly accommodating of private developers' applications for water use permits; (2) the purpose of the basin closure law to protect and preserve existing water rights would be undermined, potentially threatening senior water rights in an already overappropriated basin; and (3) legislative intent was contravened and plaintiffs' water rights were placed in jeopardy. Plaintiffs' request was granted and repeal of the rule was declared invalid. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The court first determined that the issue was justiciable because it continued to present a controversy concerning the nature of water rights applications and because plaintiffs had a statutory right to challenge the repeal of the rule under 2-4-506, although plaintiffs had the burden to show that the repeal interfered with or impaired their legal rights or privileges or that repeal was implemented with an arbitrary or capricious disregard for the purpose of the implementing legislation as evidenced by the documented legislative intent. Plaintiffs did not meet their burden. The rule was not in effect long enough for plaintiffs to demonstrate that their rights or privileges were impaired or threatened by the repeal, and private entities had previously been granted municipal use permits. Additionally, plaintiffs failed to show that the repeal was arbitrary or capricious. It was the agency's prerogative to enact rules to aid in the permitting process and to repeal rules that were not of assistance as long as the agency does not violate 2-4-506. Lohmeier v. St., 2008 MT 307, 346 M 23, 192 P3d 1137 (2008).

Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Not Required When Futile: The District Court concluded that plaintiffs were required to exhaust administrative remedies before seeking a declaratory judgment in District Court. However, pursuant to DeVoe v. Dept. of Revenue, 263 M 100, 866 P2d 228 (1993), the Supreme Court will not require exhaustion of administrative remedies when the act would be futile. Here, exhaustion of administrative remedies would have required plaintiffs to stand by while defendant processed an application for ground water that did not fall within the exception to the Upper Missouri River basin closure law in this section. Waiting for applications to be issued before challenging them administratively or judicially would have been ineffective in preventing immediate harm to surface water in the basin and would have deprived plaintiffs of a remedy and required participation in a costly administrative process to object to applications that were expressly prohibited by the basin closure law and defendant's own rules. Thus, the futility exception to the exhaustion requirement relieved plaintiffs from having to exhaust administrative remedies before seeking judicial review, and the District Court was reversed. Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2006 MT 72, 331 M 483, 133 P3d 224 (2006).

Case Notes

Water Appropriation Application Amendments So Significant as to Constitute New Appropriations — Original Applications Considered Shams — New Applications Barred by Subbasin Closure: Just 10 days before the Legislature closed the Bitterroot River subbasin to new water appropriations in 1999, defendants submitted four appropriation applications to develop ponds on their property for the beneficial use of wildlife. All four applications were subsequently amended to variously revise volume and flow rates, proposed pond depth, points and means of diversion, place of use, and beneficial uses. Numerous parties objected to the proposed appropriations, including plaintiff, which moved to terminate the applications on grounds that the amendments were submitted in bad faith and were new applications and that deficiencies in the applications were not cured within the statutory time limit. A hearings examiner denied the motion to terminate the applications, but nevertheless denied the applications on numerous grounds. Defendants filed exceptions to the hearings examiner's decision, and the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation reversed the hearings examiner and granted all four applications. Plaintiff petitioned the District Court for review, and the court concluded that the Department erred in accepting and processing the amended applications after the subbasin closure and in other ways and denied the applications. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The amendments to the applications were not mere refinements, but constituted changes so significant that the amended applications bore such little resemblance to the original applications as to be considered shams. The nature and extent of the changes could be consistent only with new applications with new priority dates, which were prohibited by the subbasin closure. The Supreme Court noted that to hold otherwise would establish a precedent allowing a prospective appropriator to file a deficient application and later amend the application without penalty, thereby gaining an advantage over other appropriators and circumventing other restrictions associated with a subbasin closure. Part 4
Utilization of Water

Part Administrative Rules

Title 36, chapter 12, subchapter 1, ARM Montana Water Use Act rules.

Part Case Notes

Findings and Conclusions as to Water Rights Held Inadequate — Judgment Vacated and Remanded: When a midstream and downstream water user filed suit against the upstream user to have the District Court declare the relative water rights of the parties, the findings of fact and conclusions of law entered by the District Court were so bare and inadequate as to provide no basis for meaningful appellate review. Because it could not be determined from the District Court's bare conclusions (i.e., that the parties had failed to prove their case by a preponderance of the evidence and had abandoned their rights) what the factual or evidentiary basis for the District Court's decision was, the Supreme Court vacated the judgment as to all of the three parties and remanded the case to the District Court and directed it to enter findings and conclusions reflective of the evidence presented at trial and the legal contentions of the parties. 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 193 M 229, 631 P2d 690, 38 St. Rep. 1048 (1981).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 497 inserted (4) concerning recognition and confirmation of changes in appropriation rights actions of Department after July 1, 1973; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 22, Ch. 497, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 23, Ch. 497, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

Case Notes

Appropriative Rights Annual Rather Than Seasonal: Generally, there is no division of the year into an irrigation season and a storage season, so as to give later direct users a seasonal preference over earlier indirect users, or vice versa. Cate v. Hargrave, 209 M 265, 680 P2d 952, 41 St. Rep. 697 (1984).

Damage Award to Appropriator of Costs of Lawsuit Filed to Enforce Rights: In a water rights dispute, upstream junior appropriators damaged downstream senior appropriators' headgate. A lawsuit over their respective water rights ensued, and the senior appropriators were successful both at trial and on appeal. At trial, the jury awarded the senior appropriators their court costs and attorney fees as damages. The Supreme Court refused to overturn the award, ruling that the costs of the lawsuit were consequential to the interference with the headgate and not so remote as to preclude recovery. Cate v. Hargrave, 209 M 265, 680 P2d 952, 41 St. Rep. 697 (1984).

No Grounds for Change of Pre-1973 Water Right: Upstream junior appropriators were precluded from challenging a change in place of use made by downstream senior appropriators' predecessor in interest in 1941 because the junior appropriators held no rights to the waters at issue in 1941. Cate v. Hargrave, 209 M 265, 680 P2d 952, 41 St. Rep. 697 (1984).

Right of Priority: Priority of application for water appropriation is an existing right which is preserved from extinction by the provisions of Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const. Gen. Agriculture Corp. v. Moore, 166 M 510, 534 P2d 859 (1975).

Priority of Senior Main Stem Water Rights Over Junior Tributary Water Rights: Appellant owns water rights in Clear Creek dating to 1910. Petitioners have water rights in Rock Creek dating to 1896. Clear Creek is a tributary of Rock Creek. In 1970, appellant obtained a court order directing the Rock Creek Water Commissioner to "carry out" the Clear Creek water rights of appellant. Following the District Court order, the Water Commissioner honored in full the requests of appellant for water without regard to any priority in the relationship of the creeks' water rights. As a result, at times of water shortage, senior Rock Creek decreed waters are cut off. In 1977, petitioners filed this action to rescind the 1970 order and to direct the Water Commissioner to subject the Clear Creek water rights to the priorities of Rock Creek water rights. The District Court ruled that the 1970 court order, applied by the Water Commissioner to fulfill junior appropriations ahead of prior decreed rights, was improper. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's order and further stated that the order did not violate due process. The Supreme Court reasoned that the only rights affected by the District Court order were the rights of the parties before the court. Granite Ditch Co. v. Anderson, 204 M 10, 662 P2d 1312, 40 St. Rep. 630 (1983).

Waters of Tributary: The waters of a tributary belong to the stream into which the tributary flows to the extent of prior appropriations. Granite Ditch Co. v. Anderson, 204 M 10, 662 P2d 1312, 40 St. Rep. 630 (1983).

Valid Water Right Not Affected by Release of Surplus to Junior User: Defendants' predecessor in interest began using water in the amount of 110 gallons a minute from Mahle Spring in 1917 for domestic, stock, and irrigation purposes. Mahle Spring flows into Ashley Creek. In 1958, defendants completed construction of a dam whose purpose was to stabilize their water supply only, not to increase the amount of water appropriated. In April 1973, defendants filed notice of completion of ground water appropriation without well, claiming 110 gallons a minute. In 1957, plaintiff's predecessor in interest began using water from Ashley Creek. At times, when Ashley Creek dried up, defendants agreed to release water from the dam. In 1978, plaintiff obtained a water use permit for Ashley Creek. Subsequently, defendants refused to release any water from the dam. Plaintiff filed an action to adjudicate the parties' water rights and to enjoin defendants from interfering with the flow of Ashley Creek. The Montana Supreme Court upheld the District Court's ruling that defendants are entitled to 110 gallons a minute with a priority date of 1917 and that plaintiff is entitled only to the excess over that. The court denied plaintiff's claim that defendants were estopped from asserting a superior claim, reasoning that the release of the water did not cause plaintiff's predecessor in interest to change her position for the worse because the defendants had already established a valid claim to the water and thus the release was either a mere gratuity or a release of surplus water. In the absence of evidence that defendant was not simply releasing surplus water, the court also denied plaintiff's claim of laches. Finally, the court denied plaintiff's claim that the release from the dam was evidence that defendants were not making beneficial use of all the water since the District Court findings indicated that the defendants' total claim was fully justified. Bagnell v. Lemery, 202 M 238, 657 P2d 608, 40 St. Rep. 58 (1983).

Prior Rights: Where plaintiff had over the years constructed a series of dikes in order to spread over his land the water which would flow down a dry gully after the melting of snow or a heavy rainfall, he had a prior right to the extent that his project was finished. He who first diverts the water to a beneficial use has the prior right thereto where the right is based upon the custom and practice of the early settlers and where there was no compliance with the statutes. Midkiff v. Kincheloe, 127 M 324, 263 P2d 976 (1953). (See, however, the dissenting opinion in the case in which it was contended that the waters were floodwaters and wastewaters which the defendant had a right to impound in a stock reservoir, 127 M 324, 263 P2d 976 (1953).)

Temporary Suspension of Prior Right: When the one holding the prior right does not need the water, such prior right is temporarily suspended and the next right in the order of priority may use the water until such time as the prior appropriator's needs justify his demanding that the junior appropriator give way to his superior claim. Cook v. Hudson, 110 M 263, 103 P2d 137 (1940), distinguished and overruled on other grounds in Grimsley v. Estate of Spencer, 206 M 184, 670 P2d 85 (1983).

Abandonment — Resumption: Where use of water is abandoned and resumed, use vests from the date of resumption. Galiger v. McNulty, 80 M 339, 260 P 401 (1927); O'Shea v. Doty, 68 M 316, 218 P 658 (1923).

Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2009 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 86 in (15)(a)(i)(B) near middle after "provisions of the" substituted "rule establishing" for "order declaring". Amendment effective March 25, 2009.

Chapter 424 in (2) in introductory clause after "(16)" inserted "and (18)"; inserted (18) providing an exemption for a replacement appropriation for a water right for certain changes in points of diversion; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Saving Clause: Section 9, Ch. 86, L. 2009, was a saving clause.

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 213 inserted (1)(b) providing that if an application involves a change in a point of diversion, conveyance, or place of use located on national forest system lands, the application is not correct and complete until the applicant has submitted proof to the department of any written special use authorization required by federal law; inserted (1)(c) defining national forest system lands; in (2) in introductory clause after "(16)" inserted "and, if applicable, subject to subsection (17)"; in (2)(b) near middle after "85-2-408" inserted "or a change in appropriation right to instream flow to protect, maintain, or enhance streamflows pursuant to 85-2-320"; in (2)(d) near beginning after "85-2-408" inserted "or a change in appropriation right to instream flow to protect, maintain, or enhance streamflows pursuant to 85-2-320" and at end after "beneficial use" inserted "or, if the proposed change involves a point of diversion, conveyance, or place of use on national forest system lands, the applicant has any written special use authorization required by federal law to occupy, use, or traverse national forest system lands for the purpose of diversion, impoundment, storage, transportation, withdrawal, use, or distribution of water"; inserted (15)(b)(i)(B) providing that if the replacement well is located on national forest system lands, the notice is not correct and complete under subsection (15) until the appropriator has submitted proof of any written special use authorization required by federal law; in (16)(c) inserted third sentence providing that if the redundant water supply well is located on national forest system lands, the notice is not correct and complete under this subsection until the appropriator has submitted proof of any written special use authorization required by federal law; in (16)(d) substituted "subsection (16)" for "section"; inserted (17) requiring the department to accept and process an application for a change in appropriation right to instream flow to protect, maintain, or enhance streamflows; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2007.

Chapter 448 in (1) near beginning of first and second sentences after "change" inserted "in appropriation right"; in (2) near beginning of introductory clause after "(16)" inserted "and, if applicable, subject to subsection (17)"; in (2)(b) and (2)(d) at beginning after "Except for a" substituted "change in appropriation right for instream flow to protect, maintain, or enhance streamflows to benefit the fishery resource" for "lease authorization"; in (4)(b) near beginning, in (7) in three places, in (8) at end of first sentence and near middle of second sentence, in (10) in three places, in (11) near middle, in (12) in two places, and in (15)(a)(i)(B) near end after "change" inserted "in appropriation right"; inserted (17) requiring the department to accept and process an application for a change in appropriation right for instream flow to protect, maintain, or enhance streamflows to benefit the fishery resource; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 8, 2007.

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 8(2), Ch. 448, L. 2007, repealed sec. 11, Ch. 658, L. 1989, sec. 4, Ch. 740, L. 1991, and secs. 5 and 6, Ch. 123, L. 1999, which terminated the amendments to this section June 30, 2009. Effective May 8, 2007.

2005 Amendment: (Temporary version) Chapter 85 in (2)(b) near beginning after "change" inserted "in appropriation right", after "authorization" substituted "to maintain or enhance streamflows" for "for instream use", and near middle after "85-2-408" deleted "or water use pursuant to 85-2-439 when authorization does not require appropriation works"; in (2)(d) near beginning after "change" inserted "in appropriation right" and after "85-2-408" deleted "or 85-2-439 for instream flow to benefit the fishery resource"; in (7) in second sentence near middle after "change" inserted "in appropriation right"; in (8) in first sentence near beginning after "change" inserted "in appropriation right"; in (10) at beginning of first sentence after "change" inserted "in appropriation right"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

(Version effective July 1, 2009) In (2)(b) at beginning inserted exception clause; in (2)(d) at beginning inserted exception clause; in (6) near middle of first sentence after "requirements for" inserted "federal non-Indian and Indian"; in (7) near middle of second sentence after "change" inserted "in appropriation right"; in (8) near beginning of first sentence after "change" inserted "in appropriation right"; in (10) near beginning of first sentence after "change" inserted "in appropriation right"; and made minor changes in style.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 161 in (1) in third sentence in exception clause and in (2) in exception clause inserted reference to subsection (16); inserted (15)(a)(iii)(A) concerning municipal wells; at end of (15)(a)(iii)(B) inserted "for all other wells"; inserted (16) concerning redundant water supply wells in a public water supply system; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 28, 2003.

Severability: Section 3, Ch. 161, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 132 at beginning of third sentence in (1) inserted exception clause and near middle of sentence after "right" substituted "without the approval of the department" for "except, as permitted under this section, by applying for and receiving the approval of the department"; near beginning of (2) inserted reference to subsection (15); inserted (15) allowing appropriator to change water right for replacement wells without prior approval of department if certain criteria are met; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 27, 2001.

Chapter 381 in (1) at beginning of third sentence inserted exception clause and near middle after "appropriation right" substituted "without" for "except, as permitted under this section, by applying for and receiving"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 27, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (5)(b) at beginning inserted "for the withdrawal and transportation of appropriated water for out-of-state use"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 24, 1999.

Extension of Termination Date: Sections 5 through 7, Ch. 123, L. 1999, amended sec. 11, Ch. 658, L. 1989, and secs. 4 and 7, Ch. 740, L. 1991, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 658, L. 1989, and Ch. 740, L. 1991, to June 30, 2009. Effective March 19, 1999. Section 6, Ch. 322, L. 1995, and sec. 14, Ch. 487, L. 1995, provided a termination date of June 30, 2005, for one version of this section; however, the 1995 termination date was not extended by Ch. 123, L. 1999.

1997 Amendments: (Temporary version and version effective July 1, 1999) Chapter 353 in (2)(d), after "85-2-408", inserted "or 85-2-439". Amendment effective April 22, 1997.

(All versions) Chapter 497 in (1) inserted first and second sentences concerning right to make change and lack of presumption in change proceeding; and in (2)(a), near beginning, substituted "change in appropriation right" for "use", before "water rights of other persons" inserted "use of the existing", near middle, after "persons or other", inserted "perfected or", after "a permit" inserted "or certificate", and at end substituted "a state water reservation has been issued under part 3" for "water has been reserved". Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

(Temporary version and version effective July 1, 1999) In (6), near middle of first sentence after "requirements for", inserted "federal non-Indian and Indian". Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 22, Ch. 497, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 23, Ch. 497, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: (Temporary version) Chapter 322 in (2)(b) inserted language pertaining to temporary change authorization for instream use to benefit fishery resource pursuant to 85-2-408; at beginning of (2)(d) inserted exception clause relating to 85-2-436 or 85-2-408; and made minor changes in style.

(Version effective July 1, 1999) At beginning of (1)(b) and (1)(d) inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment terminates June 30, 2005.

(Temporary version) Chapter 487 in (2)(b), after "85-2-436", inserted "or water use pursuant to 85-2-439"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995, and terminates June 30, 2005. The amendment in (2)(b) rendered the Ch. 322 use of "either" after "85-2-408 when" inappropriate.

(Version effective July 1, 1999) In (2)(b), at beginning, inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999, and terminates June 30, 2005. The insertion in (2)(b) of exception clause required the addition of "or" to separate exception clauses and required corresponding changes in style.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 322, L. 1995, provided: "This legislation, jointly developed by representatives from the agricultural, recreation, and conservation communities, is intended to authorize the temporary use of existing water rights for instream flow to benefit the fishery resource. In establishing the use of water rights for authorized instream flow to benefit the fishery resource, it is the intent of the legislature that the authorization respect and work within the prior appropriation water rights system.

This legislation creates an opportunity for citizens to voluntarily enter into agreements to lease existing water rights to protect fisheries and allows persons who own water rights to temporarily change the use of that water to instream flow to benefit the fishery resource.

To monitor and review the implementation of this instream flow program, the legislature directs the office of the governor to convene on an ongoing and regular basis a working group that includes representatives from the agricultural, recreation, and conservation communities. This working group shall consult with the department of natural resources and conservation on relevant changes in water use and shall submit a report to the governor and the legislature in 2001 outlining the status of the program."

Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 487, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to all applications for changes in appropriation rights, permits, and water reservations received by the department of natural resources and conservation after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 14, 1995.

1993 Amendments: Chapter 370 in (1), in first sentence after "this section", substituted "by applying for and receiving the approval" for "and with the approval" and inserted second sentence requiring applicant to submit a correct and complete application; in (2) and (4), after "proves by", substituted "a preponderance of evidence" for "substantial credible evidence"; near end of first sentence of (9), before "completed", deleted "properly" and at end of second sentence, after "works", substituted "describing how the appropriation was completed" for "that the appropriation has been properly completed in substantial accordance with the terms and conditions of the change approval"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

Chapter 460 in (2) substituted "subsections (4) through (6)" for "subsections (3) through (5)"; in (2) and (4), after "proves by", substituted "a preponderance of evidence" for "substantial credible evidence"; inserted (2)(f) concerning water quality and (2)(g) concerning effluent limitations; inserted (3) requiring that a valid objection be made before an applicant needs to prove that the change approval criteria have been met; in (5)(a) substituted "subsections (2) and (4)" for "subsections (2) and (3)"; in (6)(b)(i) substituted "subsection (2) or (4)" for "subsection (2) or (3)"; in (6)(c) substituted "subsections (6)(b)(ii) and (6)(b)(iii)" for "subsections (5)(b)(ii) and (5)(b)(iii)"; inserted (14) allowing the Department to adopt rules; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 1993.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 460, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the bill gives the department of natural resources and conservation authority to adopt administrative rules. The bill adds statutory criteria for the department to consider in the processing of an application for a permit, change authorization, controlled ground water area, or basin closure. In adopting rules implementing this bill and in interpreting the new statutory language, it is the intent of the legislature that the department and board of natural resources and conservation [functions now transferred to department of natural resources and conservation] should assess the magnitude, character, duration, and geographical extent of the projected effects on the uses of water as classified and utilize this assessment in a practical manner."

Section 7, Ch. 460, L. 1993, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 370, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 1 through 8] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications and objections pending on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 16, 1993] that are subject to the provisions of Title 85, chapter 2."

Section 8, Ch. 460, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 1 and 3] [85-2-311 and 85-2-402] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications for a permit or change in appropriation right that the department has not noticed out for objection as of [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 21, 1993.

Chapter 805 inserted (8) requiring appropriator to notify Department that appropriation has been completed and requiring notification to contain certified statement by person with experience in design, construction, or operation of appropriation works that appropriation has been properly completed in accordance with terms of change approval. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 308, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in order to provide guidance to the department of natural resources and conservation concerning the adoption of rules to allow the appropriation, use, and change of use of salvaged water. The legislature directs the department of natural resources and conservation to adopt rules that promote the conservation and efficient use of water by implementing the provisions of this bill."

1989 Amendments: Chapter 432 inserted (2)(d) relating to possessory interest; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 4, 1989.

Chapter 658 at beginning of (2)(b) inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective May 11, 1989, and terminates June 30, 1993.

1987 Amendment: In (7) inserted last sentence concerning time extension.

1985 Amendment: Substituted (1) through (8) (see 1985 Session Law) for former (1) through (6) that read: "(1) An appropriator may not change the place of diversion, place of use, purpose of use, or place of storage except as permitted under this section and approved by the department.

(2) The department shall approve the proposed change if it determines that the proposed change will not adversely affect the rights of other persons. If the department determines that the proposed change might adversely affect the rights of other persons, notice of the proposed change shall be given in accordance with 85-2-307. If the department determines that an objection filed by a person whose rights may be affected states a valid objection to the proposed change, the department shall hold a hearing thereon prior to its approval or denial of the proposed change. Objections shall meet the requirements of 85-2-308(2), and hearings shall be held in accordance with 85-2-309.

(3) An appropriator of more than 15 cubic feet per second may not change the purpose of use of an appropriation right from an agricultural or irrigation use to an industrial use.

(4) The department may approve a change subject to such terms, conditions, restrictions, and limitations it considers necessary to protect the rights of other appropriators, including limitations on the time for completion of the change.

(5) If a change is not completed as approved by the department or if the terms, conditions, restrictions, and limitations of the change approval are not complied with, the department may, after notice and opportunity for hearing, require the appropriator to show cause why the change approval should not be modified or revoked. If the appropriator fails to show sufficient cause, the department may modify or revoke the change approval.

(6) Without obtaining prior approval from the department, an appropriator may not sever all or any part of an appropriation right from the land to which it is appurtenant, sell the appropriation right for other purposes or to other lands, or make the appropriation right appurtenant to other lands. The department shall approve the proposed change if it determines that the proposed change will not adversely affect the water rights of other persons. If the department determines that the proposed change might adversely affect the water rights of other persons, notice of the proposed change must be given in accordance with 85-2-307. If the department then determines that an objection filed by a person whose water rights may be affected states a valid objection to the proposed change, the department shall hold a hearing thereon prior to its approval or denial of the proposed change. Objections must meet the requirements of 85-2-308, and hearings must be held in accordance with 85-2-309"; and inserted (11) relating to invalidating a change in appropriation right made contrary to law.

Applicability: Section 27, Ch. 573, L. 1985, provided: "This act applies to all permit applications, change in appropriation right applications, water sales and lease applications, and reservation applications filed and pending with the department on July 1, 1985, but upon which a hearing under Title 85, chapter 2, has not yet commenced."

1983 Amendment: In (3), after "agricultural" inserted "or irrigation"; inserted (6) through (8) describing criteria and procedures for departmental approval of a proposed change in appropriation.

Administrative Rules

ARM 36.15.603 Permits for water diversions.

Case Notes

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

Denial of Application for Temporary Change in Water Rights Held to Be Arbitrary Action by Department: The plaintiffs filed for a temporary change of irrigation water rights to instream flow. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation denied the application on the basis of an alleged incomplete return flow analysis. The Supreme Court held that 85-2-408(7) dealing with return flow analysis did not require the applicant to provide the analysis; rather, it gives the Department the discretion to limit the amount that may be taken by an applicant. The Supreme Court further held that the Department's denial of the application for want of a complete return flow analysis without further explanation when it had granted similar applications in the past constituted arbitrary conduct and was an abuse of discretion. Hohenlohe v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2010 MT 203, 357 Mont. 438, 240 P.3d 628.

Upon Applicant's Meeting Statutory Burden of Showing No Adverse Effect on Downstream Water Rights Holders, Department May Not Deny Application Based on Failure to Provide Return Flow Analysis: The plaintiffs filed for a temporary change of irrigation water rights to instream flow. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation denied the application on the basis of an alleged incomplete return flow analysis. The Supreme Court held that 85-2-408(7) dealing with return flow analysis did not require the applicant to provide the analysis; rather, it gives the Department the discretion to limit the amount that may be taken by an applicant. The Supreme Court further held that when the applicant successfully proves that the change in water usage will not adversely affect downstream water rights holders, the Department may not refuse to grant the change on the basis of the applicant's failure to provide a return flow analysis, as that is not a requirement that pertains to the applicant. Hohenlohe v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2010 MT 203, 357 Mont. 438, 240 P.3d 628.

Waiver of Sovereign Immunity by United States Regarding Water Rights Limited to State Adjudications: A plain reading of 43 U.S.C. 666, known as the McCarran amendment, indicates that the United States has waived its sovereign immunity so that it may be joined as a defendant when it is a necessary party in cases seeking to adjudicate or administer water rights in state courts. The waiver extends to Indian tribes, providing consent to determine federal reserved water rights held by tribes in state court cases. However, the waiver is not for purposes of private suits against the United States or Indian tribes but is limited to comprehensive state adjudications of water rights. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 2007 MT 63, 336 M 302, 158 P3d 377 (2007).

Water Use Changes — Interaction of State Regulatory Authority and Tribal Self-Government: There are two general and overlapping approaches to analyzing the interaction of state regulatory authority and tribal self-government. The first takes the perspective of the tribe and seeks to identify the scope of authority that the tribe possesses (see Mont. v. U.S., 450 US 544 (1981)), while the second takes the perspective of the state and seeks to prescribe the limits of the state's power (see White Mtn. Apache Tribe v. Bracker, 448 US 136 (1980)). In cases adjudicating water rights, the weight of the state's interest depends in large part on the extent to which waterways or aquifers transcend the exterior boundaries of Indian country. In the case at bar, the District Court enjoined the state from processing a change of use application for a state water right. The question on appeal was whether the state had sovereign authority to process a change of use application concerning two appropriative water rights owned by non-Indians on the Flathead Reservation to allow a change from irrigation to recreation so that the owners could operate a waterski pond. Whether the change would adversely affect the tribe and whether assertion of regulatory authority by the state would have a direct effect on the tribes were legal conclusions. The Supreme Court concluded that the state's authority was not preempted by federal or tribal interests because neither the federal government nor the tribe asserted regulatory authority over the owner's water rights, so the state was not preempted from reviewing the change application. The Legislature acted within its constitutional prerogative in enacting this section, providing that no presumption is to work against a water right holder who seeks a change of use and providing that the state should be able to process change of use applications. The record was not clear whether the use change would adversely affect the tribe; however, the Supreme Court found no compelling reason to deprive the state water right holders of the opportunity to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the proposed change in use, not amount, would not adversely affect the use of other water rights, including the tribe's reserved rights. Therefore, the injunction was removed, and the case was remanded to the District Court for a determination of whether the state had sovereign authority to conduct change of use proceedings and, if so, to allow the owners to attempt to prove that the proposed change in use would not adversely affect the use of other water rights, including the tribe's reserved rights. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 2007 MT 63, 336 M 302, 158 P3d 377 (2007).

Burden of Proof at All Stages: This section requires the Department to approve an appropriation right change if: (1) the appropriator proves that the proposed use will not adversely affect the water rights of others; (2) the proposed means of diversion, construction, and operation are adequate; and (3) the proposed use is a beneficial one. Deletion by 1985 amendment of language referring to a contested case hearing stage in the application process did not have the effect of making this burden of proof apply only at the application stage, with the objector having the burden of proof at the hearing stage. The applicant has the burden of proof at all stages before the Department and courts. In re Application for Change of Appropriation of Water Rights for Royston, 249 M 425, 816 P2d 1054, 48 St. Rep. 747 (1991).

Evidence That Change Would Not Affect Objector's Rights: Applicant applied for a change in water rights that would alter the place of use, the amount of acres irrigated, and the type of irrigation used. The hearings examiner properly precluded applicant from showing the nature of objectors' water rights in an attempt to demonstrate that the rights would not be affected by applicant's proposed change. The records of objectors' water rights are in the Water Court's temporary preliminary decree, and the hearings examiner correctly concluded that the rights in the decree were prima facie evidence that the objectors had water rights in the stream. The provisions of this chapter, commonly referred to as the Water Use Act, have a separate procedure by which applicant can attack rights claimed by objectors. To allow applicant to present evidence pertaining to objectors' water rights could lead to readjudication of rights claimed in the creek. In re Application for Change of Appropriation of Water Rights for Royston, 249 M 425, 816 P2d 1054, 48 St. Rep. 747 (1991).

Failure of Applicant to Carry Burden of Proof: Applicant for a change of appropriation failed to meet the burden of proving that the change would not adversely affect objectors' rights. The application was properly denied because the evidence in the record does not sustain a conclusion of no adverse effect and because it cannot be concluded from the record that the means of diversion and operation are adequate. The hearings examiner's decision to deny the application was not clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence in the record. In re Application for Change of Appropriation of Water Rights for Royston, 249 M 425, 816 P2d 1054, 48 St. Rep. 747 (1991).

Retroactivity and Validity of Change in Burden of Proof for Change of Water Appropriation: The fact that a water right existing at the time of adoption of the 1972 Montana Constitution is recognized by that constitution does not mean that if the owner of the right applies for a change in the right, the burden of proof must be placed on the objector. The objector had the burden in 1972, but the holder now has the burden under this section. The change in the burden of proof is not an impermissible retroactive application of the statute to the detriment of vested rights acquired under the 1972 Montana Constitution. Statutes that modify the procedure for exercising a vested right or for carrying out a duty do not constitute retroactive legislation. In re Application for Change of Appropriation of Water Rights for Royston, 249 M 425, 816 P2d 1054, 48 St. Rep. 747 (1991).

Standing of Junior Appropriators to Object: The contention by applicant for a change of appropriation that junior downstream appropriators and junior upstream appropriator lacked standing to object to the change was without merit because either can be damaged by a change in the amount of water appropriated downstream if a shortage ensues and a senior appropriator causes the downstream or upstream appropriator to forego his water use until the senior's rights are fulfilled. In re Application for Change of Appropriation of Water Rights for Royston, 249 M 425, 816 P2d 1054, 48 St. Rep. 747 (1991).

Change in Point of Use — Judicial Review of Procedural Orders Improper: Pursuant to 1973 water use law, appellant applied for Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) approval to change the point of use of its pre-1973 water right. DNRC hearing examiner ordered objectors to respond to appellant's discovery request, yet refused to dismiss the objections of objectors who failed to respond. Upon review, the Water Court reversed the DNRC denial. Appellant appealed, arguing review was inappropriate. The Supreme Court agreed, stating that judicial review of the hearing examiner's procedural order was improper as there had been no final decision or exhaustion of administrative remedies. Kingsbury Ditch Co. v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 223 M 379, 725 P2d 1209, 43 St. Rep. 1805 (1986).

Enlargement of Dam: Permission for additional appropriation on an adjudicated stream was proper where the findings indicated that there was surplus water to be appropriated, there would be no injury to prior appropriators, impoundment of water would be beneficial, and the proposed dam could be operated so as not to interfere with others. Sunset Irrigation District v. Ailport, 166 M 11, 531 P2d 1349 (1974).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Change in Point of Diversion — Burden of Proof of Injury: Under section 89-803, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the point of diversion may be changed if the change would not prejudice the rights of other appropriators. The party claiming to be prejudiced has the burden of proving the prejudice. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc., v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980); following Lokowich v. Helena, 46 M 575, 129 P 1063 (1913).

Change in Place of Diversion — Water Exchange Prevented: The defendants, upstream subsequent appropriators with respect to the plaintiff, diverted all the waters of a creek. Further downstream but still above the plaintiff, the defendants replenished the creek with water from a canal. The plaintiff could not change his diversion to a point upstream of the defendants because of the injury resulting to the defendants. Thompson v. Harvey, 164 M 133, 519 P2d 963 (1974).

Diversion Point Changed: An appropriator was entitled to move his point of diversion downstream, so long as he installed measuring devices to ensure that he took no more than would have been available at his original point of diversion, and the fact that a water commissioner might have to be employed to oversee the appropriation was not the kind of burden on other appropriators that would prevent the change. McIntosh v. Graveley, 159 M 72, 495 P2d 186 (1972).

Use of Water Changed: Where an appropriator had a decreed right to use water for irrigation of specified land outside the drainage area, his use of the water on other land outside the drainage area did not impose an undue burden on other appropriators, so long as he did not increase the amount of water diverted from the drainage area. McIntosh v. Graveley, 159 M 72, 495 P2d 186 (1972).

Remedies of Servient Owner: Changes in a ditch appurtenant to a water right did not forfeit the ditch right or justify the use of self-help by the servient landowner to fill in a portion of the ditch. Shammel v. Vogl, 144 M 354, 396 P2d 103 (1964).

Substantial Change: Under section 89-803, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the owner of a ditch appurtenant to a water right could change the location by minor meandering along the course of the ditch and its marginal land with a bulldozer to account for topographical adjustments in the terrain, so long as he did not add any new burden to the servient estate or cause any additional damage thereto. Shammel v. Vogl, 144 M 354, 396 P2d 103 (1964).

Sale of Portion of Land — Division of Water Right:

When an owner of a tract of land with an appurtenant water right grants a portion of the tract without any express division or reservation, the water right is divided in the proportion the number of irrigated acres conveyed bears to the total irrigated acres. Spaeth v. Emmett, 142 M 231, 383 P2d 812 (1963).

Neither a change in the place of diversion of water nor a change in its use from mining to agriculture, or vice versa, affects its appropriation. Thomas v. Ball, 66 M 161, 213 P 597 (1923). See also Galiger v. McNulty, 80 M 339, 260 P 401 (1927); Whitcomb v. Murphy, 94 M 562, 23 P2d 980 (1933); Thrasher v. Mannix & Wilson, 95 M 273, 26 P2d 370 (1933); Loyning v. Rankin, 118 M 235, 165 P2d 1006 (1946).

Actual diversion of water and its beneficial use existing, prospective, or in contemplation constitute an appropriation, which is not affected by a change in the point of diversion or place of use. Wheat v. Cameron, 64 M 494, 210 P 761 (1922).

The location of a flume maintained over the land of another, as well as the use of the water flowing through it, may be changed, provided the change adds no new burdens to the servient estate or causes additional damage thereto. Pioneer Min. Co. v. Bannack Gold Min. Co., 60 M 254, 198 P 748 (1921).

Burden of Proof of Injury:

For a period of more than 50 years the defendant accumulated water rights and used them wherever and whenever needed to irrigate 34,000 acres of land. The burden was on the plaintiffs to show that they had been injured or prejudiced by such changing use. Forrester v. Rock Island Oil & Ref. Co., 133 M 333, 323 P2d 597 (1958).

The party who claims to have been injured by another's change in place of diversion of water right has the burden of alleging and proving the injury. Thrasher v. Mannix & Wilson, 95 M 273, 26 P2d 370 (1933); Lokowich v. Helena, 46 M 575, 129 P 1063 (1913); Hansen v. Larsen, 44 M 350, 120 P 229 (1911).

Change in Place of Use — Decree Not Detailed:

A water rights decree failed to describe the particular acreage to be irrigated and expressed the water rights in terms of flow per unit of time without stating during how many such units of time water could be taken. Adjudicated owners could not expand the use of water to additional lands or in length of time to the injury of subsequent appropriators. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

The conclusiveness of a judgment as res judicata in a water right suit between the same parties or their successors in interest in a prior action is not impaired by the alleged fact that in authorizing a change of place of use or point of diversion, it violated the provisions of section 89-803, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). Brennan v. Jones, 101 M 550, 55 P2d 697 (1936).

Change of Use — Sale: Appropriations not originally made for the purpose of sale may have their use changed to that purpose if subsequent appropriators are not thereby injured. Sherlock v. Greaves, 106 M 206, 76 P2d 87 (1938).

Change in Use — Outside of Watershed: Pursuant to an earlier water rights decree, the defendant irrigated land outside the watershed of the source. When the defendant brought additional lands outside the watershed under irrigation with this water right, the plaintiffs could not claim they were injured by this change in use. Their lands were either within the watershed of the source or higher than the defendant's irrigated land and would not benefit from percolating waters from his land. Thrasher v. Mannix & Wilson, 95 M 273, 26 P2d 370 (1933).

Change in Use — Sale of Water Not in Use: An appropriator of a water right for placer mining purposes attempted to convey to another a right to use the waters when not being used for mining. Although an appropriator may change the use of his appropriation, he may not sell the same in the interim when the water is not being used. Galiger v. McNulty, 80 M 339, 260 P 401 (1927); Creek v. Bozeman Water Works Co., 15 M 121, 38 P 459 (1894).

Change in Place of Diversion or Use — Who May Complain: Only an injured subsequent appropriator may complain that a prior appropriator's change in place of diversion or use is affecting subsequent rights. Carlson v. Helena, 43 M 1, 114 P 110 (1911).

Change in Place of Diversion and Use — Placer Mining: The successors of the appropriator of water appropriated for placer mining purposes cannot so change its use as to deprive lower appropriators of their rights, already acquired, in the use of it for irrigating purposes. Head v. Hale, 38 M 302, 100 P 222 (1909).

Change in Place of Use — Deprivation of Subsequent Right: After the defendant used his water right for placer mining purposes the water was turned into a gulch, whereupon the plaintiff appropriated it for irrigation purposes. The defendant then changed the place of use of his water right, resulting in the water no longer being returned to the gulch. Such change in use was unlawful because it absolutely deprived the plaintiff of his subsequent right. Gassert v. Noyes, 18 M 216, 44 P 959 (1896).

Change in Use — Mining to Irrigation: A water right was abandoned for mining purposes, the water returned to its original channel, and then recaptured by the original owner to be used for irrigation purposes. Such change in use was lawful. Meagher v. Hardenbrook, 11 M 385, 28 P 451 (1891).

85-2-403. Transfer of appropriation right.

1987 Amendment: In (2) deleted reference to subsection (6) of 85-2-402.

1983 Amendments: Chapter 448, in (1), after "use water" deleted "under a permit or certificate of water right"; deleted former (2) and (3), which read: "(2) The person receiving the appropriation interest shall file with the department notice of the transfer on a form prescribed by the department.

(3) Without obtaining prior approval from the department, an appropriator may not sever all or any part of an appropriation right from the land to which it is appurtenant, sell the appropriation right for other purposes or to other lands, or make the appropriation right appurtenant to other lands. The department shall approve the proposed change if it determines that the proposed change will not adversely affect the rights of other persons. If the department determines that the proposed change might adversely affect the rights of other persons, notice of the proposed change shall be given in accordance with 85-2-307. If the department then determines that an objection filed by a person whose rights may be affected states a valid objection to the proposed change, the department shall hold a hearing thereon prior to its approval or denial of the proposed change. Objections shall meet the requirements of 85-2-308(2) and hearings shall be held in accordance with 85-2-309."; (subsection (3) was enacted as 85-2-402(6)).

Chapter 674 also deleted former (2) that required a person receiving an appropriation interest to file with the Department a notice of transfer; and inserted new (2) relating both to the effect of a failure to comply with procedures for change in appropriation upon a conveyance or reservation and to the retroactive application of the subsection to conveyances or reservations made after July 1, 1973.

In (2), the Code Commissioner changed a reference to "subsection (2)" to "85-2-402(6)" because (2) (formerly (3)) was deleted by Ch. 448, L. 1983, and reenacted as 85-2-402(6). The apparent intent was to apply new subsection (2) of this section, including retroactive effect, to failure to comply with former subsection (3) of this section, as reenacted as 85-2-402(6).

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

Application of Approval Provision to Rights Perfected Prior to Statute — Construction With Constitutional Guarantee: Article IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., providing that "all existing rights to the use of any waters for any useful or beneficial purpose are hereby recognized and confirmed", is not violated by application of this section's provision, stating that prior approval of the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation must be obtained before an appropriator may sell, sever, or make appurtenant to other lands an appropriation right that was perfected prior to the effective date of this section. The law has not changed, and the Department has simply been given a review to determine an issue that could previously be determined only by a District Court. Castillo v. Kunnemann, 197 M 190, 642 P2d 1019, 39 St. Rep. 460 (1982), modifying upon rehearing 38 St. Rep. 1618 (1981).

Chapter's Application to Rights Perfected Prior to Its Effective Date: Except where it indicates a contrary intent, this chapter applies to water rights perfected prior to the effective date of this chapter, and failure to comply with the terms of this chapter does not render a conveyance or reservation void but suspends ability to use the right until the statutorily mandated permission is granted by the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation. Castillo v. Kunnemann, 197 M 190, 642 P2d 1019, 39 St. Rep. 460 (1982), modifying upon rehearing 38 St. Rep. 1618 (1981).

Sale of Land and One of Two Water Rights — Legal Effects: Landowner owned two water rights on river, one called the "McNiven Right" and one called the "Grannis Right". He sold part of his land together with part of the McNiven Right. The Supreme Court held that: (1) both the McNiven and the Grannis Rights were appurtenant to the conveyed land and both remained appurtenant to the conveyed land after the sales; (2) the conveyance impliedly reserved the Grannis Right to seller and passed title to part of the McNiven Right to buyer; (3) under this section, buyer's right to use the McNiven Right would be delayed until appropriate approval is granted by the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation as required by this section, and seller must apply under this section for permission to sever from the land conveyed the Grannis Right which the deed impliedly reserved to seller. Castillo v. Kunnemann, 197 M 190, 642 P2d 1019, 39 St. Rep. 460 (1982), modifying upon rehearing 38 St. Rep. 1618 (1981).

Sale of a Water Right With Implied Reservation of Another Water Right: Landowner owned two water rights on river and each had a related ditch right; one was called the "McNiven Right" and the other was called the "Grannis Right". He sold part of his land together with part of the McNiven Right and "related ditch rights". The Supreme Court held that the words "related ditch rights" in the deed's water right grant referred only to the McNiven ditch, and further held that since the landowner held two water rights and related ditch rights, the conveyance of the McNiven water and ditch right impliedly reserved to landowner the Grannis water right and related ditch right. Castillo v. Kunnemann, 197 M 190, 642 P2d 1019, 39 St. Rep. 460 (1982), modifying upon rehearing 38 St. Rep. 1618 (1981).

DECISIONS UNDER FORMER LAW

Change in Use — Appurtenant to Land: After purchasing an adjoining tract of land with an appurtenant water right, a farmer proceeded to irrigate all of his land with the newly purchased water right. This change in use resulted in the water right becoming appurtenant to all of the land. Spaeth v. Emmett, 142 M 231, 383 P2d 812 (1963).

Sale of Portion of Land — Division of Water Right: When an owner of a tract of land with an appurtenant water right grants a portion of the tract without any express division or reservation, the water right is divided in the proportion the number of irrigated acres conveyed bears to the total irrigated acres. Spaeth v. Emmett, 142 M 231, 383 P2d 812 (1963).

Conveyance of Right as Appurtenance: When land is conveyed, including the appurtenances, any water rights previously enjoyed are thereby transferred. When the grantor later purports to convey the water right only, the latter deed does not constitute severance of the water right, as it adds nothing to the conveyance previously made. Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936).

85-2-404. Abandonment of appropriation right.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 355 in (3) near middle inserted "in compliance with a candidate conservation agreement initiated pursuant to 50 CFR 17.32 or". Amendment effective April 28, 2007.

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 8(2), Ch. 448, L. 2007, repealed sec. 11, Ch. 658, L. 1989, sec. 4, Ch. 740, L. 1991, and secs. 5 and 6, Ch. 123, L. 1999, which terminated the amendments to this section June 30, 2009. Effective May 8, 2007.

2005 Amendment: (Temporary version) Chapter 85 in (4) near beginning after "85-2-436" deleted "the use of water pursuant to 85-2-439", near middle after "change" inserted "in appropriation right", and after "85-2-407" inserted "or 85-2-408"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

(Version effective July 1, 2009) In (4) near beginning after "change" inserted "in appropriation right" and after "85-2-407" inserted "or 85-2-408"; and made minor changes in style.

Extension of Termination Date: Sections 5 through 7, Ch. 123, L. 1999, amended sec. 11, Ch. 658, L. 1989, and secs. 4 and 7, Ch. 740, L. 1991, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 658, L. 1989, and Ch. 740, L. 1991, to June 30, 2009. Effective March 19, 1999. Section 14, Ch. 487, L. 1995, provided a termination date of June 30, 2005, for one version of this section; however, the 1995 termination date was not extended by Ch. 123, L. 1999.

1997 Amendment: (All versions) Chapter 174 in (2), near end after "right", deleted "in whole or"; and in (5), near end before "determined", inserted "finally". Amendment effective March 28, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 7, Ch. 174, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

1995 Amendment: (Temporary version) Chapter 487 in (4), after "85-2-436", inserted "the use of water pursuant to 85-2-439"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995, and terminates June 30, 2005.

(Version effective July 1, 1999) At beginning of (4) inserted "The use of water pursuant to 85-2-439 or"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999, and terminates June 30, 2005.

Severability: Section 11, Ch. 487, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 487, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to all applications for changes in appropriation rights, permits, and water reservations received by the department of natural resources and conservation after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 14, 1995.

1991 Amendment: (Temporary version) In (4), after "85-2-436", inserted "or the temporary change pursuant to 85-2-407" and in two places, after "abandonment", deleted "by the lessor".

(Version effective July 1, 1999) Inserted (4) providing that a temporary change pursuant to 85-2-407 is not an abandonment.

1989 Amendment: Inserted (4) regarding lease of an existing right pursuant to the water leasing study; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective May 11, 1989, and terminates June 30, 1993.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (3) establishing that nonuse as a result of participation in state or federal conservation set-aside program is not presumed abandonment; at beginning of (4) substituted "Subsections (1) and (2)" for "This section"; and made minor change in phraseology.

Case Notes

No Different Standard for Abandonment of Water Rights Used for Mining Purposes: Graveley had not used the water right for his mining claim for more than 50 years but nevertheless claimed that he had not abandoned the right simply because the lack of profitability of mining the claim had led to the nonuse. Declining to distinguish the law of abandonment between various uses of water, the Supreme Court noted that the Legislature had not chosen to apply a different standard for determining the abandonment of water rights used for mining purposes and held that because Graveley had not introduced evidence sufficient to rebut the presumption of abandonment, the water right claim was terminated. In re Adjudication of Existing Rights to Use of All Water, Both Surface & Underground, Within Clark Fork River Drainage Above Blackfoot River, 274 M 340, 908 P2d 1353, 52 St. Rep. 1264 (1995).

Abandonment of Water Right by Nonuse Distinguished From Abandonment of Easement or Ditch Right: After hearing, the Water Court determined that three water rights held by appellants Pitsch had been abandoned because of nonuse over approximately 40 years. The Supreme Court held that the Water Court did not err in holding that the case was not governed by E.E. Eggebrecht, Inc. v. Waters, 217 M 291, 704 P2d 422 (1985), and that there was no conflict between Eggebrecht and 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215 (1983). Eggebrecht concerns the abandonment of easements by grant, more analogous to a ditch right by grant than a water right, while 79 Ranch concerns abandonment of a water right. There is no reason why Montana law on abandonment of those interests should be identical. In re Adjudication of Musselshell River Rights, 255 M 43, 840 P2d 577, 49 St. Rep. 866 (1992).

General Evidence of Conditions Insufficient to Excuse Long Period of Nonuse: Appellants presented general evidence to the Water Court of a variety of negative factors that caused them to not use perfected water rights for a period of 40 years. The Water Court held, in accordance with 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215 (1983), that appellants had abandoned their rights through nonuse. The Supreme Court held that evidence presented by appellants of dry conditions in the 1920s, "dust bowl years" of the 1930s, the depression, World War II, blown-in ditches, lack of water, and lack of money was conclusory in nature and not specific enough to excuse the long period of nonuse. Other parties to the case presented evidence that some amount of water was available and that blown-in ditches were easily opened. Under these facts, the Supreme Court held that the Water Court did not err in applying the abandonment presumption of 79 Ranch, which the appellants failed to rebut by their evidence. In re Adjudication of Musselshell River Rights, 255 M 43, 840 P2d 577, 49 St. Rep. 866 (1992).

Post-1973 Evidence Unpersuasive as to Adjudication of Existing Water Right: The purpose of statewide water rights adjudication is to adjudicate those rights as they existed on July 1, 1973, the effective date of the Montana Water Use Act. Therefore, the Water Court did not err in refusing to consider evidence pertaining to a water right claimant's actions taken after 1973 as showing a lack of intent to abandon the water right. In re Adjudication of Clark Fork River Drainage, 254 M 11, 833 P2d 1120, 49 St. Rep. 591 (1992).

Water Right and Easement as Separate Rights — Abandonment: Water rights and easements or ditch rights are separate and distinct rights; therefore, one can be abandoned without abandoning the other. In re Adjudication of Clark Fork River Drainage, 254 M 11, 833 P2d 1120, 49 St. Rep. 591 (1992), following McDonnell v. Huffine, 44 M 411, 120 P 792 (1912). See also Rieman v. Anderson, 282 M 139, 935 P2d 1122, 54 St. Rep. 286 (1997).

Forty Years of Nonuse as Raising Rebuttable Presumption of Intent to Abandon: In litigation to establish plaintiff's and defendant's respective priorities to water appropriated from Big Coulee Creek, the evidence showed that neither had used previously appropriated water for a period of at least 40 years. Thus, the District Court did not err in holding that under section 89-802, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), the appropriation rights of both parties had been abandoned for lack of use of the water. While abandonment of a water right is a question of fact, nonuse for a period of at least 40 years raises, in effect, a rebuttable presumption of abandonment. A claim that the predecessors of the parties could not afford to use the water by irrigating their land did not excuse the failure to use the water or rebut the presumption of abandonment since economics could excuse nearly every otherwise abandoned water right. 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 204 M 426, 666 P2d 215, 40 St. Rep. 981 (1983), followed in In re Adjudication of Clark Fork River Drainage, 254 M 11, 833 P2d 1120, 49 St. Rep. 591 (1992), in which nonuse for 23-plus years was sufficient to constitute a presumption of abandonment despite the fact that the water right was carried as an asset on the county's books during the period of nonuse, and In re Adjudication of Existing Rights to Use of All Water, Both Surface & Underground, Within Clark Fork River Drainage Above Blackfoot River, 274 M 340, 908 P2d 1353, 52 St. Rep. 1264 (1995), in which continuous nonuse of water for a mining claim for over 50 years raised a rebuttable presumption of abandonment, despite claimant's contention that the cyclical nature of the mining industry and its uncertain economics were reason enough to explain the long period of nonuse. See also Axtell v. M.S. Consulting, 1998 MT 64, 288 M 150, 955 P2d 1362, 55 St. Rep. 276 (1998).

Abandonment by Nonuse: Under section 89-802, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), 75 years of nonuse is sufficient to provide "clear evidence" of abandonment of the unused portion of a water right. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980).

Intent to Abandon: Mere nonuse of a ditch appurtenant to a water right is not sufficient to establish abandonment. There must be concurrent intent to abandon. Shammel v. Vogl, 144 M 354, 396 P2d 103 (1964), followed in Rieman v. Anderson, 282 M 139, 935 P2d 1122, 54 St. Rep. 286 (1997).

"Abandonment" Defined: Before it may be said that the owner of a water right has abandoned it, there must be the necessary concurrence of act and intent to abandon. He must have relinquished it because he no longer desired to possess it. Irion v. Hyde, 107 M 84, 81 P2d 353 (1938).

Abandonment — Essential Elements: Abandonment of a water right is a voluntary act, and to constitute it there must be a concurrence of act and intent. Neither the relinquishment of possession nor the intent not to resume it for a beneficial use is alone sufficient to bring about its abandonment. Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936); Thomas v. Ball, 66 M 161, 213 P 597 (1923).

Abandonment — Trespassers: Plaintiff's predecessors in interest for 13 years used a water right acquired by a desert land entryman after the entry had been canceled and thus were trespassers upon the public domain. That fact did not deprive the plaintiff from resuming the use of the water upon acquiring possession, unaffected by any junior rights which came into being in the meantime, there being no law enforcing abandonment of a vested water right as a penalty for exercising it as a trespasser. Osnes Livestock Co. v. Warren, 103 M 284, 62 P2d 206 (1936).

Abandonment — Resumption: Where use of water is abandoned and resumed, use vests from the date of resumption. Galiger v. McNulty, 80 M 339, 260 P 401 (1927); O'Shea v. Doty, 68 M 316, 218 P 658 (1923).

Abandonment — Burden of Proof — Nonuse: One who claims an abandonment of a water right has the burden of proving it by a preponderance of clear and definite evidence. Where the only evidence was nonuse for 7 years, whereupon its use was resumed by the owner and the water right later sold to another, the resumption and sale were evidence that abandonment was not intended. Thomas v. Ball, 66 M 161, 213 P 597 (1923).

Abandonment of Ditch — No Effect on Water Right: An appropriation was made from a creek, turned into a ditch, and eventually used at placer mines. Years later the appropriator abandoned the ditch, returned the water to the creek, and recaptured it for irrigation use. The abandonment of the ditch was not an abandonment of the entire water right. Meagher v. Hardenbrook, 11 M 385, 28 P 451 (1891).

Abandonment — Insufficient Supply: Defendant's appropriation for placer mining was not abandoned by his failure to use the appropriation for 5 years since there was not enough water to work the mines during those years. McCauley v. McKeig, 8 M 389, 21 P 22 (1889).

(2) A person whose existing rights are determined in a temporary preliminary decree or a preliminary decree issued before [the effective date of this act] [effective April 21, 1989] may petition the water judge for relief concerning any matter in the decree prior to enforcement of the decree."

Case Notes

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

District Court Jurisdiction to Determine Contractual Appurtenance of Water Rights Based on Historic Use: District Courts have jurisdiction to determine appurtenance of water rights based on historic use. Although a District Court may not have jurisdiction to reallocate disputed water rights absent a contract, in this case defendant contractually sold water rights to plaintiffs, and upon disagreement over which water rights were sold, the District Court was asked to resolve the disagreement and did so by interpreting the contract, which was wholly within the court's jurisdiction and did not impose on the exclusive domain of the Water Court. Kruer v. Three Creeks Ranch of Wy., LLC, 2008 MT 315, 346 M 66, 194 P3d 634 (2008). See also Castillo v. Kunnemann, 197 M 190, 642 P2d 1019 (1982), Axtell v. M.S. Consulting, 1998 MT 64, 288 M 150, 955 P2d 1362 (1998), and In re Petition of Deadman's Basin Users, 2002 MT 15, 308 M 168, 40 P3d 387 (2002).

Enforcement of Water Distribution Under 1940 Decree — Jurisdiction of District Court to Determine Source and Flow: In a dispute regarding the distribution of water pursuant to a 1940 decree, the District Court recognized the existence of an unadjudicated, independent source of water from a spring, determined its flow rate, and determined that plaintiff was entitled to the flow from the spring. Plaintiff appealed on grounds that the District Court exceeded its jurisdiction by making the source and flow determination because subsection (2)(b) of this section requires that controversies involving water in which all existing rights have not been determined must be settled exclusively by the Water Court. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under In re Petition of Deadman's Basin Water Users Ass'n to Appoint Water Comm'r to Distribute Stored Water, 2002 MT 15, 308 M 168, 40 P3d 387 (2002), and subsection (3) of this section a District Court has the authority to enforce an existing water decree and may, in certain cases, fill in a pre-1973 decree with further delineations, such as time or season of use and acreage of application. In the present case, the District Court was merely enforcing the 1940 decree, and in order to accurately distribute decreed water, it was necessary for the court to identify naturally occurring water in the drainage as distinguished from water produced by defendant's drainage works. The court properly concluded that defendant was entitled to all water present at the diversion except for the naturally occurring water from the spring that was granted to plaintiff. In making this simple determination, the District Court did not readjudicate existing water rights or otherwise modify the 1940 decree in excess of its authority. Plaintiff's motion to certify the issue to the Water Court was properly denied. Hidden Hollow Ranch v. Field, 2004 MT 153, 321 M 505, 92 P3d 1185 (2004).

No Error in Classifying Imported Water as Developed Water or Referring to Natural Water Carrier as Unnamed Drainage: In a dispute regarding the distribution of water pursuant to a 1940 decree, the District Court referred to water imported by defendant into the natural drainage from defendant's appropriated water source as developed water and referred to the natural water carrier as an unnamed drainage. Plaintiff contended that these determinations were the exclusive jurisdiction of the Water Court and that the District Court thus exceeded its jurisdiction. The Supreme Court disagreed. Although a claim for appropriation of water rights in which the original character of the water has been lost or that is no longer under the possession or control of the original owner should be adjudicated in the Water Court because it involves a determination of the source of the water right, in this case, the parties did not seek to adjudicate water that lost its character or that had left the control of the original owner. Defendant merely sought to use water that he brought into the natural drainage from his appropriated source. Any error in classifying the water as developed water was harmless because when water is intentionally emptied into a natural watercourse for conduction to another point, an equivalent amount may be recaptured or diverted at a later point as long as it does not diminish the rights of a prior appropriator, and under 85-2-411, appropriated water may be turned into the natural channel of another stream for beneficial use. Thus, defendant did not lose his order of priority by channeling the water through a natural drainage, nor did classifying the water as developed water create a new ground water right in favor of defendant. The District Court did not exceed its jurisdiction in applying nomenclature to an otherwise confusing process. Plaintiff's motion to certify the issue to the Water Court was properly denied. Hidden Hollow Ranch v. Field, 2004 MT 153, 321 M 505, 92 P3d 1185 (2004).

Supervision and Enforcement of Pre-1973 Water Decree by District Court — No Due Process Violation: Plaintiff brought a contempt and injunction action in District Court to prevent defendant from interfering with plaintiff's appropriation rights under a 1940 water decree. Following a bench trial in District Court, plaintiff's petition was dismissed and plaintiff was enjoined from interfering with defendant's diversion works and conveyance system. Following a determination of the source and flow of the water, the District Court also ordered that defendant allow a specific amount of water through the diversion system to plaintiff. On appeal, plaintiff contended that the permanent modification of the 1940 decree by the District Court in a contempt and injunction action violated plaintiff's due process rights. The Supreme Court held that the District Court did not exceed its jurisdiction by supervising the distribution of previously adjudicated water, enforcing the 1940 decree, and filling in the pre-1973 decree with further delineations. Because the District Court did not permanently modify the 1940 decree, plaintiff's due process rights were not violated. Hidden Hollow Ranch v. Field, 2004 MT 153, 321 M 505, 92 P3d 1185 (2004).

District Court Error in Restraining Use of Contracted Irrigation Water: Micks contracted to purchase the right to 775 acre-feet of water from the Deadman's Basin Water Users Association, to be appropriated from the Deadman's Basin Reservoir, in order to irrigate a hay crop. In April 2000, the District Court appointed two Water Commissioners to distribute the reservoir water pursuant to a rotation plan. In August 2000, the District Court, on its own motion, found that the water level in the reservoir had reached a critical level, that the remaining water was necessary to maintain domestic, municipal, stock, and wildlife usage, and that the irrigation of crops from the river was prohibited as long as the reservoir level remained critically low. Micks determined that he had used only 431 acre-feet of his contracted 775 acre-feet, and based on his limited usage and other reasons, he presumed that the District Court prohibition did not apply to him, so he continued to irrigate his hay crop. Micks' continued irrigation was discovered, and he was ordered by the District Court to show cause why he should not be held in contempt for failure to comply with the prohibition order. Micks requested that the District Court reconsider its order, but the request was denied, so Micks appealed. The Supreme Court noted that under Mildenberger v. Galbraith, 249 M 161, 815 P2d 130 (1991), and Baker Ditch Co. v. District Court, 251 M 251, 824 P2d 260 (1992), the jurisdiction to interpret and determine existing water rights rests exclusively with the Water Courts and that although the District Court has the authority to supervise the distribution of previously adjudicated water or to enforce an existing water decree and may in certain cases fill in a pre-1973 decree with further delineations, such as time or season of use and acreage of application, in this case, the District Court made a priority determination regarding domestic and irrigation water consumption based on the court's own inclinations, exceeding its authority to simply fill in a water decree with further delineations. Micks' contract unambiguously required a pro rata reduction in water distribution when an inadequate amount existed to satisfy outstanding water purchase contracts. Therefore, the District Court erred as a matter of law when it employed a first come, first served policy in contravention of the water contract. Denial of Micks' motion to reconsider the prohibition order was reversible error, and his motion to restrain the Water Commissioners from interfering with use of Deadman's Basin Reservoir irrigation water to which he was entitled should have been granted. In re Petition of Deadman's Basin Water Users Ass'n to Appoint Water Comm'r to Distribute Stored Water, 2002 MT 15, 308 M 168, 40 P3d 387 (2002).

Recharge of River — Right to Use of Water by Subsequent Appropriator Even Though No Water Available to Upstream Prior Appropriator: A Water Commissioner closed the headgate of the Baker Ditch Company, a downstream appropriator with decreed water rights, because there was no water available to an upstream superior appropriator, even though there was water available to the Company due to recharge of the river by return flows, seepage, and other sources. The Commissioner evidently believed that he had to enforce the decree to the extent that if a prior appropriator was without water upstream, a subsequent appropriator downstream could not divert water under its rights even though the river was being recharged. However, if a subsequent appropriator is using water in accordance with the decree and that use cannot in any way be a detriment to a prior appropriator, then the subsequent appropriator has the right to the use of the water. Baker Ditch Co. v. District Court, 251 M 251, 824 P2d 260, 49 St. Rep. 17 (1992), replacing the prior opinion at 48 St. Rep. 972 (1991).

Jurisdiction to Determine Existing Water Rights to Rest With Water Court: Defendants appealed from a District Court judgment granting plaintiffs a stockwater right of 200 miner's inches. The Supreme Court vacated the judgment, holding that a final adjudication of a water right rests with the Water Court and not the District Court. Mildenberger v. Galbraith, 249 M 161, 815 P2d 130, 48 St. Rep. 621 (1991), followed in State ex rel. Jones v. District Court, 283 M 1, 938 P2d 1312, 54 St. Rep. 460 (1997).

Grounds for "Filling-In" Pre-1973 Water Decree: A District Court may in certain instances "fill-in" a pre-1973 water decree with further delineations such as the time or season of use and acreage of application. However, such judicial interpretation should be limited to situations similar to that addressed by the Supreme Court in Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940), where the appropriator has either expanded his appropriation, exceeded what can be beneficially used, or damaged junior appropriators. Cate v. Hargrave, 209 M 265, 680 P2d 952, 41 St. Rep. 697 (1984). See also State ex rel. Jones v. District Court, 283 M 1, 938 P2d 1312, 54 St. Rep. 460 (1997).

Priority of Senior Main Stem Water Rights Over Junior Tributary Water Rights: Appellant owns water rights in Clear Creek dating to 1910. Petitioners have water rights in Rock Creek dating to 1896. Clear Creek is a tributary of Rock Creek. In 1970, appellant obtained a court order directing the Rock Creek Water Commissioner to "carry out" the Clear Creek water rights of appellant. Following the District Court order, the Water Commissioner honored in full the requests of appellant for water without regard to any priority in the relationship of the creeks' water rights. As a result, at times of water shortage, senior Rock Creek decreed waters are cut off. In 1977, petitioners filed this action to rescind the 1970 order and to direct the Water Commissioner to subject the Clear Creek water rights to the priorities of Rock Creek water rights. The District Court ruled that the 1970 court order, applied by the Water Commissioner to fulfill junior appropriations ahead of prior decreed rights, was improper. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's order and further stated that the order did not violate due process. The Supreme Court reasoned that the only rights affected by the District Court order were the rights of the parties before the court. Granite Ditch Co. v. Anderson, 204 M 10, 662 P2d 1312, 40 St. Rep. 630 (1983).

Valid Water Right Not Affected by Release of Surplus to Junior User: Defendants' predecessor in interest began using water in the amount of 110 gallons a minute from Mahle Spring in 1917 for domestic, stock, and irrigation purposes. Mahle Spring flows into Ashley Creek. In 1958, defendants completed construction of a dam whose purpose was to stabilize their water supply only, not to increase the amount of water appropriated. In April 1973, defendants filed notice of completion of ground water appropriation without well, claiming 110 gallons a minute. In 1957, plaintiff's predecessor in interest began using water from Ashley Creek. At times, when Ashley Creek dried up, defendants agreed to release water from the dam. In 1978, plaintiff obtained a water use permit for Ashley Creek. Subsequently, defendants refused to release any water from the dam. Plaintiff filed an action to adjudicate the parties' water rights and to enjoin defendants from interfering with the flow of Ashley Creek. The Montana Supreme Court upheld the District Court's ruling that defendants are entitled to 110 gallons a minute with a priority date of 1917 and that plaintiff is entitled only to the excess over that. The court denied plaintiff's claim that defendants were estopped from asserting a superior claim, reasoning that the release of the water did not cause plaintiff's predecessor in interest to change her position for the worse because the defendants had already established a valid claim to the water and thus the release was either a mere gratuity or a release of surplus water. In the absence of evidence that defendant was not simply releasing surplus water, the court also denied plaintiff's claim of laches. Finally, the court denied plaintiff's claim that the release from the dam was evidence that defendants were not making beneficial use of all the water since the District Court findings indicated that the defendants' total claim was fully justified. Bagnell v. Lemery, 202 M 238, 657 P2d 608, 40 St. Rep. 58 (1983).

Findings and Conclusions as to Water Rights Held Inadequate — Judgment Vacated and Remanded: When a midstream and downstream water user filed suit against the upstream user to have the District Court declare the relative water rights of the parties, the findings of fact and conclusions of law entered by the District Court were so bare and inadequate as to provide no basis for meaningful appellate review. Because it could not be determined from the District Court's bare conclusions (i.e., that the parties had failed to prove their case by a preponderance of the evidence and had abandoned their rights) what the factual or evidentiary basis for the District Court's decision was, the Supreme Court vacated the judgment as to all of the three parties and remanded the case to the District Court and directed it to enter findings and conclusions reflective of the evidence presented at trial and the legal contentions of the parties. 79 Ranch, Inc. v. Pitsch, 193 M 229, 631 P2d 690, 38 St. Rep. 1048 (1981).

Standing to Challenge Award of Water Right: A party has standing to challenge a water right only if it conflicts with those granted to him. Thus, he has no standing to challenge a right to water from a source in which he has no water right. However, he may challenge a water right from a source from which he has a water right whether the challenged right is prior or subsequent to his own. Holmstrom Land Co., Inc. v. Newlan Creek Water District, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 36 St. Rep. 1403 (1979), rehearing denied, 185 M 409, 605 P2d 1060, 37 St. Rep. 295 (1980).

Preliminary Injunctive Proceedings: In the same way that substantive property rights cannot be adjudicated in a summary way and that title to real estate may not be litigated in an action for an injunction, water rights should not be determined in a preliminary proceeding for injunctive relief. Eliason v. Evans, 178 M 212, 583 P2d 398 (1978).

Damages for Wrongful Diversion of Water:

Where several parties have diverted water so as to injure the crops of another, they cannot be held jointly liable for the acts of each other nor can they be sued in one action for the entire damage, with or without an apportionment of the damage. Howell v. Bent, 48 M 268, 137 P 49 (1913).

Section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), does not apply to an action at law for damages for the wrongful diversion of water where there is no allegation in the complaint that would authorize the court to grant equitable relief and there is no evidence to show that the plaintiff is entitled to such relief. Miles v. Du Bey, 15 M 340, 39 P 313 (1895). See Howell v. Bent, 48 M 268, 137 P 49 (1913).

Equitable Actions: Section 89-815, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), contemplates equitable actions only, in which relative priorities and conflicting rights of all parties may be settled and where the damages claimed are a mere incident. Howell v. Bent, 48 M 268, 137 P 49 (1913); Miles v. Du Bey, 15 M 340, 39 P 313 (1895).

Pleadings: The District Court may settle the relative priorities and rights of all the parties to a water right suit in one judgment only when pleadings have been framed so as to justify such settlement. Sloan v. Byers, 37 M 503, 97 P 855 (1908), distinguished and followed in Bennett v. Quinlan, 47 M 247, 131 P 1067 (1913).

Claimant to Be Able to Use Water Before He May Object to the Use by Others: Until a claimant is himself in a position to use the water of a stream subject to appropriation, the right to the water or water right does not exist in such sense that the mere diversion of the water by another is a ground of action either to recover the water or for damages for its diversion. Miles v. Butte Elec. & Power Co., 32 M 56, 79 P 549 (1905).

Injunction: Property owners having the right to divert the waters of a creek for irrigation purposes may join in a suit to restrain a third person from diminishing the volume of water to the use of which they are entitled. Beach v. Spokane Ranch & Water Co., 25 M 379, 65 P 111 (1901).

85-2-407. Temporary changes in appropriation right.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 85 in (3) inserted second sentence removing any limitation on the number of renewals an appropriator may seek, in third sentence near middle after "requires" substituted "notice" for "application", and in fourth sentence at beginning after "Upon" substituted "receipt of the notice" for "application" and near middle after "allow" substituted "90 days" for "30 days"; in (8) near beginning after "change" inserted "in appropriation right"; in (9) near beginning after "change" inserted "in appropriation right", near middle after "right" deleted "pursuant to 85-2-408 or 85-2-439", and at end substituted "not to exceed 30 years unless a renewal is obtained pursuant to subsection (3)" for "equal to the expected life of the project, not to exceed 30 years"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 122 in (9) inserted reference to 85-2-439; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 25, 2003, and terminates June 30, 2005.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 381 at beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 27, 2001.

Chapter 433 in (2) at beginning inserted exception clause; inserted (9) authorizing approval of temporary change in appropriation right under 85-2-408 for period equal to expected life of project, up to 30 years, if quantity of water subject to temporary change is available from new water conservation or storage project development; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001, and terminates June 30, 2005.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 322 inserted (4)(b) authorizing an appropriator to object during initial temporary change application, during temporary change renewal process, and once during term of temporary change permit; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 322, L. 1995, provided: "This legislation, jointly developed by representatives from the agricultural, recreation, and conservation communities, is intended to authorize the temporary use of existing water rights for instream flow to benefit the fishery resource. In establishing the use of water rights for authorized instream flow to benefit the fishery resource, it is the intent of the legislature that the authorization respect and work within the prior appropriation water rights system.

This legislation creates an opportunity for citizens to voluntarily enter into agreements to lease existing water rights to protect fisheries and allows persons who own water rights to temporarily change the use of that water to instream flow to benefit the fishery resource.

To monitor and review the implementation of this instream flow program, the legislature directs the office of the governor to convene on an ongoing and regular basis a working group that includes representatives from the agricultural, recreation, and conservation communities. This working group shall consult with the department of natural resources and conservation on relevant changes in water use and shall submit a report to the governor and the legislature in 2001 outlining the status of the program."

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 435, L. 1991, provided: "It is the declared policy of the state in 85-1-101 that water resources be put to optimum beneficial use to secure maximum economic and social prosperity for its citizens. The legislature recognizes that water supplies are limited and vary from year to year. As water supplies become fully appropriated, the reallocation of some water may be necessary to meet changing economic and social needs.

The appropriate means of reallocating water among competing demands is with the voluntary approval of water right holders. With sufficient innovation and economic incentives, water can be reallocated voluntarily, without loss of appropriation rights, and to the profit of prior appropriators, through the temporary change of water rights in anticipation of periods of water scarcity. This legislation clarifies that these types of arrangements are allowed, except when other appropriators might be adversely affected. Thus, water can be reallocated for optimum beneficial use and the maximum economic and social prosperity of all Montana citizens."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 85 in (1) inserted (a) and (b) establishing application requirements; deleted former (5) that read: "(5) For the purpose of identifying and consulting with individuals or groups that may be affected by the proposed change authorization, the applicant shall, 30 days before submitting the application to the department, publish notice of the proposed change authorization in a local newspaper of general circulation in the county or counties affected"; inserted (7) establishing the maximum quantity of water that may be changed to maintain and enhance fishery instream flow; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 9, Ch. 85, L. 2005, repealed sec. 6, Ch. 322, L. 1995, which terminated this section June 30, 2005. Effective March 24, 2005.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 322, L. 1995, provided: "This legislation, jointly developed by representatives from the agricultural, recreation, and conservation communities, is intended to authorize the temporary use of existing water rights for instream flow to benefit the fishery resource. In establishing the use of water rights for authorized instream flow to benefit the fishery resource, it is the intent of the legislature that the authorization respect and work within the prior appropriation water rights system.

This legislation creates an opportunity for citizens to voluntarily enter into agreements to lease existing water rights to protect fisheries and allows persons who own water rights to temporarily change the use of that water to instream flow to benefit the fishery resource.

To monitor and review the implementation of this instream flow program, the legislature directs the office of the governor to convene on an ongoing and regular basis a working group that includes representatives from the agricultural, recreation, and conservation communities. This working group shall consult with the department of natural resources and conservation on relevant changes in water use and shall submit a report to the governor and the legislature in 2001 outlining the status of the program."

Termination: Section 6, Ch. 322, L. 1995, provided that this section terminates June 30, 2005.

Case Notes

Denial of Application for Temporary Change in Water Rights Held to Be Arbitrary Action by Department: The plaintiffs filed for a temporary change of irrigation water rights to instream flow. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation denied the application on the basis of an alleged incomplete return flow analysis. The Supreme Court held that 85-2-408(7) dealing with return flow analysis did not require the applicant to provide the analysis; rather, it gives the Department the discretion to limit the amount that may be taken by an applicant. The Supreme Court further held that the Department's denial of the application for want of a complete return flow analysis without further explanation when it had granted similar applications in the past constituted arbitrary conduct and was an abuse of discretion. Hohenlohe v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2010 MT 203, 357 Mont. 438, 240 P.3d 628.

Upon Applicant's Meeting Statutory Burden of Showing No Adverse Effect on Downstream Water Rights Holders, Department May Not Deny Application Based on Failure to Provide Return Flow Analysis: The plaintiffs filed for a temporary change of irrigation water rights to instream flow. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation denied the application on the basis of an alleged incomplete return flow analysis. The Supreme Court held that 85-2-408(7) dealing with return flow analysis did not require the applicant to provide the analysis; rather, it gives the Department the discretion to limit the amount that may be taken by an applicant. The Supreme Court further held that when the applicant successfully proves that the change in water usage will not adversely affect downstream water rights holders, the Department may not refuse to grant the change on the basis of the applicant's failure to provide a return flow analysis, as that is not a requirement that pertains to the applicant. Hohenlohe v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2010 MT 203, 357 Mont. 438, 240 P.3d 628.

85-2-411. Water turned into natural channels.

Case Notes

District Court Erred in Affirming Conservation District's Determination Regarding Mitchell Slough: The District Court's narrow, technical definition of "natural" as meaning "in the absence of any man-made manipulation" and resulting conclusions led to errors of law. The totality of the circumstances of the factual record should have been considered in determining whether the Mitchell Slough is a "natural, perennial-flowing stream or river" for the purpose of Title 75, chapter 7, part 1. Bitterroot River Protective Assoc., Inc. v. Bitterroot Conserv. Dist., 2008 MT 377, 346 M 507, 198 P3d 219 (2008).

No Error in Classifying Imported Water as Developed Water or Referring to Natural Water Carrier as Unnamed Drainage: In a dispute regarding the distribution of water pursuant to a 1940 decree, the District Court referred to water imported by defendant into the natural drainage from defendant's appropriated water source as developed water and referred to the natural water carrier as an unnamed drainage. Plaintiff contended that these determinations were the exclusive jurisdiction of the Water Court and that the District Court thus exceeded its jurisdiction. The Supreme Court disagreed. Although a claim for appropriation of water rights in which the original character of the water has been lost or that is no longer under the possession or control of the original owner should be adjudicated in the Water Court because it involves a determination of the source of the water right, in this case, the parties did not seek to adjudicate water that lost its character or that had left the control of the original owner. Defendant merely sought to use water that he brought into the natural drainage from his appropriated source. Any error in classifying the water as developed water was harmless because when water is intentionally emptied into a natural watercourse for conduction to another point, an equivalent amount may be recaptured or diverted at a later point as long as it does not diminish the rights of a prior appropriator, and under this section, appropriated water may be turned into the natural channel of another stream for beneficial use. Thus, defendant did not lose his order of priority by channeling the water through a natural drainage, nor did classifying the water as developed water create a new ground water right in favor of defendant. The District Court did not exceed its jurisdiction in applying nomenclature to an otherwise confusing process. Plaintiff's motion to certify the issue to the Water Court was properly denied. Hidden Hollow Ranch v. Field, 2004 MT 153, 321 M 505, 92 P3d 1185 (2004).

Supervision and Enforcement of Pre-1973 Water Decree by District Court — No Due Process Violation: Plaintiff brought a contempt and injunction action in District Court to prevent defendant from interfering with plaintiff's appropriation rights under a 1940 water decree. Following a bench trial in District Court, plaintiff's petition was dismissed and plaintiff was enjoined from interfering with defendant's diversion works and conveyance system. Following a determination of the source and flow of the water, the District Court also ordered that defendant allow a specific amount of water through the diversion system to plaintiff. On appeal, plaintiff contended that the permanent modification of the 1940 decree by the District Court in a contempt and injunction action violated plaintiff's due process rights. The Supreme Court held that the District Court did not exceed its jurisdiction by supervising the distribution of previously adjudicated water, enforcing the 1940 decree, and filling in the pre-1973 decree with further delineations. Because the District Court did not permanently modify the 1940 decree, plaintiff's due process rights were not violated. Hidden Hollow Ranch v. Field, 2004 MT 153, 321 M 505, 92 P3d 1185 (2004).

Canal Water Turned Into Slough — Amount That May Be Reclaimed: The defendant permitted waters from a canal and spring to run in a slough and then used the slough as a waterway. The defendant could reclaim from the slough only that amount of water equal to what he put in. Meine v. Ferris, 126 M 210, 247 P2d 195 (1952).

Seepage Water Potholed and Recaptured: Since seepage water that has its rise along the bed of a stream and forms a natural accretion thereto belongs to the stream as a part of its source of supply, the same as do feeder springs, and an appropriator of water on such stream has the right to all such tributary flow even as against the owner of the land, the conducting of water from upper reaches of a tributary to "potholes" and "reservoirs" and then capturing the seepage therefrom in ditches is insufficient proof of creating a new supply for an additional water right. Woodward v. Perkins, 116 M 46, 147 P2d 1016 (1944), distinguished in Forrester v. Rock Island Oil & Ref. Co., 133 M 333, 323 P2d 597 (1958).

Percolation From Irrigation on Adjacent Lands: While under section 89-804, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), one may employ the natural channel of a stream for the conveyance of water which he has developed and reclaim it if the rights of prior appropriators are not thereby diminished in quantity or deteriorated in quality, the rule has no application where an increase in the flow of the stream results solely by percolation from irrigation on adjacent lands. West Side Ditch Co. v. Bennett, 106 M 422, 78 P2d 78 (1938); State ex rel. Mungas v. District Court, 102 M 533, 59 P2d 71 (1936); Rock Creek Ditch & Flume Co. v. Miller, 93 M 248, 17 P2d 1074, 89 ALR 200 (1933); Beaverhead Canal Co. v. Dillon Elec. Light & Power Co., 34 M 135, 85 P 880 (1906).

Deterioration in Quality Prohibited: While section 89-804, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), authorizes an appropriator to turn water into the channel of a stream other than the one from which he appropriates, he may do so only if the waters in the stream the channel of which he thus uses are not deteriorated in quality to the detriment of a prior appropriator. Missoula Pub. Serv. Co. v. Bitter Root Irrigation District, 80 M 64, 257 P 1038 (1927).

Developed Water Supply — Burden of Proof as to Amount: One who claims to have developed a water supply has the burden of proving the amount developed, especially when it is mingled with a water supply to which another is entitled. Spaulding v. Stone, 46 M 483, 129 P 327 (1912); Smith v. Duff, 39 M 382, 102 P 984 (1909).

Drainage Ditch — Interception of Stream's Source: In order to catch seepage water from irrigated land, the defendant constructed a drainage ditch that paralleled and intersected a stream. Because the ditch intercepted seepage water that was a source of supply for the stream, the defendant did not develop a new water supply to which he was entitled. Spaulding v. Stone, 46 M 483, 129 P 327 (1912).

Surplus Water: Water in excess of the amount which defendant was entitled to appropriate and which ran over spillway on to plaintiff's land was "surplus water" and not artificial water. Clausen v. Armington, 123 M 1, 212 P2d 440 (1949).

Duty of Appropriator to Turn Surplus Back Into Stream: Under this section, a prior appropriator of water must turn back into the stream from which the water is taken all over and above what is actually and necessarily used by him. Brennan v. Jones, 101 M 550, 55 P2d 697 (1936); Galiger v. McNulty, 80 M 339, 260 P 401 (1927); Creek v. Bozeman Water Works Co., 15 M 121, 38 P 459 (1894).

Rights of Subsequent Appropriators: Subsequent appropriators of water may compel a prior appropriator to release water for their use which he does not need for a beneficial use. Gans & Klein Inv. Co. v. Sanford, 91 M 512, 8 P2d 808 (1932).

Extent of Right of Owner: Where a party has all the water his necessities require or that his ditches will carry, it is immaterial that he has a right, under decree or otherwise, to a greater flow from the stream; he must permit the excess to remain in the stream, or having diverted it, return it to the stream in such a manner that it will be available to subsequent appropriators. Tucker v. Missoula Light & Ry., 77 M 91, 250 P 11 (1926).

Unused Excess Not Appropriated: The diversion of water for domestic purposes in excess of what is required and allowing such excess to overflow lands without any intention of irrigating and without any intention of using such excess for any useful purpose does not constitute an appropriation of the excess. Power v. Switzer, 21 M 523, 55 P 32 (1898).

Case Notes

Recharge of River — Right to Use of Water by Subsequent Appropriator Even Though No Water Available to Upstream Prior Appropriator: A Water Commissioner closed the headgate of the Baker Ditch Company, a downstream appropriator with decreed water rights, because there was no water available to an upstream superior appropriator, even though there was water available to the Company due to recharge of the river by return flows, seepage, and other sources. The Commissioner evidently believed that he had to enforce the decree to the extent that if a prior appropriator was without water upstream, a subsequent appropriator downstream could not divert water under its rights even though the river was being recharged. However, if a subsequent appropriator is using water in accordance with the decree and that use cannot in any way be a detriment to a prior appropriator, then the subsequent appropriator has the right to the use of the water. Baker Ditch Co. v. District Court, 251 M 251, 824 P2d 260, 49 St. Rep. 17 (1992), replacing the prior opinion at 48 St. Rep. 972 (1991).

Appropriative Rights Annual Rather Than Seasonal: Generally, there is no division of the year into an irrigation season and a storage season, so as to give later direct users a seasonal preference over earlier indirect users, or vice versa. Cate v. Hargrave, 209 M 265, 680 P2d 952, 41 St. Rep. 697 (1984).

Grounds for "Filling-In" Pre-1973 Water Decree: A District Court may in certain instances "fill-in" a pre-1973 water decree with further delineations such as the time or season of use and acreage of application. However, such judicial interpretation should be limited to situations similar to that addressed by the Supreme Court in Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940), where the appropriator has either expanded his appropriation, exceeded what can be beneficially used, or damaged junior appropriators. Cate v. Hargrave, 209 M 265, 680 P2d 952, 41 St. Rep. 697 (1984).

Lawful Exchange: Owners of rights in a canal who, because of the topography of the area, could not transport water from the canal directly to their land, properly diverted the natural flow of the creek for use on their land and replaced the water with water from the canal which intersected with the stream below the point of diversion. Thompson v. Harvey, 164 M 133, 519 P2d 963 (1974).

Misuse of Channel: Where petitioners for an order authorizing a change in a point of diversion on a creek asserted that protestors had misused a channel on Deep Creek by exchanging canal water for stream water which was removed at points above the canal, this use of the channel was specifically authorized in Montana law and the protestors did not have unclean hands. Thompson v. Harvey, 164 M 133, 519 P2d 963 (1974).

Interference With Prior Rights: Primary rights to the use of water in a stream are those of appropriators of its natural flow. The burden is upon a subsequent storage claimant (in this case, defendant State Water Conservation Board, precursor to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) or upon one who uses a watercourse as a part of his distribution system of developed or alien waters affirmatively to disprove interference with prior rights in a suit to enjoin such interference. Allendale Irrigation Co. v. St. Water Conservation Bd., 113 M 436, 127 P2d 227 (1942).

85-2-414. Conduction of water.

Case Notes

Failure to Enjoin Against Interference With Secondary Easement Rights Not Error: Engel asserted District Court error in failing to enjoin Gampps from interfering with Engel's use of a secondary easement to maintain an irrigation ditch running across the property of both parties. However, there was substantial evidence that Engel's access for routine inspections and maintenance was, and always had been, free and uninterrupted. Although failing to enjoin Gampps, the District Court nevertheless fashioned an order balancing Engel's reserved right for occasional access with Gampps' right not to be unreasonably burdened by Engel's secondary easement, so the District Court was affirmed. Engel v. Gampp, 2000 MT 17, 298 M 116, 993 P2d 701, 57 St. Rep. 96 (2000).

Condemnation of Land for Conduct of Water Subject to Eminent Domain Proceedings: An action to condemn land pursuant to 85-2-414 must follow the eminent domain proceedings set out in Title 70, ch. 30. A water appropriator could not contend that his right of eminent domain was taken away when he had not even initiated the proper procedures to pursue the action. Careless Creek Ranch Co. v. Murnion, 230 M 216, 748 P2d 475, 45 St. Rep. 154 (1988).

Reservoir Water at Sufficient Height for Use Intended: Defendant had no claim under this section to eminent domain over land covered by raising the water level behind his reservoir because the reservoir was already at a sufficient height to make the water enter a ditch, thereby fulfilling its intended use for irrigation. Careless Creek Ranch Co. v. Murnion, 230 M 216, 748 P2d 475, 45 St. Rep. 154 (1988).

Prescriptive Easement: This section has no application in the case of a prescriptive easement in a water right since the dominant tenement will not be required to pay for an easement acquired by prescription. O'Connor v. Brodie, 153 M 129, 454 P2d 920 (1969).

Right of Easement Holder to Make Repairs:

In a proceeding to quiet title to a secondary easement on another's land for irrigation purposes and to enable the dominant owner to maintain and repair his ditches, an award of so much of the lands of the servient owner as may be necessary for the purposes of maintenance was not objectionable for indefiniteness and uncertainty. Laden v. Atkeson, 112 M 302, 116 P2d 881 (1941), distinguished in Stalcup v. Cameron Ditch Co., 130 M 294, 300 P2d 511 (1956), and followed in Engel v. Gampp, 2000 MT 17, 298 M 116, 993 P2d 701, 57 St. Rep. 96 (2000).

The owner of a secondary easement, such as a right to pass over the land of the servient owner for the purpose of making repairs on a dam and ditches, has a duty to repair a route that has become impassable or merely inconvenient rather than to materially deviate therefrom without consent of the servient owner. He may dig up soil and use it for repairs, doing no more injury than is necessary. Laden v. Atkeson, 112 M 302, 116 P2d 881 (1941), distinguished in Stalcup v. Cameron Ditch Co., 130 M 294, 300 P2d 511 (1956), and followed in Engel v. Gampp, 2000 MT 17, 298 M 116, 993 P2d 701, 57 St. Rep. 96 (2000).

Wing Dam Not Constituting Waste: Under this section, which gives an appropriator of water the right to raise the level of water in a stream by means of a dam to a sufficient height to make it enter a ditch, the contention that where a wing dam is used, the water which does not enter the ditch is improperly wasted was erroneous. State ex rel. Crowley v. District Court, 108 M 89, 88 P2d 23, 121 ALR 1031 (1939).

Water Rights and Ditches Separate Rights: Water rights and ditch rights are separate and distinct property rights. One may own a water right without a ditch right or a ditch right without a water right. Connolly v. Harrel, 102 M 295, 57 P2d 781 (1936).

85-2-415. Owners of water to sell surplus.

Case Notes

Change of Use — Sale: Appropriations not originally made for the purpose of sale may have their use changed to that purpose if subsequent appropriators are not thereby injured. Sherlock v. Greaves, 106 M 206, 76 P2d 87 (1938).

Claims of Adverse Possession or Common-Law Dedication No Defense: Where defendant townspeople for many years took water for domestic uses with the acquiescence of ditch owners and either performed labor in repairing the ditch or paid an annual charge for the privilege of obtaining the water, thus recognizing the paramount right of plaintiffs, they could not rely upon the defense of a common-law dedication in the absence of a showing of an offer to dedicate, in an action to enjoin their further use. Nor could defendant townspeople rely upon the defense of adverse possession or use. Sherlock v. Greaves, 106 M 206, 76 P2d 87 (1938).

Injunction Against Further Use: Where the owners of a water right had for many years permitted the inhabitants of a town to tap their nearby ditch for domestic uses for a consideration consisting in some instances of services about the ditch and in others of rental money, thus presumably acting under sections 89-823 through 89-826, R.C.M. 1947 (85-2-415 through 85-2-418), and then sought to enjoin such further use, inhabitants were not entitled to injunctive relief in the absence of proof of a tender of the customary rates although such use was clothed with a public interest. Sherlock v. Greaves, 106 M 206, 76 P2d 87 (1938).

Restrictions on Sale of Water: After an appropriator of water has used it sufficiently to fulfill the purposes of his appropriation, he may not take the water of the stream remaining which he cannot use for such purposes and sell it so that it will deprive subsequent appropriators of their right to use it. Sherlock v. Greaves, 106 M 206, 76 P2d 87 (1938).

Tender Essential to Demand Delivery and Institute Suit: While sections 89-823 through 89-826, R.C.M. 1947 (85-2-415 through 85-2-418), give to one who desires water from an appropriator who has a surplus and is entitled to sell it the right to demand delivery thereof and to institute suit to compel delivery if refused, he may do so only upon payment or a tender of the usual or customary rates per inch. Sherlock v. Greaves, 106 M 206, 76 P2d 87 (1938).

Case Notes

Application of Section: The provision of this section relating to the retaking and selling of surplus water for commercial purposes applies to the sale and disposition of water by volume and has no application to water which has been abandoned and which through seepage and percolation reaches the waters of a natural stream. Rock Creek Ditch & Flume Co. v. Miller, 93 M 248, 17 P2d 1074, 89 ALR 200 (1933), distinguished in McGowan v. U.S., 206 F. Supp. 439 (D.C. Mont. 1962).

85-2-424. Filing.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 366 deleted former (1) that read: "(1) The transferor of a water right shall file with the department a water right ownership update form within 60 days of recording a deed or other instrument evidencing a transfer of real property"; in (1) near middle after "closing" inserted "or transfer of real property"; in (2)(a) in first sentence after "discloses" substituted remainder regarding transfer of water right and update of department record and all of second sentence regarding payment of fee for "a transfer of water rights, a water right ownership update form must be completed and filed with the department. The recording of the deed or other instrument may not be delayed because of the transfer of the water rights"; inserted (2)(b) regarding responsibility of transferee; inserted (2)(c) requiring department to send notice to transferee; inserted (3), (4), (5), (6), and (7) regarding other requirements for transfer of water rights; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2008.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 70 in (1) near middle and in second sentence in (2) substituted "water right ownership update form" for "water right transfer certificate"; and deleted former (3) that read: "(3) Upon request of the department, the county clerk and recorder shall send to the department, on a monthly basis, a copy of the clerk and recorder's copy of any realty transfer certificate that discloses a transfer of water rights." Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 167 in (1), before "shall", deleted "or his agent or representative"; in (2), at end of first sentence, substituted "contain a water rights disclosure whereby the transferor shall acknowledge, at or before closing, whether or not any water rights are associated with the property to be transferred and whether or not any water rights will transfer with the real property" for "note whether or not the transfer includes a transfer of water rights" and in second sentence, after "certificate", substituted "discloses" for "notes" and at end substituted "a water right transfer certificate must be completed and filed with the department" for "the clerk and recorder shall provide such person the form prescribed under 85-2-423 for the transfer of water rights"; substituted (3) requiring sending copies to the Department on a monthly basis for former language that read: "The county clerk and recorder shall send to the department a list of all transfers that involve transfers of water rights. The list must be sent every month and must include all transfers for the month immediately preceding the date of submittal to the department. The list must include the names and addresses of all parties to the transfer and a legal description of the land subject to the transfer"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1998.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 167, L. 1997 provided: "[This act] is effective January 1, 1998, and does not apply to deeds entering escrow before that date."

1991 Amendment: Deleted (4) that read: "(4) The department shall send a reference copy of the water right transfer certificate to the office of the chief water judge and to the county clerk and recorder in the county in which the transfer occurred". Amendment effectively July 1, 1991.

1985 Amendment: In (1) substituted "transferor" for "parties to a transfer", substituted requirement that certificate be filed with the department for former requirement that certificate be recorded with the county clerk and recorder, and after "certificate" inserted remainder of subsection requiring transferor to file certificate within 60 days of recording of deed or instrument evidencing transfer of real property; in (3) substituted language concerning list of transfers for "The county clerk and recorder shall cause a permanent record of the water right transfer certificate to be made"; and in (4) substituted requirement that department send reference copy of certificate to chief water judge and to county clerk and recorder in county in which transfer occurred for former requirement that county clerk and recorder send copy of certificate to department and chief water judge.

85-2-426. Fee.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 366 in (1) substituted first sentence requiring department to prescribe fee for "The department shall by rule prescribe a fee that will be no higher than necessary to cover the cost to the department of processing the water right ownership update form"; inserted (1)(a) requiring fee to be paid at closing when transfer of water right disclosed; in (1)(b) at end inserted reference to form describing severance or exempting of water right; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2008.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 70 in (1) in first sentence after "to the department" substituted "of processing the water right ownership update form" for "and the county clerk and recorder of processing the transfer certificate" and in second sentence at end substituted "water right ownership update form" for "water right transfer certificate". Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1985 Amendment: In (1) in first sentence, after "fee that", substituted "will be no higher than necessary to" for "must", after "department" inserted "and the county clerk and recorder", and in last sentence substituted "filing" for "recordation"; and in (2) substituted language concerning deposit of the fee for "The county clerk and recorder shall:

(a) collect the fee required under subsection (1) and forward it to the department to be deposited in the water right appropriation account provided for in 85-2-318; and

(b) charge and collect a recording fee as provided for in 7-4-2631 for recording the document."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 401 (Ch. 674, L. 1983) provided: "Senate Bill 401 requires a statement of intent because it provides, [in section 6 (85-2-426)] that the Board of Natural Resources and Conservation [functions now transferred to Department of Natural Resources and Conservation] must by rule prescribe a fee for the processing of a copy of a water right transfer certificate. It is the intent of the legislature that the board study the cost of processing such certificates and set the fee commensurate with the department's cost in processing a certificate. In making its cost analysis study the board should consult with the department and obtain the department's opinion as to what the department's costs will be. The fee may not be set so high that it generates revenue in excess of actual costs."

(a) provides the following data for each designated stream reach and each pilot lease entered into under subsection (2):

(i) the length of the stream reach and how it is determined;

(ii) technical methods and data used to determine critical streamflow or volume needed to preserve fisheries;

(iii) legal standards and technical data used to determine and substantiate the amount of water available for instream flows through leasing of existing rights;

(iv) contractual parameters, conditions, and other steps taken to ensure that each lease in no way harms other appropriators, particularly if the stream is one that experiences natural dewatering; and

(v) methods and technical means used to monitor use of water under each lease;

(b) based on the data provided under subsection (1)(a), develops a complete model of a water lease and lease authorization that includes a step-by-step explanation of the process from initiation to completion"; inserted (1) allowing the department of fish, wildlife, and parks to change an appropriation right; deleted former (2)(a) that read: "(2) (a) For purposes of undertaking the study described in subsection (1) and as authorized by law, the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and the department may engage in the activities described in this subsection (2). For purposes of this study, this section is the exclusive means by which the department of fish, wildlife, and parks may seek to change an appropriation right to an instream flow purpose"; inserted (2) requiring the change in purpose or place of use to meet certain criteria and process; in (3)(a) near middle after "purpose of" inserted "protecting" and at end after "benefit" substituted "the fishery resource" for "of fisheries in stream reaches determined eligible by the department pursuant to 85-2-437"; in (3)(b) in first sentence after "application for a" substituted "change in purpose of use or place of use" for "lease", in second sentence after "proposed" substituted "change in appropriation right" for "lease", at beginning of third sentence after "A" substituted "change in appropriation right" for "lease", and in fourth sentence after "authorize a" substituted "change" for "lease", after "existing" inserted "appropriation", and after "purpose of" inserted "protecting"; in (3)(c) near beginning after "application for a" substituted "change in appropriation right" for "lease" and near middle after "streamflow" substituted "is to be protected" for "must be"; in (3)(d) in first sentence after "may be" substituted "changed to instream flow" for "leased" and at end after "diverted" deleted "by the lessor" and near middle of second sentence after "in the" substituted "change in appropriation right" for "lease", after "used to" inserted "protect", after "below the" deleted "lessor's", and at end after "diversion" inserted "that existed prior to the change in appropriation right"; in (3)(e) at beginning of first sentence substituted "A lease for instream flow purposes" for "The lease", after "may" substituted "be

Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 487, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to all applications for changes in appropriation rights, permits, and water reservations received by the department of natural resources and conservation after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 14, 1995.

1995 Transition: Section 81, Ch. 545, L. 1995, provided: "(1) The members of the legislative council, as provided in 5-11-101, the members of the legislative finance committee, as provided in 5-12-202, the members of the legislative audit committee, as provided in 5-13-202, and the members of the environmental quality council, as provided in 5-16-101, must be appointed as soon as possible following [the effective date of this section] [effective April 27, 1995].

(2) To implement the changes provided in [this act], the office of the legislative council, the office of budget and program planning, and the department of administration shall establish all necessary authorizations during the accounting preparation process known as the "turnaround" process, beginning in April or May 1995, to administer the several appropriations made by any means to programs of the legislative branch agencies consolidated under [sections 3 and 4] [5-2-503 and 5-2-504] for fiscal year 1996 or 1997 or the biennium ending June 30, 1997, as appropriations to a single legislative agency while maintaining the specific identification, legislative intent, and purpose for which the appropriations were made. During this transition, the executive director may authenticate documents as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act]. Appropriate changes on the statewide budgeting and accounting system and the payroll, personnel, and position control system must also be made and authorized as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act].

(3) Personnel and property of the environmental quality council are transferred to the legislative services division effective July 1, 1995."

1993 Amendments: Chapter 175 in second sentence of (3)(a), after "lease", inserted "a summary of stream reach designation activity under 85-2-437, and a summary of leasing activity on all designated streams" and in third sentence, after "leased", inserted "additional"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Chapter 370 near beginning of (2)(b), before "application", inserted "correct and complete" and near end, before "complete application", inserted "correct and"; in (2)(f) substituted "a preponderance of evidence" for "substantial credible evidence"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 1993.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 370, L. 1993, provided: "[Sections 1 through 8] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all applications and objections pending on [the effective date of this act] [effective April 16, 1993] that are subject to the provisions of Title 85, chapter 2."

1991 Amendment: In (2)(e) increased lease term from 4 years to 10 years and after "years" substituted "but it may be renewed once for up to 10 years, except that a lease of water made available from the development of a water conservation or storage project is restricted to a term of not more than 20 years" for "but may be renewed for up to 10 years per renewal, if allowed by law and upon notification to the department. If this section terminates without reauthorization by the legislature, all leases and lease authorizations expire on the date of termination"; in (2)(f), before "lease", deleted "original"; in (2)(i), after "terms", deleted "the renewal of the lease"; in (2)(j), after "installing", deleted "measuring"; inserted (3)(a) requiring Department to submit to Board, Commission, and Water Policy Committee by December 1 annual progress report, including lease information, and requiring Department to provide compelling information justifying any water rights not leased by December 1 of any year in progress report; in (3)(b), before "study", inserted "final" and at end extended date from 1990 to 1998; inserted (4) providing that section does not create right to bring suit to compel renewal of expired lease; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1991.

Effective Date: Section 10, Ch. 658, L. 1989, provided that this section is effective May 11, 1989.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 86 in (1) near beginning of first sentence after "may" inserted "by rule" and after "modify" inserted "permanent or temporary", and inserted second sentence requiring that the rule designate controlled ground water area boundaries; in (2) at beginning of introductory clause inserted "The rulemaking process for", after "water" substituted "area" for "use", and after "may be" substituted "initiated by" for "proposed to"; in (2)(a) after "department" deleted "on its own motion, by"; in (2)(b) at beginning inserted "submission of a correct and complete"; inserted (2)(c) allowing submission of a petition by a municipality, county, conservation district, local water quality district, or certain water right holders; deleted remainder of former (2) that read: "or by petition signed by at least 20 or one-fourth of the users, whichever is the lesser number, of ground water in a ground water area in which there are alleged to be facts showing that:

(a) ground water withdrawals are in excess of recharge to the aquifer or aquifers within the ground water area;

(b) excessive ground water withdrawals are very likely to occur in the near future because of consistent and significant increases in withdrawals from within the ground water area;

(c) significant disputes regarding priority of rights, amounts of ground water in use by appropriators, or priority of type of use are in progress within the ground water area;

(d) ground water levels or pressures in the area in question are declining or have declined excessively;

(e) excessive ground water withdrawals would cause contaminant migration;

(f) ground water withdrawals adversely affecting ground water quality within the ground water area are occurring or are likely to occur; or

(g) water quality within the ground water area is not suited for a specific beneficial use defined by 85-2-102(4)(a)"; inserted (3)(a) setting out the form of the petition; in (3)(b) at beginning after "When" substituted "the department proposes a rule pursuant to this section" for "a proposal is made, the department shall fix a time and place for a hearing, which may not be less than 90 days from the making of the proposal" and before "controlled" inserted "proposed or existing"; inserted (3)(c) regarding notification and correction of petition defects; deleted former (4) that read: "(4) The department shall publish a notice of the hearing, setting forth:

(a) the names of the petitioners;

(b) the description by legal subdivisions (section, township, range) of all lands included in or proposed to be included in the ground water area or subarea;

(i) each well driller licensed in Montana whose address is within any county in which any part of the area in question is located;

(ii) each person or public agency known from an examination of the records in the department's office to be a claimant or appropriator of ground water in the area in question;

(iii) the bureau; and

(iv) the mayor or presiding officer of the governing body of each incorporated municipality located in whole or in part within the proposed ground water area"; in (4)(c)(iii) deleted former second and third sentences that read: "The petition need not be served on any petitioner. A copy of the notice, together with a copy of the proposal, must be mailed to each person at the person's last-known address, and service is complete upon depositing it in the post office, postage prepaid, addressed to each person on whom it is to be served"; in (4)(d) inserted first sentence requiring that the notice include a summary; deleted former (5)(c) that read: "(c) As used in subsection (5)(a), "claimant or appropriator" means a person who diverts, impounds, or withdraws ground water and not merely a person who uses or obtains ground water from another person who diverts, impounds, or withdraws ground water"; inserted (5) and (6) regarding designation of a permanent controlled ground water area; inserted (7) outlining control provisions of a controlled ground water area; and made minor changes in style. Indian and Federal Water Rights — Water Rights Within Indian Reservations

Rules of Procedure: The rules of procedure for the Water Courts for the state of Montana are set forth in full under 85-2-231.

Part Case Notes

DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

Exercise of Original Supreme Court Jurisdiction Based on Statewide Importance of Tribal Water Rights: The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes petitioned the Supreme Court to exercise original jurisdiction in a case involving the use of ground water on the Flathead Indian Reservation. The Supreme Court found this to be an appropriate case in which to exercise original jurisdiction because: (1) the petition implicated constitutional water rights issues under Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const.; (2) tribal water rights are of statewide importance; (3) the decisive issue was purely legal or constitutional; and (4) the normal litigation process was inadequate. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Stults, 2002 MT 280, 312 M 420, 59 P3d 1093 (2002), following In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073 (1996), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244 (1999).

Issuance of Permits for Ground Water on Indian Reservations Precluded Until Tribes' Federally Reserved Water Rights Defined and Quantified: The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) granted a permit for the use of ground water on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Despite prior holdings in In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073 (1996), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244 (1999), that the state does not have jurisdiction to issue new use permits prior to formal adjudication of the tribes' reserved water rights, DNRC contended that this case was distinguishable because the tribes' federally reserved water right concerning ground water is legally uncertain. However, the only federal authority cited by either party, Tweedy v. Tex. Co., 286 F. Supp. 383 (D.C. Mont. 1968), supported the conclusion that there is no distinction between surface water and ground water for purposes of determining what water rights are reserved because those rights are necessary to the purpose of an Indian reservation. Further, neither of the prior state cases excluded ground water. The tribes contended that as a sovereign nation, they should not be required to defend their water rights in piecemeal fashion before a hostile forum and that pursuant to 85-2-311 and the prior case law, the ground water permit was illegal. The Supreme Court agreed with the tribes and vacated the permit, finding no reason to limit the scope of the prior holdings by excluding ground water from the tribes' federally reserved water rights in this case. Two statutory methods for comprehensively adjudicating Indian reserved water rights already exist—a general inter sese adjudication or negotiations with the Montana Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission. Therefore, the tribes should not be required to defend their water rights by participating in the DNRC hearings process. Thus, DNRC cannot determine whether water is available on the Flathead Reservation, whether surface water or ground water, because DNRC cannot determine whether the issuance of permits would affect existing water rights until the tribes' preeminent water rights are defined and quantified. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Stults, 2002 MT 280, 312 M 420, 59 P3d 1093 (2002).

Quantification of Tribal Water Rights Required — 1997 Amendment Unconstitutional: In an effort to avoid the result created by In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073, 53 St. Rep. 777 (1996), the 1997 Legislature passed Senate Bill No. 97, which substantively eliminated the former protection of Indian reserved water rights provided by 85-2-311. The state conceded that the protection of existing water rights in Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., includes water rights reserved for Indian reservations and contended that those rights were not affected by Senate Bill No. 97, but rather that those rights would be considered in that part of the analysis requiring that water be legally available. The state also pointed out the provisional nature of any water use permit and alleged that there were some uses that would not diminish instream flow and that use permits could thus be issued without affecting reserved Indian water rights, regardless of the quantification of those rights. However, under State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754 (1985), it was found that Indian reserved water rights are owned by the Indians, and because that ownership interest exists under federal law and does not depend on the use of the water, the Supreme Court was not persuaded that the state's permitting process might allow uses of Indian reserved water that in the long term might not diminish instream flows. The provisional nature of permits was not determinative either because use of water that may have been reserved by federal law for the tribes was no less impermissible simply because it was temporary and subject to termination following final quantification of the tribes' rights by adjudication or negotiation. Under the 1997 amendments, permits are still limited to water that is "legally available", but that phrase is not defined. Construing the phrase in a manner that sustains its constitutional validity, the Supreme Court interpreted "legally available" to mean that there is water available that, among other things, has not been federally reserved for Indian tribes. Therefore, as in In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, the state cannot determine whether water is legally available on the Flathead Reservation because it cannot determine whether the issuance of permits would affect existing water rights until the tribes' rights are quantified by a compact negotiation under 85-2-702 or by a general inter sese water rights adjudication. To allow the issuance of water use permits on the reservation prior to quantification of the tribes' pervasive reserved right would require use of water that might belong to the tribes, in violation of Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., which protects existing water rights whether adjudicated or not. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244, 56 St. Rep. 1356 (1999).

State May Not Grant Water Use Permits on Indian Lands When Reserved Tribal Rights Not Quantified: The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation objected to the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) issuing new water use permits to nontribal members owning land in fee on the reservation. The tribes argued that 85-2-311 clearly states that an applicant for a water use permit has to demonstrate that the proposed use will not unreasonably interfere with a planned use for which the water has been reserved and that such a showing cannot be made by an applicant until the tribes reserved rights are quantified by a compact negotiated with the state pursuant to 85-2-702. The Supreme Court held that 85-2-311 does include Indian reserved water rights and that an applicant cannot show that there will be no adverse impact on tribal rights until those rights have been quantified by a negotiated compact with the state. Therefore, DNRC does not have jurisdiction to issue new use permits prior to formal adjudication of the tribes' reserved water rights. (See Ch. 497, L. 1997.) In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073, 53 St. Rep. 777 (1996), followed in Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244, 56 St. Rep. 1356 (1999). See also State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754 (1985).

State Water Court — Jurisdiction to Adjudicate Indian Reserved Water Rights: In an original proceeding to determine jurisdiction of the Water Court over Indian tribes and water flowing through state reservations, the Supreme Court held that Article I of the Montana Constitution does not bar state jurisdiction to adjudicate Indian reserved water rights. With the 1952 McCarran amendment, the U.S. Congress diminished the scope of absolute federal jurisdiction over controversies involving federal water rights by allowing state courts concurrent jurisdiction to adjudicate federal water rights. In Colo. River Water Conserv. District v. U.S., 424 US 800 (1976), the U.S. Supreme Court held that the McCarran amendment applied to Indian water rights. The state Legislature's enactment of the Water Use Act (Title 85, ch. 2) pursuant to Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., constitutes a valid and binding consent of the people of Montana to Congress' grant of state jurisdiction over Indian reserved water rights. State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754, 42 St. Rep. 1856 (1985), followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986).

Water Use Act — Adjudication of Indian and Federal Reserved Water Rights:

The Montana Water Use Act (Title 85, ch. 2) is adequate on its face to adjudicate Indian reserved water rights. Although state appropriative water rights and Indian reserved water rights differ in origin and definition, the Water Use Act, as amended, permits the Water Court to treat Indian reserved water rights differently from state appropriative rights. The Water Use Act does not state explicitly that the Water Court shall apply federal law in adjudicating Indian reserved rights; however, state courts are required to follow federal law with regard to those water rights. State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754, 42 St. Rep. 1856 (1985), followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986), and In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073, 53 St. Rep. 777 (1996).

The Montana Water Use Act (Title 85, ch. 2) is adequate on its face to adjudicate federal reserved water rights. Although federal reserved rights differ from state appropriative rights in origin, determination of priority date, and quantification standards, the Water Use Act recognizes the distinction between federal reserved rights and state-created appropriative rights. As the Act permits each different class of water rights to be treated differently, the Act is adequate to allow for adjudication of federal reserved rights. State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754, 42 St. Rep. 1856 (1985), followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986), and In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073, 53 St. Rep. 777 (1996).

Federal Reserved Water Rights — Jurisdiction Over Water Court Not Barred by Suspension Provision: After the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Ariz. v. San Carlos Apache Tribe, 463 US 545, 77 L Ed 2d 837, 103 S Ct 3201 (1983), that the McCarran amendment, 43 U.S.C. §666, removed "whatever limitations the enabling acts or federal policy may have originally placed on state court jurisdiction" over the adjudication of Indian water rights, the state requested that the Montana Supreme Court exercise its powers of supervisory control over the state Water Court concerning the adjudication of federal reserved water rights. In assuming jurisdiction, the Supreme Court ruled that the request for supervisory control is not barred by the suspension provisions of 85-2-217, as the proceeding will not generally adjudicate any Indian reserved water rights or any federal reserved water rights. This proceeding will consider the following issues: (1) is the state Water Court prohibited from exercising jurisdiction over Indian reserved water rights based on the disclaimer clause of Art. I of the Montana Constitution or otherwise; (2) is the Montana Water Use Act, Title 85, ch. 2, adequate to adjudicate federal reserved water rights; and (3) is the Montana Water Use Act adequate to adjudicate federal reserved water rights held, on its own behalf, by the United States or any of its agencies. State ex rel. Greely v. Water Court, 214 M 143, 691 P2d 833, 41 St. Rep. 2373 (1984).

State Court Jurisdiction Over Federal and Indian Water Rights: The McCarran amendment, 43 U.S.C. §666, granting state courts jurisdiction over the United States in litigation involving a comprehensive adjudication of water rights, removed "whatever limitations the enabling acts or federal policy may have originally placed on state court jurisdiction" over the adjudication of Indian water rights in actions brought by the United States on behalf of an Indian tribe as well as in actions brought by an Indian tribe itself. Assuming that the state adjudication procedure is adequate and complies with state law, dismissal of adjudication actions filed in federal District Court out of deference to state adjudication proceedings was proper. Ariz. v. San Carlos Apache Tribe, 463 US 545, 77 L Ed 2d 877, 103 S Ct 3201 (1983), reversing N. Cheyenne Tribe v. Adsit, 668 F2d 1080 (9th Cir. 1982); followed in Blackfeet Indian Nation v. Hodel, 634 F. Supp. 646, 43 St. Rep. 863 (D.C. Mont. 1986).

Appropriation on Indian Lands:

Defendant's contention that an appropriation of a water right was made on Indian lands prior to opening for settlement and therefore initiated by trespass and hence void could not be sustained because the provision of the Crow Indian treaty of 1868 that white men should be excluded from Indian lands is directory and not mandatory. Whites could be excluded if inimical to Indian welfare. It was discretionary with those charged with protecting Indian rights to take action against whites invading without the consent of the tribe. The Indian land became public domain subject to squatter's rights after ratification of agreement for settlement in 1891. Cook v. Hudson, 110 M 263, 103 P2d 137 (1940), distinguished and overruled on other grounds in Grimsley v. Estate of Spencer, 206 M 184, 670 P2d 85 (1983).

By the treaty of May 7, 1868, between the United States and the Crow Indians, establishing the Crow Indian Reservation, the federal government impliedly reserved to itself the waters thereon for irrigation and other purposes for use by the Indians, hence they were not subject to appropriation by others. The right to use water appurtenant to lands on an Indian reservation and held by Indians under trust patents is property of the United States, and state courts are without jurisdiction to enter a decree affecting such right; but when an Indian becomes seized of a fee simple title after removal of a trust patent, the conveyance of land transfers the right to use the water appurtenant to the land. Anderson v. Spear-Morgan Livestock Co., 107 M 18, 79 P2d 667 (1938).

Appropriation Made on Public Domain by Settler: A settler on lands which were a part of the public domain could make a valid appropriation of water thereon. Galahan v. Lewis, 105 M 294, 72 P2d 1018 (1937).

Method of Procedure: The United States, under section 89-808, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), must proceed, in making appropriations of water from nonnavigable streams of this state, as a corporation or individual. Bailey v. Tintinger, 45 M 154, 122 P 575 (1912). See U.S. v. Burley, 172 F 615 (9th Cir. 1909); Burley v. U.S., 179 F 1 (9th Cir. 1910). See also Mettler v. DECISIONS UNDER CURRENT LAW

State May Not Grant Water Use Permits on Indian Lands When Reserved Tribal Rights Not Quantified: The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation objected to the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) issuing new water use permits to nontribal members owning land in fee on the reservation. The tribes argued that 85-2-311 clearly states that an applicant for a water use permit has to demonstrate that the proposed use will not unreasonably interfere with a planned use for which the water has been reserved and that such a showing cannot be made by an applicant until the tribes reserved rights are quantified by a compact negotiated with the state pursuant to 85-2-702. The Supreme Court held that 85-2-311 does include Indian reserved water rights and that an applicant cannot show that there will be no adverse impact on tribal rights until those rights have been quantified by a negotiated compact with the state. Therefore, DNRC does not have jurisdiction to issue new use permits prior to formal adjudication of the tribes' reserved water rights. (See Ch. 497, L. 1997.) Case Notes

Exercise of Original Supreme Court Jurisdiction Based on Statewide Importance of Tribal Water Rights: The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes petitioned the Supreme Court to exercise original jurisdiction in a case involving the use of ground water on the Flathead Indian Reservation. The Supreme Court found this to be an appropriate case in which to exercise original jurisdiction because: (1) the petition implicated constitutional water rights issues under Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const.; (2) tribal water rights are of statewide importance; (3) the decisive issue was purely legal or constitutional; and (4) the normal litigation process was inadequate. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Stults, 2002 MT 280, 312 M 420, 59 P3d 1093 (2002), following In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073 (1996), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244 (1999).

Issuance of Permits for Ground Water on Indian Reservations Precluded Until Tribes' Federally Reserved Water Rights Defined and Quantified: The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) granted a permit for the use of ground water on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Despite prior holdings in In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073 (1996), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244 (1999), that the state does not have jurisdiction to issue new use permits prior to formal adjudication of the tribes' reserved water rights, DNRC contended that this case was distinguishable because the tribes' federally reserved water right concerning ground water is legally uncertain. However, the only federal authority cited by either party, Tweedy v. Tex. Co., 286 F. Supp. 383 (D.C. Mont. 1968), supported the conclusion that there is no distinction between surface water and ground water for purposes of determining what water rights are reserved because those rights are necessary to the purpose of an Indian reservation. Further, neither of the prior state cases excluded ground water. The tribes contended that as a sovereign nation, they should not be required to defend their water rights in piecemeal fashion before a hostile forum and that pursuant to 85-2-311 and the prior case law, the ground water permit was illegal. The Supreme Court agreed with the tribes and vacated the permit, finding no reason to limit the scope of the prior holdings by excluding ground water from the tribes' federally reserved water rights in this case. Two statutory methods for comprehensively adjudicating Indian reserved water rights already exist—a general inter sese adjudication or negotiations with the Montana Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission. Therefore, the tribes should not be required to defend their water rights by participating in the DNRC hearings process. Thus, DNRC cannot determine whether water is available on the Flathead Reservation, whether surface water or ground water, because DNRC cannot determine whether the issuance of permits would affect existing water rights until the tribes' preeminent water rights are defined and quantified. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Stults, 2002 MT 280, 312 M 420, 59 P3d 1093 (2002).

Quantification of Tribal Water Rights Required — 1997 Amendment Unconstitutional: In an effort to avoid the result created by In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, 278 M 50, 923 P2d 1073, 53 St. Rep. 777 (1996), the 1997 Legislature passed Senate Bill No. 97, which substantively eliminated the former protection of Indian reserved water rights provided by 85-2-311. The state conceded that the protection of existing water rights in Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., includes water rights reserved for Indian reservations and contended that those rights were not affected by Senate Bill No. 97, but rather that those rights would be considered in that part of the analysis requiring that water be legally available. The state also pointed out the provisional nature of any water use permit and alleged that there were some uses that would not diminish instream flow and that use permits could thus be issued without affecting reserved Indian water rights, regardless of the quantification of those rights. However, under State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754 (1985), it was found that Indian reserved water rights are owned by the Indians, and because that ownership interest exists under federal law and does not depend on the use of the water, the Supreme Court was not persuaded that the state's permitting process might allow uses of Indian reserved water that in the long term might not diminish instream flows. The provisional nature of permits was not determinative either because use of water that may have been reserved by federal law for the tribes was no less impermissible simply because it was temporary and subject to termination following final quantification of the tribes' rights by adjudication or negotiation. Under the 1997 amendments, permits are still limited to water that is "legally available", but that phrase is not defined. Construing the phrase in a manner that sustains its constitutional validity, the Supreme Court interpreted "legally available" to mean that there is water available that, among other things, has not been federally reserved for Indian tribes. Therefore, as in In re Application for Beneficial Water Use Permit, the state cannot determine whether water is legally available on the Flathead Reservation because it cannot determine whether the issuance of permits would affect existing water rights until the tribes' rights are quantified by a compact negotiation under this section or by a general inter sese water rights adjudication. To allow the issuance of water use permits on the reservation prior to quantification of the tribes' pervasive reserved right would require use of water that might belong to the tribes, in violation of Art. IX, sec. 3, Mont. Const., which protects existing water rights whether adjudicated or not. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. Clinch, 1999 MT 342, 297 M 448, 992 P2d 244, 56 St. Rep. 1356 (1999).

State May Not Grant Water Use Permits on Indian Lands When Reserved Tribal Rights Not Quantified: The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation objected to the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) issuing new water use permits to nontribal members owning land in fee on the reservation. The tribes argued that 85-2-311 clearly states that an applicant for a water use permit has to demonstrate that the proposed use will not unreasonably interfere with a planned use for which the water has been reserved and that such a showing cannot be made by an applicant until the tribes reserved rights are quantified by a compact negotiated with the state pursuant to this section. The Supreme Court held that 85-2-311 does include Indian reserved water rights and that an applicant cannot show that there will be no adverse impact on tribal rights until those rights have been quantified by a negotiated compact with the state. Therefore, DNRC does not have jurisdiction to issue new use permits prior to formal adjudication of the tribes' reserved water rights. (See Ch. 497, L. 1997.) 2007 Amendment: Chapter 432 in (4)(a) before "the proceeds" deleted "$366,000 of", before "the interest earnings" deleted "$300,000 of", and after "15-38-202" deleted "unless at the beginning of the fiscal year the unobligated cash balance in the ground water assessment account:

(i) equals or exceeds $666,000, in which case an allocation may not be made and the proceeds must be deposited in the resource indemnity trust fund established by 15-38-201; or

(ii) is less than $666,000, in which case an amount equal to the difference between the unobligated cash balance and $666,000 must be allocated to the ground water assessment account and any remaining amount must be deposited in the resource indemnity trust fund established by 15-38-201"; deleted former (4)(c) that read: "(c) proceeds allocated to the account as provided in 15-38-106"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 522 in (4)(c) before "15-38-106" deleted "15-36-324 and". Amendment effective April 26, 2003.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 21, Ch. 522, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to tax revenue derived from oil and natural gas production occurring after December 31, 2002."

Contingent Effective Date: Section 13(3), Ch. 552, L. 1999, provided: "If the funding switch described in [section 12(1)] does not occur, then [section 8] [85-2-905] is effective July 1 of the first year following the date that the governor by executive order certifies to the secretary of state that the resource indemnity trust fund balance has reached $100 million. The secretary of state shall notify the department of revenue, the department of administration, the code commissioner, and the legislative fiscal division of this certification." On February 27, 2002, the Governor certified that the balance in the resource indemnity trust fund had reached $100 million.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 552 in (4)(a) substituted "$366,000" for "14.1%" and substituted "and $300,000 of the interest earnings from the resource indemnity trust fund, as authorized by 15-38-202" for "and 2.2% of the proceeds from the metalliferous mines license taxes, as authorized by 15-37-117". Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

The amendment to this section made by Ch. 144, L. 1999, was rendered void by sec. 12(2), Ch. 552, L. 1999, a coordination section.

1997 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 42 in (1), in first sentence, substituted "special revenue fund" for "state special revenue fund"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Chapter 444 in (4)(a)(i) substituted "proceeds" for "funds"; in (4)(b) substituted "by state government agencies" for "by federal or state government agencies"; inserted (4)(c) relating to proceeds allocated to the ground water assessment account by 15-36-324 and 15-38-106; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose the more appropriate.

The amendments to this section made by sec. 5, Ch. 120, L. 1997, were rendered void by sec. 7, Ch. 542, L. 1997, a coordination section.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 31 at beginning of (4)(a) deleted "on July 1, 1993, and", after "each" deleted "succeeding", and near middle inserted language directing 2.2% of metalliferous mines license tax proceeds to the ground water assessment account; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 6, 1995.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 31, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all metalliferous mines taxes collected after December 31, 1994."

Appropriation: Section 18, Ch. 769, L. 1991, provided: "There is appropriated to the Montana bureau of mines and geology for the biennium ending June 30, 1993, all funds in the ground water assessment account, established in [section 4] [85-2-905], in the state special revenue fund, for purposes of establishing a ground water monitoring program and a ground water characterization program."

Coordination Instruction: Section 20, Ch. 769, L. 1991, provided: "If Senate Bill No. 407 is passed and approved and does not contain a provision that allocates a portion of public water supply system fees to the ground water assessment account, then [section 4(4)(d) of this act] [85-2-905(4)(d) (temporary version)] is void." Senate Bill No. 407 was approved April 26, 1991, as Ch. 645, L. 1991, and included a provision allocating fees to the ground water assessment account. Therefore, 85-2-905(4)(d) (temporary version) is valid.

Effective Date: Section 21(1), Ch. 769, L. 1991, provided that the temporary version of this section is effective July 1, 1991.

Termination: Section 22, Ch. 769, L. 1991, provided that subsections (4)(a) through (4)(d) of this section terminate July 1, 1993. Chapter 769, L. 1991, enacted two versions of the ground water assessment account. The effect of the termination provided in sec. 22, Ch. 769, L. 1991, is the implementation of the 1993 version of 85-2-905.

(2) A person whose existing rights are determined in a temporary preliminary decree or a preliminary decree issued before [the effective date of this act] [effective April 21, 1989] may petition the water judge for relief concerning any matter in the decree prior to enforcement of the decree."

1983 Amendment: In (2), after "district court" deleted "which issued the final decree"; and in (4), inserted ", including permittees and certificate holders".

Case Notes

Distribution of Waters: In an action by landowners against the State Water Conservation Board (precursor of the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation), for declaration of the respective rights of the parties to waters in a creek, plaintiffs alleged that the defendant's refusal to unlock the headgate to a ditch rendered it impossible for the Water Commissioner to measure and distribute the waters in question. Defendant's denial of this material allegation precluded a judgment on the pleadings. Johnson v. St. Water Conserv. Bd., 140 M 603, 374 P2d 325 (1962).

Persons Concluded by Decree:

Any act of the judge or of any Water Commissioner appointed by him done in violation of the plain mandate of the statute, which gives to the Commissioner authority to admeasure and distribute to the parties bound by the decree or decrees the waters to which they are entitled under the decrees, cannot be relied upon by a person to establish his claimed right to the prior use of waters by adverse possession. Lamping v. Diehl, 126 M 193, 246 P2d 230 (1952).

On certiorari, where landowner, who was not a party to an original water right suit or a successor in interest of a party thereto but who claimed a right under an appropriation the legality of which had not been a subject of litigation, tapped the stream and when advised by Water Commissioner that water in stream was insufficient for needs of those with decreed rights, continued in its use, a finding that he was guilty of contempt was not warranted in the absence of a showing that he interfered with the Commissioner in performance of his duties. State ex rel. Reeder v. District Court, 100 M 376, 47 P2d 653 (1935).

A person not mentioned in the decree, who joined in a petition for the appointment of the Water Commissioner and afterward refused to respect the decree, made himself a party thereto and was liable to be punished in contempt proceedings. State ex rel. Pool v. District Court, 34 M 258, 86 P 798 (1906).

Contempt in County Other Than Where Decree Made: Where the violation of the decree of the District Court of Cascade County was committed in Lewis and Clark County, the courts of Lewis and Clark County may punish for the violation. Contempts, being criminal in their nature, must be tried in the county where they were committed. State ex rel. Swanson v. District Court, 107 M 203, 82 P2d 779 (1938).

River and Tributaries Flowing in Several Counties: Where a river and its tributaries flowed in three counties, the District Court of any one of the counties had jurisdiction to adjudicate the water rights on the whole watershed. The court which first acquired jurisdiction retained it for the purpose of disposing of the whole controversy, and no court of coordinate power could interfere with its action. Such court "having jurisdiction" appoints the Water Commissioner to enforce its decree. This rule does not apply to rights not adjudicated in that decree. State ex. rel. Swanson v. District Court, 107 M 203, 82 P2d 779 (1938).

Nature of Proceedings:

Procedure under Montana statutes authorizing an owner or user of waters of an adjudicated stream who is dissatisfied with the method of distribution to file a written claim in the appropriate court and providing for a hearing and the making of appropriate findings and orders is not a formal trial but is more in the nature of proceedings ancillary to an original decree adjudicating rights on the stream. Sain v. Mont. Power Co., 84 F2d 126 (9th Cir. 1936).

In a proceeding brought under this act, relating to the appointment and duties of Water Commissioners, by one owning or using an adjudicated water right who is dissatisfied with the method of distribution of the waters in a stream by a Commissioner, a formal trial, upon pleadings filed by the interested parties, is not contemplated. The only pleading required is the complaint, and the sole question for determination is whether the Commissioner has distributed the waters in accordance with the decree. Other users may present themselves at the hearing and resist the demands of a complainant orally if they object to the granting of relief. Gans & Klein Inv. Co. v. Sanford, 91 M 512, 8 P2d 808 (1932).

Contempt Proceeding Not Procedure to Adjudicate Water Rights: A Water Commissioner does not possess complete and exclusive jurisdiction to control the stream, regardless of whether all rights are adjudicated under court decree fixing measurement of water. Nor may the District Court in a contempt proceeding, summary in nature, decide that contemnor claiming right in stream, otherwise adjudicated, has no right. This may be done only by appropriate action after due notice and hearing. State ex rel. Reeder v. District Court, 100 M 376, 47 P2d 653 (1935), distinguished in Clausen v. Armington, 123 M 1, 212 P2d 440 (1949).

Damages for Impairment of Water Rights: The provisions relating to the appointment of a Water Commissioner and prescribing his duties and powers do not provide an exclusive remedy for one whose water rights have been impaired and therefore do not preclude him from maintaining an action for damages. Tucker v. Missoula Light & Ry., 77 M 91, 250 P 11 (1926), distinguished in Sain v. Mont. Power Co., 20 F. Supp. 843 (D.C. Mont. 1937).

No Authority of Water Commissioner to Rule on Water Quality Issues: A water commissioner is not vested with authority to rule on water quality issues. In re Water Complaint of Kelly, 2010 MT 14, 355 Mont. 86, 224 P.3d 640, clarifying Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 Mont. 495, 103 P.2d 1067, and Morrison v. Higbee, 204 Mont. 515, 668 P.2d 1025.

Recharge of River — Right to Use of Water by Subsequent Appropriator Even Though No Water Available to Upstream Prior Appropriator: A Water Commissioner closed the headgate of the Baker Ditch Company, a downstream appropriator with decreed water rights, because there was no water available to an upstream superior appropriator, even though there was water available to the Company due to recharge of the river by return flows, seepage, and other sources. The Commissioner evidently believed that he had to enforce the decree to the extent that if a prior appropriator was without water upstream, a subsequent appropriator downstream could not divert water under its rights even though the river was being recharged. However, if a subsequent appropriator is using water in accordance with the decree and that use cannot in any way be a detriment to a prior appropriator, then the subsequent appropriator has the right to the use of the water. Baker Ditch Co. v. District Court, 251 M 251, 824 P2d 260, 49 St. Rep. 17 (1992), replacing the prior opinion at 48 St. Rep. 972 (1991).

Expiration of Commissioner's Term — Action Not Rendered Invalid: The purpose of this section is to provide a uniform, equitable, and economical distribution of adjudicated, stored, and supplemental waters. In order to assure this type of distribution, instructions given by a District Court must be binding upon the office of the Water Commissioner, not merely upon the individual holding the office at a particular time. Thus the filing of an action to clarify decreed rights subsequent to the expiration of a Commissioner's term does not render the action invalid. Luppold v. Lewis, 172 M 280, 563 P2d 538 (1977).

Case Notes

Power of Commissioner Appointed in Another County: The fact that a Water Commissioner is by this section vested with the same power of arrest as is a Sheriff or Constable, whose powers are confined to their counties, does not militate against the holding that the District Court of one county may appoint a Commissioner in another county to which his duties are wholly confined. One violating a water right decree will not be heard to say that his arrest should have been accomplished by some other officer. State ex rel. Swanson v. District Court, 107 M 203, 82 P2d 779 (1938).

Offender Liable to Injured Party for Damages: It is true that under the authority vested in him by this section the Commissioner may arrest an offender for interference with such distribution and take him before the court for punishment, but such action does not in any manner compensate the party injured by the unlawful act of the culprit and therefore does not preclude him from maintaining an action for damages. Tucker v. Missoula Light & Ry., 77 M 91, 250 P 11 (1926), distinguished in Sain v. Mont. Power Co., 20 F. Supp. 843 (D.C. Mont. 1937).

Nonjudicial Officer: This section does not constitute Water Commissioners judicial officers in the sense that violations of their orders are contempts committed in the immediate view and presence of the court. State ex rel. Flynn v. District Court, 33 M 115, 82 P 450 (1905).

Court Allowed to Assess Lands in Another County: The District Court of one county has power to make an assessment for costs and expenses against lands situated in another county benefited by appointment of a Water Commissioner, thereby creating liens upon such lands. Case Notes

No Authority of Water Commissioner to Rule on Water Quality Issues: A water commissioner is not vested with authority to rule on water quality issues. In re Water Complaint of Kelly, 2010 MT 14, 355 Mont. 86, 224 P.3d 640, clarifying Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 Mont. 495, 103 P.2d 1067, and Morrison v. Higbee, 204 Mont. 515, 668 P.2d 1025.

Objections to State Conduct in Issuing Water Rights Permit or Providing Information Regarding Permit Outside Scope of Dissatisfied Water User Complaint Process: Any objections to the conduct of the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation in issuing water rights permits or in providing information regarding the permit are outside the scope of the informal dissatisfied water user complaint process. In re Water Complaint of Kelly, 2010 MT 14, 355 Mont. 86, 224 P.3d 640.

Jurisdiction of District Court to "Update" Old Water Rights Decree — Statute Governing Complaints by Dissatisfied Users Inapplicable: Pursuant to a previous writ of supervisory control, a remand to the District Court, and findings entered by the Senior Water Master, the Supreme Court found that the Order Authorizing Updated Decree, entered by the judges of the Fourth Judicial District in January of 1989, was beyond the jurisdiction of the District Court. The order was intended to deal with the problem of a 1902 water rights decree by a District Court, in which the judge adjudicated 27 water rights on Carlton Creek, that had become so brittle with age and damaged by time that the decree could not be readily handled. In the process of updating and reissuing the 1902 order, the Supreme Court found that the Fourth Judicial District Judges had actually made a de facto adjudication of water rights in an overly appropriated drainage and that that adjudication had been undertaken without notice and hearing to the holders of certain of those water rights. Citing Mildenberger v. Galbraith, 249 M 161, 815 P2d 130 (1991), and Baker Ditch Co. v. District Court, 251 M 251, 824 P2d 260 (1992), the Supreme Court held that under 85-2-234(6), it is within the sole jurisdiction of the Water Court to determine such things as priority dates, flow rates, place of use, and means of diversion with respect to a water right. The Supreme Court also held that the matters adjudicated by the decree were not within the scope of matters cognizable under this section because that section concerns the correct administration of a water rights decree while the Updated Decree attempts to change the terms of the decree itself. For these reasons, the Supreme Court vacated the 1989 Updated Decree. State ex rel. Jones v. District Court, 283 M 1, 938 P2d 1312, 54 St. Rep. 460 (1997).

Continuance of Water Use Case Properly Denied: On October 7, 4 days before a scheduled hearing on charges of contempt of the order of a Water Commissioner, counsel for relator sent a letter notifying the court that his schedule would prevent him from appearing and requesting that the hearing be continued until November 4 or 18, approximately 1 month later. However, the court properly denied the request in light of the fact that the continuance would have left relator in sole possession and use of all waters of the creek for over a month at a time when very little remained of the irrigation season. Marks v. District Court, 239 M 428, 781 P2d 249, 46 St. Rep. 1804 (1989).

Knowledge of Water Commissioner's Directives and Procedures Sufficient to Uphold Contempt Charge: A water user's participation in many water controversies over a period of several years, his continuing refusal to abide by a Water Commissioner's directives, and his prior knowledge of procedures involving water Commissioners and Water Courts provided sufficient substantial evidence for a lower court to find that the water user was in contempt of court for failing to obey an order of a Water Commissioner. Marks v. District Court, 239 M 428, 781 P2d 249, 46 St. Rep. 1804 (1989).

Proceedings to Be Informal: The procedure in a dissatisfied water user's action filed under this section is informal. Since standard trial procedures are not followed in this informal, summary proceeding, the time limits governing posttrial procedures should not be strictly applied. Morrison v. Higbee, 204 M 501, 668 P2d 1029, 40 St. Rep. 1031 (1983).

Scope of Court's Authority in Dissatisfied Water User's Action: The purpose of a dissatisfied water user's action is to enforce the original decree and oversee the Water Commissioner's distribution of water through properly maintained ditches, headgates, and other water measuring devices. In an action of this type, it was appropriate for a District Court to order the removal of trees and brush on an irrigation ditchbank when the purpose of the removal was to enhance the method of distribution of water. Morrison v. Higbee, 204 M 501, 668 P2d 1029, 40 St. Rep. 1031 (1983).

Court's Findings Exceeding Scope of Section: Findings based upon facts and occurrences subsequent to the decree under consideration and those outside of the pleadings, record, and judgment role of that decree exceeded the scope of this section. Luppold v. Lewis, 172 M 280, 563 P2d 538 (1977).

Evidence Sufficient to Establish Interference With Water Commissioner: Evidence that a water user locked and rendered inoperative headgate controls at the diversion point from a creek was sufficient to establish that the water user interfered with and hindered the duties of the Water Commissioner. Luppold v. Lewis, 172 M 280, 563 P2d 538 (1977).

Expiration of Commissioner's Term — Action Not Rendered Invalid: The purpose of this section is to provide a uniform, equitable, and economical distribution of adjudicated, stored, and supplemental waters, and in order to assure this type of distribution, instructions given by a District Court must be binding upon the office of the Water Commissioner, not merely upon the individual holding the office at a particular time. Thus the filing of an action to clarify decreed rights subsequent to the expiration of a Commissioner's term does not render the action invalid. Luppold v. Lewis, 172 M 280, 563 P2d 538 (1977).

Notice to All Water Users on a Creek: The District Court is not required to give notice in an action for clarification of a 1890 water rights decree to all water users on a creek under the prior decree. Specifically, notice is not required to be given to users who have not questioned a Water Commissioner's authority and whose rights are not adversely affected. Luppold v. Lewis, 172 M 280, 563 P2d 538 (1977).

Prior Decree Uncertain: The purpose of an action pursuant to this section is not to adjudicate water rights previously determined by decree but only to enforce the rights determined by the prior decree. Thus, in determining whether a Water Commissioner properly distributed water, a District Court must look to two factors: (1) what was adjudged in the former proceeding and decree; and (2) was the Water Commissioner distributing the water in accordance with what was adjudged. As to the first factor, the absence of identifying the respective lands of the water owners is sufficient by itself to support the District Court's finding that the prior decree was uncertain in meaning and susceptible of different interpretations. Luppold v. Lewis, 172 M 280, 563 P2d 538 (1977).

Standing: Plaintiff has standing to pursue an action under this section on the basis that he is dissatisfied with the method of distribution of a Water Commissioner and that plaintiff's entitlement to more water is in jeopardy. Plaintiff may also have standing if he is dissatisfied with the method of distribution of the Water Commissioner and his entitlement to a right prior to that allowed him by a Water Commissioner is being challenged. Luppold v. Lewis, 172 M 280, 563 P2d 538 (1977).

Counterclaim Denied: A counterclaim against a petition of an irrigation district for additional appropriation of water was properly denied where evidence was uncontradicted that water was going to waste and that impoundment would be beneficial. Sunset Irrigation District v. Ailport, 166 M 11, 531 P2d 1349 (1974).

Purpose of Summary Proceeding: The District Court had no authority in a proceeding under this section to approve a method of distribution which changed the point of diversion of water to a tract and changed the transportation ditch thereto, because the only function of the court in such a proceeding is to determine whether the water involved is being allocated in compliance with existing decrees and not to decree new water rights. Allen v. Wampler, 143 M 486, 392 P2d 82 (1964).

Purpose Not to Adjudicate Water Rights: The purpose of the summary proceeding authorized by this section is not to adjudicate water rights determined by prior decrees or, under the guise of instructions to the Commissioner after hearing, to summarily subordinate the right of one to that of another where, as between the two, their rights have never been adjudicated. A Water Commissioner is as disinterested in such proceeding as a stakeholder or interpleader and may not champion the rights of an owner whose rights have never been adjudicated and who had no notice and did not appear at the hearing. State ex rel. McKnight v. District Court, 111 M 520, 111 P2d 292 (1941).

Real Parties in Interest: As in the case of an injunction action against a Water Commissioner, so in a proceeding under this section, the real parties interested are the parties whose water rights are affected. The constitutional right of due process cannot be abridged by the court's instructing the Water Commissioner in a manner subordinating the right of one to that of another to conform to a decree to which the former was not a party, merely because time and expense would be consumed in litigation between users whose rights between themselves have not been adjudicated. State ex rel. McKnight v. District Court, 111 M 520, 111 P2d 292 (1941).

Appropriations in Anticipation of Future Needs: When the intention is made manifest, the court must take into consideration prospective or future needs in entering a water right decree, and a mere description of lands does not justify the extended use of water in the absence of recitals in the pleadings and decree and proof in the record that the appropriation is made in anticipation of future needs. In reviewing the acts of the Water Commissioner in distributing water, in a proceeding under this section, reasonable diligence must be shown to have been exercised since entry of the decree in developing such needs. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

Diversion Into Fishpond Without Outlet Constituting Unauthorized New Appropriation: Where, after the appointment of a Water Commissioner, there never was more than enough water in an adjudicated stream to supply the needs of the parties under their adjudicated rights, a diversion of water therefrom by one of them into a fishpond which had no outlet constituted an attempted new appropriation under sections 89-829 through 89-838, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), which in the absence of a decree establishing it was unauthorized and therefore properly prohibited by an order of a court in a proceeding under this section. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

Reference to Entire Record to Construe Obscure or Uncertain Decree: In construing a water right decree which is lacking in certain elements or obscure and uncertain in meaning, the Supreme Court, on appeal from orders of the District Court in a proceeding under this section relating to the actions of a Water Commissioner in distributing water to claimants whose rights were adjudicated in prior decrees, may refer to the pleadings, judgment roll, or the entire record of the case. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

Rule as to Extended Use of Water Irrespective of the Rights of Others: Owners of decreed rights are not entitled to increase the use of the water decreed on additional lands even if they do not exceed their decreed quota per unit of time, when to do so would result in injury to subsequent appropriators. The decreed right is limited to water taken and beneficially applied on lands either in actual or contemplated irrigation at the time it was decreed. Quigley v. McIntosh, 110 M 495, 103 P2d 1067 (1940).

Jurisdiction Federal Court May Entertain: That a prior decree of a state court settling water priorities in a particular stream permanently enjoined parties thereto from interfering with rights of each other did not preclude federal court from entertaining jurisdiction of a suit to have the power company's rights adjudged inferior to plaintiffs', in view of holdings of state court authorizing independent actions, notwithstanding prior injunction; nor does the fact that state court had appointed a Water Commissioner and through him was still exercising jurisdiction over the res preclude exercise of jurisdiction, especially where state laws did not contemplate that his adjustment of water rights should be exclusive. Sain v. Mont. Power Co., 84 F2d 126 (9th Cir. 1936).

Questions to Be Determined: In a proceeding under this section, the primary questions for consideration by the trial court are: (1) what was adjudged in the former proceeding and decree; and (2) was the Water Commissioner distributing the water in accordance with what was there adjudged. Brennan v. Jones, 101 M 550, 55 P2d 697 (1936).

Jurisdiction of District Court: In a proceeding brought under this section by a dissatisfied water user against a Water Commissioner appointed to admeasure the waters of a tributary of a river, defendant's contention that his refusal to distribute water to plaintiff was justified by the fact that the tributary flowed entirely in his county and that therefore the District Court of a neighboring county was without jurisdiction to render the decree upon which plaintiff relied as the basis of his water right was without merit. Whitcomb v. Murphy, 94 M 562, 23 P2d 980 (1933), distinguished in State ex rel. Swanson v. District Court, 107 M 203, 82 P2d 779 (1938).

Claimant to Be Able to Use Water Before He May Object to the Use by Others: Until a claimant is himself in a position to use the water of a stream subject to appropriation, the right to the water or water right does not exist in such sense that the mere diversion of the water by another is a ground of action either to recover the water or for damages for its diversion. Miles v. Butte Elec. & Power Co., 32 M 56, 79 P 549 (1905).

Case Notes

Scope of Court's Authority in Dissatisfied Water User's Action: The purpose of a dissatisfied water user's action is to enforce the original decree and oversee the Water Commissioner's distribution of water through properly maintained ditches, headgates, and other water measuring devices. In an action of this type, it was appropriate for a District Court to order the removal of trees and brush on an irrigation ditchbank when the purpose of the removal was to enhance the method of distribution of water. Morrison v. Higbee, 204 M 501, 668 P2d 1029, 40 St. Rep. 1031 (1983).

Police Regulation: This section requiring the installation of headgates and measuring boxes in ditches by persons using water from a stream under a decree where a Water Commissioner has been appointed is in the nature of a police regulation, under which the Commissioner may refuse to distribute water to one who fails to do so. It does not license a stranger to appropriate water to his own use from a stream merely because an owner of a right has not complied with such requirement. Tucker v. Missoula Light & Ry., 77 M 91, 250 P 11 (1926).

Part 4
Water Ditches Under Joint or Corporate Control

Part Case Notes

Irrigation Contract — Interpretation of Limitations on Water Usage: In an action against an irrigation company, plaintiff irrigator claimed the company had violated its contract by failing to provide him with sufficient water to irrigate his land, the District Court did not err in holding that it was the plaintiff who violated the contract since there was substantial evidence showing that the blockage of the irrigation ditch by the plaintiff resulted in the plaintiff's taking of more than the 400 miner's inches of water a year allowed by the contract. The District Court did err, however, in prohibiting the plaintiff from diverting water by pumping and from irrigating land not historically irrigated. There was no language in the contract restricting the method of irrigation or the number or location of acres to be irrigated. As long as the plaintiff used no more water than his contractual entitlement, the District Court could not limit the means or place of irrigation. Griffel v. Cove Ditch Co., 207 M 348, 675 P2d 90, 41 St. Rep. 1 (1984).

CHAPTER 6
WATER USERS' ASSOCIATIONS

Chapter Case Notes

Irrigation Contract — Interpretation of Limitations on Water Usage: In an action against an irrigation company, plaintiff irrigator claimed the company had violated its contract by failing to provide him with sufficient water to irrigate his land, the District Court did not err in holding that it was the plaintiff who violated the contract since there was substantial evidence showing that the blockage of the irrigation ditch by the plaintiff resulted in the plaintiff's taking of more than the 400 miner's inches of water a year allowed by the contract. The District Court did err, however, in prohibiting the plaintiff from diverting water by pumping and from irrigating land not historically irrigated. There was no language in the contract restricting the method of irrigation or the number or location of acres to be irrigated. As long as the plaintiff used no more water than his contractual entitlement, the District Court could not limit the means or place of irrigation. Griffel v. Cove Ditch Co., 207 M 348, 675 P2d 90, 41 St. Rep. 1 (1984).

Case Notes

No Negligence by Irrigation District for Failure to Warn of Unforeseeable Flood: Plaintiffs' property was damaged by an unprecedented flood caused by an ice jam on the Clark Fork River. Plaintiffs alleged that the local irrigation district was liable for breaching its duty to construct and maintain an irrigation system that would protect the property and for failing to warn of the flooding conditions to allow plaintiffs the opportunity to protect their property. The District Court held that the irrigation district had no duty to prevent the flood or to warn of the impending natural disaster, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The first element that plaintiffs must establish in a negligence action is the existence of a duty of care, and the measure of a duty of care owed is the scope of the risk that the negligent conduct foreseeably entails. Thus, the primary factor in determining whether the irrigation district owed a duty of care was whether it was foreseeable, as a matter of law, that the district's acts or omissions would pose a risk of injury to plaintiffs. Here, substantial evidence supported the conclusion that the risk that flooding would damage plaintiffs' property was unforeseeable, so the district had no duty to erect or maintain flood control structures to prevent the unforeseeable event. The district also exercised reasonable care in the maintenance of the irrigation system that was in place. Further, plaintiffs failed to advance any applicable authority that would impose upon the district a duty to warn of the unforeseeable flood because mere knowledge of the dangerous situation, of which plaintiffs themselves had become aware the night of the flood, did not impose a legal duty to warn. Gaudreau v. Clinton Irrigation District, 2001 MT 164, 306 M 121, 30 P3d 1070 (2001), following Estate of Strever v. Cline, 278 M 165, 924 P2d 666 (1996).

Liability of Users' Association Not Exclusive: This section does not preclude liability of a third party for the safe operation of an irrigation ditch by an incorporated users' association. It merely precludes liability of the state of Montana for injuries allegedly caused by its regulation of such companies. Limberhand v. Big Ditch Co., 218 M 132, 706 P2d 491, 42 St. Rep. 1460 (1985).

1981 Amendment: In (5) inserted "sell, or otherwise dispose of" after "abandon" near the beginning, inserted "a water users'" before "association" near the beginning, inserted the second sentence requiring that before action is taken to abandon, sell, or dispose of a project which involves a water user's association, the Department receive a petition approving the abandonment, sale, or disposition, signed by stockholders representing 66 ⅔% or more of the issued and outstanding association stock, substituted "final proposal of abandonment, sale, or other disposal" for "notice of abandonment" in the last sentence, and inserted "sold, or otherwise disposed of" after "abandoned" in the last sentence.

IRRIGATION DISTRICTS

Chapter Case Notes

No Negligence by Irrigation District for Failure to Warn of Unforeseeable Flood: Plaintiffs' property was damaged by an unprecedented flood caused by an ice jam on the Clark Fork River. Plaintiffs alleged that the local irrigation district was liable for breaching its duty to construct and maintain an irrigation system that would protect the property and for failing to warn of the flooding conditions to allow plaintiffs the opportunity to protect their property. The District Court held that the irrigation district had no duty to prevent the flood or to warn of the impending natural disaster, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The first element that plaintiffs must establish in a negligence action is the existence of a duty of care, and the measure of a duty of care owed is the scope of the risk that the negligent conduct foreseeably entails. Thus, the primary factor in determining whether the irrigation district owed a duty of care was whether it was foreseeable, as a matter of law, that the district's acts or omissions would pose a risk of injury to plaintiffs. Here, substantial evidence supported the conclusion that the risk that flooding would damage plaintiffs' property was unforeseeable, so the district had no duty to erect or maintain flood control structures to prevent the unforeseeable event. The district also exercised reasonable care in the maintenance of the irrigation system that was in place. Further, plaintiffs failed to advance any applicable authority that would impose upon the district a duty to warn of the unforeseeable flood because mere knowledge of the dangerous situation, of which plaintiffs themselves had become aware the night of the flood, did not impose a legal duty to warn. Gaudreau v. Clinton Irrigation District, 2001 MT 164, 306 M 121, 30 P3d 1070 (2001), following Estate of Strever v. Cline, 278 M 165, 924 P2d 666 (1996).

Irrigation Districts Special, Limited-Purpose Units of Government — Freeholder Requirement for Qualifications of Commissioners Constitutional — Reasonable Relationship Standard Applied: The freeholder requirement under 85-7-1501 does not violate the right to equal protection under the federal constitution. Montana irrigation districts are special, limited-purpose units of government whose activities have a disproportionate effect on landowners in the districts as a group. It is appropriate to depart from the usual strict scrutiny standard applied to statutes impacting on a citizen's right to vote and to analyze the freeholder requirement of 85-7-1501 under the reasonable relationship standard. Johnson v. Killingsworth, 271 M 1, 894 P2d 272, 52 St. Rep. 274 (1995).

Importance of Control of Distribution by District: The most important function of an irrigation district is the control, to the mutual advantage of all the members, of the irrigation system. Water rights remain with the private appropriator, but control lies exclusively with the district. In re Establishment & Organization of Ward Irrigation District, 216 M 315, 701 P2d 721, 42 St. Rep. 824 (1985).

Relationship Between District Rights and Nondistrict Rights: A portion of the Fosses' ranch is included in the irrigation district and a portion is not. The part of the ranch not in the district has water rights, which precede the district rights, in two creeks, which during part of the year spill into the district's system. Further, a segment of the district's ditch follows the natural channel of one of the creeks. The Fosses habitually have conveyed their nondistrict water through the ditch, and the district has delivered water to Foss land not included within the district through a district headgate. In 1979, a dispute arose over control of the headgate. The District Court ruled that the Fosses had no legal right to use of the district's distribution system. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case for further proceedings in accordance with its ruling that the Fosses may convey their nondistrict water rights to the district and that the district has the obligation to deliver that water. If the ditch is too small to service the district and other water rights, the Fosses should not be required to bear any burden of expansion. In re Establishment & Organization of Ward Irrigation District, 216 M 315, 701 P2d 721, 42 St. Rep. 824 (1985).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Voting Procedure Based on Land Ownership Not Violative of "One Man, One Vote" Constitutional Provisions: Montana's weighting of votes according to the size of land holdings in irrigation district elections does not violate the "one man, one vote" requirement of the U.S. Constitution. In upholding the weighted voting scheme in a similar case, the U.S. Supreme Court held in Salyer Land Co. v. Tulare Lake Basin Water Storage District, 410 US 719 (1973), that where the tax burden fell unequally according to the size of the land holdings, it was not unreasonable for the votes to be weighted according to the size of the land holdings. 42 A.G. Op. 47 (1987).

Part 1
Creation of Districts — Generally

85-7-101. Creation of irrigation districts by percentage of titleholders.

Case Notes

Inclusion of State School Lands: The Legislature has always assumed that it had authority to fix the policy as to whether state lands, as a matter of justice and equity, should be included in irrigation districts and subject to assessments, as was done by section 2401, R.C.M. 1907, section 4014, R.C.M. 1921, and Ch. 58, L. 1929. Sections 2401 and 4014, supra, were later repealed. In the instant case, section 4014, supra, could not apply to a district created in 1911 under Ch. 146, L. 1909, and in absence of specific legislation on the subject at the time plaintiff district was created, there was no authority for including state lands in the district subject to lien for assessments. Tongue River & Yellowstone River Irrigation District v. Hyslop, 109 M 190, 96 P2d 273 (1939).

Intention of Legislature: In ascertaining the intention of the Legislature in enacting a statute consisting of numerous sections all relating to the same general subject, the act must be considered in its entirety, since it was passed as a whole, not in parts or sections. Drake v. Schoregge, 85 M 94, 277 P 627 (1929).

Liberal Construction: After the organization of an irrigation district, the provisions of the act of its creation and rules of procedure should be given most liberal construction in order that the purpose of the act may be carried out. Drake v. Schoregge, 85 M 94, 277 P 627 (1929).

Attacking Regularity of District: An action by a landowner seeking to have his irrigated land excluded from an irrigation district on the ground of lack of jurisdiction in the court when the court entered its judgment creating the irrigation district, because of a failure of service of notice and a lack of written consent to the inclusion of his lands, was not a collateral attack upon the judgment of creation. Scilley v. Red Lodge-Rosebud Irrigation District, 83 M 282, 272 P 543 (1928), distinguished in Midland Dev. Co. v. Cove Irrigation District, 102 M 479, 58 P2d 1001 (1936).

Public Corporation: An irrigation district created under this act is a public corporation exercising essential governmental functions, one of which is the right to levy taxes, organized for the government of a portion of the state and for the promotion of the public welfare. Thus, it must be deemed a subdivision of the state within the meaning of 7-4-2516 and therefore is not required to pay fees for the recordation of papers in the County Clerk and Recorder's office. Crow Creek Irrigation District v. Crittenden, 71 M 66, 227 P 63 (1924), explained in Buffalo Rapids Irrigation District v. Colleran, 85 M 466, 279 P 369 (1929).

Jurisdiction of District Court: While the irrigation district act confers certain exclusive powers upon the District Court of the county in which the business of the district is being conducted, there is nothing in the act which gives exclusive jurisdiction to that court to compel the Treasurer of that county by mandamus to pay interest due upon bonds of the district. Therefore, the court of any district or county has the power to issue the writ. State ex rel. Carroll v. District Court, 69 M 415, 222 P 444 (1924), overruled on other grounds in USF&G v. St., 136 M 148, 345 P2d 734 (1959).

Inclusion of Specially Benefited Lands: Under the district irrigation statutes, only such lands as will be specially benefited may be included within a proposed district against the will of the owner. In re Crow Creek Irrigation District, 63 M 293, 207 P 121 (1922).

Nonconsenting Owners: Since the inclusion of a tract of land of a nonconsenting owner in an irrigation district and subjection of it to its pro rata part of the burden of the expense necessarily incident to the construction of the works and the operation of the system deprives him of his property to the extent of the burden thus imposed, such deprivation can be effected only by due process of law, i.e., he must be afforded adequate opportunity to be heard. In re Crow Creek Irrigation District, 63 M 293, 207 P 121 (1922).

Character and Object of Act: For general observations upon the character and objects of the legislation embraced in this chapter, see In re Gallatin Irrigation District, 48 M 605, 140 P 92 (1914).

Constitutionality: Sections 85-7-101 through 85-7-1507, relating to the creation of irrigation districts, are not, in conferring certain alleged nonjudicial powers and duties upon the District Judge, violative of Art. IV, sec. 1, 1889 Mont Const. (Art. III, sec. 1, 1972 Mont. Const.), which divides the powers of government into the legislative, executive, and judicial departments. O'Neill v. Yellowstone Irrigation District, 44 M 492, 121 P 283 (1912).

85-7-102. Evidence of title.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (1)(b) substituted "department of natural resources and conservation" for "department of state lands"; and in (2), after "department", deleted "of state lands". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1991 Amendment: In (1)(c) substituted "insurance producers" for "insurance agents"; and made minor changes in style.

1987 Amendment: Rearranged subsection (1); inserted (1)(c) establishing that ownership records prepared by licensed title insurance agents provide sufficient evidence of title to irrigation district land; and made minor changes in style and phraseology.

85-7-104. Petition for organization.

Case Notes

Amendment of Petition: In the hearing and determination of petitions, a wide discretion is lodged in the District Court, an abuse of which must be clearly shown before its action in dismissing a petition for insufficiency will be disturbed. In re Gallatin Irrigation District, 48 M 605, 140 P 92 (1914).

Signature by Majority of Landowners: Where a petition disclosed on its face that it was not signed by a majority of the landowners in the proposed district, an order dismissing it was proper, since it did not confer jurisdiction to create the district. In re Gallatin Irrigation District, 48 M 605, 140 P 92 (1914).

Sufficiency of Petition: Since a homestead or desert entryman does not have a taxable interest in land he holds, prior to final proof, his name cannot be counted in determining the sufficiency of a petition for the creation of an irrigation district. Further, for the purpose of determining whether a petition meets the statutory requirements, the court is authorized to take testimony if necessary. In re Gallatin Irrigation District, 48 M 605, 140 P 92 (1914).

Witness Fees and Costs of Objectors to District: The allowance of mileage and per diem to witnesses who were present and ready to testify for the objectors to the creation of an irrigation district and whose testimony would have been relevant, competent, and material was proper, though they were not subpoenaed, sworn, or examined because of the dismissal of the petition for insufficiency. In re Gallatin Irrigation District, 48 M 605, 140 P 92 (1914).

Effect of Failure to Give Bond: Failure to give the bond required by this section does not affect the jurisdiction of the court or that of the Commissioners appointed to conduct the affairs of the district, since it is merely designed as security for costs in the event the district is not organized. O'Neill v. Yellowstone Irrigation District, 44 M 492, 121 P 283 (1912).

85-7-105. Order and notice of hearing on petition.

Case Notes

Notice to Nonresident: The mailing of a copy of the petition for the creation of an irrigation district and notice of hearing to a nonresident landowner is an indispensable prerequisite to vesting the court with jurisdiction to create the district. Scilley v. Red Lodge-Rosebud Irrigation District, 83 M 282, 272 P 543 (1928), distinguished in Wood v. Kalispell, 131 M 390, 310 P2d 1058 (1957).

Sufficiency of Notice: Under this section, which provides that the Clerk of the District Court shall cause to be published at least once a week "for two successive calendar weeks" a notice of the time and place for hearing on a petition for the creation of an irrigation district, a notice published on March 31 and April 7 of a given year was a sufficient compliance with the requirement. The applicable rule is that publication for the number of times expressed in weeks, not more than 7 days apart, suffices. Scilley v. Red Lodge-Rosebud Irrigation District, 83 M 282, 272 P 543 (1928).

Character of Notice: The only notice required to be given under this section of the contemplated creation of an irrigation district was by publication or in certain cases by mail. Therefore, the objection made by landowners on a hearing upon a petition of the District Commissioners for confirmation of a contemplated contract that they had not been served with personal notice of the creation of the district had no merit. In re Fort Shaw Irrigation District, 81 M 170, 261 P 962 (1927).

85-7-106. Hearing on petition.

Case Notes

Conditions Imposed Without Final Judgment — Creation of New District Affirmed: In a proceeding to establish an irrigation district organized to assume the operation and maintenance of an irrigation project from the state and its predecessors in interest, the Supreme Court held that the District Court did not err in imposing upon the appellants conditions for the use of their water rights and in not making any final judgment with respect to the appellants, who alleged that the extent of their water rights should be affirmatively established prior to the approval of the creation of the new district. The Supreme Court held that because the extent of the appellants' rights was made subject to the future negotiation or court decree, there was no final judgment to review. The Supreme Court therefore affirmed the District Court's order approving the creation of the district and remanded the case to the District Court for any further necessary proceedings respecting the rights of the parties and interested persons. In re Petition for Irrigation District in Ravalli County, 209 M 218, 680 P2d 944, 41 St. Rep. 658 (1984).

Court to Address Issues Raised by Noncontesting Landowners: In a proceeding to establish an irrigation district organized to assume the operation and maintenance of an irrigation project from the state, the District Court did not err in considering issues presented to it by water users who did not contest the formation of the district at a hearing on the petition. While the statutes contemplate that those persons contesting the establishment of the district attend the hearing on the petition, the District Court is also required by statute to determine which lands belonging to holders of appurtenant water rights are to be included in the district and which are not and is required to address the issues raised by those landholders whether or not they attended the hearing on the petition. In re Petition for Irrigation District in Ravalli County, 209 M 218, 680 P2d 944, 41 St. Rep. 658 (1984).

Contents of Order: While the court's order should be clear as to material issues on the hearing of a petition for the creation of an irrigation district, particularly on boundaries, lands included, practicability, benefits and damages to included lands, etc., it should leave the details respecting the works to be constructed to the discretion of the district. Blaser v. Clinton Irrigation District, 100 M 459, 53 P2d 1141 (1935).

Finality of Order: An order of a court creating an irrigation district is in the nature of a judgment or decree. It stands as an absolute finality as to everything directly or impliedly determined and cannot be attacked collaterally unless the judgment roll shows it to be void. Blaser v. Clinton Irrigation District, 100 M 459, 53 P2d 1141 (1935).

Constitutionality: The sections relating to organization of irrigation districts are not invalid as depriving a nonresident of the right of removal of a suit to federal court. Tomich v. Union Trust Co., 31 F2d 515 (9th Cir. 1929).

Court to Determine Whether or Not Land Shall Be Included: Whether or not lands then under irrigation should have been included in an irrigation district subsequently organized was for determination of the court on hearing of petition for organization of district. Tomich v. Union Trust Co., 31 F2d 515 (9th Cir. 1929).

Time of Objecting to Inclusion of Land: The objection that land proposed to be included in an irrigation district should not be included must be made by the landowner at time the district is formed, since there is a hearing afforded for that purpose. Tomich v. Union Trust Co., 31 F2d 515 (9th Cir. 1929).

Taxation of Property of a Public Corporation: The property of a public corporation may not be declared exempt from taxation unless it is made exempt by virtue of express pronouncement of the Montana Constitution or legislative declaration permitted by the Constitution. Further, an irrigation district is not a "municipal corporation" within the meaning of Art. XII, sec. 2, 1889 Mont. Const., providing that the property of municipal corporations shall be exempt from taxation, and therefore the county in which such a district was located had the power to assess and levy a tax upon lands acquired by the district by tax deed. Buffalo Rapids Irrigation District v. Colleran, 85 M 466, 279 P 369 (1929).

Effect of Failure to Appeal: The provisions of this section and section 3967, R.C.M. 1921 (since repealed), declaring, in effect, that an appeal from a judgment creating an irrigation district and from one confirming a bond issue of such a district shall be the exclusive method of attacking the validity of either, do not bar an action by which it is sought to evade the effect of such judgments on grounds recognized as sufficient to vacate an ordinary judgment—fraud and lack of jurisdiction. Scilley v. Red Lodge-Rosebud Irrigation District, 83 M 282, 272 P 543 (1928).

Inclusion of Irrigated Lands: While under the irrigation district act the question of whether lands will or will not be benefited by means of an irrigation system in contemplation is left to the discretion of the court, under this section the inclusion of lands already irrigated from appurtenant water rights depends not upon the exercise of the court's discretion but upon the written consent of the owner. Scilley v. Red Lodge-Rosebud Irrigation District, 83 M 282, 272 P 543 (1928).

Description of Land: Where in an order establishing an irrigation district, the description of the lands included in it were sufficient under this section, the fact that the court went further and made a tabulation under various headings, such as "Gross Area", "Area Included", etc., did not render the order void. Walden v. Bitter Root Irrigation District, 68 M 281, 217 P 646 (1923).

85-7-107. Court decision — appointment of commissioners.

Case Notes

Court to Address Issues Raised by Noncontesting Landowners: In a proceeding to establish an irrigation district organized to assume the operation and maintenance of an irrigation project from the state, the District Court did not err in considering issues presented to it by water users who did not contest the formation of the district at a hearing on the petition. While the statutes contemplate that those persons contesting the establishment of the district attend the hearing on the petition, the District Court is also required by statute to determine which lands belonging to holders of appurtenant water rights are to be included in the district and which are not and is required to address the issues raised by those landholders whether or not they attended the hearing on the petition. In re Petition for Irrigation District in Ravalli County, 209 M 218, 680 P2d 944, 41 St. Rep. 658 (1984).

Exchange Water Users Right to Credit Against Water-Use Charges — Terms of District Membership: In a proceeding to establish an irrigation district organized to assume the operation and maintenance of an irrigation project from the state and its predecessors in interest, the Supreme Court found that the District Court did not err in holding that the newly organized district had an obligation to provide exchange water users with water free of charge and that that obligation could be satisfied, as to each of those water users ranked 10th and above in superiority who joined the new district, by extending to them a credit against the water-use charges to be levied by the new district. The Supreme Court viewed the District Court's order as establishing terms for membership in the district for those exchange water users and further found that the District Court had the authority to set terms. In re Petition for Irrigation District in Ravalli County, 209 M 218, 680 P2d 944, 41 St. Rep. 658 (1984).

85-7-109. Irrigation district as public corporation.

Case Notes

Irrigation District a Governmental Entity Immune From Suit: The plaintiffs filed suit in August 1983, alleging that the irrigation district's actions had resulted in crop losses for the plaintiffs. In November 1989, the lower court allowed the defendant to amend its answer to include the defense that the irrigation district was a governmental entity immune from suit. After allowing the amendment, the lower court dismissed the suit on a summary judgment motion. The Supreme Court upheld the lower court's decision on the basis that it was within the lower court's discretion and that the plaintiffs had failed to show that they were prejudiced by the amendment. Love v. Harlem Irrigation District, 245 M 443, 802 P2d 611, 47 St. Rep. 2190 (1990), followed in Bozeman v. AIU Ins. Co., 272 M 349, 900 P2d 929, 52 St. Rep. 823 (1995). After the 1990 Love decision, supra, Loves filed another amended complaint alleging contractual violations, negligence, fraud, and additional damages. Following Whirry v. Swanson, 254 M 248, 836 P2d 1227 (1992), and Mills v. Lincoln County, 262 M 283, 864 P2d 1265 (1993), and distinguishing Boucher v. Dramstad, 522 F. Supp. 604 (D.C. Mont. 1981), the Supreme Court held that despite Loves' claims of issues of fundamental fairness and new theories of recovery, all four elements composing the doctrine of res judicata were met. The issues having been previously decided in the 1990 Love decision, judgment for the irrigation district on the issues raised by the amended complaint was granted. State ex rel. Harlem Irrigation District v. District Court, 271 M 129, 894 P2d 943, 52 St. Rep. 364 (1995).

Creation of Districts
Common Water Supply

85-7-301. Creation of district by owners of rights in common water supply.

Case Notes

Powers of District: Where 100 owners of land and water rights organized an irrigation district in 1923 under then existing statutory provisions, without, however, conveying to the district their individual rights, and for the sole purpose of having a central control body to perform the functions of a Water Commissioner in the operation, maintenance, and management of its affairs, under Ch. 100, L. 1925 (this section), curative in character, it became a public corporation. The district was a legally organized entity in 1927 with power to operate, maintain, and manage its irrigation system. Maclay v. Missoula Irrigation District, 90 M 344, 3 P2d 286 (1921).

85-7-1501. Qualifications of commissioners and term of office.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 402 in (1) substituted language establishing commissioner qualifications for former language that read: "A person may not be a commissioner unless he is an owner of irrigable land within the division of the district he is to represent and is a resident of the county in which the division of the district or some portion of the division is situated"; and inserted (3) defining entity. Amendment effective April 25, 2005.

1989 Amendment: In (1) substituted "owner of irrigable land within the division of the district he is to represent" for "owner of land within the district" and at end substituted "or some portion of the division is situated" for "or some portion thereof, for which the commissioner is elected, is situated"; in (2), after "hold their respective offices until", deleted "the second Saturday in December following their appointment and until"; and made minor changes in phraseology.

Case Notes

Freeholder Requirement Constitutional — Reasonable Relationship Standard Applied: A landowner within an irrigation district filed a petition seeking to have the election of an irrigation district commissioner set aside on the grounds that the elected commissioner did not own irrigable land within the district as required by this section (see 2005 amendment). The District Court set aside the election, and the commissioner appealed on the grounds that the land ownership requirement violates the equal protection clause of the United States Constitution. The Supreme Court affirmed and held that the freeholder requirement does not violate the right to equal protection under the federal constitution. Montana irrigation districts are special, limited-purpose units of government whose activities have a disproportionate effect on landowners in the districts as a group. It is appropriate to depart from the usual strict scrutiny standard applied to statutes impacting on a citizen's right to vote and to analyze the freeholder requirement of this section under the reasonable relationship standard. Johnson v. Killingsworth, 271 M 1, 894 P2d 272, 52 St. Rep. 274 (1995).

Voting Procedure Based on Land Ownership Not Violative of "One Man, One Vote" Constitutional Provisions: Montana's weighting of votes according to the size of land holdings in irrigation district elections does not violate the "one man, one vote" requirement of the U.S. Constitution. In upholding the weighted voting scheme in a similar case, the U.S. Supreme Court held in Salyer Land Co. v. Tulare Lake Basin Water Storage District, 410 US 719 (1973), that where the tax burden fell unequally according to the size of the land holdings, it was not unreasonable for the votes to be weighted according to the size of the land holdings. 42 A.G. Case Notes

Affirmation or Reversal of Disputed Petitions for Irrigation District Exclusion Based on Access to or Use of District Water: During 1997 and 1998, 549 parties petitioned to exclude their land from the Missoula Irrigation District (MID). The MID disputed 19 petitions on appeal, and the Supreme Court examined each disputed petition, using the MID's survey map. Based on the best available evidence to uphold a Standing Master's conclusions of whether each petitioner had access to district water that it was using, had access to district water but was not using it, or had no access and was not using district water, the Supreme Court first affirmed exclusions for 11 properties that the MID's own map indicated the petitioner had no access and was not using district water. Of the remaining eight properties, the court reversed two exclusions on grounds that the property owners could feasibly obtain water from the district, even though the owners chose not to. Petitioners I-549 v. Missoula Irrigation District, 2005 MT 100, 326 M 527, 111 P3d 664 (2005).

Proper Grant of Undisputed Irrigation District Exclusion Petitions Without Hearing: During 1997 and 1998, 549 parties petitioned to exclude their land from the Missoula Irrigation District (MID). The District Court consolidated the petitions to determine issues of law and develop a procedure to dispose of each petition. Of the 549 petitions, 119 were heard, and all the petitions were granted. Although many petitioners did not appear for a hearing, only petitions objected to by the MID required a hearing, and 85-7-1846 (now terminated) provides that a petition be granted if no objection is filed within 15 days of filing a petition. Thus, the undisputed petitions were properly granted, and the Supreme Court limited its review to only 19 petitions disputed by the MID. Petitioners I-549 v. Missoula Irrigation District, 2005 MT 100, 326 M 527, 111 P3d 664 (2005).

Irrigation District Has Standing to Challenge Constitutionality of Legislation Affecting Land Included in District: The Legislature enacted legislation primarily directed at the Missoula Irrigation District (MID) allowing certain landowners to opt out of MID. MID challenged Geil's petition for removal from MID on grounds that the legislation was unconstitutional. Geil argued that MID did not have standing to challenge the legislation. The Supreme Court, applying the law as it existed in 1997, held that MID did have standing because under 85-7-1846 (now terminated) and this section, only MID could object to a petition for removal and further that if certain individuals were allowed to withdraw from MID, the remaining members would be subject to pay an increased amount to maintain MID. Geil v. Missoula Irrigation District, 2002 MT 269, 312 M 320, 59 P3d 398 (2002).

Legislation Crafted to Apply Only to Missoula Irrigation District Upheld as Constitutional: The Legislature enacted legislation primarily directed at the Missoula Irrigation District (MID) allowing certain landowners to opt out of MID because they had no access to MID's water. MID challenged Geil's petition for removal from MID on grounds that the legislation was unconstitutional as a violation of equal protection because the legislation was narrowly crafted to apply only to MID. The Supreme Court noted that even a cursory glance at the legislation's history indicated that the Legislature intended for the relaxed land exclusion process to apply only to Missoula. However, the Supreme Court noted that whether the legislation applied to the whole state or only to Missoula, the objective was to offer persons not served by MID relief from assessments, and the Supreme Court held that that was a legitimate governmental objective. Geil v. Missoula Irrigation District, 2002 MT 269, 312 M 320, 59 P3d 398 (2002).

Notice to Irrigation District Constitutionally Sufficient: The Legislature enacted legislation primarily directed at the Missoula Irrigation District (MID) allowing certain landowners to opt out of MID because they had no access to MID's water. MID challenged Geil's petition for removal from MID on grounds that the legislation was unconstitutional as a violation of due process because the notice contemplated by the statute was insufficient to provide a reasonable opportunity for MID and other individual members of MID to be heard. The Supreme Court held that because an individual was required to send a copy of the petition to withdraw from MID to MID prior to filing the petition with the lower court, the requirement for an opportunity to be heard was met and a due process violation did not exist. Geil v. Missoula Irrigation District, 2002 MT 269, 312 M 320, 59 P3d 398 (2002).

85-7-1808. Extension of boundaries and addition of lands.

Case Notes

When Land Considered Susceptible of Irrigation: A party objected to the extension of an irrigation district's boundaries on grounds that the land proposed for inclusion did not meet the definition of irrigable land and was not legally susceptible of irrigation. The Supreme Court noted that 85-7-1808 allows inclusion of lands susceptible of irrigation by the works of the district, which means that the land can physically receive irrigation water from the district's works. The court declined to redefine the statutory language "susceptible of irrigation" to mean only land that meets the definition of irrigable land or that is legally susceptible of irrigation. The land in question had been irrigated for decades from the irrigation district works and was therefore susceptible of irrigation for the limited purposes of the petition to extend the district boundaries. In re Formation of E. Bench Irrigation District, 2009 MT 135, 350 M 309, 207 P3d 1097 (2009).

Pleadings: In a special proceeding for the extension of an irrigation district, the petition, the jurisdictional notices with proof of service, the objections filed by protestants, and the final judgment serve the same function as the complaint, summons, answer, and judgment in an ordinary civil action. In re Bitter Root Irrigation District, 67 M 436, 218 P 945 (1923).

Record on Appeal: A proceeding for the extension of an irrigation district is neither an equity case nor a proceeding of an equitable nature, and therefore the testimony need not be presented in the transcript by question and answer, otherwise made necessary by subdivision 3 of Rule VII of the Supreme Court. In re Bitter Root Irrigation District, 67 M 436, 218 P 945 (1923).

Constitutionality: This section, prescribing the procedure for the extension of an irrigation district already created, when the act is viewed as a whole and liberally construed as provided in section 85-1-103, is not open to the objection that it operates to deprive the nonconsenting landowner of his property without due process of law, in that while providing for a hearing, it makes no provision for granting relief to him. In re Crow Creek Irrigation District, 63 M 293, 207 P 121 (1922).

85-7-1809. Notice of hearing for addition of lands.

85-7-1810. Hearing and order on petition for addition of lands.

Case Notes

Determination That Land Susceptible of Irrigation and Inclusion in Irrigation District Not De Facto Adjudication of Water Rights: The District Court held that certain land proposed for an extension of irrigation district boundaries was susceptible of irrigation and could be included in the irrigation district. The decision was affirmed by the Supreme Court. However, the decision was limited to the issues in contention and did not constitute a de facto adjudication of water rights in violation of the exclusive jurisdiction of the Water Court to interpret and determine existing water rights. Neither the petition to expand the irrigation district boundaries nor a pending contract between the irrigation district and the Bureau of Reclamation could be used as a vehicle to circumvent the authority of the Water Court to determine the priority of water rights, the availability of irrigation water in a particular area, or the appropriateness of any attempts to change the point of diversion or place of use of irrigation water. A party opposed to the petition to extend irrigation district boundaries was still entitled to attempt to establish through the Water Court that irrigation of the land with district water was illegal or infringed on that party's senior water rights. In re Formation of E. Bench Irrigation District, 2009 MT 135, 350 M 309, 207 P3d 1097 (2009).

Sufficient Opportunity for Objection to Extension of Irrigation District Boundaries: In deciding whether to extend the boundaries of an irrigation district, the District Court conducted the required public hearing. Open A Ranch, which disagreed with the proposed expansion, appeared and objected, arguing for consolidation of the hearing with a pending water contract proceeding. The court deferred resolution of the petitions to extend until the request for consolidation was considered and denied. The court then set a schedule for discovery and briefing. After discovery, both parties filed motions for summary judgment. Open A Ranch filed a consolidated answer to the extension petitioners' motions for summary judgment and a response brief to the petitioners' answer to Open A Ranch's motion for summary judgment. Open A Ranch attempted in each brief to convince the court that the petitions to extend district boundaries should be denied. The court then held a hearing on all pending motions, allowing Open A Ranch to argue extensively for denial of the extension petitions. The Supreme Court concluded that the District Court provided Open A Ranch with ample opportunity to object to the petition for boundary extension. In re Formation of E. Bench Irrigation District, 2009 MT 135, 350 M 309, 207 P3d 1097 (2009).

In re Formation of E. Bench Irrigation District, 2009 MT 135, 350 M 309, 207 P3d 1097 (2009).

Statutory Time Period for Filing Appeal of Petition for Adding Lands to Irrigation District Superseded by Rules of Appellate Procedure: The District Court dismissed a petition to extend the boundaries of an irrigation district. One of the parties appealed, but the other party contended that the appeal should be dismissed because it was not filed within the 10-day statutory period set out in 85-7-1810. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under Art. VII, sec. 2, Mont. Const., the Supreme Court has rulemaking authority to govern the appellate process. The court established a 30-day period for filing civil appeals in Rule 4, M.R.App.P. (Title 25, ch. 21), so the statutory timeframe in 85-7-1810 has been superseded. Because the appeal in this case was filed within the 30-day period, the appeal was timely. In re Formation of E. Bench Irrigation District, 2008 MT 210, 344 M 184, 186 P3d 1266 (2008).

Collateral Attack: Where plaintiff had not appealed from an order establishing an irrigation district, his action to enjoin a sale of its bonds on the ground that the order was void for failure to give accurate descriptions of the lands included in it was in the nature of a collateral attack maintainable only if the invalidity of the order on that ground appeared from its face. Walden v. Bitter Root Irrigation District, 68 M 281, 217 P 646 (1923).

Appeal From Part of Judgment:

An exception to the general rule that an appeal does not lie from a part of the judgment is that class of cases where an issue distinct, entire, and complete is formed between some of the parties to an action and upon which issue a final judgment is given affecting only the interests and rights of the parties to that issue. In re Bitter Root Irrigation District, 67 M 436, 218 P 945 (1923), explained in Wills v. Morris, 100 M 504, 50 P2d 858 (1935).

In a proceeding, special in its nature, for the extension of an irrigation district, in which an objecting landowner appeared and protested against the inclusion of his lands in the proposed extension and their exclusion was ordered, the appeal of petitioners from the order of exclusion was not subject to dismissal as from a portion of the judgment only, the issue between the protestant and the petitioners having been from the whole judgment so far as protestant and petitioners were concerned. In re Bitter Root Irrigation District, 67 M 436, 218 P 945 (1923), explained in Wills v. Morris, 100 M 504, 50 P2d 858 (1935).

Operation of Districts

Part Case Notes

Lack of NPDES Permits — Motion by Irrigation Districts to Intervene as of Right Properly Denied: In 1987, Congress added section 518(e) to the Clean Water Act, which authorized the Environmental Protection Agency to permit Indian tribes to be "treated as a state" (TAS) for purposes of promulgating water quality standards. The Flathead Joint Board of Control, two irrigation districts, and four individual irrigators who owned fee land on the reservation sought to intervene as of right, contending that the imposition of tribal water quality standards would violate their civil rights by subjecting them to tribal jurisdiction and would depress the value of their property. Because the intervenors held no National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permits, they could not be subject to NPDES enforcement proceedings. TAS status does not confer enforcement authority on the tribes; it only allows the tribes to set the standards. Even if the tribes sought enforcement authority, NPDES permits would still be issued by the federal government and enforced in federal, not tribal, courts. Further, a speculative and purely economic interest did not create a protectable interest in litigation concerning a statute that regulates environmental rather than economic interests. Because the transfer of the right to establish water quality standards from the state to the tribes would have no immediate or foreseeable, demonstrable effect on the proposed intervenors, the application to intervene as of right was properly denied. Mont. v. U.S. Envtl. Protection Agency, 137 F3d 1135 (9th Cir. 1998), certiorari denied, 142 L Ed 2d 227, 119 S Ct 275 (1998).

Acquisition of Rights to Use Water: Since an irrigation district is not a "subdivision" of the state within the meaning of Art. XIII, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const., providing that neither county, city, town, municipality, "nor other subdivision of the state" shall become a shareholder in or a joint owner with a company or corporation, its Board of Commissioners may acquire shares in a reservoir company or purchase rights to the use of water, as authorized by this section. Thaanum v. Bynum Irrigation District, 72 M 221, 232 P 528 (1925).

Tax Levies: The taxes which an irrigation district is authorized to levy upon the lands included in the district for the purpose of paying for property acquired are in the nature of special assessments as distinguished from general taxes, and by the expenditure of money authorized by this section, it obtains an equivalent in the value of the property purchased, hence does not come within the prohibition of Art. XIII, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const. Thaanum v. Bynum Irrigation District, 72 M 221, 232 P 528 (1925).

Case Notes

Punitive Damages for Intentional Denial of Water: This section's provision that "the board of commissioners shall apportion the water for irrigation among the lands in the district in a just and equitable manner" sets out a statutory duty that was clearly violated when defendant irrigation district, through two individual (defendant) employees of the district, failed to provide water to plaintiffs. The failure was arguably intentional and therefore unjustifiable. Therefore, it was impliedly malicious and thus constituted justification for punitive damages. Dvorak v. Huntley Project Irrigation District, 196 M 167, 639 P2d 62, 38 St. Rep. 2176 (1981).

Sovereign Immunity Denied: Irrigation district, a state government entity, was subject to punitive damages in tort action where action arose in and was limited to summer of 1974. The 1972 Montana Constitution provided that the state, counties, cities, towns, and all other local governmental entities have no immunity from suit for injury to person or property except as may be specifically provided by law by a two-thirds vote of each house of the Legislature, and the Legislature did not provide immunity for certain governmental entities until 1977 when it enacted 2-9-104 (now repealed) and 2-9-105, which cannot be retroactively applied. Dvorak v. Huntley Project Irrigation District, 196 M 167, 639 P2d 62, 38 St. Rep. 2176 (1981).

Injunction to Prevent Diversion Outside District: In a proceeding to enjoin water users in an irrigation district from interfering with the right of a like user, a plaintiff, to convey water from the district to lands owned by him outside the district, where plaintiff in so diverting water was injuring owners within the district and depriving them of water in which they had a vested right, the court correctly enjoined him, without passing on his right of assignment because none of his land in the district was unirrigated and there was nothing for him to assign within the meaning of this section. Koch v. Colvin, 110 M 594, 105 P2d 334 (1940).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Case Notes

Historic Recognition of Right to Exchange or Substitute Water Upheld: In a proceeding to establish an irrigation district organized to assume the operation and maintenance of an irrigation project from the State and its predecessors in interest, the Supreme Court found that the District Court did not err in holding that the newly organized district had an obligation to provide certain landowners with water from the Bitterroot River free of charge in exchange for water from Skalkaho Creek. The District Court found that the State and its predecessors in interest had for 81 years recognized the right of each of those exchange users to the other water. Thus, the Supreme Court found the existence of an obligation to provide exchange waters and further found that the applicable statutes contemplated exactly what the District Court had ordered. Case Notes

No Negligence by Irrigation District for Failure to Warn of Unforeseeable Flood: Plaintiffs' property was damaged by an unprecedented flood caused by an ice jam on the Clark Fork River. Plaintiffs alleged that the local irrigation district was liable for breaching its duty to construct and maintain an irrigation system that would protect the property and for failing to warn of the flooding conditions to allow plaintiffs the opportunity to protect their property. The District Court held that the irrigation district had no duty to prevent the flood or to warn of the impending natural disaster, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The first element that plaintiffs must establish in a negligence action is the existence of a duty of care, and the measure of a duty of care owed is the scope of the risk that the negligent conduct foreseeably entails. Thus, the primary factor in determining whether the irrigation district owed a duty of care was whether it was foreseeable, as a matter of law, that the district's acts or omissions would pose a risk of injury to plaintiffs. Here, substantial evidence supported the conclusion that the risk that flooding would damage plaintiffs' property was unforeseeable, so the district had no duty to erect or maintain flood control structures to prevent the unforeseeable event. The district also exercised reasonable care in the maintenance of the irrigation system that was in place. Further, plaintiffs failed to advance any applicable authority that would impose upon the district a duty to warn of the unforeseeable flood because mere knowledge of the dangerous situation, of which plaintiffs themselves had become aware the night of the flood, did not impose a legal duty to warn. Gaudreau v. Clinton Irrigation District, 2001 MT 164, 306 M 121, 30 P3d 1070 (2001), following Estate of Strever v. Cline, 278 M 165, 924 P2d 666 (1996).

Importance of Control of Distribution by District: The most important function of an irrigation district is the control, to the mutual advantage of all the members, of the irrigation system. Water rights remain with the private appropriator, but control lies exclusively with the district. In re Establishment & Organization of Ward Irrigation District, 216 M 315, 701 P2d 721, 42 St. Rep. 824 (1985).

Purpose of Section: This section does two things: first, it gives an irrigation district the exclusive right to regulate and control its distribution system; and second, it prohibits a district from controlling its distribution system in a manner that detrimentally affects water rights over which the district has no control. In re Establishment & Organization of Ward Irrigation District, 216 M 315, 701 P2d 721, 42 St. Rep. 824 (1985).

Relationship Between District Rights and Nondistrict Rights: A portion of the Fosses' ranch is included in the irrigation district and a portion is not. The part of the ranch not in the district has water rights, which precede the district rights, in two creeks, which during part of the year spill into the district's system. Further, a segment of the district's ditch follows the natural channel of one of the creeks. The Fosses habitually have conveyed their nondistrict water through the ditch, and the district has delivered water to Foss land not included within the district through a district headgate. In 1979, a dispute arose over control of the headgate. The District Court ruled that the Fosses had no legal right to use of the district's distribution system. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case for further proceedings in accordance with its ruling that the Fosses may convey their nondistrict water rights to the district and that the district has the obligation to deliver that water. If the ditch is too small to service the district and other water rights, the Fosses should not be required to bear any burden of expansion. Case Notes

Determination That Land Susceptible of Irrigation and Inclusion in Irrigation District Not De Facto Adjudication of Water Rights: The District Court held that certain land proposed for an extension of irrigation district boundaries was susceptible of irrigation and could be included in the irrigation district. The decision was affirmed by the Supreme Court. However, the decision was limited to the issues in contention and did not constitute a de facto adjudication of water rights in violation of the exclusive jurisdiction of the Water Court to interpret and determine existing water rights. Neither the petition to expand the irrigation district boundaries nor a pending contract between the irrigation district and the Bureau of Reclamation could be used as a vehicle to circumvent the authority of the Water Court to determine the priority of water rights, the availability of irrigation water in a particular area, or the appropriateness of any attempts to change the point of diversion or place of use of irrigation water. A party opposed to the petition to extend irrigation district boundaries was still entitled to attempt to establish through the Water Court that irrigation of the land with district water was illegal or infringed on that party's senior water rights. 1989 Amendment: At end of (2) substituted "subsection (4)" for "subsection (2)"; inserted (3) relating to limitation on debt for subdistrict; in (4)(b) substituted "limitations of subsections (2) and (3)" for "limitation of subsection (1)"; in (4)(c) substituted "limitations of subsections (1) through (3) do not apply" for "limitation of subsection (1) does not apply"; in (4)(d) substituted "limitations of subsections (1) through (3) do not apply" for "limitation of subsection (1) does not apply" and at end inserted clause relating to obligations issued to government entities; inserted (4)(d)(i) relating to legislatively authorized loan programs; inserted (4)(d)(ii) relating to legislatively authorized projects; in (4)(e) substituted reference to subsections (1) through (3) for reference to subsection (1); deleted former (4) that read: "(4) The limitation of subsection (1) does not apply to state or federal bonds used for a project authorized by the legislature"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 4, 1989.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (4) providing exemption from debt limitation for state or federal bonds for project authorized by Legislature.

1981 Amendment: Increased 15% to 18.75% in (1) and (2)(b); and increased 10% to 12.5% in (2)(b).

Validation: Section 64, Ch. 614, L. 1981, provided: "Notwithstanding any provisions of this act, any outstanding indebtedness or bond issue on January 1, 1982, of any governmental subdivision is not invalidated because of any changes in the taxable valuation of the subdivision due to removal of automobiles and trucks having a rated capacity of three-quarters of a ton or less from the tax base."

Effect of 1981 Amendment: The primary purpose of Ch. 614, L. 1981, was to replace the system of taxation of automobiles and light trucks with a fee system. With the adoption of the fee system, automobiles and light trucks are no longer taxable property. The resulting loss of taxable valuation has a direct effect on the amount of indebtedness a political subdivision can incur. Thus it was necessary in Ch. 614 to increase the percentage of taxable valuation used as a limitation on indebtedness to offset the loss of taxable valuation attributable to automobiles and light trucks.

Case Notes

Federal Court Required to Follow Montana Supreme Court Decisions: The federal courts, in determining whether bonds issued by Montana irrigation district were general obligations of the district, were required to follow decisions of the Supreme Court of Montana holding that such bonds, issued pursuant to Montana statutes, were not general obligations of irrigation district but merely a charge against land within the district. Toole County Irrigation District v. Moody, 125 F2d 498 (9th Cir. 1942).

Subsequent Agreement Void as to Making Bonds General Obligations of District: Recovery could not be had against district in action on irrigation district bonds on ground that bonds, even if not general obligations of district when issued, had become so by reason of a subsequent agreement, where action was not based on the agreement and agreement, insofar as it purported to make the bonds general obligations of district, was void. Subdivision of State: Although the authority of the Legislature to declare by this section that irrigation districts shall not be taxed for state, county, or municipal purposes may be questioned, there is no doubt that the Legislature was dealing with a district as a part of the state itself rather than an enterprise fostered by the state. Crow Creek Irrigation District v. Crittenden, 71 M 66, 227 P 63 (1924), explained in Buffalo Rapids Irrigation District v. Colleran, 85 M 466, 279 P 369 (1929).

1989 Amendment: In (1) inserted clause relating to bonds issued on behalf of subdistrict; at end of (1)(a) and (1)(b) inserted clause referring to bonds or contract relating to subdistrict; in (2), at end of first sentence after "board", deleted "of commissioners"; and made minor changes in form and phraseology. Amendment effective April 4, 1989.

Case Notes

Maintenance Done by United States: This section is clearly limited to authorization for the original bond issue or contract with the United States and does not preclude the district from levying assessments to reimburse the United States for maintenance work necessarily done by it. U.S. v. Fort Belknap Irrigation District, 197 F. Supp. 812 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Effect of Federal Court's Application of Montana Decisions: The federal courts, in determining whether bonds issued by Montana irrigation district constituted general obligations of district, were required to give effect to decisions of Montana Supreme Court holding that bonds, which had been issued prior to decisions, were not general obligations of district as against contention that such action would amount to giving the decisions a "retroactive" effect. Such application did not constitute an "impairment of obligation of contract", since the court's decision was merely that the obligation allegedly impaired did not exist, notwithstanding that those decisions were in conflict with earlier decisions of the Montana court. Toole County Irrigation District v. Moody, 125 F2d 498 (9th Cir. 1942).

Extent of Liability: Bonds issued by an irrigation district are not a general obligation of the district but are a charge against the lands within the district. State ex rel. Malott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 89 M 37, 296 P 1 (1930), overruling Cosman v. Chestnut Valley Irrigation District, 74 M 111, 238 P 879, 40 ALR 1344 (1925).

Remedy for Enforcement: While the law under which public bonds are issued becomes as much a part of the contract with the bondholders as though incorporated in the bonds, the Legislature may by subsequent statutes change the remedy given them to enforce payment, provided the new remedy is as efficacious as the one afforded under the original act. Otherwise the obligations of the contract would be impaired contrary to the provisions of Art. I, sec. 10, U.S. Const. State ex rel. Malott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 89 M 37, 296 P 1 (1930).

Refunding Bonds: In June 1929, proceedings for the refunding of irrigation district bonds were held under section 7210, R.C.M. 1921, as amended by Ch. 157, L. 1923, providing for the authorization of such bonds in the mode prescribed by section 7226, R.C.M. 1921, as amended by the same chapter. Section 7210, R.C.M. 1921, was amended by Ch. 185, L. 1929, which did not become effective until July 1, 1929. Since section 7226, R.C.M. 1921, was repealed by Ch. 155, L. 1929, and was not in effect when the bonds were authorized, the repeal of section 7226, incorporated by reference in section 7210, did not affect the latter section and the injunction was properly denied in an action to enjoin issuance of bonds. Gustafson v. Hammond Irrigation District, 87 M 217, 287 P 640 (1930).

Effect of Final Judgment: Upon its creation an irrigation district becomes absolute as an entity and has the power of issuing bonds against the lands embraced in its confines for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the act under which it was created, and if the Board of Commissioners orders bonds issued and no appeal is taken from the judgment of the District Court confirming and ratifying the proceedings of the Board, the judgment cannot thereafter be called in question in the absence of allegation and proof of fraud. Drake v. Schoregge, 85 M 94, 277 P 627 (1929).

Collection of Delinquent Assessments: In the collection of tax or assessment levied by an irrigation district for the payment of the interest on bonds issued by it, the County Treasurer is not authorized to seize and sell personal property of a delinquent owner of lands within the district but must proceed in the manner prescribed by Ch. 173, part III, R.C.M. 1921, as amended by Ch. 96, L. 1923 (15-16-101, et seq.), for the collection of state and county taxes made a lien upon real property. State ex rel. Spokane & E. Trust Co. v. Nicholson, 74 M 346, 240 P 837 (1925).

1989 Amendment: Near middle substituted "designate the place and method of payment of the bonds and the interest on the bonds" for "designate the place of payment of the bonds and the interest coupons"; after "prescribe the form of the bonds" deleted "and interest coupons to be attached thereto"; in clause relating to levies added two references to subdistrict; and made minor changes in phraseology. 2011 Amendment: Chapter 164 in (2)(b) following "copy of the" inserted "election results or"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 8, 2011.

Case Notes

Effect of Confirmation:

In an action to have a contract of sale of lands included in an irrigation district which had issued bonds reformed and liens against the lands arising from the bond issues canceled, on the ground of fraud in the creation of the district, where most of the bonds had been issued before plaintiffs made the purchase and no appeal had been taken from the judgment of the District Court confirming their validity, their legality cannot, under this section, be called in question thereafter, the bonds then constituting a lien upon all the lands in the district. Krueger v. Morris, 110 M 559, 107 P2d 142 (1940).

Under 85-7-2012 through 85-7-2018, a decree confirming bond proceedings, from which no appeal was taken, could not be set aside in an independent equitable action on the ground that the court exceeded its power in deciding that the tax levy was authorized by 85-7-2012 through 85-7-2015. Midland Dev. Co. v. Cove Irrigation District, 102 M 479, 58 P2d 1001 (1936).

Upon its creation an irrigation district becomes absolute as an entity and has the power of issuing bonds against the lands embraced in its confines for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the act under which created, and if the Board of Commissioners orders bonds issued and no appeal is taken from the judgment of the District Court confirming and ratifying the proceedings of the Board, the judgment cannot thereafter be called in question in the absence of allegation and proof of fraud. Drake v. Schoregge, 85 M 94, 277 P 627 (1929).

In the absence of fraud in the proceedings, the order of the District Court establishing the district and that directing the issuance of bonds are, unless appeals are taken from the orders within the prescribed time, res judicata and constitute an estoppel against thereafter litigating the validity of district bonds. O'Neill v. Yellowstone Irrigation District, 44 M 492, 121 P 283 (1912).

Appearance by Objectors: In a proceeding by the Commissioners of an irrigation district to secure confirmation of a contemplated contract with the United States to take over irrigation works constructed by the federal government and to raise the necessary funds by assessments upon the irrigable lands in the district, verified objections of objecting owners, which in effect were answers by way of confession and avoidance, were properly treated as answers. In re Fort Shaw Irrigation District, 81 M 170, 261 P 962 (1927).

Case Notes

Effect of Failure to Appeal: Landowners and mortgagees of land in district, who did not appeal from order and decree ratifying, approving, and confirming issuance of bonds for irrigation district under 85-7-2012 through 85-7-2018, could not question a decree in a suit to enjoin payment of bonds and collection of taxes for payment thereof. Tomich v. Union Trust Co., 31 F2d 515 (9th Cir. 1929).

Effect of Failure to Object or Contest: Landowner, whose land was described in a petition for organization of irrigation district under 85-7-104 through 85-7-109, 85-7-1501, 85-7-1502, and 85-7-1504(2), and for issuance of bonds under 85-7-2012 through 85-7-2018, and who had notice of proceedings but did not appear at hearing and object to inclusion of his land, could not question court's conclusion collaterally in a suit to enjoin collection or payment of bonds issued and to enjoin collection of taxes for payment. Tomich v. Union Trust Co., 31 F2d 515 (9th Cir. 1929).

Questions Considered on Appeal: In a proceeding for the confirmation of a resolution passed by the Commissioners of an irrigation district for the execution of a contract with the United States to take over federal irrigation works, instituted pursuant to the provisions of this section, the question whether nonirrigable lands were subject to the contemplated tax levy was not one presented for determination and may not be considered on appeal, it being presumed that when the levy is made only irrigable lands will be included within the assessment. In re Fort Shaw Irrigation District, 81 M 170, 261 P 962 (1927).

Pleading: Plaintiff's allegations that there existed an encumbrance on land within an irrigation district by virtue of a bond issue and that such issue had been regularly made, levied, and issued were mere legal conclusions. To show the validity of the bond issue, proper pleading required a showing that the District Court had made an order of confirmation, which, if made, may be alleged as "having been duly given and made", under section 93-3806, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed). Clark v. Demers, 78 M 287, 254 P 162 (1927).

Case Notes

Straight Maturity Bonds to Share Pro Rata in Funds Available for Payment: Straight maturity bonds were issued by an irrigation district under section 7212, R.C.M. 1921, prior to amendment by Ch. 157, L. 1923. The fund from which they were payable was insufficient to make payment in full and could not be replenished by assessment. The money remaining in the fund was held properly distributed pro rata among the outstanding bonds, without regard to their numbering, since they were not to mature serially and neither Ch. 157, L. 1923, nor Ch. 155, L. 1929, indicates legislative intent that the bonds as issued did not rank equally in order of payment. State ex rel. Cent. Auxiliary Corp. v. Rorabeck, 111 M 320, 108 P2d 601 (1940).

85-7-2021. Liens of bonds.

Compiler's Comments

1989 Amendment: In (1), in three places, inserted references to subdistrict; in (2) substituted language relating to discharge of bond obligations for "All liens herein created remain upon the lands for a period of 8 years after the date of maturity of the obligation. Thereafter, the lands and the titles thereto shall be free from any such liens"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 4, 1989.

Case Notes

Statutory Provision Part of Bondholders' Contract: The provision of section 7229, R.C.M. 1921 (now repealed), in force in 1919 when district organized, that issued bonds and any assessment made for payment thereon should be a lien upon the lands in the district against which levied, became a part of the bondholders' contract with the district, the same as though it had been incorporated in the bonds. Toole County Irrigation District v. St., 104 M 420, 67 P2d 989 (1937).

Encumbrance: This section, making bonds issued by an irrigation district a lien upon all the lands in the district, created a lien which constituted an encumbrance against them, within the meaning of the term "encumbrance" as used in 15-18-403 (now repealed), providing that a tax deed conveys to the grantee absolute title "free of all encumbrances". State ex rel. Malott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 89 M 37, 296 P 1 (1930), explained in U.S. v. Christensen, 218 F. Supp. 722 (D.C. Mont. 1963).

Extinguishment of Lien:

Under this section the lien of irrigation district bonds against the lands in the district for delinquent taxes is extinguished by the tax deed issued to the county. State ex rel. Malott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 89 M 37, 296 P 1 (1930), explained in U.S. v. Christensen, 218 F. Supp. 722 (D.C. Mont. 1963).

Where lands in an irrigation district were sold for delinquent taxes and tax deed was issued to the county, the purchaser from the county took title free of the lien of the bonds. Delinquent assessments for the payment of the bonds and interest may not be included in future assessments made against other lands in the district. The lands sold, however, remain liable to assessments for maintenance and repairs. State ex rel. Malott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 89 M 37, 296 P 1 (1930), explained in U.S. v. Christensen, 218 F. Supp. 722 (D.C. Mont. 1963).

Charge Against Lands: Bonds issued by an irrigation district are not a general obligation of the district but are a charge against the lands within the district. State ex rel. Malott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 89 M 37, 296 P 1 (1930), overruling Cosman v. Chestnut Valley Irrigation District, 74 M 111, 238 P 279 (1925).

Applicability: Section 35, Ch. 253, L. 2011, provided: "[This act] applies to local government actions commencing on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 22, 2011.

Case Notes

Unearned Interest: Transfer of bonds of irrigation district, in which interest coupons remained on bond, not canceled, and unearned portion of them was repaid to district by transferee, was proper procedure under this section, requiring that irrigation district bonds should never be sold at less than 90% of value "and accrued interest thereon to date of delivery". Am. Sur. Co. of New York v. Cove Irrigation District, 24 F2d 18 (9th Cir. 1928).

Amortization Bonds: Chapter 38, L. 1923 (now repealed), providing that the state, municipal corporations, or districts in issuing bonds shall give preference to amortization bonds and accept serial bonds only when the former cannot be negotiated to good advantage, is inapplicable to the issuance of irrigation district bonds, and the provisions of the irrigation law dealing with the subject specially are controlling. Walden v. Bitter Root Irrigation District, 68 M 281, 217 P 646 (1923).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 392 inserted (1)(b) allowing administrative charge to exceed $75 based upon actual costs; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 257 in second sentence of (1) increased maximum administrative charge from $25 to $75 and inserted third sentence clarifying that the administrative charge is additional to the annual tax levy; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 257, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, the development of subdivided farm units has greatly increased irrigation district costs to administer water, including the costs of splitting irrigated acres, establishing and operating new land and water accounts, revising maps and assessment lists, administering water in brief duration to multiple users who share a common point of delivery, instructing small tract landowners on policies and procedures, and settling disputes related to water delivery and accounting; and

WHEREAS, the $25 maximum administrative charge on irrigated property is not enough to make the delivery of water to a small acreage economically feasible; and

WHEREAS, the $25 maximum administrative charge was established in 1979, with no consideration given to the future rate of inflation."

1989 Amendment: Near beginning of (1) inserted reference to lands in each subdistrict; in (2), in two places, inserted reference to subdistrict and after "board" deleted "of commissioners"; in (3) inserted clause relating to contracts benefiting subdistrict and inserted reference to subdistrict; in (4) inserted clause relating to contracts benefiting subdistrict and inserted reference to subdistrict; in (6) inserted reference to subdistrict; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective April 4, 1989.

1983 Amendment: In (1), inserted "an administrative" before "charge of $5 to $25"; deleted from end of (2) "However, a separately owned tract of land of 1 acre or less and unable to receive water may be charged not more than the $5 minimum."; inserted (4) requiring payment by lands within an irrigation district in compliance with any contract made between the state and landowners and in compliance with a contract between the district and the state; and inserted (7) requiring that the costs to construct a gravity system installed to irrigate lands within a district be apportioned among and levied upon the lands irrigated by the system.

Case Notes

Historic Recognition of Right to Exchange or Substitute Water Upheld: In a proceeding to establish an irrigation district organized to assume the operation and maintenance of an irrigation project from the State and its predecessors in interest, the Supreme Court found that the District Court did not err in holding that the newly organized district had an obligation to provide certain landowners with water from the Bitterroot River free of charge in exchange for water from Skalkaho Creek. The District Court found that the State and its predecessors in interest had for 81 years recognized the right of each of those exchange users to the other water. Thus, the Supreme Court found the existence of an obligation to provide exchange waters and further found that the applicable statutes contemplated exactly what the District Court had ordered. In re Petition for Irrigation District in Ravalli County, 209 M 218, 680 P2d 944, 41 St. Rep. 658 (1984).

WHEREAS, the $25 maximum administrative charge was established in 1979, with no consideration given to the future rate of inflation."

1989 Amendment: In (1)(a)(ii), after "district", substituted "for" for "including any indebtedness incurred under any contract between the district and the United States, accompanying"; in first sentence of (1)(b), after "United States", substituted "government survey" for "public survey", before "bears" substituted "any tract or lot" for "any such tract", at end inserted "by the board", and near beginning of second sentence substituted "The board may charge" for "The board of commissioners may make a charge of"; inserted (1)(c) relating to exclusion of indebtedness incurred on behalf of a subdistrict; inserted (2) relating to special levies on property owners within a subdistrict; near beginning of (3) substituted "district or subdistrict is divided" for "district shall be divided"; and made minor changes in form and phraseology. Amendment effective April 4, 1989.

1983 Amendment: At end of both (1) and (2), deleted "However, a separately owned tract of land of 1 acre or less and unable to receive water may be charged not more than the $5 minimum."

Case Notes

Amount of Levy: The limitation on the amount of the levy set out in subsection (2) refers only to administrative expenses and the cost of maintenance and repairs incurred by the district, and it does not limit the amount that may be levied to reimburse the United States for maintenance necessarily undertaken by it pursuant to the original contract. U.S. v. Fort Belknap Irrigation District, 197 F. Supp. 812 (D.C. Mont. 1961).

Authority to Tax: The provision made by this section for the raising of revenue for the maintenance and operation of irrigation districts is sufficiently broad to enable them to meet exactions of the taxing power of the state. Buffalo Rapids Irrigation District v. Colleran, 85 M 466, 279 P 369 (1929).

Apportionment of Assessments: The apportionment of assessments for administrative expenses, maintenance, repairs, etc., of an irrigation district on the basis of the irrigable area in each tract of land of 40 acres or less, prescribed by this section, is neither unreasonable nor arbitrary in view of the fact that that method has had the benefit of long experience in other states and the consensus of opinion is that no fairer method has been devised. Walden v. Bitter Root Irrigation District, 68 M 281, 217 P 646 (1923).

Ordinary Running Expenses: Ordinary overhead or running expenses of a district are to be met by an annual levy of taxes. In re Gallatin Irrigation District, 48 M 605, 140 P 92 (1914).

Attorney General's Opinions

Board of Commissioners — Authority to Directly Assess Irrigation Tax or Receive Direct Payment Prohibited: The Board of Commissioners of an irrigation district may not, even with the consent of all water users within the district, bypass the annual tax levy procedure in 85-7-2104 and directly assess the water users' lands for amounts otherwise subject to levy under such provision. The County Treasurer may issue receipts of payment for amounts levied under 85-7-2104 but remitted directly to the Board of Commissioners of an irrigation district upon appropriate certification by the district of such payments. However, the practice of direct payments to the Commissioners must terminate, and all unexpended money so received must be remitted to the County Treasurer for deposit and supervision. 42 A.G. Case Notes

County Debtor of District: When funds of an irrigation district are deposited with the County Treasurer they become county funds for which the district has a credit on the books of the Treasurer, i.e., the relation of debtor and creditor is created between the county and the district. State ex rel. Blenkner v. Stillwater County, 104 M 387, 66 P2d 788 (1937).

Power to Levy Taxes:

Authority to issue irrigation bonds implies an authority to levy a tax to pay them. Judith Basin Irrigation District v. Malott, 73 F2d 142, 97 ALR 504 (9th Cir. 1934).

An irrigation district organized under the laws of this state exercises some governmental functions; for example, it may levy taxes (this section), which is the exercise of one of the highest prerogatives of sovereignty. Crow Creek Irrigation District v. Crittenden, 71 M 66, 227 P 63 (1924).

Compiler's Comments

1987 Amendment: In first sentence, after "sinking fund", substituted language concerning backed, insured, or guaranteed federal or state investments for "in interest-bearing securities whenever in their judgment the investment may be to the best interest of the district"; and near beginning of second sentence substituted "investments" for "securities".

Case Notes

Distribution Pro Rata When Funds Insufficient — When Interest Should Be Retired First: Where the bonds issued by an irrigation district were straight maturity and not serial bonds and the fund out of which they were payable was insufficient to make full payment of them all and could not be replenished by further assessments, the money remaining was properly distributed pro rata, irrespective of the fact that other holders had been paid in full. If the fund is insufficient to pay the principal but is sufficient to pay the only remaining unpaid coupon holder, his coupons should be paid first, placing all holders on a parity in that respect. Limitation to Compel Payment of District Warrant: The County Treasurer, by law custodian of the funds of an irrigation district the office of which is located in his county and therefore charged with duty not to pay out funds on claims believed by him to be invalid, could properly assert the defense of the 5-year limitation in a proceeding to compel payment of a registered district warrant under 27-2-215 (renumbered 27-2-231). State ex rel. DeKalb v. Ferrell, 105 M 218, 70 P2d 290 (1937).

Right of Warrant Holder to Writ of Mandamus: To entitle a registered warrant holder to a Writ of Mandate to compel payment thereon by the County Treasurer out of the funds of an irrigation district, he must show Treasurer's clear legal duty to pay and ability to comply with the Writ, with sufficient money on hand in the fund to pay outstanding unpaid prior registered warrants with interest (7-6-2605 and 7-6-2606). State ex rel. DeKalb v. Ferrell, 105 M 218, 70 P2d 290 (1937).

85-7-2167. Sale or transfer of lands.

Case Notes

Highway Condemnation: The state Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) acquiring land for highway purposes is not liable for assessment and taxes by irrigation district since land taken will no longer benefit from services provided by district, notwithstanding the contention of district that takings so reduced total irrigable acreage of district as to increase per-acre cost of operation and maintenance of remainder. Final Judgment: Under 25-1-111 (since repealed), providing that the final determination of the rights of a party to a special proceeding is a judgment, an order of the District Court directing the exclusion of the lands of a protestant from a proposed extension of an irrigation district is a final judgment. In re Bitter Root Irrigation District, 67 M 436, 218 P 945 (1923), distinguished in In re Fort Shaw Irrigation District, 81 M 170, 261 P 962 (1927), and State ex rel. Bole v. Lay, 89 M 541, 300 P 238 (1931), explained in Wills v. Morris, 100 M 504, 50 P2d 858 (1935).

Absence of Bill of Exceptions: Where in a proceeding for the extension of an irrigation district, the evidence heard at the trial was not taken and preserved by the court stenographer as it should have been and the evidence was not incorporated in a bill of exceptions duly settled and allowed as it might have been as far as obtainable, it will be presumed on appeal, in the absence of the evidence, that the District Court heard and determined the question whether appellant's lands were benefited or not. In re Crow Creek Irrigation District, 63 M 293, 207 P 121 (1922).

85-7-2205. Definition of irrigable land.

Case Notes

When Land Considered Susceptible of Irrigation: A party objected to the extension of an irrigation district's boundaries on grounds that the land proposed for inclusion did not meet the definition of irrigable land and was not legally susceptible of irrigation. The Supreme Court noted that 85-7-1808 allows inclusion of lands susceptible of irrigation by the works of the district, which means that the land can physically receive irrigation water from the district's works. The court declined to redefine the statutory language "susceptible of irrigation" to mean only land that meets the definition of irrigable land or that is legally susceptible of irrigation. The land in question had been irrigated for decades from the irrigation district works and was therefore susceptible of irrigation for the limited purposes of the petition to extend the district boundaries. In re Formation of E. Bench Irrigation District, 2009 MT 135, 350 M 309, 207 P3d 1097 (2009).

85-7-2212. Irrigation ditches — nonliabilities.

Case Notes

Both Parties Equally Liable for Landslide Damage Caused by Ditch Seepage: The hillside near parallel irrigation ditches owned by plaintiff and defendant gave way, causing damages. Each party blamed the other for engaging in activity that caused the landslide, presenting extensive exhibits and expert testimony. After a 4-day hearing, the District Court concluded that the activities of both parties jointly caused the landslide and that both parties were equally liable for the costs of the damages. After reviewing the voluminous transcript, the Supreme Court deferred to the discretion of the District Court in determining the weight of the evidence and credibility of the witnesses regarding the two credible though contradictory reports and declined to set aside the judgment. Graveley Simmental Ranch Co. v. Quigley, 2003 MT 34, 314 M 226, 65 P3d 225 (2003).

Permanent Injunction Inappropriate Limitation of Lawful Irrigation Practices: The Wellses built a home on property adjacent to land that had been flood irrigated by the Youngs for generations. Between 1994 and 1998, the Youngs' land was irrigated three times, and on each occasion, the Wellses experienced flooding in the crawl space of their home. The Wellses sought damages in excess of $80,000 based on tort theories of negligence, nuisance, and trespass. The District Court reasoned that because the irrigation practices predated the construction of the Wellses' home, they could not recover damages or recover on their trespass claim under this section. The court also concluded that the nuisance claim was barred by 27-30-101. The court held that the Youngs breached the general obligation imposed by 28-1-201 because their irrigation practices caused immediate, irreparable, and substantial harm to the Wellses' home, but the negligence claim was disposed of because the Wellses failed to establish that the irrigation practiced breached the standard of care of a reasonable farm irrigator engaged in flood irrigation. Nevertheless, the District Court permanently enjoined the Youngs from irrigating their property because future irrigation without modification of the head ditch would result in an unreasonable and substantial risk of continuing harm and irreparable injury to the Wellses' property. The Youngs moved to vacate the injunction based on the determination that their irrigation practices were lawful, but the motion was denied, so the Youngs appealed. The Supreme Court examined the record for abuse of discretion, noting that a District Court must find a breach of an obligation by the party sought to be enjoined before imposing a permanent injunction. The District Court's general finding that the Youngs breached the duty imposed under 28-1-201 conflicted with the specific findings that the Youngs did not trespass or create a nuisance and conformed to the applicable standard of care. Absent a specific breach of obligation, the District Court abused its discretion in issuing a permanent injunction enjoining the Youngs from engaging in lawful flood irrigation practices. Wells v. Young, 2002 MT 102, 309 M 419, 47 P3d 809 (2002), distinguishing Madison Fork Ranch v. L&B Lodge Pole Timber Prod., 189 M 292, 615 P2d 900 (1980).

No Negligence by Irrigation District for Failure to Warn of Unforeseeable Flood: Plaintiffs' property was damaged by an unprecedented flood caused by an ice jam on the Clark Fork River. Plaintiffs alleged that the local irrigation district was liable for breaching its duty to construct and maintain an irrigation system that would protect the property and for failing to warn of the flooding conditions to allow plaintiffs the opportunity to protect their property. The District Court held that the irrigation district had no duty to prevent the flood or to warn of the impending natural disaster, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The first element that plaintiffs must establish in a negligence action is the existence of a duty of care, and the measure of a duty of care owed is the scope of the risk that the negligent conduct foreseeably entails. Thus, the primary factor in determining whether the irrigation district owed a duty of care was whether it was foreseeable, as a matter of law, that the district's acts or omissions would pose a risk of injury to plaintiffs. Here, substantial evidence supported the conclusion that the risk that flooding would damage plaintiffs' property was unforeseeable, so the district had no duty to erect or maintain flood control structures to prevent the unforeseeable event. The district also exercised reasonable care in the maintenance of the irrigation system that was in place. Further, plaintiffs failed to advance any applicable authority that would impose upon the district a duty to warn of the unforeseeable flood because mere knowledge of the dangerous situation, of which plaintiffs themselves had become aware the night of the flood, did not impose a legal duty to warn. Gaudreau v. Clinton Irrigation District, 2001 MT 164, 306 M 121, 30 P3d 1070 (2001), following Estate of Strever v. Cline, 278 M 165, 924 P2d 666 (1996).

Failure to Allege Error — Denial of New Trial: Plaintiffs appealed from directed verdict and order by the District Court denying a new trial, claiming that the court erred in determining that plaintiffs had failed to establish a prima facie case against defendants for the overflow of a drainage ditch near plaintiffs' residence. The Supreme Court affirmed the lower court decision, holding that because subsection (2) of this section is an independent, sufficient, and clearly articulated ground for granting defendants' direct verdict motion, plaintiffs' failure to allege error under the subsection constituted a waiver of plaintiffs' claim. Schaubel v. Iversen, 257 M 164, 848 P2d 489, 50 St. Rep. 213 (1993).

No Liability for Damage From Irrigation Ditch Seepage: Home owners appealed a District Court order granting the irrigation ditch owners summary judgment, alleging that the ditch owners negligently diverted water through the ditch, resulting in ground saturation and subsequent flood damage to the home owner's property. Although the home owners asserted that no seepage occurred before the ditch owners overused the ditch, the undisputed facts established that the damage occurred either because of weather conditions or from the same kind of seepage from the ditch that had existed for at least 53 years before the home owners arrived or obtained an interest in the land. Alexander v. McCauley, 250 M 216, 819 P2d 176, 48 St. Rep. 798 (1991).

Creation of Districts

85-8-101. Petition for creation of district.

Case Notes

County Subject to Assessment for Benefits: A drainage district created in 1921 under the provisions of 85-8-101, et seq., could recover assessments made against the county for benefits accruing to its highways from its system, since the act, as it existed prior to amendment by Ch. 169, L. 1929 (85-8-307, 85-8-341, 85-8-350, and 85-8-351), was broad enough to authorize such assessments, as against contention that the county could not be held for costs unless it owned lands in the district. State ex rel. Valley Center Drain District v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 100 M 581, 51 P2d 635 (1935), explained in Burke v. Sullivan, 127 M 374, 265 P2d 203 (1954).

Case Notes

Improvements: Special assessments for flood control purposes are limited to land exclusive of improvements. In re W. Great Falls Flood Control & Drainage District, 159 M 277, 496 P2d 1143 (1971). (Decision prior to 1973 amendment.)

Commission Property: A flood control district could assess property and improvements consisting of graded land, drainage culverts, highway bridges, roadbeds, and pavement, within the district's exterior boundaries, that were owned or under lease by State Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission). State ex rel. St. Highway Comm'n v. W. Great Falls Flood Control & Drainage District, 155 M 157, 468 P2d 753 (1970), explained in In re W. Great Falls Flood Control & Drainage District, 159 M 277, 496 P2d 1143 (1971).

County Subject to Assessment for Benefits: This section, both before and after amendment by Ch. 169, L. 1929, was broad enough to authorize assessments against a county for benefits to highways resulting from the system of a drainage district although the county did not own land within the district. State ex rel. Valley Center Drain District v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 100 M 581, 51 P2d 635 (1935), explained in Burke v. Sullivan, 127 M 374, 265 P2d 203 (1954).

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Case Notes

Constitutionality: The fact that the drainage statute by this section permits the Commissioners to go upon a landowner's property, in advance of an award, for the purpose of necessary investigation to determine the special benefits received or damages suffered by it does not render it violative of the constitutional provision that private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without compensation having been first made to or paid into court for the owner. In re Valley Center Drain District, 64 M 545, 211 P 218 (1922).

1995 Amendment: Chapter 325 in (2), near beginning, substituted "state treasurer" for "state auditor", after "certified" substituted "the department of administration" for "the auditor", and after "warrant on the" substituted "treasury" for "treasurer"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Case Notes

Commission Property: Flood control district could assess property and improvements consisting of graded land, drainage culverts, highway bridges, roadbeds, and pavement, within exterior boundaries of district, that were owned or under lease by state Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission). State ex rel. St. Highway Comm'n v. W. Great Falls Flood Control & Drainage District, 155 M 157, 468 P2d 753 (1970), explained in In re W. Great Falls Flood Control & Drainage District, 159 M 277, 496 P2d 1143 (1971).

Legislature's Authority to Include State Lands: The Legislature has authority to include state lands not used for governmental purposes within special improvement or drainage districts and to make them subject to assessments to the extent they are benefited. Such assessments are not "taxes" within the meaning of constitutional and statutory provisions. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Yellowstone County, 108 M 21, 88 P2d 6 (1939).

85-8-615. Procedure to levy additional assessments.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 584 at beginning inserted reference to 15-10-420; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 10, 1999.

Severability: Section 172, Ch. 584, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 175, Ch. 584, L. 1999, provided that this section applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

85-8-619. Assessments to have effect of judgment.

Case Notes

Liquidated Claims Against County: Under this section assessments made by a drainage district, levied against a county for benefits accruing to its highways, are liquidated claims that do not require an audit by the Board of County Commissioners, but in their payment, provisions of the budget law must be observed, under 7-6-2311 through 7-6-2319 and 7-6-2303 (all sections now repealed). State ex rel. Valley Center Drain District v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 100 M 581, 51 P2d 635 (1935), explained in Burke v. Sullivan, 127 M 374, 265 P2d 203 (1954).

85-8-623. Assessments not to be obstructed by preliminary defects.

Compiler's Comments

Section Not Codified: Section 89-2820, R.C.M. 1947, a validation clause for holders of bonds, warrants, or other evidence of indebtedness, was not codified in the MCA. This clause has not been repealed and is still valid law. Reference may be made to sec. 100, Ch. 129, L. 1921.

85-8-624. Assessments on improvements — taxpayers' approval, limitations, and election procedures.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 367 in (3)(b) substituted "13-1-401" for "85-8-302" and after "state" inserted "in Title 13"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1987 Amendment: At end of (3)(a) and (3)(c) and second sentence of (3)(d) changed "13-1-401(3)" to "13-1-401(4)"; and in (3)(b) changed "85-8-304" to "85-8-302".

1985 Amendment: In (3) changed "85-8-303" to "13-1-401(3)" in three places; near end of (3)(c) before "give them notice", inserted "the election administrator or deputy election administrator shall"; and in (3)(d) in second sentence substituted "and the summary must be included in the notice" for "and shall include the summary as part of the notice".

1981 Amendment: Deleted brackets around "85-8-303" in (3)(a); deleted "except that the form of the ballot shall be as hereinafter provided" at the end of (3)(a); in (3)(b), deleted brackets around "85-8-304" and following the reference inserted language relating to the applicability of state general election laws.

85-15-207. Dams and reservoirs — how constructed.

Compiler's Comments

1985 Amendment: Inserted "dam or" before "reservoir".

Case Notes

Common-Law Negligence: An instruction in the precise language of this section should not be given where the plaintiff is suing on the theory of common-law negligence. Richland County v. Anderson, 129 M 559, 291 P2d 267 (1955).

Measurement of Water in Reservoir: Devices for measuring the water in a storage reservoir should be such that at a glance anyone may tell the exact number of acre-feet therein at any time, thus obviating the necessity of calling in engineers or others to measure it. The details of operation present a practical or engineering problem rather than a judicial one, and therefore should properly be left to the parties interested. If the court's intervention or assistance is required in that behalf, a motion for modification of the decree should suffice. Fed. Land Bank v. Morris, 112 M 445, 116 P2d 1007 (1941).

Rights of Person Reservoiring Water: Briefly stated, the rights of a person to reservoir water are as follows: He may, in any one year, store for use in that or succeeding years what he has a right to use and also any additional amounts which others would not have the right to use and which otherwise would go to waste. The appropriation and use of water, as well as the sites for reservoirs for collecting it, constitute a public use under Art. III, sec. 15, 1889 Mont. Const. (Art. IX, sec. 3, 1972 Mont. Const.), since it is in the interest of the public that water be conserved rather than wasted, so that arid lands may be made productive. Fed. Land Bank v. Morris, 112 M 445, 116 P2d 1007 (1941).

Storage of Flood Water: Under Title 85, ch. 15, et seq., reservoirs may be constructed for the purpose of storing flood water, in the course or at the headwaters of an adjudicated stream, provided their construction does not interfere with the use by prior appropriators of the natural flow in the stream to the extent of their appropriations. If, upon the examination, the department finds that the dam, dike, or reservoir is unsafe or is diverting or is being filled with water to such an extent as to render it unsafe, it shall notify the county attorney of the county in which the dam, dike, or reservoir is located, setting forth its findings, and the county attorney shall immediately take the necessary steps to abate the danger and make the structure safe.

(3) If either party is dissatisfied with the findings of the department, it may appeal to the district court of the district wherein the dam, dike, or reservoir is located, and the court shall hear and determine the matter at the earliest practical time, subject to the right of either party to appeal as in other civil cases; however, the judgment of the department shall control until the final determination of the case."

Part 1
Yellowstone River Compact

Part Case Notes

Commerce Clause Immunity: The Yellowstone River Compact was approved by Congress. Because it was approved by Congress, it is federal, not state, law for purposes of Commerce Clause objections. Therefore, the Compact cannot by definition be a state law impermissibly interfering with commerce but is instead a federal law, immune from attack. Intake Water Co. v. Yellowstone River Compact Comm'n, (D.C. Mont. 1983, cv 1184, apparently not reported), affirmed 769 F2d 568 (1985).

Compact Applies to All Waters of Yellowstone River Basin: A diversion of water from the Yellowstone River at a point on the river that is not specifically apportioned by Article V of the Yellowstone River Compact is subject to the terms of the Compact because the proposed diversion is within the Yellowstone River Basin and is on the Yellowstone River system. Intake Water Co. v. Yellowstone River Compact Comm'n, (D.C. Mont. 1983, cv 1184, apparently not reported), affirmed 769 F2d 568 (1985).

Compact Not in Violation of Equal Protection: In a suit for declaratory and injunctive relief, Intake Water Company challenged the Yellowstone River Compact, claiming that it was a violation of equal protection under the Fourteenth Amendment for the Compact to restrict interbasin transfer of Yellowstone River water, while other water appropriations from other river basins in Montana do not require consent of all the signatory states to the compact. A three-judge panel (required under 28 U.S.C. §2281 repealed by Act of August 12, 1976, 90 Stat. 1119) upheld the Compact, ruling: (1) it is well settled that the Fourteenth Amendment does not prohibit legislation that operates on a limited geographical area within a state; (2) differing conditions in different geographic areas may provide a reasonable basis for different legislative treatment; and (3) Intake cannot meet its required heavy burden to show that the Compact is not rationally related to a legitimate government purpose. Intake Water Co. v. Yellowstone River Compact Comm'n, (D.C. Mont. 1983, cv 1184, apparently not reported), affirmed 769 F2d 568 (1985).

Jurisdiction of Federal and State Courts Concurrent: Where the defendant private corporation appropriating water from the Yellowstone River in Wyoming for use in Montana brought an action in state court in Montana to compel certain actions of the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation under the Yellowstone River Compact and the plaintiff subsequently brought an action in the federal District Court in Montana under 28 U.S.C. §§1331(2) and 2201 to declare the rights of the parties under the Yellowstone River Compact, both the state courts of Wyoming and Montana had subject matter jurisdiction to construe the terms of the Compact and enforce its provisions. Utah Int'l, Inc. v. Intake Water Co., 484 F. Supp. 36, 36 St. Rep. 2270 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Jurisdiction of Federal Court — Abstention in Favor of State Court Proceedings: Where the defendant private corporation had instituted an action in state District Court to compel certain actions of the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation under the Yellowstone River Compact and the plaintiff water company subsequently brought an action in federal District Court under 28 U.S.C. §§1331(2) and 2201 to declare the rights of the parties to waters appropriated by each under the Compact, the assumption of jurisdiction of the federal court was discretionary and the court should, in accordance with the principles of abstention announced in Colorado River Water Conservation District v. U.S., 424 US 800 (1976), abstain from exercising its jurisdiction, as there were significant questions of state policy which would appropriately be determined in the case pending before the state District Court. Utah Int'l, Inc. v. Intake Water Co., 484 F. Supp. 36, 36 St. Rep. 2270 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Jurisdiction of Federal Court — Compact Law as Federal Question: Where the defendant private corporation had instituted an action in state District Court to compel certain action of the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation and where the plaintiff subsequently brought an action in federal District Court for a declaratory judgment under 28 U.S.C. §§1331(2) and 2201 to declare the rights of the parties to waters appropriated by each under the Yellowstone River Compact, the Compact constituted a law of the United States under 28 U.S.C. §1331(2), giving the federal District Court jurisdiction to declare its terms and enforce its provisions. Utah Int'l, Inc. v. Intake Water Co., 484 F. Supp. 36, 36 St. Rep. 2270 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Intake Water Co. v. Yellowstone River Compact Comm'n, (D.C. Mont. 1983, cv 1184, apparently not reported), affirmed 769 F2d 568 (1985).

Diversion in Wyoming — Use in Montana — Priority Dates: Corporation filed a Wyoming application to appropriate water, as required by the Yellowstone River Compact, because Wyoming was the state of diversion (Montana being the state of ultimate use of the water). Corporation then filed the same information in Montana, which assigned the date of the Wyoming filing as the priority date in conformity with Wyoming law. Water company did not attack the Wyoming filing but claimed mandamus should issue requiring Montana to assign the Montana filing date as the priority date. Montana correctly assigned the Wyoming filing date as the priority date, as required by the Compact, and mandamus would not issue, since there was no clear legal duty for Montana to assign the Montana filing date as the priority date. State ex rel. Intake Water Co. v. Bd. of Nat'l Resources & Conserv., 197 M 482, 645 P2d 383, 39 St. Rep. 717 (1982).

Appropriation Filing — Correction of Defect — Priority Date: Corporation filed application in Wyoming, as required by the Yellowstone River Compact, to appropriate water in Wyoming for use in Montana. Montana notified corporation that it should also file the same information on Montana forms and that if it did so the corporation would retain the priority date of the date it filed in Wyoming. The corporation filed in Montana within 18 months of its Wyoming filing. Since 85-2-302 gives Montana discretion of allowing up to 18 months for a correction of a defective filing without the applicants losing the original filing date as the priority date, corporation was entitled to have Montana, in its discretion, assign as a priority date the date of the Wyoming filing. Montana had no clear legal duty to do otherwise and was not subject to a mandate that it assign as the priority date the date of the Montana filing. State ex rel. Intake Water Co. v. Bd. of Nat'l Resources & Conserv., 197 M 482, 645 P2d 383, 39 St. Rep. 717 (1982).

Compact as Treaty — State Law Subordinate: The Yellowstone River Compact, signed by Wyoming, North Dakota, and Montana and ratified by Congress, has the status of a treaty; and state law, including Montana's water law statutes, is subordinate to it. State ex rel. Intake Water Co. v. Bd. of Nat'l Resources & Conserv., 197 M 482, 645 P2d 383, 39 St. Rep. 717 (1982).

WHEREAS, by its terms, the Compact required the participation of the United States in the project to repair and rehabilitate the Tongue River Dam in southeastern Montana, which required certain authorizations and appropriations by the Congress of the United States; and

WHEREAS, in the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reserved Water Rights Settlement Act of 1992, referred to in this preamble as the federal act (Public Law 102-374, 106 Stat. 1186), Congress approved the Compact and obligated, under certain terms and conditions, the federal government and the state to provide funding for the project; and

The parties agree to continue to pursue, in good faith, quantification of water rights, and further agree that all other relevant provisions of this Compact apply to a settlement of this water right through this process. In the event the parties are unable to agree on quantification, the United States retains its right to have the quantity of any reserved water right for BCNRA adjudicated in a state or federal court of competent jurisdiction"; in III, E. Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument substituted current Compact language relating to Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument water rights, including Table 7, for former language that read: "E. Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument

The parties were unable to finalize agreement on quantification of the water rights for LBBNM prior to the effective date of this Compact. For the purposes of settlement of the reserved water rights for land administered by the National Park Service in Montana, the parties agree that a water right for instream flow is necessary for the historic purposes of LBBNM. The parties agree to continue to pursue, in good faith, quantification of water rights and further agree that all other relevant provisions of this Compact apply to a settlement of this water right through this process. In the event the parties are unable to agree on quantification, the United States retains its right to have the quantity of any reserved water right for LBBNM adjudicated in a state or federal court of competent jurisdiction"; and throughout Article III WATER RIGHT renumbered existing Tables to reflect insertion of new Tables and changed internal references to Tables, as appropriate; in Article V GENERAL PROVISIONS, in V, A. No Effect on Tribal Rights or Other Federal Reserved Water Rights, in 1. near middle of first sentence, inserted "[with respect to BHNB, GNP, and YNP or] the nature or extent of the rights to water or the right to administer water [with respect to BCNRA and LBBNM]" and inserted last sentence recognizing seniority of Crow Tribal water rights; in V, C. General Disclaimers inserted 10. relating to alteration or amendment of Yellowstone River Compact; in V, G. Severability, at end, inserted "provided that for the purposes of Sec. 85-2-702(3) MCA, the water rights described in this Compact for the LBBNM and BCNRA Units shall be considered as separate Compacts"; in VI FINALITY OF COMPACT AND DISMISSAL OF PENDING CASES, in B., 2. Disposition of Federal Suits, at end of first sentence, inserted "and any claims made by the United States for LBBNM or BCNRA in federal court"; in VI, C. Settlement of Claims, in first paragraph in second sentence, substituted "retained in Article III, sections D. and F. in the Compact for YNP, GNP, and BHNM" for "retained in Article III, sections B., D., E, and F." and inserted last paragraph exempting water rights Claims No. 43P-W-162354-00 and 43P-W-162348-00, relating to Big Horn Canal and Pete's Spring, from this Compact; adjusted internal references to reflect codification of new material within existing compact; and made minor changes in style.

Codification Instruction — Explanation: Section 2, Ch. 149, L. 1995, provided: "[Section 1] is intended to be codified as an integral part of the United States National Park Service-Montana Water Rights Compact, as provided in 85-20-401, and the provisions of the United States National Park Service-Montana Water Rights Compact, as provided in 85-20-401, apply to [section 1]." Accordingly, the Code Commissioner has inserted portions of [this act] into 85-20-401, and those changes are reported in the 1995 amendment note.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 149, L. 1995, provided: "(1) [This act] is effective upon signature by the parties as provided in [this act].

(2) Because [this act] requires Montana and United States approval and incorporates provisions of the existing water rights compact between the United States National Park Service and the State of Montana as provided in 85-20-401, [this act] applies only to the Bighorn Canyon National Recreation Area and the Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument. The provisions of the existing compact, as provided in 85-20-401, continue in effect and are not affected by [this act] and are incorporated into [this act]."

1983 Amendment: Substituted reference to state special revenue fund for reference to earmarked revenue fund.

Attorney General's Opinions

Payment of Medical Expenses Incurred by Fish and Game Violator: Medical expenses incurred by a prisoner incarcerated in a county jail for a violation of state fish and game laws are not chargeable against the state or county, with two exceptions: (1) if the medical condition threatens the health or well-being of other prisoners or persons present in the jail and the county incurs expenses pursuant to section 16-2822, R.C.M. 1947 (7-32-2204, MCA), such expenses are "costs" as defined in section 26-1002, R.C.M. 1947 (87-1-104, MCA), and should be borne by the state; and (2) if a prisoner is financially unable to provide such necessities for himself, in which case the provisions of Title 71, ch. 3, R.C.M. 1947 (Title 53, ch. 3, part 3, MCA), apply. 30 A.G. Op. 36 (1964). (Annotator's note: An amendment to section 16-2818, R.C.M. 1947 (7-32-2222, MCA), by sec. 1, Ch. 179, L. 1965, provided that medical expenses "shall be borne by the agency or authority at whose instance the prisoner is detained". The applicability of this provision to fish and game violations was affirmed in 34 A.G. Op. 24 (1971). An amendment to 7-32-2222 by sec. 1, Ch. 768, L. 1991, provided that medical expenses must be borne by the arresting agency and made an exception for arrests by the Department of Corrections and Human Services (now Department of Corrections).)

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 258, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the 2007 Legislature passed House Joint Resolution No. 16, urging that revision of the criminal codes within Title 87 of the Montana Code Annotated be given priority; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 noted that practitioners, judges, and citizens find that the criminal codes intertwined within the fish and game laws in Title 87 are difficult to read, understand, and prosecute; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 directed that revision of the Title 87 criminal code should not include policy changes to current laws and should adhere to the intent of the legislatures that crafted the laws; and

WHEREAS, in 2008, the Director of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks appointed a Title 87 criminal code revision working group, consisting of Justices of the Peace, County Attorneys, an Assistant Attorney General, legal counsel and the enforcement administrator of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and legislative staff; and

WHEREAS, the working group met numerous times and spent countless hours crafting a revision that makes the Title 87 criminal code more understandable without making substantive or policy changes to present law; and

WHEREAS, revision of the fish and game criminal statutes will benefit the hunting and fishing public, magistrates, and prosecutors by codifying crimes and penalties in a separate chapter of Montana law, rather than being intertwined throughout Title 87."

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 461, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies to all management plans that have not been finalized by the department of fish, wildlife, and parks prior to January 1, 2003."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 369 inserted (9) requiring department programs that manage fish and wildlife so as to prevent the need for listing under 87-5-107 or the Endangered Species Act and that manage listed, sensitive, or potentially listed species under 87-5-107 or the Endangered Species Act so as to assist in their maintenance or recovery, requiring department to balance maintenance or recovery with social and economic impacts of maintenance or recovery, and providing that subsection (9) does not affect ownership or possession of a privately held listed, sensitive, or potentially listed species; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 1999.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 6, Ch. 544, L. 1999, amended sec. 18, Ch. 459, L. 1995, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 459 to March 1, 2006.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 459 in temporary version in (1), at end of first sentence, inserted clause authorizing implementation of voluntary programs to encourage hunting access and to promote harmonious relations between landowners and public; and made minor changes in style. Amendment terminates October 1, 2001.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 459, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana has a cherished hunting heritage based on a deep knowledge of and respect for wildlife and the land; and

WHEREAS, private landowners provide wildlife habitat and hunting opportunities, the hunting public provides financial and political support for sound wildlife management, and the combined efforts of landowners and the hunting public have sustained Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, landowner/outfitter/sportsperson relations have become increasingly strained over the past several years, leading to increased polarization between the groups; and

WHEREAS, the 1993 Legislature addressed this problem through the passage of House Joint Resolution No. 24, which requested the Governor, through the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, to coordinate a sustained, ongoing, cooperative effort to address these issues by establishing statewide, regional, and local groups to develop mutually satisfactory solutions that would preserve Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage and encourage the continuance of a viable outfitting industry; and

WHEREAS, in response to that request, the Governor appointed the Advisory Council on Private Land/Public Wildlife, consisting of representatives of the affected groups, to study the issues in anticipation of legislation that reflects the mutual interests of landowners, outfitters, and the sporting community; and

WHEREAS, after considering extensive input and advice from individual private citizens, local working groups, agencies, and nonprofit organizations involved in conservation, the Advisory Council by consensus developed recommendations for improving hunting access to private lands and for providing tangible benefits for landowners who allow access to their lands for hunting; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council has made efforts to break new ground philosophically in designing its recommendations, requiring that all interested parties be willing to accept change in order to benefit everyone who has an interest in Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council finds it appropriate to present the following recommendations to the Legislature in the spirit of a cooperative and positive effort to enhance relations between landowners, outfitters, and sportspersons."

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 459, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 1 through 3] [87-1-265 through 87-1-267] grant rulemaking authority to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement programs for hunter management and hunting access enhancement. It is intended that in addition to the statutory guidelines set out in those sections, any rules be adopted with the purpose of optimizing hunting opportunity and access while minimizing administrative costs in providing benefits to landowners who voluntarily participate in the programs. In addition, [section 6] [87-1-268] grants rulemaking authority to the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement the provisions of variable pricing for Class B-10 and Class B-11 outfitter-sponsored licenses. It is intended that the fish, wildlife, and parks commission use its licensing authority to adjust the price of those licenses as necessary and that any additional revenue generated by variable pricing be used to fund the hunting access enhancement program."

Severability: Section 13, Ch. 459, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 14, Ch. 459, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Study of Recreational User Fees — 1992 Report: Section 5, Ch. 659, L. 1991, provided for a study by the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, in cooperation with the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, of the feasibility of charging recreational beneficiaries of water storage projects fees to assist in the repayment of a portion of those project costs. A written report must be submitted to the Water Policy Committee by July 1, 1992.

1983 Amendment: Substituted reference to state special revenue fund for reference to earmarked revenue fund.

Seasonal Rules Adopted Annually: Section 2-4-102 excludes from the Montana Administrative Procedure Act seasonal rules adopted annually relating to hunting, fishing, and trapping if the rules are published in accordance with statutory requirements. Section 87-1-202 sets out those requirements. Although the rules do not appear in the Administrative Register of Montana, they are published and copies are available in state and regional offices of the Department.

Case Notes

Transfer of Alternative Livestock to Unlicensed Tribal Lands Illegal: The Wallaces, licensed alternative livestock ranchers, sought to reduce the size of their elk herd by transferring about 500 elk to the Crow Indian Reservation for subsequent release into the wild. The elk had been certified as free of tuberculosis, brucellosis, and elk-red deer hybridization by the Department of Livestock (DOL). Despite notification by the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks (DFWP) that such an act violated state law, the Wallaces transferred 68 elk to the tribe. DFWP requested and received a permanent injunction prohibiting any further transfer of elk to the tribe, and the Wallaces appealed, questioning DFWP jurisdiction. The Supreme Court noted that DFWP has a statutory basis for its jurisdiction over the Wallaces as licensees. Based on DFWP jurisdiction over exterior fencing, and the Department's knowledge that the elk would not be contained behind a game-proof fence upon delivery to the tribe, DFWP had statutory authority to seek the permanent injunction to prevent the transfer. Also, the introduction or transplantation of any wildlife into the wild, including game farm elk, requires the approval of DFWP. Further, 87-4-414 provides that alternative livestock may be kept only on a licensed alternative livestock ranch, and because the tribe is not a licensed facility under Montana law, neither DFWP nor DOL had authority to permit the transfer. The Wallaces knew that the elk were destined for an unlicensed location where they would be released into the wild and could migrate back into Montana, so the transfer violated the Wallaces' duty as licensees to act in accordance with law, and the District Court correctly enjoined the transportation of the elk. Hagener v. Wallace, 2002 MT 109, 309 M 473, 47 P3d 847 (2002).

Hours of Hunting Sufficiently Clear to Withstand Due Process Challenge: After he shot a bull elk half an hour before sunrise, Johnston was arrested for hunting before the allowed time. Johnston challenged the rules of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks as being inconsistent, ambiguous, vague, and factually erroneous. The Supreme Court held that the rules establishing the time of sunrise within the hunting district where Johnston shot the elk were clear in that they precisely defined the time of sunrise on the day Johnston shot the elk, leaving no room to guess at what time a hunter could begin shooting. St. v. Johnston, 263 M 179, 867 P2d 1090, 51 St. Rep. 5 (1994).

Evidence Sufficient to Support Conviction for Game Farm (now Alternative Livestock Ranch) Violations: Evidence of the presence of wild elk on Brogan's game farm (now alternative livestock ranch), gathered by wardens through direct observation and supported by circumstantial evidence, such as animal tracks, the presence of hay near gates, the absence of electric power in the game farm (now alternative livestock ranch) fence, and Brogan's evasive conduct, was sufficient to support Brogan's conviction for capturing wild elk for use on the game farm (now alternative livestock ranch) and for failure to maintain fences. St. v. Brogan, 261 M 79, 862 P2d 19, 50 St. Rep. 1204 (1993).

Removal Proceedings: Summary dismissal of employee by the State Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission) (holder of such authority under former law) without prior charges by the Commission, reasonable notice and hearing thereon, and without affording the employee an opportunity to refute the charges was prohibited. State ex rel. Ford v. St. Fish & Game Comm'n, 148 M 151, 418 P2d 300 (1966), distinguished in Steer v. Missoula, 169 M 398, 547 P2d 843 (1976).

Construction and Application: The power of discharge must be "for cause" and there is no distinction between officers and employees, and removal may be effected only after notice of the charges made has been given and the person involved has been given an opportunity to be heard in his defense. State ex rel. Opheim v. St. Fish & Game Comm'n, 133 M 362, 323 P2d 1116 (1958), distinguished in Steer v. Missoula, 169 M 398, 547 P2d 843 (1976), and State ex rel. Hollibaugh v. St. Fish & Game Comm'n, 139 M 384, 365 P2d 942 (1961).

Attorney General's Opinions

Game Harvesting — Game Ranch: The Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission) does not have the authority to regulate the hunting and killing of privately owned game through the imposition of licensing requirements on individual hunters or open and closed seasons. 36 A.G. Op. 112 (1976).

Fines by District Court in Game Violation Case: A court imposing a fine in a fish and game violation case must pay the money collected to the Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission). 36 A.G. Op. 39 (1975).

Department Regulation of Ice Fishing: The State Fish and Game Department (now Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks) has authority to regulate the use and abandonment of ice fishing facilities after proper findings of fact and pursuant to an agreement with the owner of the private waters involved. 28 A.G. Op. 45 (1959).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 16 in (1) substituted provisions for posting annual and biennial commission rules for former language that read: "The orders, rules, and regulations of the department shall be published and posted in the following manner:

(1) Those having general application throughout the state shall be published in such manner and to such an extent as the department deems necessary and may direct"; substituted (2) regarding posting of site-specific land use regulations for former (2) that read: "(2) Those of general or special character having local application only shall be published once in some newspaper having general circulation in the locality or district wherein such rules, regulations, or orders are applicable and shall be posted in three conspicuous places in the locality or district in which they are applicable"; inserted (3) regarding publication of certain commission orders; inserted (4) regarding public notification of emergency closures; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 16, 2007.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Case Notes

Department Employees Not Prohibited From Lobbying or Legislative Activity: Plaintiff contended that the language in this section prohibiting a Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks (FWP) employee from using the employee's official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with an election or affecting election results or for the purpose of coercing or influencing the political actions of any person or body meant that FWP employees could not lobby the Legislature or appear before the Legislature as proponents or opponents of legislation. The Supreme Court held that a general prohibition on FWP political activity would lead to an absurd result, given the Department's numerous statutory mandates to report to the Legislature and recommend legislation, and to interact with other governmental agencies on various levels. Rather, the prohibition in this section applies to FWP employees only in the partisan political sense and does not prohibit FWP employees from lobbying the Legislature or appearing before the Legislature as proponents or opponents of legislation. Case Notes

District Court Bound by Factual Findings of Board of Personnel Appeals — Wrongful Discharge — Reinstatement — No Backpay: An employee of the state was discharged from employment because he used a state-owned vehicle for private purposes. He appealed the decision of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and the Board of Personnel Appeals ruled that though his discharge was properly justified, the Department had never adopted a policy regarding such use of vehicles and had not punished similar usage; thus, the discharge was wrongful and he was entitled to reinstatement. He was offered a substantially equivalent position but appealed the Board's denial of backpay and benefits and, upon losing the District Court appeal, pursued the issues before the Supreme Court. The court upheld the District Court on all issues, observing that both courts were bound by factual findings of the Board and stipulations by the parties. The District Court was not obligated to hold a hearing on the facts. Hutchin v. St., 213 M 15, 688 P2d 1257, 41 St. Rep. 1916 (1984).

Case Notes

Stopping Short of and Subsequent Failure to Stop at Game Check Station — Particularized Suspicion Justifying Traffic Stop: A game warden observed Clark stopping short of a game check station, exiting the vehicle, then reentering the vehicle and driving past the check station. Based on Clark's actions, the warden suspected that Clark might have stopped to hide or change something before reaching the check station, so wardens stopped Clark's vehicle. Clark exhibited signs of intoxication and was subsequently arrested by the Highway Patrol for DUI. Clark contended that wardens had no particularized suspicion to stop the vehicle for a possible fish and game violation and that evidence from the vehicle search should be suppressed. The District Court denied Clark's suppression motion, and on appeal the Supreme Court affirmed. The game warden possessed a reasonable suspicion based on articulable facts and experience from which to draw an inference that Clark might have committed a game violation sufficient to warrant stopping Clark's vehicle. St. v. Clark, 2009 MT 327, 353 M 1, 218 P3d 483 (2009).

Case Notes

Nature of Road to Fishing Access Site — Easement — No Deprivation of Landowner's Property: A landowner brought an action to prevent the state from opening a fishing access site and from paving a road to the site, based on a claimed fee title to the roadway. The District Court granted the state a summary judgment as a matter of law. The Supreme Court found the landowner's interest was an ordinary easement. The words "private road" did not clearly indicate intent to create in him an "exclusive" easement. The state's use of the road cannot be declared inconsistent with the landowner's on the basis of speculation. Furthermore, under various statutory provisions, the state obtained its land lawfully. The plaintiff had not yet been deprived of his property interest. Any damages remained speculative at the time of the decision. The summary judgment was accordingly affirmed. Titeca v. St., 194 M 209, 634 P2d 1156, 38 St. Rep. 1533 (1981).

Attorney General's Opinions

Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Subject to Local Review in Creation of Recreational Vehicle Camping Area: The term "subdivision" is defined in 76-3-103 to include the provision of multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks argued that, as a state agency, it was exempt from the review requirement. Because exemptions are provided for some state activities but not for activities to provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles on state land, the clear implication is that the state is to stand on the same footing with a private person in this matter. It was noted that there is a trend toward abandoning the traditional view that activities of the state may be exercised free of local control. The Department is subject to local subdivision review to the extent that it creates an area that will provide multiple space for recreational camping vehicles. 39 A.G. Op. 14 (1981).

2003 Amendment: Chapter 604 in (2)(c) inserted third sentence concerning public hunting of wild buffalo or bison; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) The department and the department of livestock are strongly urged to enter into an agreement with the national park service for the long-term management of the Yellowstone national park wild buffalo or bison herd. If the national park service does not proceed in good faith in a timely manner to enter a long-term management agreement that, in the determination of the department and the department of livestock, responds adequately to the needs of Montana, the departments are strongly urged to take appropriate court action. The department and the department of livestock shall prepare a joint report to the 55th legislature regarding the present state of wild buffalo or bison management in Montana and any progress on an agreement for the long-term management of the Yellowstone national park herd"; inserted (4) concerning rules regarding special wild buffalo or bison license; and made minor changes in style. 1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 346, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the department of livestock is authorized in [section 1] [81-2-120] to adopt rules with regard to management of publicly owned wild buffalo or bison that enter Montana on private or public land and that are from a herd that is infected with a contagious disease that may spread to persons or livestock and may jeopardize compliance with federally administered livestock disease control programs. The department may determine that rulemaking is necessary with regard to feasible methods of taking wild buffalo or bison allowed within [section 1(1)] [81-2-120(1)] or with regard to disposal of the carcasses of wild buffalo or bison as provided for in [section 1(2) and (3)] [81-2-120(2) and (3)].

A statement of intent is also required because [section 2] [87-1-216] authorizes the department of fish, wildlife, and parks to adopt rules with regard to wild buffalo or bison that have not been exposed to or infected with a contagious disease but are in need of management because of potential damage to person or property. The department may determine that rulemaking is necessary if management of wild buffalo or bison under the provisions of [section 2] [87-1-216] includes public hunting."

Effective Date: Section 5, Ch. 346, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval." Approved April 10, 1995.

Case Notes

Federal Court Action Against State Barred Absent State Consent to Be Sued: The Fund for Animals alleged that federal and state officials violated the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA) and the Montana Environmental Policy Act (MEPA) by failing to prepare an environmental impact statement before adopting a plan to kill bison leaving Yellowstone National Park. The District Court properly denied a preliminary injunction to halt implementation of the plan in light of public support of the plan, given the serious threat of brucellosis to Montana cattle, the large number of excess bison, and the lack of feasible alternatives to control bison migrating out of the park. Although nonfederal actors may be enjoined under NEPA if their proposed action cannot proceed without prior approval of a federal agency, state actors may not be enjoined simply because the state project involves major federal action. Penalizing the State of Montana for consenting to participate in a plan with the federal government, designed to limit the killing of bison, would be inequitable. Further, the 11th amendment to the U.S. Constitution barred the organization from proceeding in federal court against either the State of Montana or its officers for violations of MEPA, absent a demonstration that the state had consented to be sued in federal court for alleged MEPA violations. Stephens, governor and superintendent of Indian affairs for the territory of Washington, and the chiefs, headmen, and delegates of the confederated tribes of the Flathead, Kootenai, and Upper Pend Oreille Indians, the said Indians were given the exclusive right to fish and hunt on the Flathead Indian reservation and the privilege of hunting in their usual hunting grounds on large areas of Montana; and whereas, nonmembers of such tribes have the right to hunt and fish on Indian lands by sufferance of such tribes only; and whereas, it appears to be to the common advantage of the state and such Indian tribes that hunting and fishing regulations and privileges on other lands of the state and on Indian lands shall be uniform and that hunting and fishing on such Indian lands shall be in common with the public, now, therefore, the department may negotiate and conclude an agreement with the council of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai tribes of the Flathead Indian reservation for the purpose of:

(a) obtaining and establishing for the citizens of Montana, regularly licensed to hunt and fish in the state, the privileges of hunting and fishing on Indian lands on the Flathead Indian reservation;

(b) the conservation and protection of fish and game and fur-bearing animals on such Indian lands and on lands adjacent thereto;

(c) setting dates for the opening and closing of seasons for hunting and fishing on such lands for Indians and non-Indians alike, opening and closing of streams and land areas for hunting and fishing;

(d) doing what in its judgment is necessary by way of granting to such tribal Indians state permits to hunt and fish, to be issued without charge to such Indians;

(e) stocking streams and land areas of such Indian lands for the common benefit;

(f) policing such Indian lands for the protection of fish and game; and

(g) in general carrying out the purposes of this section.

(2) If any part of such agreement provides for the payment of money to the tribes, that part must first have the approval of the state legislature.

(3) Any agreement entered into under subsection (1) must also satisfy the requirements of Title 18, chapter 11."

1981 Amendment: Added (3) requiring any agreement entered under subsection (1) to also satisfy the requirements of Title 18, chapter 11.

Case Notes

Closure to Nontribal Member of Big Game Hunting on Indian Reservation Permissible Exercise of Authority of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission: It is not necessary that state fish and game laws specifically mention Indian hunting rights in order for the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission to have proper authority to promulgate a regulation that recognizes those rights under state law, nor is it necessary that the Commission be directed by legislative intent, studies, or committee minutes specific to the issue in order to recognize Indian hunting rights. In promulgating hunting regulations, the Commission must take this section into account, which explicitly recognizes tribal hunting rights on the Flathead Indian Reservation, as well as federal court decisions regarding the issue of jurisdiction to regulate hunting on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Thus, the Commission properly exercised its authority in prohibiting hunting by nontribal members on reservations. Here, Shook, who was not a tribal member, was convicted of killing a whitetail buck on private property on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Shook's conviction did not conflict with 87-1-305. Further, 18 U.S.C. 1165, which gives tribes exclusive jurisdiction to regulate hunting on reservations, did not apply to Shook because the violation was charged under state rather than federal law. St. v. Shook, 2002 MT 347, 313 M 347, 61 P3d 863 (2002). See also State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754 (1985), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. St., 750 F. Supp. 446 (1990).

Summary of Holdings in Litigation Over Hunting and Fishing Rights on Crow Indian Reservation: "The explicit holdings of the Supreme Court in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544, 101 S.Ct. 1245, 67 L.Ed.2d 493 (1981), and of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in United States v. State of Montana, 604 F.2d 1162 (9th Cir. 1979), to the extent not reversed by the Supreme Court, are as follows:

1. The Crow Tribe can proscribe all hunting and fishing by non-members on those lands described in 18 U.S.C. §1165. Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. at 557, 101 S.Ct. at 1254.

2. The Crow Tribe, within 18 U.S.C. §1165 lands, has power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-members of the tribe (whether Indian or non-Indian) subject to the following conditions:

(a) That the Crow Tribe lacks the power to impose criminal sanctions on non-Indians who violate its hunting and fishing regulations,

(b) That the exercise by the Crow Tribe of its power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-Indians must be within the constraints recognized by this court in Quechan Tribe of Indians v. Rowe, 531 F.2d 408 (9th Cir. 1976). Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. at 557, 101 S.Ct. at 1254; United States v. Montana, 604 F.2d at 1165, 1170.

3. The title to the bed and banks of the Big Horn is in the State of Montana. 450 U.S. at 556-57, 101 S.Ct. at 1253-54.

4. The Crow Tribe has no power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-members on non-member owned fee patent land located within the exterior boundaries of the Crow Reservation. Id. at 557, 101 S.Ct. at 1254.

5. The State of Montana cannot regulate hunting and fishing by members of the Crow Tribe within 18 U.S.C. §1165 lands. 604 F.2d at 1172.

6. The State of Montana has the power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-members of the Crow Tribe within the exterior boundaries of the Crow Reservation subject to the following limitations:

(a) That such regulations of the State of Montana not regulate indirectly the hunting and fishing by members of the Crow Tribe on 18 U.S.C. §1165 lands.

(b) That such regulations of the State of Montana must have as their purpose the conservation and proper management of game and fish and not to discriminate against, nor to impede, authorized regulation by the Crow Tribe. Id. at 1166.

7. Such rights as the State of Montana has to regulate fishing on the Big Horn River by the Crows and all others are not limited by either (a) the treaties of 1851 and 1868 (except to such extent as these treaties might acknowledge pertinent aboriginal title rights of the Crow Tribe not heretofore asserted or recognized in this litigation) or (b) the inherent sovereignty of the Crow Tribe. 604 F.2d at 1170-71." (Quoting from U.S. v. Mont., 686 F2d 766 (9th Cir. 1982), at pp. 768-769.)

Tribal Regulation of Flathead Lake Usage: Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation have authority to regulate federal common-law riparian rights of non-Indians who own reservation land bordering the south half of Flathead Lake. The Circuit Court held that the decision in Mont. v. U.S., 450 US 544, 67 L Ed 2d 493, 101 S Ct 1245 (1981), regarding ownership and control of the Bighorn River, was not controlling. The decision in Mont. Power Co. v. Rochester, 127 F2d 189 (9th Cir. 1942), was given deference under the principle of stare decisis. Rochester held that the United States holds title to the bed and banks of the south half of Flathead Lake in trust for the tribes. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation v. Namen, 665 F2d 951 (9th Cir. 1982), followed in In re Estate of Hobbs, 2002 MT 85, 309 M 308, 46 P3d 594 (2002).

Airborne Hunting — Non-Indian Hunters on Indian Reservations: The Airborne Hunting Act, 16 U.S.C. §742j-1, was declared unconstitutional in a challenge by non-Indian hunters caught hunting on an Indian reservation. The statute was found to be an unlawful preemption of reserve state regulatory authority. The federal government is not empowered to displace Montana's regulation in this area. U.S. v. Helsley, 463 F. Supp. 1111 (D.C. Mont. 1979), reversed in U.S. v. Helsley, 615 F2d 784 (9th Cir. 1979).

Indians Hunting on Open and Unclaimed Land: Members of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes have a right to hunt free from the regulation of Montana game laws on "open and unclaimed lands" by virtue of Article II of the Treaty of Hell Gate and this includes National Forest Service land. St. v. Stasso, 172 M 242, 563 P2d 562 (1977).

Jurisdiction — Hunting and Fishing: Flathead Tribe had jurisdiction to regulate fishing upon Crow Creek Reservoir, and violation of tribal ordinance requiring permit for fishing constituted federal offense. U.S. v. Zempel, 32 St. Rep. 1130 (D.C. Mont. 1975). (Annotator's Comment: This case was not published in F. Supp.)

Treaty of 1855: Indians were not subject to state fish and game laws on reservation property since under the Treaty of 1855 between the Indians of Flathead Reservation and the United States, the exclusive right to hunt and fish within the boundaries of the Reservation was reserved by the Indians. St. v. McClure, 127 M 534, 268 P2d 629 (1954).

1989 Amendment: Inserted (1)(e) requiring analysis of significant potential social and economic impacts. Amendment effective April 12, 1989.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 598, L. 1987, provided: "House Bill No. 526 [Ch. 598, L. 1987] requires a statement of intent because section 1 [87-1-241] requires the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] to adopt rules establishing its policy regarding wildlife habitat acquisitions provided for by this act.

It is the intent of this act to provide a means for the department of fish, wildlife, and parks to acquire an interest in land for the purpose of protecting and enhancing wildlife habitat. Such interest in land must be gained by the purchase of leases, conservation easements, or fee title. While it is preferable to acquire such interest through lease or conservation easement, the legislature acknowledges that the willing seller will determine the manner by which such interest is obtained and thus provides for all three alternatives.

It is intended that the rules will address policy considerations for making acquisitions generally, as well as establishing procedures for determining in each case of a proposed acquisition whether the interest will be acquired.

It is intended that the commission identify habitat needs by administrative region and compile these needs in a consolidated statewide habitat acquisition plan. The rules must ensure that acquired interests in habitat lands are reasonably distributed around the state in accordance with the statewide habitat acquisition plan and that emphasis is placed upon those areas where important habitat is seriously threatened.

It is intended that the department exercise good land management practices on all land acquired, and multiple uses of such land when not detrimental to its value as wildlife habitat are specifically authorized. The department shall identify management objectives for each proposed acquisition, analyze potential impacts to adjacent private land resulting from those objectives, and develop plans to address such impacts.

A public hearing must be held in the area of each proposed acquisition after the required analysis has been completed by the department, for the purpose of obtaining comment from the interested public. The analysis and related public concerns are to be presented to the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] prior to its final action on any acquisition of interest and also to the board of land commissioners if that body is required to make a decision on the proposal under 87-1-209.

The policy and an analysis for each proposal acted upon in a biennium must be presented to the members of both the house and senate fish and game committees when they next meet in regular session."

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 598, L. 1987, read: "WHEREAS, the lease or purchase of land suitable for wildlife habitat and the acquisition of conservation easements to protect and enhance habitat are necessary; and 2001 Amendment: Chapter 7 in (1)(i) after "Class AAA" substituted "combination sports" for "sportsman's". Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 6, Ch. 544, L. 1999, amended sec. 18, Ch. 459, L. 1995, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 459 to March 1, 2006.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 459 in version effective March 1, 1996, in (2) inserted variable pricing exception; deleted former (4)(a) that read: "(a) Until March 1, 1991, 20% of the money allocated by this section must be credited to the account created by 87-1-601(5) for use in the manner prescribed therein for the development and maintenance of real property used for wildlife habitat"; in (4), at beginning, deleted "On and after March 1, 1991"; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 1996, and terminates October 1, 2001.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 459, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana has a cherished hunting heritage based on a deep knowledge of and respect for wildlife and the land; and

WHEREAS, private landowners provide wildlife habitat and hunting opportunities, the hunting public provides financial and political support for sound wildlife management, and the combined efforts of landowners and the hunting public have sustained Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, landowner/outfitter/sportsperson relations have become increasingly strained over the past several years, leading to increased polarization between the groups; and

WHEREAS, the 1993 Legislature addressed this problem through the passage of House Joint Resolution No. 24, which requested the Governor, through the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, to coordinate a sustained, ongoing, cooperative effort to address these issues by establishing statewide, regional, and local groups to develop mutually satisfactory solutions that would preserve Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage and encourage the continuance of a viable outfitting industry; and

WHEREAS, in response to that request, the Governor appointed the Advisory Council on Private Land/Public Wildlife, consisting of representatives of the affected groups, to study the issues in anticipation of legislation that reflects the mutual interests of landowners, outfitters, and the sporting community; and

WHEREAS, after considering extensive input and advice from individual private citizens, local working groups, agencies, and nonprofit organizations involved in conservation, the Advisory Council by consensus developed recommendations for improving hunting access to private lands and for providing tangible benefits for landowners who allow access to their lands for hunting; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council has made efforts to break new ground philosophically in designing its recommendations, requiring that all interested parties be willing to accept change in order to benefit everyone who has an interest in Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council finds it appropriate to present the following recommendations to the Legislature in the spirit of a cooperative and positive effort to enhance relations between landowners, outfitters, and sportspersons."

1995 Statement of Intent: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 1 through 3] [87-1-265 through 87-1-267] grant rulemaking authority to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement programs for hunter management and hunting access enhancement. It is intended that in addition to the statutory guidelines set out in those sections, any rules be adopted with the purpose of optimizing hunting opportunity and access while minimizing administrative costs in providing benefits to landowners who voluntarily participate in the programs. In addition, [section 6] [87-1-268] grants rulemaking authority to the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement the provisions of variable pricing for Class B-10 and Class B-11 outfitter-sponsored licenses. It is intended that the fish, wildlife, and parks commission use its licensing authority to adjust the price of those licenses as necessary and that any additional revenue generated by variable pricing be used to fund the hunting access enhancement program."

Severability: Section 13, Ch. 459, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 14, Ch. 459, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 241, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, the lease or purchase of land suitable for wildlife habitat and the acquisition of conservation easements to protect and enhance habitat are necessary; and

WHEREAS, the program instituted by the 1987 Legislature to allocate revenue from increased hunting license fees to fund the protection and enhancement of wildlife habitat has proved to be an effective and valuable tool in maintaining the quality of wildlife habitat in Montana; and

WHEREAS, it is in the interests of the people and the wildlife of the State of Montana to continue the wildlife habitat acquisition program on a permanent basis."

Extension of Termination Date: Section 1, Ch. 241, L. 1993, amended sec. 12, Ch. 598, L. 1987, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 2006. Section 2, Ch. 241, L. 1993, amended sec. 3, Ch. 319, L. 1991, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 2006.

1991 Amendment: At beginning of (4)(a) inserted "Until March 1, 1991"; and inserted (4)(b) reallocating 20% of the money collected under this section for development and maintenance of real property used for wildlife habitat. Amendment effective April 2, 1991.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 319, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, wildlife is a major historical, social, and economic resource of Montana; and

WHEREAS, it is in the best interests of the people, the wildlife, and the State of Montana to have a permanent wildlife habitat and conservation easement acquisition program; and

WHEREAS, sportsmen and others have demonstrated their commitment to wildlife by supporting, through license fees, the acquisition of wildlife habitat; and

WHEREAS, private landowners provide significant habitat for Montana's wildlife resources and have legitimate concerns regarding the operation and maintenance of neighboring lands acquired by the Fish and Game Commission [now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission] for wildlife habitat; and

WHEREAS, it is in the best interests of the people, the wildlife, and the State of Montana that relations between landowners and sportsmen be cooperative and mutually respectful in nature and that the concerns of both landowners and sportsmen be taken into consideration in the formulation of a wildlife habitat and conservation easement acquisition program; and

WHEREAS, an independent and detailed study is needed to determine the character and application of the state's permanent wildlife habitat and conservation easement acquisition program."

Study Required — Report to 1993 Legislature: Section 2, Ch. 319, L. 1991, provided: "(1) The department of fish, wildlife, and parks shall commission an independent comprehensive study of wildlife habitat acquisition, improvement, and development, to be funded in an amount up to $150,000 from money allocated under 87-1-242(3).

(2) The study must analyze the department's current wildlife habitat acquisition, improvement, operations, maintenance, and development program and develop a comprehensive plan for a permanent wildlife habitat acquisition, improvement, operations, maintenance, development, and land management program, including the use of conservation easements, leases, and fee title acquisition. The study must also include a comprehensive and detailed accounting of expenditures authorized by 87-1-242(4). The department shall ensure participation by the public, including landowners and sportsmen, in the development of the comprehensive plan. The study and plan must be completed by December 1, 1992, and presented to the 1993 legislature."

Effective Date — Contingent Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 319, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval and, if passed and approved on or after March 1, 1991, applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to funds allocated under 87-1-242(4) on and after March 1, 1991." Approved April 2, 1991.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 3, Ch. 319, L. 1991, amended sec. 12, Ch. 598, L. 1987, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 1996. Amendment effective April 2, 1991.

Coordination Instruction: Section 11, Ch. 598, L. 1987, a coordination section, in (1)(a) substituted $77 for $100; in (1)(i) substituted $7 for $9; and inserted (1)(j) relating to the Class B-11 license.

Termination Provision Repealed: Sections 2 and 3, Ch. 235, L. 2005, amended sec. 6, Ch. 544, L. 1999, and sec. 18, Ch. 459, L. 1995, and sec. 4, Ch. 235, L. 2005, repealed sec. 9, Ch. 216, L. 2001, removing the provisions that terminated this section effective March 1, 2006. Effective April 15, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 216 in (3) in first sentence substituted "this section" for "subsection (1)" and inserted second sentence concerning negotiation of access on cooperative basis with voluntary participation. Amendment effective March 1, 2002, and terminates March 1, 2006.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 216, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, the Private Land/Public Wildlife Advisory Council is charged with the responsibility to make suggestions for funding, modification, or improvement of the hunting access enhancement program; and

WHEREAS, although the hunting access enhancement program has enjoyed considerable success to date in providing greater opportunities for Montana hunters, the Private Land/Public Wildlife Advisory Council recognizes the potential to increase hunting access through expansion of the program; and

WHEREAS, increasing the size of the current program through a once-a-season hunting access enhancement fee on resident and most nonresident hunters would provide revenue to allow greater landowner incentives, improve hunting access to private and public lands, improve program management and services, increase upland bird hunting opportunities, and provide for future increased program costs because of inflation."

Extension of Termination Date: Section 6, Ch. 544, L. 1999, amended sec. 18, Ch. 459, L. 1995, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 459 to March 1, 2006.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 459, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana has a cherished hunting heritage based on a deep knowledge of and respect for wildlife and the land; and

WHEREAS, private landowners provide wildlife habitat and hunting opportunities, the hunting public provides financial and political support for sound wildlife management, and the combined efforts of landowners and the hunting public have sustained Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, landowner/outfitter/sportsperson relations have become increasingly strained over the past several years, leading to increased polarization between the groups; and

WHEREAS, the 1993 Legislature addressed this problem through the passage of House Joint Resolution No. 24, which requested the Governor, through the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, to coordinate a sustained, ongoing, cooperative effort to address these issues by establishing statewide, regional, and local groups to develop mutually satisfactory solutions that would preserve Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage and encourage the continuance of a viable outfitting industry; and

WHEREAS, in response to that request, the Governor appointed the Advisory Council on Private Land/Public Wildlife, consisting of representatives of the affected groups, to study the issues in anticipation of legislation that reflects the mutual interests of landowners, outfitters, and the sporting community; and

WHEREAS, after considering extensive input and advice from individual private citizens, local working groups, agencies, and nonprofit organizations involved in conservation, the Advisory Council by consensus developed recommendations for improving hunting access to private lands and for providing tangible benefits for landowners who allow access to their lands for hunting; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council has made efforts to break new ground philosophically in designing its recommendations, requiring that all interested parties be willing to accept change in order to benefit everyone who has an interest in Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council finds it appropriate to present the following recommendations to the Legislature in the spirit of a cooperative and positive effort to enhance relations between landowners, outfitters, and sportspersons."

1995 Statement of Intent: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 1 through 3] [87-1-265 through 87-1-267] grant rulemaking authority to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement programs for hunter management and hunting access enhancement. It is intended that in addition to the statutory guidelines set out in those sections, any rules be adopted with the purpose of optimizing hunting opportunity and access while minimizing administrative costs in providing benefits to landowners who voluntarily participate in the programs. In addition, [section 6] [87-1-268] grants rulemaking authority to the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement the provisions of variable pricing for Class B-10 and Class B-11 outfitter-sponsored licenses. It is intended that the fish, wildlife, and parks commission use its licensing authority to adjust the price of those licenses as necessary and that any additional revenue generated by variable pricing be used to fund the hunting access enhancement program."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 196 in (1) in first sentence after "hunters" inserted "anglers" and after "hunting access enhancement program" inserted "the fishing access enhancement program"; in (2)(a) substituted reference to 58th legislature for reference to 57th legislature; inserted (2)(b) concerning report regarding success of fishing access enhancement program; and in two places in (3) inserted "and the fishing access enhancement program". Amendment effective March 1, 2002, and terminates March 1, 2006.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 544 in first sentence in (1) after "interested" substituted "in issues related to hunters, landowners, and outfitters, including but not limited to the hunting access enhancement program, landowner-hunter relations, outfitting industry issues" for "in the hunter management program, the hunting access enhancement program" and after "wildlife" deleted "to review the success and progress of the hunter management program and the hunting access enhancement program", in second sentence substituted "broad representation" for "equal representation" and after "sportspersons" deleted "and be broadly representative of the various geographical areas of the state", and in third sentence substituted "assist" for "facilitate the efforts of"; in first sentence in (2) after "governor" inserted "and to the 57th legislature", after "success" substituted "of various elements of" for "of the hunter management program and", and after "program" inserted language regarding reporting of annual participation, number of enrolled acres, harvest success, qualified applicants, and accounting for "including a report of annual landowner participation and the number of acres annually enrolled in the programs", in second sentence after "improvement" inserted "needed to achieve the objectives", and deleted former third sentence that read: "If the review committee determines that expanding funding for programs for hunter management and hunting access enhancement is desirable, consideration must be given to providing the expanded funding through increases in resident hunting license fees"; inserted (3) authorizing director to appoint additional advisory committees; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 29, 1999.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 6, Ch. 544, L. 1999, amended sec. 18, Ch. 459, L. 1995, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 459 to March 1, 2006.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 459, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana has a cherished hunting heritage based on a deep knowledge of and respect for wildlife and the land; and

WHEREAS, private landowners provide wildlife habitat and hunting opportunities, the hunting public provides financial and political support for sound wildlife management, and the combined efforts of landowners and the hunting public have sustained Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, landowner/outfitter/sportsperson relations have become increasingly strained over the past several years, leading to increased polarization between the groups; and

WHEREAS, the 1993 Legislature addressed this problem through the passage of House Joint Resolution No. 24, which requested the Governor, through the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, to coordinate a sustained, ongoing, cooperative effort to address these issues by establishing statewide, regional, and local groups to develop mutually satisfactory solutions that would preserve Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage and encourage the continuance of a viable outfitting industry; and

WHEREAS, in response to that request, the Governor appointed the Advisory Council on Private Land/Public Wildlife, consisting of representatives of the affected groups, to study the issues in anticipation of legislation that reflects the mutual interests of landowners, outfitters, and the sporting community; and

WHEREAS, after considering extensive input and advice from individual private citizens, local working groups, agencies, and nonprofit organizations involved in conservation, the Advisory Council by consensus developed recommendations for improving hunting access to private lands and for providing tangible benefits for landowners who allow access to their lands for hunting; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council has made efforts to break new ground philosophically in designing its recommendations, requiring that all interested parties be willing to accept change in order to benefit everyone who has an interest in Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council finds it appropriate to present the following recommendations to the Legislature in the spirit of a cooperative and positive effort to enhance relations between landowners, outfitters, and sportspersons."

1995 Statement of Intent: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 1 through 3] [87-1-265 through 87-1-267] grant rulemaking authority to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement programs for hunter management and hunting access enhancement. It is intended that in addition to the statutory guidelines set out in those sections, any rules be adopted with the purpose of optimizing hunting opportunity and access while minimizing administrative costs in providing benefits to landowners who voluntarily participate in the programs. In addition, [section 6] [87-1-268] grants rulemaking authority to the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement the provisions of variable pricing for Class B-10 and Class B-11 outfitter-sponsored licenses. It is intended that the fish, wildlife, and parks commission use its licensing authority to adjust the price of those licenses as necessary and that any additional revenue generated by variable pricing be used to fund the hunting access enhancement program."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 440 in (5)(a) substituted "report on a state electronic access system" for "report on the state electronic bulletin board".

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 463, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, the rivers and streams of Montana hold one of the state's most important and economically valuable resources—wild fish; and

WHEREAS, the loss of historic spawning areas and other crucial habitats of native fish species is one of the greatest threats to the natural reproduction and propagation of the fish resource; and

WHEREAS, the state is presently in a position to address the key issue of these aquatic habitats in order to promote the future viability of Montana's wild fisheries before the continued loss of spawning areas and other habitats diminishes or destroys the resource; and

WHEREAS, a wild fisheries enhancement program will immensely benefit landowner-sportsperson relations; and

WHEREAS, a wild fisheries enhancement program will benefit Montana's economy; and

WHEREAS, it is fiscally sound state policy to enhance natural habitats and spawning areas to improve fishing opportunities now and preserve fishing opportunities for future generations; and

WHEREAS, voluntary cooperation between landowners, interested citizens, public and private organizations, and the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks will help accomplish the purposes of the future fisheries improvement program."

Termination: Section 5, Ch. 463, L. 1995, provided: "(1) [Sections 1 and 2] [87-1-272 and 87-1-273] terminate July 1, 2005.

The authority for the correction is contained in sec. 49, Ch. 19, L. 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 254, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks (MDFWP) is considering whether to deem and classify domestic livestock trailing as a commercial use that is subject to licensing or permitting by the department, the payment of a licensing or permitting fee, and an environmental review under the Montana Environmental Policy Act; and

WHEREAS, MDFWP has adopted administrative rules governing the commercial use of lands under the control, administration, and jurisdiction of the department; and

WHEREAS, livestock grazing, farming, haying, fencing, and timber harvest have been exempted from those rules; and

WHEREAS, given those exemptions for farming and ranching activities, the Legislature believes that domestic livestock trailing should also be exempt; and

WHEREAS, domestic livestock trailing is a necessary component of ranching and farming in Montana; and

WHEREAS, in order to sustain Montana's valuable farm and ranching economy and land bases associated with that economy, farmers and ranchers must be encouraged and have the right to engage in activities that allow them to remain in farming and ranching; and

WHEREAS, MDFWP's attempt to classify domestic livestock trailing as a commercial use and to subject trailing activities to environmental review interferes with the Legislature's directive under Article XII, section 1, of the Montana Constitution to enact laws that protect, enhance, and develop all agriculture; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has a strong interest in protecting the health of Montana's agriculture industry."

Severability: Section 3, Ch. 254, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

Chapter 533 inserted (5) ((4) in version effective October 1, 2001) concerning rules establishing preference systems for distributing hunting licenses and permits. Amendment effective October 1, 2000.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 355 inserted (4) allowing the Commission to adopt rules regarding separation and sale of deer licenses from nonresident big game combination licenses. Amendment effective April 22, 1997, and terminates October 1, 2001.

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 355, L. 1997, provided: "This bill establishes the authority of the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to modify, by rule, the structure of nonresident elk and deer licenses within the general framework established by law as needed for the effective management of big game animals. It is the intent of the legislature that in its initial rulemaking process, the commission utilize an advisory committee, including representatives of hunting and fishing organizations, outfitters, and landowners, to make recommendations regarding the structure of nonresident hunting licenses as authorized by this bill. It is also the intent of the legislature that commission rules not authorize more nonresident elk and deer hunters than are prescribed by current law."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 267 inserted (3) authorizing Commission to adopt rules.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 267, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana has a long and cherished hunting tradition; and

WHEREAS, as with other traditions Montana's hunting heritage will persevere through its passage from one generation to the next; and

WHEREAS, it is fitting that the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission, as the regulating body for state hunting regulations, be granted the specific authority to encourage this hunting heritage for Montana's youth through the establishment of special youth licenses or permits, seasons, conditions, or programs."

1991 Amendment: Inserted (2) giving Commission authority to adopt rules regarding use of archery equipment for hunting and fishing.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 22, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 87-1-301(2) grants to the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] the authority to adopt rules regarding the use and type of archery equipment that may be employed for hunting and fishing purposes. It is intended that this authority be permissive rather than mandatory in order to allow but not require the commission to address any need for restrictions or limitations on archery equipment, with adequate opportunity for public hearing and comment. The legislature is aware that this rulemaking power is expressed in broad and general language; however, this is necessary because bow hunting technology is an emerging field for which detailed and precise standards have not yet been fully developed. The legislature recognizes that the commission has the power to determine the extent and nature of hunting and fishing privileges and that the commission's expertise makes it the proper forum for addressing the need for archery equipment regulation."

Seasonal Rules Adopted Annually: Section 2-4-102 excludes from the Montana Administrative Procedure Act seasonal rules adopted annually relating to hunting, fishing, and trapping if the rules are published in accordance with statutory requirements. Section 87-1-202 sets out those requirements. Although the rules do not appear in the Administrative Register of Montana, they are published and copies are available in state and regional offices of the Department.

Case Notes

Closure to Nontribal Member of Big Game Hunting on Indian Reservation Permissible Exercise of Authority of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission: It is not necessary that state fish and game laws specifically mention Indian hunting rights in order for the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission to have proper authority to promulgate a regulation that recognizes those rights under state law, nor is it necessary that the Commission be directed by legislative intent, studies, or committee minutes specific to the issue in order to recognize Indian hunting rights. In promulgating hunting regulations, the Commission must take 87-1-228 into account, which explicitly recognizes tribal hunting rights on the Flathead Indian Reservation, as well as federal court decisions regarding the issue of jurisdiction to regulate hunting on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Thus, the Commission properly exercised its authority in prohibiting hunting by nontribal members on reservations. Here, Shook, who was not a tribal member, was convicted of killing a whitetail buck on private property on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Shook's conviction did not conflict with 87-1-305. Further, 18 U.S.C. 1165, which gives tribes exclusive jurisdiction to regulate hunting on reservations, did not apply to Shook because the violation was charged under state rather than federal law. St. v. Shook, 2002 MT 347, 313 M 347, 61 P3d 863 (2002). See also State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754 (1985), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. St., 750 F. Supp. 446 (1990).

Summary of Holdings in Litigation Over Hunting and Fishing Rights on Crow Indian Reservation: "The explicit holdings of the Supreme Court in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544, 101 S.Ct. 1245, 67 L.Ed.2d 493 (1981), and of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in United States v. State of Montana, 604 F.2d 1162 (9th Cir. 1979), to the extent not reversed by the Supreme Court, are as follows:

1. The Crow Tribe can proscribe all hunting and fishing by non-members on those lands described in 18 U.S.C. §1165. Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. at 557, 101 S.Ct. at 1254.

2. The Crow Tribe, within 18 U.S.C. §1165 lands, has power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-members of the tribe (whether Indian or non-Indian) subject to the following conditions:

(a) That the Crow Tribe lacks the power to impose criminal sanctions on non-Indians who violate its hunting and fishing regulations,

(b) That the exercise by the Crow Tribe of its power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-Indians must be within the constraints recognized by this court in Quechan Tribe of Indians v. Rowe, 531 F.2d 408 (9th Cir. 1976). Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. at 557, 101 S.Ct. at 1254; United States v. Montana, 604 F.2d at 1165, 1170.

3. The title to the bed and banks of the Big Horn is in the State of Montana. 450 U.S. at 556-57, 101 S.Ct. at 1253-54.

4. The Crow Tribe has no power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-members on non-member owned fee patent land located within the exterior boundaries of the Crow Reservation. Id. at 557, 101 S.Ct. at 1254.

5. The State of Montana cannot regulate hunting and fishing by members of the Crow Tribe within 18 U.S.C. §1165 lands. 604 F.2d at 1172.

6. The State of Montana has the power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-members of the Crow Tribe within the exterior boundaries of the Crow Reservation subject to the following limitations:

(a) That such regulations of the State of Montana not regulate indirectly the hunting and fishing by members of the Crow Tribe on 18 U.S.C. §1165 lands.

(b) That such regulations of the State of Montana must have as their purpose the conservation and proper management of game and fish and not to discriminate against, nor to impede, authorized regulation by the Crow Tribe. Id. at 1166.

7. Such rights as the State of Montana has to regulate fishing on the Big Horn River by the Crows and all others are not limited by either (a) the treaties of 1851 and 1868 (except to such extent as these treaties might acknowledge pertinent aboriginal title rights of the Crow Tribe not heretofore asserted or recognized in this litigation) or (b) the inherent sovereignty of the

Crow Tribe. 604 F.2d at 1170-71." (Quoting from U.S. v. Mont., 686 F2d 766 (9th Cir. 1982), at pp. 768-769.)

Tribal Regulation of Flathead Lake Usage: Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation have authority to regulate federal common-law riparian rights of non-Indians who own reservation land bordering the south half of Flathead Lake. The Circuit Court held that the decision in Mont. v. U.S., 450 US 544, 67 L Ed 2d 493, 101 S Ct 1245 (1981), regarding ownership and control of the Bighorn River, was not controlling. The decision in Mont. Power Co. v. Rochester, 127 F2d 189 (9th Cir. 1942), was given deference under the principle of stare decisis. Rochester held that the United States holds title to the bed and banks of the south half of Flathead Lake in trust for the tribes. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation v. Namen, 665 F2d 951 (9th Cir. 1982), followed in In re Estate of Hobbs, 2002 MT 85, 309 M 308, 46 P3d 594 (2002).

Chapter 370 in (1) and (2) at beginning inserted "Except as provided in 87-1-301(7)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 254, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks (MDFWP) is considering whether to deem and classify domestic livestock trailing as a commercial use that is subject to licensing or permitting by the department, the payment of a licensing or permitting fee, and an environmental review under the Montana Environmental Policy Act; and

WHEREAS, MDFWP has adopted administrative rules governing the commercial use of lands under the control, administration, and jurisdiction of the department; and

WHEREAS, livestock grazing, farming, haying, fencing, and timber harvest have been exempted from those rules; and

WHEREAS, given those exemptions for farming and ranching activities, the Legislature believes that domestic livestock trailing should also be exempt; and

WHEREAS, domestic livestock trailing is a necessary component of ranching and farming in Montana; and

WHEREAS, in order to sustain Montana's valuable farm and ranching economy and land bases associated with that economy, farmers and ranchers must be encouraged and have the right to engage in activities that allow them to remain in farming and ranching; and

WHEREAS, MDFWP's attempt to classify domestic livestock trailing as a commercial use and to subject trailing activities to environmental review interferes with the Legislature's directive under Article XII, section 1, of the Montana Constitution to enact laws that protect, enhance, and develop all agriculture; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has a strong interest in protecting the health of Montana's agriculture industry."

Severability: Section 3, Ch. 254, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 569 in (2) in second sentence after "public safety" inserted "public welfare", after "property" inserted "and public resources", and after "motor-driven boats" inserted "the operation of personal watercraft, the resolution of conflicts between users of motorized and nonmotorized boats"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective June 1, 1999.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 569, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana waters will experience a great increase in traffic by recreationists celebrating the bicentennial of the Lewis and Clark expedition and retracing the routes of the famous explorers; and

WHEREAS, the increased recreational use of Montana waters by every manner of recreationist, motorized as well as nonmotorized users, has led to a corresponding increase in conflicts between river users; and

WHEREAS, in other states, conflicts between recreational users of waters have escalated to the point of violence and even deaths of recreationists; and

WHEREAS, the use of personal watercraft has grown immensely in Montana, and the irresponsible use of personal watercraft conflicts with the ability of lakeshore cabin owners and homeowners to enjoy their pursuit of happiness through peaceful relaxation; and

WHEREAS, it is in the interests of public health, safety, welfare, and protection of property that measures be taken in Montana to reduce potential conflicts between recreational users of Montana waters before this state experiences similar problems."

1995 Amendments: Chapter 418 near end of (2) substituted "department of public health" for "department of health and environmental sciences"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 546 near end of (2) substituted "department of public health and human services" for "department of health and environmental sciences"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Case Notes

Closure to Nontribal Member of Big Game Hunting on Indian Reservation Not Violative of Equal Protection Guarantee: Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission regulations limited hunting on Indian reservations to tribal members only. Shook, who was not a tribal member, killed a whitetail buck on private property on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Shook did not own the property, nor was the property owned by a tribal member. Shook was convicted of hunting in a closed area and appealed on grounds that the closure was an unconstitutional violation of equal protection because it distinguished between tribal and nontribal members on the basis of race. The state and tribes countered that laws that distinguish between persons based on tribal membership have long been held constitutional because the distinction is political rather than racial. The District Court agreed with the state and the tribes, and the Supreme Court affirmed. As set out in Morton v. Mancari, 417 US 535 (1974), laws that afford special treatment for Indians are constitutional as long as those laws can be rationally tied to the fulfillment of the unique federal obligation toward Indians. Federal Indian law is binding on the state; therefore, the state constitutional equal protection guarantee must allow for state classifications based on tribal membership if those classifications can be rationally tied to the governmental obligation toward Indians. The state has a duty to regulate hunting by nontribal members in a way that recognizes Indian hunting privileges protected by federal law; thus, the regulation was an entirely rational way for the state to fulfill that duty by preserving wildlife populations for hunting by Indians and was not violative of equal protection guarantees. St. v. Shook, 2002 MT 347, 313 M 347, 61 P3d 863 (2002).

Closure to Nontribal Member of Big Game Hunting on Indian Reservation Permissible Exercise of Authority of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission: It is not necessary that state fish and game laws specifically mention Indian hunting rights in order for the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission to have proper authority to promulgate a regulation that recognizes those rights under state law, nor is it necessary that the Commission be directed by legislative intent, studies, or committee minutes specific to the issue in order to recognize Indian hunting rights. In promulgating hunting regulations, the Commission must take 87-1-228 into account, which explicitly recognizes tribal hunting rights on the Flathead Indian Reservation, as well as federal court decisions regarding the issue of jurisdiction to regulate hunting on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Thus, the Commission properly exercised its authority in prohibiting hunting by nontribal members on reservations. Here, Shook, who was not a tribal member, was convicted of killing a whitetail buck on private property on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Shook's conviction did not conflict with 87-1-305. Further, 18 U.S.C. 1165, which gives tribes exclusive jurisdiction to regulate hunting on reservations, did not apply to Shook because the violation was charged under state rather than federal law. St. v. Shook, 2002 MT 347, 313 M 347, 61 P3d 863 (2002). See also State ex rel. Greely v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 219 M 76, 712 P2d 754 (1985), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes v. St., 750 F. Supp. 446 (1990).

Drawing for Licenses: The literal language of section 26-104(15), R.C.M. 1947 (repealed in 1973), did not require that the application process to receive a permit to hunt elk be fulfilled by one personally present at the drawing; rather it merely required that the drawing be held at a particular town. State ex rel. Jones v. District Court, 158 M 67, 488 P2d 1141 (1971).

Seasons on Indian Reservation: Conviction of non-Indian for killing two bull elk on Crow Indian Reservation during season closed by state fish and game laws was not in conflict with act of Congress providing penalty for trespass to possessory rights of reservation Indians or in conflict with The Enabling Act providing that Indian lands shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of Congress of United States. State ex rel. Nepstad v. Danielson, 149 M 438, 427 P2d 689 (1967), followed in U.S. v. Sanford, 547 F2d 1089 (9th Cir. 1976).

Commission Empowered to Lengthen Hunting Season: A temporary order restraining the State Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission) from putting into effect its order lengthening the hunting season on elk in a certain locality, thus modifying the law on fixing of seasons, was improper since under section 26-104, R.C.M. 1947, declaring prior to amendment that the statutes governing "such subjects" should continue in force and effect except as altered or modified by the rules and regulations of the Commission, the Legislature so empowered the Commission, amounting to modification of existing statutes. State ex rel. Fish & Game Comm'n v. District Court, 107 M 289, 84 P2d 798 (1938).

WHEREAS, for over 70 years wildlife populations in Montana have continued to increase and the damage to private land as a result of this increased wildlife population has increased dramatically; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks has historically included private land as part of the habitat equation in determining how much habitat is available for wildlife use in Montana; and

WHEREAS, the amount of habitat that is available for use by wildlife should be recalculated to accurately reflect the amount of habitat that is available without causing game damage to agricultural crops; and

WHEREAS, it is time for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to use the tools that it has had available for many years, along with new tools to be implemented through this legislation, to manage Montana's wildlife populations in a sustainable manner."

District Court Bound by Factual Findings of Board of Personnel Appeals — Wrongful Discharge — Reinstatement — No Backpay: An employee of the state was discharged from employment because he used a state-owned vehicle for private purposes. He appealed the decision of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and the Board of Personnel Appeals ruled that though his discharge was properly justified, the Department had never adopted a policy regarding such use of vehicles and had not punished similar usage; thus, the discharge was wrongful and he was entitled to reinstatement. He was offered a substantially equivalent position but appealed the Board's denial of backpay and benefits and, upon losing the District Court appeal, pursued the issues before the Supreme Court. The court upheld the District Court on all issues, observing that both courts were bound by factual findings of the Board and stipulations by the parties. The District Court was not obligated to hold a hearing on the facts. Hutchin v. St., 213 M 15, 688 P2d 1257, 41 St. Rep. 1916 (1984).

Removal of Employee:

Under this section's former language, the State Fish and Game Director has the power of summary removal without prior charges, notice, or hearing. However, that power is subject to review and final action by the Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission) if the employee demanded a hearing. State ex rel. Ford v. St. Fish & Game Comm'n, 148 M 151, 418 P2d 300 (1966), distinguished in Steer v. Missoula, 169 M 389, 547 P2d 843 (1976).

Under former language, this section did not require that the Director hold a hearing before discharging an employee for cause but merely required that the employee have an opportunity for hearing before the Commission. State ex rel. Hollibaugh v. St. Fish & Game Comm'n, 139 M 384, 365 P2d 942 (1961).

Authority of Game Warden to Approach Boat to Promote Safety — Particularized Suspicion Unnecessary: Initially concerned for the safety of the occupants of a seemingly unoccupied watercraft, a game warden looked into the live well of Boyer's boat and in the process found unlawfully killed game fish. Boyer contended that the warden had initiated an investigatory stop without the requisite particularized suspicion of wrongdoing, as required in 46-5-401, and that the evidence was therefore unlawfully seized. The Supreme Court disagreed. The warden was acting within his express authority to enforce outdoor recreation laws, including the safety of persons and property connected with the use of watercraft, and thus the warden's approach of Boyer's boat was lawful. St. v. Boyer, 2002 MT 33, 308 M 276, 42 P3d 771 (2002).

1991 Amendments: Chapter 609 in (3), near middle after "fish", inserted "and that those persons who make recreational use of state lands, as defined in 77-1-101, for hunting and fishing"; and made minor change in style. Amendment effective March 1, 1992.

Chapter 662 inserted (7) providing that Department is a criminal justice agency and its authorized officers are peace officers with enumerated powers; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 26, 1991.

Applicability: Section 22, Ch. 609, L. 1991, provided: "On passage and approval of [this act], the board of land commissioners shall commence proceedings to adopt rules to be effective March 1, 1992. The department of state lands [now department of natural resources and conservation] and the department of fish, wildlife, and parks shall commence proceedings and arrangements necessary to establish a recreational use license to be effective March 1, 1992." Approved April 24, 1991.

Redundant Language Not Codified: The following language from section 26-107, R.C.M. 1947, was not codified in the MCA because it is redundant with 87-1-502: "State fish and game wardens employed and appointed by virtue of this act shall be persons who have an interest in protection, conservation and propagation of wildlife, game and fur-bearing animals, fish and game birds; they shall devote all of their time to their official duties." This language is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 1, Ch. 78, L. 1955, as amended by sec. 1, Ch. 77, L. 1957. See 1-2-208.

Case Notes

Game Warden May Reasonably Request Production of Hunting or Fishing License — Particularized Suspicion of Criminal Activity Inapplicable: Initially concerned for the safety of the occupants of a seemingly unoccupied watercraft, a game warden was assured of Boyer's safety, but when Boyer told the warden that he had been fishing, the warden asked to see Boyer's fishing license. Boyer contended that the warden needed a particularized suspicion of wrongdoing to effectuate detention and the request for the license. However, under 87-2-109 (now repealed, but see 87-6-304), it is unlawful to refuse to show one's fishing license upon demand, and the warden had authority under this section to request production of the license. In light of these provisions, the Supreme Court declined to imply a particularized suspicion into the statutes, holding that a game warden may request production of a hunting or fishing license when circumstances reasonably indicate that an individual has been engaged in those activities. St. v. Boyer, 2002 MT 33, 308 M 276, 42 P3d 771 (2002).

Particularized Suspicion of Wrongdoing Not Required for Game Warden to Step on Boat Transom in Effort to Inspect Angler's Catch When Reasonable Suspicion Exists for Investigatory Stop: Initially concerned for the safety of the occupants of a seemingly unoccupied watercraft, a game warden discovered that Boyer was fishing and asked to see Boyer's license and catch. Boyer produced several fish, and the warden requested to see what else was in Boyer's live well. Boyer suggested that the warden could look later when Boyer came to shore, but the warden declined, and after tethering the boats together, the warden stepped onto the transom of Boyer's boat to look into the open live well, and found several unlawfully killed game fish. Boyer suggested that the warden's act of stepping onto the boat transom constituted an illegal search in violation of Boyer's reasonable expectation of privacy. The Supreme Court disagreed. Boyer had no legitimate expectation of privacy in the rear platform of his boat, and the act of stepping on the transom—an exterior platform readily accessible to the public—did not constitute a search. The nature of the intrusion was so minimal as not to violate any privacy expectation that Boyer might have had. Whether or not probable cause existed at that point was irrelevant, because Boyer's behavior gave the warden a reasonable suspicion that an offense had occurred, and it is the presence of reasonable suspicion that allowed the warden to proceed with the investigative stop. St. v. Boyer, 2002 MT 33, 308 M 276, 42 P3d 771 (2002), distinguishing St. v. Elison, 2000 MT 288, 302 M 228, 14 P3d 456 (2000).

Consent to Improper Tagging: Any consent given by Game Warden to illegal tagging of killed elk would be outside scope of authority and would have no effect whatever in law. State ex rel. Visser v. St. Fish & Game Comm'n, 150 M 525, 437 P2d 373 (1968).

Unlawful Possession — Search and Seizure: When plaintiff lawfully killed a deer but failed to fill out the tag attached to his hunting license and attach it to the carcass, the deer was not unlawfully possessed and the Game Warden was without authority to seize and confiscate the carcass when he arrested plaintiff for failure to attach the tag. Shipman v. Todd, 131 M 365, 310 P2d 300 (1957).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 429, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, invasive species can wreak damage on the economy, environment, recreational opportunities, and human health; and

WHEREAS, aquatic invasive species, including Eurasian watermilfoil, the quagga mussel, and the zebra mussel, pose new and imminent threats, which if left unchecked could cost millions of dollars not only in damage to Montana waterways, rivers, and lakes, to water storage, delivery, and irrigation systems, to hydroelectric power structures and systems, and to aquatic ecosystems, but also to the entire state economy; and

WHEREAS, the enormous impact caused by the zebra mussel is clearly demonstrated in the eastern United States where the species was first observed in Lake Ontario in 1988 and spread to Lake Michigan and the Finger Lakes Region in New York State by the following year; and

WHEREAS, the United States Geological Survey estimates that $5 billion has been spent thus far in the Great Lakes Basin alone for damages caused by and control efforts for the zebra mussel; and

WHEREAS, the zebra mussel was first discovered in Lake Mead in January 2007 and has now spread to Lakes Mojave and Havasu and the Colorado River, impacting the states of Arizona, Nevada, and California, as well as to Pueblo Reservoir in Colorado, San Justo Reservoir in California, and Electric Lake in Utah; and

WHEREAS, Eurasian watermilfoil, the zebra mussel, and the quagga mussel are easily carried on vessels used in infested water and then transported to another body of water if the vessel has not been properly cleaned; and

WHEREAS, Eurasian watermilfoil is already present in Montana and unless Montana takes action now to prevent the infestation of its waters with the zebra mussel and quagga mussel it is only a matter of time before their introduction in this state occurs; and

WHEREAS, the most cost-effective way of dealing with an aquatic invasive species is preventing an infestation from occurring."

Severability: Section 19, Ch. 429, L. 2009, was a severability clause.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 523 inserted (2) requiring donation of seized game animals to the food bank network or to public or charitable institutions; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: Inserted (8) concerning wardens' authority for violations involving outfitters and guides. Amendment effective April 4, 1991.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 336, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, under the provisions of section 37-47-306, MCA, fees collected by the Board of Outfitters may be used for investigation of license applicants, administrative costs, and enforcement of statutes and rules related to outfitters and guides; and

WHEREAS, wardens of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks have authority under section 37-47-345, MCA, to enforce violations of Title 37, chapter 47, MCA, relating to outfitters and guides, and this authority should be clearly provided in Title 87, MCA; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature intends that costs to the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks related to enforcement of Title 37, chapter 47, MCA, by wardens of the Department be funded from the fees that are collected by the Board of Outfitters and transferred to the Department through memorandums of understanding or other agreements."

1983 Amendment: Inserted (7) relating to enforcement of disorderly conduct and public nuisance laws as applied to motorboat use.

Case Notes

Seized Evidence Not Considered "Other Evidence of a Crime" Not Subject to Suppression: Cotterell moved to suppress evidence of illegal hunting activity that was seized under a search warrant that allowed seizure of numerous hunting-related items, but also allowed seizure of "any other evidence of a crime", on grounds that the warrant was overbroad. The motion was denied. On appeal, the state conceded that the phrase "any other evidence of a crime" was overbroad (see St. v. Seader, 1999 MT 290, 297 M 60, 990 P2d 180 (1999), and Hauge v. District Court, 2001 MT 255, 307 M 195, 36 P3d 947 (2001)) but asserted that journals and calendars found in searching Cotterell's property were directly related to the crimes being investigated and thus were not subject to suppression. The Supreme Court agreed with the state. Although the journals and calendars were not specifically mentioned in the warrant, they were found during execution of a validly executed warrant in places that could lawfully be searched, were found in the course of a search for items that were specifically set out in the warrant, and were related to hunting and fishing activities. Even if the overbroad phrase was excised from the warrant, the journals and calendars were within the scope of the warrant, so denial of the motion to suppress was affirmed. St. v. Cotterell, 2008 MT 409, 347 M 231, 198 P3d 254 (2008).

No Reasonable Expectation of Privacy in Possession of Game Fish — Probable Cause Not Required for Game Warden's Inspection of Angler's Concealed Catch: Initially concerned for the safety of the occupants of a seemingly unoccupied watercraft, a game warden approached the watercraft. When informed that Boyer had been fishing, the warden asked to see Boyer's license and catch. After Boyer requested a later inspection, he reluctantly exhibited eight fish. At that point, the warden looked into the live well of Boyer's boat, and in the process found unlawfully killed game fish. Boyer contended that the warden needed probable cause to believe that Boyer had committed a violation at the time that the request was made in order to inspect his catch, and that conducting a warrantless search of Boyer's live well was impermissible. The Supreme Court noted that under the Montana Constitution, an impermissible search occurs only when a reasonable expectation of privacy exists. To determine whether the warden unlawfully intruded into Boyer's privacy, the court considered: (1) whether Boyer had an actual expectation of privacy; (2) whether society was willing to recognize that expectation as objectively reasonable; and (3) the nature of the state's intrusion (see St. v. Bassett, 1999 MT 109, 294 M 327, 982 P2d 410 (1999)). The court concluded that Boyer's subjective expectation of privacy in his catch was not one that society would recognize as reasonable. Under Art. IX, sec. 1, Mont. Const., the state must maintain a clean and healthful environment, and the Legislature has provided for game wardens to enforce the environmental laws regarding fish and game by implementing a system that includes the ability of wardens to inspect game in the field, which encompasses proper licensing and game limitation requirements. In this capacity, wardens act as public trustees protecting and conserving Montana wildlife and habitat for all citizens. Fishing is a privilege accorded by the state, not a private right, and anglers must assume the burdens of the sport, as well as its benefits, and acknowledge the prospect of at least some governmental intrusion into their activities, including license checks, inquiries about game taken, and requests to inspect game in the field. Because Boyer had no reasonable expectation of privacy in his catch, the warden's request for and inspection of the catch was not considered a search, so probable cause was not necessary. St. v. Boyer, 2002 MT 33, 308 M 276, 42 P3d 771 (2002).

Particularized Suspicion of Wrongdoing Not Required for Game Warden to Step on Boat Transom in Effort to Inspect Angler's Catch When Reasonable Suspicion Exists for Investigatory Stop: Initially concerned for the safety of the occupants of a seemingly unoccupied watercraft, a game warden discovered that Boyer was fishing and asked to see Boyer's license and catch. Boyer produced several fish, and the warden requested to see what else was in Boyer's live well. Boyer suggested that the warden could look later when Boyer came to shore, but the warden declined, and after tethering the boats together, the warden stepped onto the transom of Boyer's boat to look into the open live well, and found several unlawfully killed game fish. Boyer suggested that the warden's act of stepping onto the boat transom constituted an illegal search in violation of Boyer's reasonable expectation of privacy. The Supreme Court disagreed. Boyer had no legitimate expectation of privacy in the rear platform of his boat, and the act of stepping on the transom—an exterior platform readily accessible to the public—did not constitute a search. The nature of the intrusion was so minimal as not to violate any privacy expectation that Boyer might have had. Forfeiture of Game Properly Applied in Case of Waste of Mountain Goat: Defendant was convicted of wasting game contrary to the provisions of 87-3-102 (now repealed, but see 87-6-205). He contended that it was improper to impose a penalty of forfeiture of the head, cape, and horns of the mountain goat he killed legally. Having failed to comply with the requirement that he not waste the meat, defendant was subject to the game warden's authority under this section to seize any parts of the animal. Imposition of forfeiture was not contrary to law. St. v. Huebner, 252 M 184, 827 P2d 1260, 49 St. Rep. 210 (1992).

Confiscation of Illegally Killed Game: Illegally killed elk, tagged improperly in that one tag was not punched on month and day of kill and other was not filled in with name and address of hunter and county of kill, were subject to confiscation by State Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission). State ex rel. Visser v. St. Fish & Game Comm'n, 150 M 525, 437 P2d 373 (1968).

Applicability: Section 49, Ch. 257, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies to remittances of state money made to the department of revenue for fiscal years beginning after June 30, 2001."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 389 in (7) substituted present language requiring fines and forfeited bond money to be deposited in state general fund for former (7)(a) and (7)(b) that read: "(a) 50% in an account for use by the department for the enforcement of 77-1-801, 77-1-806, and rules adopted under 77-1-804; and

(b) 50% in the state lands recreational use account established by 77-1-808 for use by the department of natural resources and conservation in the management of state lands"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 417 at beginning of (4), in exception clause, inserted reference to subsection (8); inserted (8) regarding deposit in state general fund; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 418 in (7)(b) substituted "department of natural resources and conservation" for "department of state lands"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Severability: Section 37, Ch. 417, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 41 inserted (1)(c) regarding disposition of interest earned on certain accounts; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1992.

Chapter 339 inserted (6) excepting money received from license drawing applications from requirements of 17-6-105; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 4, 1991.

Chapter 609 at beginning of (1) and (4) inserted exception clause; in (4), near end of first sentence after "department", deleted "of fish, wildlife, and parks"; and inserted (7) regarding allocation of fines or forfeited bonds collected for violations of 77-1-801, 77-1-806, or rules adopted under 77-1-804. Amendment effective March 1, 1992.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 41, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, the federal government has imposed a requirement on the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks that all interest received from cash balances resulting from license sales must be used for department programs; and

WHEREAS, under present law interest earnings from money received are not credited to department programs; and

WHEREAS, unless present law is amended to conform to federal requirements, the department is in danger of losing over $7 million in federal funds; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that it is in the best interests of the state to designate that interest earned on money received by the Department from license sales be credited to the Department's special revenue account so that the interest is available for expenditure by the Department."

Applicability: Section 22, Ch. 609, L. 1991, provided: "On passage and approval of [this act], the board of land commissioners shall commence proceedings to adopt rules to be effective March 1, 1992. The department of state lands [now department of natural resources and conservation] and the department of fish, wildlife, and parks shall commence proceedings and arrangements necessary to establish a recreational use license to be effective March 1, 1992." Approved April 24, 1991.

1987 Amendment: Near beginning of (4), after "bonds", inserted "except money collected or received by a justice's court".

1983 Amendment: In (1), (3), and (4) substituted "state special revenue fund" for "earmarked revenue fund"; in (1) and (3), substituted "federal special revenue fund" for "federal and private revenue fund"; and in first sentence of (5), substituted "nonexpendable trust fund" for "trust and legacy fund".

1981 Amendment: Added (5) establishing a special account for funding the operation, development, and maintenance of real property of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks.

WHEREAS, gray wolves were reintroduced in Yellowstone National Park and central Idaho in 1995 and 1996 by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) to speed up recovery of the gray wolf population in the Northern Rocky Mountain region; and

WHEREAS, the biological requirement established by the USFWS for the recovery of the gray wolf population in the Northern Rocky Mountains is a minimum of 30 breeding pairs and 300 wolves in Montana, Idaho, and Wyoming combined or effectively 10 breeding pairs and 100 wolves per state; and

WHEREAS, the USFWS approved the Montana Gray Wolf Conservation and Management Plan in January 2004, under which Montana agreed to use adaptive management strategies to ensure its portion of the biological recovery goal is met; and

WHEREAS, the gray wolf population in Montana, Idaho, and Wyoming achieved the biological requirements of 30 breeding pairs and 300 wolves in 2002; and

WHEREAS, the most recent data available show that at the end of 2009, the estimated minimum number of wolves in Montana was 524 wolves with an estimated minimum of 37 breeding pairs in Montana; and

WHEREAS, the final environmental impact statement prepared by the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks (MDFWP) for the Montana Gray Wolf Conservation and Management Plan, submitted to the USFWS in October 2003, estimated that MDFWP's required budget for the wolf management alternative that was ultimately selected would be $924,739 to $1,062,399, of which 90% would be provided by the federal government under Section 6 of the ESA and 10% would be the responsibility of Montana; and

WHEREAS, the 90%-10% cost share was never implemented because the USFWS allocated funding directly to MDFWP rather than it being necessary for MDFWP to request funding under Section 6 of the ESA; and

WHEREAS, the USFWS allocated an average of $573,000 annually to Montana for wolf management under a 5-year contract that expired June 30, 2010; and

WHEREAS, that annual allocation was far below the estimate included in the final environmental impact statement; and

WHEREAS, under MDFWP's new contract for July 1, 2010, through June 30, 2015, the USFWS allocates only $626,000 to Montana for the entire 5-year period."

CHAPTER 2
FISHING, HUNTING, AND TRAPPING LICENSES

Chapter Case Notes

Application of Federal Lacey Act to Outfitting and Guiding — Statute of Limitations on Charges of Conspiracy: While a prosecution under the federal Lacey Act, 16 U.S.C. 3371, et seq., which prohibits transportation or acquisition in interstate commerce of wildlife in violation of state laws, may not properly be had for the substantive acts of selling guiding services and hunting permits, a prosecution can be maintained for conspiracies to violate the Act while providing outfitting and guiding services, such as arranging for out-of-state hunters to use elk licenses and permits belonging to other hunters, knowing that any elk taken would be transported out of state. The Act applied when evidence was sufficient to establish the involvement of defendant, a hunting guide and outfitter, in a conspiracy to transport elk in interstate commerce in violation of Montana law. Further, the 5-year "catchall" statute of limitations set out in 18 U.S.C. 3282 applied to charges of conspiring to violate the Act. U.S. v. Thomas, 887 F2d 1341 (9th Cir. 1989), distinguishing U.S. v. Stenberg, 803 F2d 422 (9th Cir. 1986).

Illegal Sale of Special Season Elk Tag Not an Offer to Sell Wildlife Prohibited by Federal Law: The alleged sale of a special season elk tag in violation of 87-2-110 (now repealed, but see 87-6-304) did not constitute an illegal sale or offer to sell wildlife under the federal Lacey Act (16 U.S.C. 3372, 3373). U.S. v. Stenberg, 803 F2d 422 (9th Cir. 1986).

Constitutionality: The disparity in the treatment of residents and nonresidents under 87-2-505 is not an unconstitutional discrimination because it infringes upon no fundamental rights and therefore does not violate the due process or equal protection clauses; nor is the right to hunt for sport a privilege or immunity of citizens of the several states that Montana is required to grant equally to residents and nonresidents under Art. IV, sec. 2, U.S. Const. Mont. Outfitters Action Group v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 417 F. Supp. 1005 (D.C. Mont. 1976), affirmed in Baldwin v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 436 US 371, 56 L Ed 2d 354, 98 S Ct 1852 (1978).

Tagging Game Killed by Another: Tagging of game animal that someone else has killed or so far brought under control that one can walk up to it and cut its throat is not method of acquiring ownership contemplated by statute authorizing licensed hunter to pursue, hunt, shoot, and kill game animal and then to possess carcass with result that person tagging illegally killed elk is not entitled to possession. State ex rel. Visser v. St. Fish & Game Comm'n, 150 M 525, 437 P2d 373 (1968).

Chapter 499 in definition of migratory game birds at end deleted "however, the open season on mourning doves is restricted to the open season on upland game birds as defined in subsection (15)"; in definition of upland game birds deleted "quail" and before "pheasant" inserted "ring-necked"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 417 in introductory clause inserted "and 87-1-102"; substituted definition of angling for former definition that read: ""Angling" or "fishing" means the taking of or attempting to take fish by hook and single line or single rod, in hand or within immediate control"; inserted definitions of bait, hunt, and trap; adjusted internal references; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Severability: Section 37, Ch. 417, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

1991 Name Change: Section 2, Ch. 28, L. 1991, directed the Code Commissioner to change the name of the Fish and Game Commission to the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission wherever the name appears in the MCA. Accordingly, the name was changed in this section as directed.

1985 Amendment: In (5) at end, after "bear", inserted "and wild buffalo".

1983 Amendment: In (7), inserted last clause relating to mourning doves and open season on mourning doves.

Administrative Action Required: Section 2, Ch. 46, L. 1979, provided: "It is the intent of this legislature that the department of fish and game take the necessary administrative action to remove lynx, northern swift fox, and wolverine from the listing of nongame species in need of management."

Severability: Section 19, Ch. 478, L. 1979, was a severability clause.

Composite Section: This section was amended by Ch. 44, Ch. 46, and Ch. 478, L. 1979, and a composite was prepared by the Code Commissioner, 1979. Chapter 478 added "Canada lynx" to the definition of "fur-bearing animals" in subsection (4), and Ch. 46 added "lynx" to that definition. The Ch. 46 language was chosen because it is more general and incorporates the additions intended by both Ch. 478 and Ch. 46.

87-2-102. Resident defined.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 60 inserted (1)(b) pertaining to residency status of a Montana resident with respect to a hunting, fishing, or trapping license if the resident is a member of the armed forces and obtains a resident hunting, fishing, or trapping license in another state; in (2) before "hunting" inserted "resident"; in (2)(d) at beginning inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 16, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 499 in (1)(b) substituted "proof of completion of a hunter safety course approved by the department" for "proof of competency". Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Saving Clause: Section 10, Ch. 499, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 187 in (1)(b), near middle of first sentence before "of competency", substituted "proof" for "a certificate"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 1998.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 417 in (1)(b), near beginning after "currently", inserted "stationed in and", inserted third sentence concerning reassignment, and inserted fourth sentence concerning designation in armed forces record; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) A person who has been a resident of the state of Montana for a period of 6 months immediately prior to making application for a license is eligible to receive a resident hunting, fishing, or trapping license. A person is considered a resident if the person meets the following criteria"; inserted (2) concerning primary home or abode for 180 consecutive days; inserted (3) requiring continuing residence for 120 days a year; inserted (4) concerning additional criteria; substituted (4)(a) concerning primary home for former text that read: "the person lives in Montana or has a fixed intent to return to this state when the person leaves it"; in (4)(d), near beginning, substituted "possess or apply for" for "use", after "trapping" inserted "licenses from another state or country or exercise resident hunting, fishing, or trapping", and at end deleted "during the time the resident Montana license is valid"; inserted (5) concerning students; inserted (9) concerning disqualifying factors for residency; inserted (10) providing that license agent is not a representative of state; adjusted internal references; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1993 Amendments: Chapter 219 in (1)(b), at end of first sentence, inserted reference to certificate of competency or other certificate. Amendment effective March 1, 1994.

Chapter 589 substituted (1) concerning determination of residency for member of armed forces or a dependent for former text that read: "Members of the regular armed forces of the United States or members of the armed forces of foreign governments attached to the armed forces of the United States who are assigned to active duty in Montana and their dependents, as defined in 15-30-113, who reside in their Montana household with them, after a period of 30 days within Montana, upon presenting assignment orders emanating from the proper unit commander, are considered residents for the purpose of this chapter. The 30-day residence requirement is waived in time of war"; substituted (5) concerning residency of an unmarried minor for former text that read: "An unmarried minor whose parents, legal guardian, or custodial parent is a resident for purposes of this section is also considered a resident for purposes of this section"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 29, 1993.

1991 Amendment: In (1), near beginning of first sentence before "armed forces", inserted "regular", near middle, before "duty", inserted "active", and after "dependents" inserted reference to 15-30-113; in (2), near beginning of first sentence after "Montana", deleted "as defined in 1-1-215" and inserted (2)(a) through (2)(e) establishing criteria for determining residency; in (4), near beginning after "person", substituted "who does not reside in Montana but who meets" for "meeting"; inserted (5) regarding residency of unmarried minors; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (4) regarding criteria by which a nonresident may be considered a resident for hunting and fishing licensing purposes.

1983 Amendment: In middle of (1), substituted "their dependents who reside in their Montana household with them" for "members of their immediate families".

Case Notes

Residency Requirements for Obtaining Hunting or Fishing License Not Unconstitutionally Vague: Britton was charged in Justice's Court with various hunting license-related crimes, but moved for dismissal on grounds that Montana's residency laws are so vague as to violate due process. The motion was denied. Following conviction, Britton asserted in District Court that this section, defining residency for hunting and fishing license purposes, is vague because other statutes define residency differently for purposes such as voting, dissolution of marriage, college attendance, and taxation. The District Court held that fish and game residency requirements are neither vague nor ambiguous and affirmed the Justice's Court conviction. On appeal, Britton asserted that the various statutory definitions of residency might confuse a person of ordinary intelligence and operate as a trap for the innocent. However, the Supreme Court affirmed, noting that the other statutory residency provisions to which Britton referred clearly provide that those provisions are for specific acts or purposes other than obtaining a hunting license and that it strained credulity to suggest that a person of ordinary intelligence would be confused into thinking that any of those statutes define residency for the purpose of obtaining a hunting license. Britton failed to establish that the residency requirements for obtaining a hunting or fishing license are facially unconstitutional on vagueness grounds. St. v. Britton, 2001 MT 141, 306 M 24, 30 P3d 337 (2001).

False Affirmation of Six-Month Residency Requirement Distinct From Constitutionality of Residency Requirement: Still falsely affirmed on his applications for hunting licenses that he had been a resident of the state for 6 months. The Supreme Court declined to address the constitutionality of the residency requirement imposed by this section because Still violated 87-2-106, a separate statute. The Supreme Court held that if Still wanted to challenge the constitutionality of the residency requirement, he should have filled out the application truthfully and then challenged the subsequent denial of the license. St. v. Still, 273 M 261, 902 P2d 546, 52 St. Rep. 965 (1995).

"Resident" Requirement for Hunting, Fishing, or Trapping License Not Unconstitutionally Vague: After the state filed charges against appellants for making false statements concerning residency in order to obtain hunting licenses, appellants filed an action, claiming that the residency statute is unconstitutionally vague. Upholding the statute, the Supreme Court ruled that the fact that the statute may be difficult to apply does not render it unconstitutionally vague. Monroe v. St., 265 M 1, 873 P2d 230, 51 St. Rep. 327 (1994), followed, as to difficulty in the application insufficient to render the statute unconstitutional, in St. v. Stanko, 1998 MT 323, 292 M 214, 974 P2d 1139, 55 St. Rep. 1313 (1998).

Attorney General's Opinions

Out-of-State Employment as Affecting Eligibility for Resident License: A Montana resident who has resided in state 6 months or more but who is absent from the state by reason of employment prior to application for a resident fish and game license does not lose his residence by being employed out of state and need not reside 6 continuous months after his return to be eligible for a resident license. 27 A.G. Op. 27 (1957). (Annotator's note: See 1995 amendment, which attempted to clarify criteria for residency by a person who has established residency but who may not physically reside in the state more than 120 days a year.)

Case Notes

No Crime in Assisting Montana Undercover Agent to Obtain Resident License: Ruiz was charged by Montana officers in a fish and game sting operation with assisting an unqualified person in obtaining a resident license. Ruiz moved for a directed verdict, but the motion was denied. One of the officers had posed as a hunter from Iowa, and Ruiz allowed the officer to use Ruiz's Montana address to obtain a resident license. However, as a Montana resident, the officer was in fact qualified to receive a resident license, so the state did not meet the burden of proving that Ruiz assisted an unqualified person in obtaining a resident license. Ruiz's directed verdict motion should have been granted, and the case was remanded for entry of an amended judgment dismissing the charge. St. v. Ruiz, 2004 MT 135, 321 M 357, 91 P3d 565 (2004).

Residency Requirements for Obtaining Hunting or Fishing License Not Unconstitutionally Vague: Britton was charged in Justice's Court with various hunting license-related crimes, but moved for dismissal on grounds that Montana's residency laws are so vague as to violate due process. The motion was denied. Following conviction, Britton asserted in District Court that 87-2-102, defining residency for hunting and fishing license purposes, is vague because other statutes define residency differently for purposes such as voting, dissolution of marriage, college attendance, and taxation. The District Court held that fish and game residency requirements are neither vague nor ambiguous and affirmed the Justice's Court conviction. On appeal, Britton asserted that the various statutory definitions of residency might confuse a person of ordinary intelligence and operate as a trap for the innocent. However, the Supreme Court affirmed, noting that the other statutory residency provisions to which Britton referred clearly provide that those provisions are for specific acts or purposes other than obtaining a hunting license and that it strained credulity to suggest that a person of ordinary intelligence would be confused into thinking that any of those statutes define residency for the purpose of obtaining a hunting license. Britton failed to establish that the residency requirements for obtaining a hunting or fishing license are facially unconstitutional on vagueness grounds. St. v. Britton, 2001 MT 141, 306 M 24, 30 P3d 337 (2001).

False Affirmation of Six-Month Residency Requirement Distinct From Constitutionality of Residency Requirement: Still falsely affirmed on his applications for hunting licenses that he had been a resident of the state for 6 months. The Supreme Court declined to address the constitutionality of the residency requirement imposed by 87-2-102 because Still violated this section, a separate statute. The Supreme Court held that if Still wanted to challenge the constitutionality of the residency requirement, he should have filled out the application truthfully and then challenged the subsequent denial of the license. St. v. Still, 273 M 261, 902 P2d 546, 52 St. Rep. 965 (1995).

Bear Killed Unlawfully — State Prosecution Barred: Defendant was charged in state District Court for subscribing to a materially false statement on an application for a grizzly bear trophy license and was charged and convicted in federal District Court for violating the Endangered Species Act for taking the same trophy. The federal court and the state court have concurrent jurisdiction, and the state prosecution is barred as it is based on an offense arising out of the same transaction as the federal charge. St. v. Sword, 229 M 370, 747 P2d 206, 44 St. Rep. 2053 (1987), distinguishing St. v. Pierce, 199 M 57, 647 P2d 847 (1982), and Blockburger v. U.S., 284 US 299, 76 L Ed 306, 52 S Ct 180 (1932).

Refusal to Sell License — Liability: The Director (the Fish and Game Warden under former law) is not liable in damages for failure to sell fishing licenses to a particular person. Meinecke v. McFarland, 122 M 515, 206 P2d 1012 (1949).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 258, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the 2007 Legislature passed House Joint Resolution No. 16, urging that revision of the criminal codes within Title 87 of the Montana Code Annotated be given priority; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 noted that practitioners, judges, and citizens find that the criminal codes intertwined within the fish and game laws in Title 87 are difficult to read, understand, and prosecute; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 directed that revision of the Title 87 criminal code should not include policy changes to current laws and should adhere to the intent of the legislatures that crafted the laws; and

WHEREAS, in 2008, the Director of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks appointed a Title 87 criminal code revision working group, consisting of Justices of the Peace, County Attorneys, an Assistant Attorney General, legal counsel and the enforcement administrator of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and legislative staff; and

WHEREAS, the working group met numerous times and spent countless hours crafting a revision that makes the Title 87 criminal code more understandable without making substantive or policy changes to present law; and

WHEREAS, revision of the fish and game criminal statutes will benefit the hunting and fishing public, magistrates, and prosecutors by codifying crimes and penalties in a separate chapter of Montana law, rather than being intertwined throughout Title 87."

Saving Clause: Section 131, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 132, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

2010 Amendment by Initiative: Initiative Measure No. 161, proposed by initiative petition and approved at the general election held November 2, 2010, in (3)(d) in first sentence after "hunting license" deleted "except a variably priced outfitter-sponsored Class B-10 or Class B-11 license issued under 87-1-268". Amendment effective March 1, 2011.

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 180 in (1) in third sentence inserted "a tribal identification card"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Chapter 237 in (1) in second sentence at beginning of bracketed language inserted "last four digits of the applicant's". Amendment effective April 24, 2007, and terminates on occurrence of contingency.

Chapter 452 in (1) near beginning of first sentence and at end of fourth sentence after "87-2-803(12)" inserted reference to 87-2-805(5) and near middle of fifth sentence after "sell" inserted "or give". Amendment effective May 8, 2007, and terminates February 28, 2009.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 573 in (1) at beginning inserted exception clause and in fourth sentence at end inserted "or to receive a free wildlife conservation license pursuant to 87-2-803(12)". Amendment effective May 2, 2005.

(Version effective March 1, 2006) Chapter 585 in (3)(a) increased resident wildlife conservation license fee from $6.25 to $8; and in (3)(b) increased nonresident wildlife conservation license fee from $9.25 to $10. Amendment effective March 1, 2006.

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 4, Ch. 235, L. 2005, repealed sec. 9, Ch. 216, L. 2001, that terminated subsections (3)(c) and (3)(d) of this section on March 1, 2006. Effective April 15, 2005.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section — Coordination: (Version effective March 1, 2004) Chapter 534 in (3)(a) increased fee from $4 to $4.25 with a 25-cent search and rescue surcharge; in (3)(b) increased fee from $7 to $7.25 with a 25-cent search and rescue surcharge; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 2004.

Pursuant to sec. 10, Ch. 596, L. 2003, a coordination section, in (3)(a) and (3)(b) increased fees by 25 cents.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 596, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation presently authorizes the public to use state school trust land through individual recreational use licenses; and

WHEREAS, the primary recreational uses of state school trust land are hunting and fishing; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation and the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks wish to provide a more efficient system for authorizing public recreational use for hunting, fishing, and trapping on state trust land and concurrently provide greater benefit to the institutional beneficiaries of the trust; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks has the discretionary authority in section 87-1-209, MCA, to enter into an agreement to compensate state trust land beneficiaries for the use and impacts associated with hunting, fishing, and trapping on legally accessible state trust land as defined by department of natural resources and conservation rule; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks needs additional revenue to offset the cost of an agreement with the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation to compensate state trust land beneficiaries for the use and impacts associated with hunting, fishing, and trapping on legally accessible state trust land; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation and the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks have reached an agreement that, given the legislative authority, they intend to enter into an agreement for the recreational use of school trust land parcels for hunting, fishing, and trapping purposes."

Severability: Section 11, Ch. 596, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 216 inserted (3)(c) concerning additional $2 resident hunting access enhancement fee; and inserted (3)(d) concerning additional $10 nonresident hunting access enhancement fee. Amendment effective March 1, 2002, and terminates March 1, 2006.

Chapter 321 in (1) in second sentence inserted brackets around "social security number"; in (5) inserted brackets; and in (6) inserted brackets. Amendment effective April 21, 2001.

Chapter 528 in (3)(b) increased nonresident wildlife conservation license fee from $5 to $7. Amendment effective March 1, 2002.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 216, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, the Private Land/Public Wildlife Advisory Council is charged with the responsibility to make suggestions for funding, modification, or improvement of the hunting access enhancement program; and

WHEREAS, although the hunting access enhancement program has enjoyed considerable success to date in providing greater opportunities for Montana hunters, the Private Land/Public Wildlife Advisory Council recognizes the potential to increase hunting access through expansion of the program; and

WHEREAS, increasing the size of the current program through a once-a-season hunting access enhancement fee on resident and most nonresident hunters would provide revenue to allow greater landowner incentives, improve hunting access to private and public lands, improve program management and services, increase upland bird hunting opportunities, and provide for future increased program costs because of inflation."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 29 in (1) in second sentence near beginning inserted "social security number"; inserted (5) requiring applicant's social security number to be kept confidential; and inserted (6) requiring deletion of applicant's social security number after 5 years. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 29, L. 1999, provided: "(1) [Sections 2 and 3] [61-5-107 and 61-5-111] apply to driver's licenses issued on or after October 1, 2000.

(2) [Sections 4 and 5] [87-2-106 and 87-2-202] apply to license years beginning on or after March 1, 2000."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 187 in (1), in first sentence after "occupation," substituted "street address of permanent residence, mailing address" for "place of residence, post-office address", after "Montana" substituted "and status as" for "state whether the applicant is", and near end substituted "signed" for "subscribed"; in (2), after "licenses", substituted "issued in a form determined by the department" for "in the form of tags or stamps issued to a holder of a wildlife conservation license", after "must be" deleted "affixed to or", and after "recorded" deleted "on the wildlife conservation license"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 1998.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 321 in (1), near middle of second sentence before "length", inserted "the qualifying" and after "time" inserted "as a resident", in third sentence, before "driver's license", inserted "valid Montana", inserted reference to driver's examiner's identification card, and inserted language regarding required information specified by Department, and inserted fourth and fifth sentences regarding documentation required for license application and making it unlawful for an agent to sell a conservation license without adequate documentation; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 592 in (3)(a), after "Resident", deleted "and nonresident" and increased wildlife conservation license fee from $2 to $4; and inserted (3)(b) establishing $5 nonresident wildlife conservation license fee. Amendment effective March 1, 1992.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 592, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, an increase in Montana hunting and fishing license fees is necessary to raise revenue in order for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to meet an anticipated revenue shortfall."

1983 Amendment: In (4), substituted "the last day of February" for "April 30".

1981 Amendment: Changed fee in (3) from "$1" to "$2".

Case Notes

Collection of Social Security Number for Issuance of Conservation License Rationally Related to Legitimate State Interests — Right to Privacy Not Violated: Plaintiffs contended that the state's collection of a partial Social Security number as a condition for issuance of a wildlife conservation license violated the fundamental right to privacy. After concluding that plaintiffs' privacy rights were not implicated, the Supreme Court applied rational basis review and held that the state's interest in collecting the last four digits of Social Security numbers from applicants for wildlife conservation licenses was legitimate and rationally related to the state's interest in maintaining access to federal funding and federal tools for locating parents owing child support under 42 U.S.C. 666(a)(13). Thus, the District Court correctly denied plaintiffs' request that they not be required to supply a Social Security number when applying for a wildlife conservation license. Mont. Part Case Notes

Constitutionality: The disparity in the treatment of residents and nonresidents under 87-2-505 is not an unconstitutional discrimination because it infringes upon no fundamental rights and therefore does not violate the due process or equal protection clauses; nor is the right to hunt for sport a privilege or immunity of citizens of the several states that Montana is required to grant equally to residents and nonresidents under Art. IV, sec. 2, U.S. Const. Mont. Outfitters Action Group v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 417 F. Supp. 1005 (D.C. Mont. 1976), affirmed in Baldwin v. 87-2-305. Navigable waters subject to fishing rights.

Case Notes

Public Recreational Use Rights Statute — Constitutionality: Following Curran and Hildreth decisions (see below), which held that the public trust doctrine provides the public with a constitutional right to use the bed and banks of navigable streams up to the high-water mark despite a landowner's fee title, the Legislature enacted 23-2-302 providing public recreational use of streams. Plaintiff filed suit requesting the court to declare the recreational use statute an unconstitutional taking or private property without just compensation. Plaintiff then appealed after the trial court upheld the statute's constitutionality and awarded the state summary judgment. The Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional 23-2-302(2)(d), (2)(e), and (2)(f), which provided the public a right to hunt big game, build duck blinds and boat moorages, and camp overnight so long as not within sight of an occupied dwelling or within 500 yard of an occupied dwelling, whichever is less. The court further held as unconstitutional 23-2-311(3)(e), which required a landowner to pay costs of constructing a portage route around artificial barriers. The public has a right of use of the bed and banks up to the high-water mark but only such use as is necessary to utilization of the water itself. Any use of the bed and banks must be of minimal impact. Galt v. St., 225 M 142, 731 P2d 912, 44 St. Rep. 103 (1987).

Public Right to Use Beaverhead River for Recreational Purposes: Following the decision in Mont. Coalition for Stream Access v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984), the Supreme Court held that: (1) the Beaverhead River is navigable for recreational purposes and the public has a right to use its bed and banks up to the ordinary high-water mark with limited right to portage across private property in order to bypass barriers in the water; (2) determination of navigability for title is not necessary; (3) the public does not have the right to trespass over private property in order to reach the state-owned waters; and (4) plaintiff's action did not constitute inverse condemnation because public use of waters, rather than title, was determined. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Hildreth, 211 M 29, 684 P2d 1088, 41 St. Rep. 1192 (1984).

Determination of Public's Right to Use Dearborn River — Standing of Coalition of Citizens: In action for determination of the public's right to use the Dearborn River, whether the Montana Coalition for Stream Access, Inc., had standing to bring suit was immaterial because the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation) and the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks were also plaintiffs. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Determining Public's Right to Use Dearborn River — Indispensable Parties: Stream access coalition, the Department of State Lands (now Department of Natural Resources and Conservation), and the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks sued landowner along the Dearborn River, seeking a determination of the public's right to use the river. The District Court did not err for failure to dismiss the plaintiffs' claims for failure to join indispensable parties. When litigation seeks vindication of a public right, those who may be adversely affected by a decision do not thereby become indispensable parties. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Navigability for Title Purposes — Federal Test — Dearborn River Navigable: Federal law controlled the issue of whether the Dearborn River was, at the time Montana became a state, navigable for the purpose of determining title to its bed. Under federal law, rivers are navigable in law if they are navigable in fact, and they are navigable in fact if they were used or capable of being used, in their ordinary condition, as highways for commerce over which trade and travel were or could be conducted in the customary modes of trade and travel on the water at the time of the state's admission to the Union. Navigability in fact can be determined by using the log-floating test. That test was satisfied by evidence that in 1887, 2 years before Montana became a state, the Dearborn was used to float about 100,000 railroad ties and that in 1888 or 1889, one or two log drives a year were floated down the river, one of them containing 700,000 board feet. Title to the riverbed was thus in the federal government when Montana became a state in 1889 and was transferred to the State upon its admission to the Union. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Navigability for Title Purposes — Summary Judgment — Dearborn River: The District Court properly granted the coalition for stream access and two state departments summary judgment on the issue of navigability of the Dearborn River in 1889 for title purposes. The affidavits and depositions of plaintiffs' two competent historians were admissible because the historians were qualified experts who provided evidence of the history of the river, their affidavits and depositions disclosed circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness, and the facts and data they relied on were of a type reasonably relied on by experts in their field; the facts and data did not themselves have to be admissible. The affidavits of defendant landowner's witnesses were worthless, were not admissible, and did not create any genuine issue of material fact concerning the navigability of the river at the time Montana became a state in 1889. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Public Recreational Use Rights on Dearborn River — Limits: Navigability for public use is governed by state law and is separate from the question of navigability under federal law for title purposes. The question is whether waters owned by the State under Art. IX, sec. 3(3), Mont. Const., are susceptible to recreational use by the public. The capability of use of the waters for recreational purposes determines the availability of the waters for recreational use by the public. Whether or not a private party owns the bed beneath the waters is irrelevant. The constitution and the Public Trust Doctrine bar a private party from interfering with the public's right to use of the surface of the waters owned by the State, and any surface waters that are capable of recreational use may be so used by the public without regard to streambed ownership or navigability for nonrecreational purposes. The public's recreational use right extends to the point of the high-water marks. The public does not have the right to cross over private property to reach waters upon which they have a recreational use right, though they may portage around barriers in the water in the least intrusive way possible, avoiding damage to any private property holder's rights. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Public Recreational Use of Dearborn River — No Inverse Condemnation: Landowner along Dearborn River was sued by parties seeking a determination of the public's right to use the river for recreational uses. Landowner counterclaimed for inverse condemnation, basing the counterclaim on his claim to ownership of the riverbed. The Supreme Court held that the question of title to the bed was irrelevant to determining navigability for use by the public; that landowner had no claim to the waters; that since there was no claim to the waters, nothing was taken and thus there was no ground for an inverse condemnation claim; and that consequently, the District Court did not err in dismissing the counterclaim. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Title to and Public Recreation on Dearborn River — Ex Post Facto, Contract Clause, and Irrevocable Privileged Considerations: The Supreme Court held that the State, not the landowner along the Dearborn River, held title to the bed of the river under the federal test of navigability (at the time Montana became a state) for purposes of determining title to the riverbed. The court also held that landowner had no right to exclude the public from recreational use of the waters of the Dearborn. Because of these holdings, landowner's questions relating to ex post facto laws, violation of the contract clause of the constitution, and irrevocable rights and privileges were not germane to the case. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Title to and Public Use of Dearborn River — Federal Commerce Clause Navigability Immaterial: In action for determination of the public's right to use the Dearborn River, whether Montana has adopted the log-floating test of commercial navigability and whether the Dearborn is navigable under the federal commercial use test were immaterial because the question was one of recreational use or navigability, not commercial navigability. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Title to and Public Use of Dearborn River — Subject Matter Jurisdiction Found: Landowner along the Dearborn River claimed the District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over action for determination of the public's right to use the river, basing his claim on the presumption that he held title to the riverbed and that the State had no power to strip him of that title under the guise of determining navigability of the waters over the riverbed. The claim lacked merit because the State holds title to the riverbed and the water flowing over it, so that there was no question of the District Court's subject matter jurisdiction. Mont. Coalition for Stream Access, Inc. v. Curran, 210 M 38, 682 P2d 163, 41 St. Rep. 906 (1984).

Summary of Holdings in Litigation Over Hunting and Fishing Rights on Crow Indian Reservation: "The explicit holdings of the Supreme Court in Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. 544, 101 S.Ct. 1245, 67 L.Ed.2d 493 (1981), and of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in United States v. State of Montana, 604 F.2d 1162 (9th Cir. 1979), to the extent not reversed by the Supreme Court, are as follows:

1. The Crow Tribe can proscribe all hunting and fishing by non-members on those lands described in 18 U.S.C. §1165. Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. at 557, 101 S.Ct. at 1254.

2. The Crow Tribe, within 18 U.S.C. §1165 lands, has power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-members of the tribe (whether Indian or non-Indian) subject to the following conditions:

(a) That the Crow Tribe lacks the power to impose criminal sanctions on non-Indians who violate its hunting and fishing regulations,

(b) That the exercise by the Crow Tribe of its power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-Indians must be within the constraints recognized by this court in Quechan Tribe of Indians v. Rowe, 531 F.2d 408 (9th Cir. 1976). Montana v. United States, 450 U.S. at 557, 101 S.Ct. at 1254; United States v. Montana, 604 F.2d at 1165, 1170.

3. The title to the bed and banks of the Big Horn is in the State of Montana. 450 U.S. at 556-57, 101 S.Ct. at 1253-54.

4. The Crow Tribe has no power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-members on non-member owned fee patent land located within the exterior boundaries of the Crow Reservation. Id. at 557, 101 S.Ct. at 1254.

5. The State of Montana cannot regulate hunting and fishing by members of the Crow Tribe within 18 U.S.C. §1165 lands. 604 F.2d at 1172.

6. The State of Montana has the power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-members of the Crow Tribe within the exterior boundaries of the Crow Reservation subject to the following limitations:

(a) That such regulations of the State of Montana not regulate indirectly the hunting and fishing by members of the Crow Tribe on 18 U.S.C. §1165 lands.

(b) That such regulations of the State of Montana must have as their purpose the conservation and proper management of game and fish and not to discriminate against, nor to impede, authorized regulation by the Crow Tribe. Id. at 1166.

7. Such rights as the State of Montana has to regulate fishing on the Big Horn River by the Crows and all others are not limited by either (a) the treaties of 1851 and 1868 (except to such extent as these treaties might acknowledge pertinent aboriginal title rights of the Crow Tribe not heretofore asserted or recognized in this litigation) or (b) the inherent sovereignty of the Crow Tribe. 604 F.2d at 1170-71." (Quoting from U.S. v. Mont., 686 F2d 766 (9th Cir. 1982), at pp. 768-769.)

Tribal Regulation of Flathead Lake Usage: Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation have authority to regulate federal common-law riparian rights of non-Indians who own reservation land bordering the south half of Flathead Lake. The Circuit Court held that the decision in Mont. v. U.S., 450 US 544, 67 L Ed 2d 493, 101 S Ct 1245 (1981), regarding ownership and control of the Bighorn River, was not controlling. The decision in Mont. Power Co. v. Rochester, 127 F2d 189 (9th Cir. 1942), was given deference under the principle of stare decisis. Rochester held that the United States holds title to the bed and banks of the south half of Flathead Lake in trust for the tribes. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation v. Namen, 665 F2d 951 (9th Cir. 1982), followed in In re Estate of Hobbs, 2002 MT 85, 309 M 308, 46 P3d 594 (2002).

1991 Amendments: Chapter 418 in (3), near beginning after "who", substituted "owns or is contracting to purchase" for "holds fee title to".

Chapter 592 in (1)(a) increased deer A tag fee from $9 to $11 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $13 beginning March 1, 1994; in (1)(b) increased deer B tag fee from $6 to $7 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $8 beginning March 1, 1994; in (1)(c) increased elk tag fee from $10 to $13 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $16 beginning March 1, 1994; in (1)(d) increased bear tag fee from $8 to $11 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $15 beginning March 1, 1994; and in (1)(e) increased antlerless elk tag fee from $10 to $13 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $16 beginning March 1, 1994. Amendment effective March 1, 1992.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 592, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, an increase in Montana hunting and fishing license fees is necessary to raise revenue in order for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to meet an anticipated revenue shortfall."

1989 Amendment: Near beginning of (1), after "87-2-102", inserted "or a nonresident who wishes to purchase a Class A-7 elk license only"; near beginning of (2)(a), after "to take", deleted "surplus" and at end, after "commission", deleted "but may not simultaneously possess a Class A-5 and a Class A-7 license in the same year. The commission shall include in the terms of issuance of the Class A-7 license a requirement for surrender of a current Class A-5 license if held by a person at the time he purchases a Class A-7 license. If a current Class A-5 license is surrendered, as required by this section, the Class A-7 license must be issued without cost to the holder"; near end of first sentence of (2)(b), after "Class A-5", inserted "license or nonresident" and inserted second sentence relating to Department's use of special elk permits; and inserted (2)(c) that read: "(c) A nonresident shall hold a nonresident Class B-10 license as a prerequisite to application for a Class A-7 license." Amendment effective March 1, 1990.

Delayed Effective Date: Section 3, Ch. 296, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] is effective March 1, 1990."

1987 Amendment: Inserted (3) through (5) relating to the landowner set-aside of Class A-7 licenses.

1985 Amendment: Effective March 1, 1986, near middle of (1), after "licenses", inserted "at the prescribed cost"; in (1)(e) increased fee from $8 to $10; and in (2) near end of first sentence, substituted "and upon such terms as set forth by the commission but may not simultaneously possess a Class A-5 and a Class A-7 license in the same year" for "during the regular big game season as set forth by the commission", inserted second and third sentences requiring surrender of current Class A-5 license and issuance of Class A-7 license without cost if Class A-5 license is surrendered, at beginning of fourth sentence deleted "However", and in middle of fourth sentence, after "person", substituted "holding a Class A-7 antlerless elk tag may not take an elk" for "taking an antlerless elk as provided in this subsection may not take another elk".

1983 Amendment: Increased license fees as follows: Class A-3, deer A tag from $8 to $9; Class A-4, deer B tag from $5 to $6; Class A-5, elk tag from $9 to $10; and inserted (1)(e) and (2), creating Class A-7, antlerless elk tag.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 335 (Ch. 680, L. 1983) provided: "A statement of intent is required for House Bill 335 because section 3 [87-2-501] provides that the Fish and Game Commission [now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission] will designate the areas in which surplus antlerless elk may be taken with a Class A-7 antlerless elk license. In addition, the Commission may set times during the regular big game season for the taking of surplus antlerless elk in designated areas.

The intent of the Class A-7 antlerless elk license is to provide the Commission with the option to issue antlerless elk licenses. The Commission would, with appropriate public comment, authorize antlerless elk licenses to be used in problem areas where additional antlerless elk need to be harvested. Class A-7 antlerless elk license holders would not be allowed to harvest a bull elk in the designated areas for the time period authorized by the Commission for the antlerless elk license.

The Class A-7 antlerless elk license would not replace the need for or use of the antlerless or either sex elk permits now in place. The Class A-7 antlerless elk license would provide additional flexibility for the Commission to deal with problems of surplus antlerless elk, particularly on private land."

1981 Amendment: Increased license fees as follows: Class A-3, deer A tag from "$7" to "$8"; Class A-5, elk tag from "$8" to "$9"; and Class A-6, bear tag from "$6" to "$8".

2003 Amendment: Chapter 201 inserted (3) concerning nonresident antlerless elk B tag license and setting fee for the license; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 1, 2003.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: (Version effective March 1, 2002) Chapter 216 in (1) near middle of first sentence after "$475" inserted "plus the nonresident hunting access enhancement fee in 87-2-202(3)(d)". Amendment effective March 1, 2002, and terminates March 1, 2006.

(Version effective March 1, 2002) Chapter 528 in (1) in first sentence increased fee from $475 to $625.

(Version effective March 1, 2006) In (1) substituted "fee of $550" for "fee of $398 or upon payment of the fee of $408 if the license is one of the 5,600 licenses reserved pursuant to 87-2-511 for applicants indicating their intent to use the services of a licensed outfitter"; and made minor changes in style.

(Versions effective March 1, 2002, and March 1, 2006) In (1) in first sentence substituted "fish, wildlife, and parks office" for "fish and game office".

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 216, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, the Private Land/Public Wildlife Advisory Council is charged with the responsibility to make suggestions for funding, modification, or improvement of the hunting access enhancement program; and

WHEREAS, although the hunting access enhancement program has enjoyed considerable success to date in providing greater opportunities for Montana hunters, the Private Land/Public Wildlife Advisory Council recognizes the potential to increase hunting access through expansion of the program; and

WHEREAS, increasing the size of the current program through a once-a-season hunting access enhancement fee on resident and most nonresident hunters would provide revenue to allow greater landowner incentives, improve hunting access to private and public lands, improve program management and services, increase upland bird hunting opportunities, and provide for future increased program costs because of inflation."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 533 in (1) after second "who" substituted "is" for "will be", after "older" substituted "or who will turn 12 years old before or during" for "prior to September 15 of", and after "holder" inserted "who is 12 years of age or older"; inserted (2) concerning unsuccessful nonresident in B-10 drawing; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2000.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 6, Ch. 544, L. 1999, amended sec. 18, Ch. 459, L. 1995, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 459 to March 1, 2006.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 459 in version effective March 1, 1996, in first sentence, after "payment of the fee of", deleted "$462 beginning March 1, 1992, and", after "$475" deleted "beginning March 1, 1994", substituted "established as provided in 87-1-268" for "of $472 beginning March 1, 1992, and $485 beginning March 1, 1994", and before "licenses" deleted "5,600" and in second sentence substituted "11,500 unreserved" for "17,000"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 1996, and terminates October 1, 2001.

Amendment Not Codified: The Code Commissioner has not codified the amendments to the version effective March 1, 2006. Section 18(1), Ch. 459, L. 1995, terminated the amendments on October 1, 2001, before the section became effective on March 1, 2006.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 459, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana has a cherished hunting heritage based on a deep knowledge of and respect for wildlife and the land; and

WHEREAS, private landowners provide wildlife habitat and hunting opportunities, the hunting public provides financial and political support for sound wildlife management, and the combined efforts of landowners and the hunting public have sustained Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, landowner/outfitter/sportsperson relations have become increasingly strained over the past several years, leading to increased polarization between the groups; and

WHEREAS, the 1993 Legislature addressed this problem through the passage of House Joint Resolution No. 24, which requested the Governor, through the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, to coordinate a sustained, ongoing, cooperative effort to address these issues by establishing statewide, regional, and local groups to develop mutually satisfactory solutions that would preserve Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage and encourage the continuance of a viable outfitting industry; and

WHEREAS, in response to that request, the Governor appointed the Advisory Council on Private Land/Public Wildlife, consisting of representatives of the affected groups, to study the issues in anticipation of legislation that reflects the mutual interests of landowners, outfitters, and the sporting community; and

WHEREAS, after considering extensive input and advice from individual private citizens, local working groups, agencies, and nonprofit organizations involved in conservation, the Advisory Council by consensus developed recommendations for improving hunting access to private lands and for providing tangible benefits for landowners who allow access to their lands for hunting; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council has made efforts to break new ground philosophically in designing its recommendations, requiring that all interested parties be willing to accept change in order to benefit everyone who has an interest in Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council finds it appropriate to present the following recommendations to the Legislature in the spirit of a cooperative and positive effort to enhance relations between landowners, outfitters, and sportspersons."

1995 Statement of Intent: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 1 through 3] [87-1-265 through 87-1-267] grant rulemaking authority to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement programs for hunter management and hunting access enhancement. It is intended that in addition to the statutory guidelines set out in those sections, any rules be adopted with the purpose of optimizing hunting opportunity and access while minimizing administrative costs in providing benefits to landowners who voluntarily participate in the programs. In addition, [section 6] [87-1-268] grants rulemaking authority to the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement the provisions of variable pricing for Class B-10 and Class B-11 outfitter-sponsored licenses. It is intended that the fish, wildlife, and parks commission use its licensing authority to adjust the price of those licenses as necessary and that any additional revenue generated by variable pricing be used to fund the hunting access enhancement program."

Severability: Section 13, Ch. 459, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 14, Ch. 459, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 1, Ch. 241, L. 1993, amended sec. 12, Ch. 598, L. 1987, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 2006. Section 2, Ch. 241, L. 1993, amended sec. 3, Ch. 319, L. 1991, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 2006.

1991 Amendment: (Version effective March 1, 1992) In first sentence increased nonresident big game combination license fee from $450 to $462 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $475 beginning March 1, 1994, or to $472 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $485 beginning March 1, 1994, for applicants indicating intent to use services of licensed outfitter and near end, after "Class B-7", deleted "and black bear"; and made minor change in style.

(Version effective March 1, 1996) In first sentence increased nonresident big game combination license fee from $373 to $398 or to $408 for applicants indicating intent to use services of licensed outfitter and near end, after "Class B-7", deleted "and black bear"; and made minor change in style. Amendments effective March 1, 1992.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 592, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, an increase in Montana hunting and fishing license fees is necessary to raise revenue in order for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to meet an anticipated revenue shortfall."

Extension of Termination Date: Section 3, Ch. 319, L. 1991, amended sec. 12, Ch. 598, L. 1987, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 1996. Amendment effective April 2, 1991.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 598 increased fee from $350 to $450 from March 1, 1988, to March 1, 1994.

Chapter 636 increased fee from $350 to $373.

1985 Amendment: Increased license fee from $300 to $350 effective March 1, 1986.

1983 Amendment: Increased license fee from $275 to $300 effective March 1, 1984.

1981 Amendment: Changed the fee from "$225" to "$275".

Case Notes

Constitutionality: The disparity in the treatment of residents and nonresidents under this section is not an unconstitutional discrimination because it infringes upon no fundamental rights and therefore does not violate the due process or equal protection clauses; nor is the right to hunt for sport a privilege or immunity of citizens of the several states that Montana is required to grant equally to residents and nonresidents under Art. IV, sec. 2, U.S. Const. (See 1999 amendment.) Mont. Outfitters Action Group v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 417 F. Supp. 1005 (D.C. Mont. 1976), affirmed in Baldwin v. (Version effective March 1, 2006) In (1) at end of first sentence substituted "$300, purchase a Class B-11 nonresident deer combination license that entitles a holder who is 12 years of age or older to all the privileges of the Class B, Class B-1, and Class B-7 licenses" for "$220 or upon payment of the fee of $225", at beginning of second sentence inserted "The fee for a Class B-11 license is $300", and in fourth sentence substituted "fish, wildlife, and parks office" for "fish and game office" and after "Montana" deleted "to purchase a Class B-11 nonresident deer combination license that entitles a holder who is 12 years of age or older to all the privileges of the Class B, Class B-1, and Class B-7 licenses"; and made minor changes in style.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 216, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, the Private Land/Public Wildlife Advisory Council is charged with the responsibility to make suggestions for funding, modification, or improvement of the hunting access enhancement program; and

WHEREAS, although the hunting access enhancement program has enjoyed considerable success to date in providing greater opportunities for Montana hunters, the Private Land/Public Wildlife Advisory Council recognizes the potential to increase hunting access through expansion of the program; and

WHEREAS, increasing the size of the current program through a once-a-season hunting access enhancement fee on resident and most nonresident hunters would provide revenue to allow greater landowner incentives, improve hunting access to private and public lands, improve program management and services, increase upland bird hunting opportunities, and provide for future increased program costs because of inflation."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 533 in (1) after second "who" substituted "is" for "will be", after "older" substituted "or who will turn 12 years old before or during" for "prior to September 15 of", and after "holder" inserted "who is 12 years of age or older"; inserted (3) concerning unsuccessful nonresident in B-11 drawing; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2000.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 6, Ch. 544, L. 1999, amended sec. 18, Ch. 459, L. 1995, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 459 to March 1, 2006.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 459 in version effective March 1, 1996, in (1), in first sentence, substituted "established as provided in 87-1-268" for "of $225", after "license is one of" substituted "those" for "the 4,000", and inserted requirement for payment of $225 fee for license reserved under 87-2-511; in (2) substituted "Not more than 2,300 unreserved" for "Six thousand"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 1996, and terminates October 1, 2001.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 459, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana has a cherished hunting heritage based on a deep knowledge of and respect for wildlife and the land; and

WHEREAS, private landowners provide wildlife habitat and hunting opportunities, the hunting public provides financial and political support for sound wildlife management, and the combined efforts of landowners and the hunting public have sustained Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, landowner/outfitter/sportsperson relations have become increasingly strained over the past several years, leading to increased polarization between the groups; and

WHEREAS, the 1993 Legislature addressed this problem through the passage of House Joint Resolution No. 24, which requested the Governor, through the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, to coordinate a sustained, ongoing, cooperative effort to address these issues by establishing statewide, regional, and local groups to develop mutually satisfactory solutions that would preserve Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage and encourage the continuance of a viable outfitting industry; and

WHEREAS, in response to that request, the Governor appointed the Advisory Council on Private Land/Public Wildlife, consisting of representatives of the affected groups, to study the issues in anticipation of legislation that reflects the mutual interests of landowners, outfitters, and the sporting community; and

WHEREAS, after considering extensive input and advice from individual private citizens, local working groups, agencies, and nonprofit organizations involved in conservation, the Advisory Council by consensus developed recommendations for improving hunting access to private lands and for providing tangible benefits for landowners who allow access to their lands for hunting; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council has made efforts to break new ground philosophically in designing its recommendations, requiring that all interested parties be willing to accept change in order to benefit everyone who has an interest in Montana's hunting and wildlife heritage; and

WHEREAS, the Advisory Council finds it appropriate to present the following recommendations to the Legislature in the spirit of a cooperative and positive effort to enhance relations between landowners, outfitters, and sportspersons."

1995 Statement of Intent: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 1 through 3] [87-1-265 through 87-1-267] grant rulemaking authority to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement programs for hunter management and hunting access enhancement. It is intended that in addition to the statutory guidelines set out in those sections, any rules be adopted with the purpose of optimizing hunting opportunity and access while minimizing administrative costs in providing benefits to landowners who voluntarily participate in the programs. In addition, [section 6] [87-1-268] grants rulemaking authority to the fish, wildlife, and parks commission to implement the provisions of variable pricing for Class B-10 and Class B-11 outfitter-sponsored licenses. It is intended that the fish, wildlife, and parks commission use its licensing authority to adjust the price of those licenses as necessary and that any additional revenue generated by variable pricing be used to fund the hunting access enhancement program."

Severability: Section 13, Ch. 459, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 14, Ch. 459, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Code Commissioner Correction: This section was amended in 1991 by Ch. 592, L. 1991, to increase the cost of a general Class B-11 license to $245 and the cost of a resident-sponsored and outfitter-sponsored license to $250, effective March 1, 1994. The 1995 Legislature amended this section to reflect pricing of the outfitter-sponsored license according to the variable pricing format of Ch. 459, L. 1995, without changing the price of the general or resident-sponsored license, but amended an earlier version of this section. The prices of the general license and the resident-sponsored license have been corrected by the Code Commissioner to reflect the actual license prices set by Ch. 592, L. 1991.

1991 Amendment: (Version effective March 1, 1992) In (1) increased nonresident combination deer license fee from $200 to $238 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $245 beginning March 1, 1994, or to $248 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $250 beginning March 1, 1994, for applicants indicating intent to use services of licensed outfitter or to hunt with resident sponsor on sponsor's land.

(Version effective March 1, 1994) In (1) increased nonresident deer combination license fee from $175 to $220 or to $225 for applicants indicating intent to use services of licensed outfitter or to hunt with resident sponsor on sponsor's land. Amendments effective March 1, 1992.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 592, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, an increase in Montana hunting and fishing license fees is necessary to raise revenue in order for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to meet an anticipated revenue shortfall."

Coordination Instruction: Section 11, Ch. 598, L. 1987, a coordination instruction, increased fee in (1) of temporary version from $175 to $200.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 336 inserted (6) regarding licensing of applicant not successful in drawing for special elk permit; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2011.

2010 Amendment by Initiative: Initiative Measure No. 161, proposed by initiative petition and approved at the general election held November 2, 2010, in (1) near middle after "March 15" deleted "a number of authorized Class B-10 and Class B-11 licenses, as determined under 87-1-268, reserved for applicants using the services of a licensed outfitter and"; deleted former (4) and (5) that read: "(4) Each application for an outfitter-sponsored license under subsection (1) must contain a written affirmation by the applicant that the applicant will hunt with a licensed outfitter for all big game hunted by the applicant under the license and must indicate the name of the licensed outfitter with whom the applicant will hunt. In addition, the application must be accompanied by a certificate that is signed by a licensed outfitter and that affirms that the outfitter will:

(a) accompany the applicant;

(b) provide guiding services for the species hunted by the applicant;

(c) direct the applicant's hunting for all big game hunted by the applicant under the license and advise the applicant of game and trespass laws of the state;

(d) submit to the department, in a manner prescribed by the department, complete records of who hunted with the outfitter, where they hunted, and what game was taken; and

(e) accept no monetary consideration for enabling the nonresident applicant to obtain a license or for providing any services or assistance to the nonresident applicant, except as provided in Title 37, chapter 47, and this title.

(5) An outfitter-sponsored license under subsection (1) is valid only when used in compliance with the affirmations of the applicant and outfitter required under subsection (4). If the sponsoring outfitter is unavailable or if the applicant wishes to use the services of separate outfitters for hunting different species of game, an outfitter-sponsored license may be used with a substitute licensed outfitter, in compliance with the affirmations under subsection (4), upon advance written notification to the board by the sponsoring licensed outfitter or the substitute outfitter"; deleted former (7) and (8) that read: "(7) Any permits or tags secured as a result of obtaining a Class B-10 or Class B-11 license through an outfitter sponsor are valid only when hunting is conducted with a licensed outfitter.

(8) The department shall make the reserved outfitter-sponsored Class B-10 and Class B-11 licenses that remain unsold available as provided in 87-1-268"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 2011.

2005 Amendment: (Version effective March 1, 2006) Chapter 470 inserted (10) regarding sale of Class B-13 licenses. Amendment effective March 1, 2006.

Termination Provision Deleted: Sections 2 and 3, Ch. 235, L. 2005, amended sec. 6, Ch. 544, L. 1999, and sec. 18, Ch. 459, L. 1995, removing the provision that terminated amendments to this section March 1, 2006. Effective April 15, 2005.

1999 Amendment: (Temporary version) Chapter 544 in (3) inserted second, third, fourth, and fifth sentences requiring department to issue licenses to applicant sponsored by resident owner of 640 or more acres if licenses sufficient, requiring issuance of licenses to second applicant for sponsor, requiring drawing for remaining resident-sponsored licenses, and requiring drawing when number of licenses insufficient and in sixth sentence decreased number of sponsorship certificates from 20 to 15 and after "year" deleted "prior to expiration of the moratorium established in 37-47-315, after which no more than 10 certificates of sponsorship may be submitted in any license year"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 29, 1999.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 328 in (1), after "applicants", substituted "using" for "indicating their intent to use"; in (2), near beginning, substituted "resident-sponsored license" for "reserved license", after "affirmation" inserted "by the applicant", after "hunt with" deleted "a licensed outfitter or", after "name of the" deleted "licensed outfitter or", after "signed by a" deleted "licensed outfitter or", and at end substituted "the resident sponsor will" for "the outfitter or resident will"; in (2)(b) inserted reference to resident sponsor; in (2)(c), at end, inserted reference to Title 37, chapter 47; inserted (4) relating to outfitter-sponsored license; inserted (5) relating to substitute outfitter; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 459 in temporary version in (1) substituted "a number" for "5,600", after "Class B-10" inserted "and Class B-11", and substituted "as determined under 87-1-268" for "and 2,000 Class B-11 licenses"; in (2)(b), pursuant to sec. 15(2), Ch. 459, L. 1995, a coordination section, substituted "the resident sponsor" for "the outfitter or resident"; in (3) inserted second sentence regarding limitation of submission of certificates of sponsorship; inserted (6) regarding limitation on deer hunting; inserted (7) regarding validity of permits or tags; in (8) inserted "outfitter-sponsored", after "remain unsold" deleted "on April 15", and substituted reference to 87-1-268 for "to nonresident applicants without restriction as to hunting with a licensed outfitter or resident sponsor"; in (9), after "subsection (1)", deleted "and all unsold reserved licenses available under subsection (4)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment terminates October 1, 2001.

WHEREAS, members of many Montana families have been required to move out of state to pursue expanded employment opportunities; and

WHEREAS, it can be difficult for these adult nonresident family members to draw a nonresident license in order to come back to Montana to hunt with their families; and

WHEREAS, there is a need for new revenue to address public land access concerns because access to public land for hunting is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain as traditional routes across private land are closed to public hunters; and

WHEREAS, creating a temporary new pool of nonresident licenses dedicated to former residents who desire to return to Montana to hunt with their families and directing the revenue from those licenses to fund public access to inaccessible public land would assist in strengthening both aspects of Montana's hunting heritage; and

WHEREAS, statistics compiled by the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks will provide a measurement of the success of the pilot program to provide more opportunities for former residents to come back home to hunt and to determine whether the license and the associated public land access efforts have resulted in a net increase or decrease in hunting opportunities for resident hunters."

Effective Date: Section 3, Ch. 345, L. 2009, provided that this section is effective March 1, 2010.

Termination: Section 4, Ch. 345, L. 2009, provided: "[This act] terminates March 1, 2014."

Part 6
Trapping Licenses

Part Administrative Rules

Title 12, chapter 6, subchapter 10, ARM Trapping.

Part Case Notes

Constitutionality: The disparity in the treatment of residents and nonresidents under 87-2-505 is not an unconstitutional discrimination because it infringes upon no fundamental rights and therefore does not violate the due process or equal protection clauses; nor is the right to hunt for sport a privilege or immunity of citizens of the several states that Montana is required to grant equally to residents and nonresidents under Art. IV, sec. 2, U.S. Const. Mont. Outfitters Action Group v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 417 F. Supp. 1005 (D.C. Mont. 1976), affirmed in Baldwin v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 436 US 371, 56 L Ed 2d 354, 98 S Ct 1852 (1978).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Right to Trap on Streams Not Governed by Stream Access Law: The right to trap fur-bearing animals between the ordinary high-water marks of a stream is not governed by Title 23, ch. 2, part 3, but rather is dependent upon whether the trapper has license, invitation, or privilege to enter or remain upon land and whether the trapper has secured a license to trap. 41 A.G. Op. 36 (1985).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 533 in (1) after "who" substituted "is" for "will be" and after "older" substituted "or who will turn 12 years old before or during" for "prior to September 15 of"; and in (2) after "license" inserted "who is 12 years of age or older". Amendment effective October 1, 2000.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 263 in (1)(a) through (1)(d) of March 1, 1996, version deleted former license fees and dates upon which fees became effective (see 1995 Session Law for text); in versions effective March 1, 1996, and March 1, 2006, in (1)(f), after "black", deleted "or brown"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 1996.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 1, Ch. 241, L. 1993, amended sec. 12, Ch. 598, L. 1987, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 2006. Section 2, Ch. 241, L. 1993, amended sec. 3, Ch. 319, L. 1991, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 2006.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 401 deleted (1)(g) establishing wild buffalo license with resident fee of $200 and nonresidential fee of $1,000; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 1991.

(Version effective March 1, 1992) Chapter 592 in (1)(a) increased resident moose license fee from $50 to $60 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $75 beginning March 1, 1994, and nonresident fee from $320 to $450 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $475 beginning March 1, 1994; in (1)(b) increased resident mountain goat license fee from $50 to $60 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $75 beginning March 1, 1994, and nonresident fee from $320 to $450 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $475 beginning March 1, 1994; in (1)(c) increased resident mountain sheep license fee from $50 to $60 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $75 beginning March 1, 1994, and nonresident fee from $320 to $450 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $475 beginning March 1, 1994; and in (1)(d) increased resident antelope license fee from $6 to $9 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $11 beginning March 1, 1994, and nonresident fee from $120 to $145 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $150 beginning March 1, 1994.

(Version effective March 1, 1996) Chapter 592 in (1)(a) increased resident moose license fee from $50 to $75 and nonresident fee from $300 to $455; in (1)(b) increased resident mountain goat license fee from $50 to $75 and nonresident fee from $300 to $455; in (1)(c) increased resident mountain sheep license fee from $50 to $75 and nonresident fee from $300 to $455; and in (1)(d) increased resident antelope license fee from $6 to $11 and nonresident fee from $100 to $130. Amendments effective March 1, 1992.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 592, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, an increase in Montana hunting and fishing license fees is necessary to raise revenue in order for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to meet an anticipated revenue shortfall."

Extension of Termination Date: Section 3, Ch. 319, L. 1991, amended sec. 12, Ch. 598, L. 1987, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 1996. Amendment effective April 2, 1991.

1987 Amendment: Increased all nonresident fees except on grizzly bear and wild buffalo by $20.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (1)(g) establishing license fee for wild buffalo.

1983 Amendment: Effective March 1, 1984, increased license fees for residents and nonresidents respectively as follows: in (1)(a) for moose from $25 to $50 and from $175 to $300; in (1)(b) for mountain goat from $15 to $50 and from $175 to $300; in (1)(c) for mountain sheep from $25 to $50 and from $175 to $300; in (1)(e) for grizzly bear from $25 to $50 and $175 to $300; and in (1)(d) increased the resident fee for antelope from $5 to $6.

1981 Amendment: Changed the nonresident fee in (1)(a), (b), (c), and (e) from "$150" to "$175".

Composite Section: This section was amended by Ch. 100 and Ch. 478, L. 1979, and a composite section was prepared by the Code Commissioner, 1979. Although Ch. 100 and Ch. 478 differ in language usage, they do not conflict conceptually. Changes were made to incorporate the concepts of both chapters.

87-2-702. Restrictions on special licenses — availability of bear and mountain lion licenses.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 136 inserted (5) regarding applications for wild buffalo or bison licenses; inserted (6) regarding the purchase of bear licenses; inserted (7) regarding the purchase of mountain lion licenses; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 25 in (4)(a) in first sentence after "sheep license" deleted "with the exception of an adult ewe license" and after "87-2-701" inserted "with the exception of an antlerless moose or an adult ewe game management license issued under 87-2-104"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 22, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 471 in (4)(a) and (4)(b) at beginning inserted exception clause. Amendment effective April 28, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 201 in (1) after "deer" inserted "elk"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 1, 2003.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 115 in (3), after "may", deleted "during his lifetime"; in (4)(a) inserted definition of limited mountain sheep license; inserted (4)(b) relating to unlimited mountain sheep license; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: Inserted (4) prohibiting a person who receives a certain special license from eligibility for receiving another license for that species for 7 years. Amendment effective February 27, 1991.

1989 Amendment: Deleted former (1) that read: "(1) A person who has received a special permit for elk is not eligible to receive a second special permit for elk during any license year. However, in the event the number of applications received is not equal to the number of elk desired to be killed by the department, reapplication may be made by those valid license holders of the current year who may fall within these limitations." Amendment effective April 4, 1989.

1987 Amendment: In (1) substituted "elk" for "this species of game animal" and for "game animals"; inserted (3) requiring applicants for a special license to first hold a current license for that species; and inserted (4) restricting to one the number of grizzly bears any person may take in his lifetime.

1981 Amendment: Deleted former subsection (1) dealing with restrictions on eligibility to apply for another special license for the next succeeding 7 years if special game for which license was issued was killed.

87-2-704. Regulation of special elk permits.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 175 in (2)(a) inserted exception clause allowing the holder of a general elk license to hunt any elk during the time permitted for hunting antlerless elk; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 6, 2009.

2005 Amendment: (Version effective March 1, 2006) Chapter 585 in (4) increased fee from $3 to $4. Amendment effective March 1, 2006.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 201 inserted (3) concerning waiting period for special elk permit; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 1, 2003.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 358 inserted (2) limiting hunting by special elk permit to taking of only antlerless elk in the district where the permit is valid, while allowing general elk hunting privileges in other districts; and made minor change in style. Amendment effective April 6, 1991.

Chapter 592 inserted (3) concerning fees for special elk permit. Amendment effective March 1, 1992.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 592, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, an increase in Montana hunting and fishing license fees is necessary to raise revenue in order for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to meet an anticipated revenue shortfall."

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 358, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is provided for this bill because the legislature is aware that increasing elk populations are of concern to private landowners who are impacted by increased numbers of elk on their property. This legislation is not intended to replace the Class A-7 antlerless elk license but is intended to provide flexibility to solve problems that might arise for both landowners and sportsmen regarding surplus antlerless elk. The legislature encourages the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] and the department of fish, wildlife, and parks to utilize the Class A-7 antlerless elk license whenever practical."

87-2-705. Drawing for special elk permits.

Compiler's Comments

1991 Amendment: In (2), near beginning after "who", substituted "owns or is contracting to purchase" for "holds fee title to".

1989 Amendment: In (2), at end, substituted "in the hunting district under the terms and conditions of the permit" for "on land owned by him". Amendment effective March 24, 1989.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (2) through (4) relating to the landowner set-aside of special elk permits.

1981 Amendment: Deleted preference granted persons who applied but did not receive a special elk permit during the season immediately preceding; and inserted second sentence relating to choice of hunting districts.

Administrative Rules

2005 Amendment: (Version effective March 1, 2006) Chapter 585 near middle increased fee from $8 to $10. Amendment effective March 1, 2006.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 417 near middle, after "holder to", deleted "pursue" and after "hunt" deleted "shoot, and kill"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Severability: Section 37, Ch. 417, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

1991 Amendment: Increased Class A-2 license fee from $7 to $8. Amendment effective March 1, 1992.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 592, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, an increase in Montana hunting and fishing license fees is necessary to raise revenue in order for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to meet an anticipated revenue shortfall."

1987 Amendment: Near middle of section increased fee from $6 to $7. Amendment effective March 1, 1988.

Composite Unnecessary: This section was amended by Ch. 220 and Ch. 478, L. 1979, but the Code Commissioner chose the language of Ch. 478 over that of Ch. 220 because the language "or any special license" added to the specific listing of licenses by Ch. 220 was obviated by the deletion of references to specific licenses in favor of a general, all-inclusive reference to "a valid hunting license for which a special archery season is set by the department" by Ch. 478.

87-2-711. Class AAA—combination sports license.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 406 in (1)(a) near end substituted "payment of the resident hunting access enhancement fee" for "payment of $29, plus the resident hunting access enhancement fee". Amendment effective May 3, 2007.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 573 in (1)(a) at end inserted provision allowing an eligible service member to obtain a combination license upon payment of a $29 fee and the hunting access enhancement fee; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 2, 2005.

(Version effective March 1, 2006) Chapter 585 in (1)(a) near beginning increased fee from $54 to $70; and in (1)(b) near beginning increased fee from $64 to $85. Amendment effective March 1, 2006.

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 4, Ch. 235, L. 2005, repealed sec. 9, Ch. 216, L. 2001, that terminated amendments to this section March 1, 2006. Effective April 15, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 216 in (1)(a) after "$54" and in (1)(b) after "$64" inserted "plus the resident hunting access enhancement fee in 87-2-202(3)(c)". Amendment effective March 1, 2002, and terminates March 1, 2006.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 216, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, the Private Land/Public Wildlife Advisory Council is charged with the responsibility to make suggestions for funding, modification, or improvement of the hunting access enhancement program; and

WHEREAS, although the hunting access enhancement program has enjoyed considerable success to date in providing greater opportunities for Montana hunters, the Private Land/Public Wildlife Advisory Council recognizes the potential to increase hunting access through expansion of the program; and

WHEREAS, increasing the size of the current program through a once-a-season hunting access enhancement fee on resident and most nonresident hunters would provide revenue to allow greater landowner incentives, improve hunting access to private and public lands, improve program management and services, increase upland bird hunting opportunities, and provide for future increased program costs because of inflation."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 533 in (1) after "who" substituted "is" for "will be" and after "older" substituted "or who will turn 12 years old before or during" for "before September 15 of"; in (1)(a) and (1)(b) after "holder" inserted "who is 12 years of age or older"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2000.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 187 in (2), after "department", substituted "may" for "shall"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 1998.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 263 in (1)(a) of March 1, 1996, version, after "$54", deleted "beginning March 1, 1992, and $64 beginning March 1, 1994, shall be entitled to"; in version effective March 1, 2006, substituted "$54" for "$64"; in both versions: in (1)(a) and (2) substituted "combination sports license" for "sportsman's license"; in (1)(a), after "A-5", deleted "A-6"; inserted (1)(b) regarding combination sports license; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 1996.

The effect of the amendment was to render the March 1, 1996, version and the March 1, 2006, version identical. Accordingly, the Code Commissioner has not separately published the version effective March 1, 2006.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 1, Ch. 241, L. 1993, amended sec. 12, Ch. 598, L. 1987, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 2006. Section 2, Ch. 241, L. 1993, amended sec. 3, Ch. 319, L. 1991, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 2006. The extension of the termination date made by Ch. 241, L. 1993, was rendered meaningless by the amendments made by Ch. 263, L. 1995.

1991 Amendment: (Version effective March 1, 1992) Increased sportsman's license fee from $45.50 to $54 beginning March 1, 1992, and to $64 beginning March 1, 1994.

(Version effective March 1, 1996) Increased sportsman's license fee from $38.50 to $64. Amendments effective March 1, 1992.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 592, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, an increase in Montana hunting and fishing license fees is necessary to raise revenue in order for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to meet an anticipated revenue shortfall."

Extension of Termination Date: Section 3, Ch. 319, L. 1991, amended sec. 12, Ch. 598, L. 1987, to provide that the wildlife habitat acquisition program terminates March 1, 1996. Amendment effective April 2, 1991.

1989 Amendment: Changed "$45" to "$45.50". Amendment effective July 1, 1989. Section 9, Ch. 601, L. 1989, amended sec. 8, Ch. 636, L. 1987, to increase the fee from "$38" to "$38.50" after March 1, 1994.

Applicability: Section 11, Ch. 601, L. 1989, provided that this section applies to licenses for fishing seasons that begin on or after March 1, 1990.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 598 increased fee from $36 to $45 from March 1, 1988, to March 1, 1994.

Chapter 636 increased fee from $36 to $38.

1985 Amendment: Increased license fee from $35 to $36 effective March 1, 1986.

87-2-722. Auction of mountain sheep license.

Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 349 in last sentence of (2), after "report", deleted "to each legislature concerning" and after "proceeds" inserted "to the office of budget and program planning as a part of the information required by 17-7-111".

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 282 (Ch. 414, L. 1985) provided: "House Bill No. 282 requires a statement of intent because section 1 [87-2-722] authorizes the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] to establish rules for the use of the license to be auctioned and for the conduct of the auction.

It is the intent of the legislature that the commission, in drafting rules, shall consult with other states such as Wyoming, Utah, and Nevada which have similar legislation. The commission shall strive to maximize the revenue generated by the auction, and to that end shall select the method of auction which it perceives will best attain that objective.

Because revenue from the auction of the license is not predictable, it is the intent of the legislature that the department shall use such money only for special projects related to mountain sheep research, management, and habitat improvement, and such funds may not be budgeted or used in place of funds regularly appropriated by the legislature for mountain sheep related purposes."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 349 deleted third sentence of (2) that read: "The department shall, as provided in 5-11-210, report to each legislature concerning the use or investment of auction proceeds."

1991 Amendment: In last sentence inserted reference to 5-11-210. Amendment effective March 20, 1991.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 174, L. 1987, provided: "This bill requires a statement of intent because section 1 [87-2-724] authorizes the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] to establish rules for the use of the license to be auctioned and for the conduct of the auction.

It is the intent of the legislature that the commission, in drafting rules, shall consult with any other states which have similar legislation. The commission shall strive to maximize revenue generated by the auction and for that purpose shall select the method of auction which it determines will best attain that objective.

Because revenue from the auction of the license is not predictable, it is the intent of the legislature that the department shall use such money only for special projects related to moose research, management, and habitat improvement, and such funds may not be budgeted or used in place of funds regularly appropriated by the legislature for moose-related purposes."

2011 Amendment: Chapter 221 in (3) after "87-2-730(3)(c) through" substituted "(3)(i)" for "(3)(h)". Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 378, L. 2005, provided: "WHEREAS, for millennia, wild buffalo roamed the vast, open spaces of Montana, followed in their migration by the ancient peoples of this state who relied on the buffalo for food, shelter, and clothing—indeed, for life itself; and

WHEREAS, through the ages, Montana tribes recognized this gift of life given by the Creator to the people through the buffalo and thus hunted the buffalo with utmost respect and appreciation, developing traditional ceremonies and practices that honored that gift; and

WHEREAS, beginning in the late 1880s, poaching and hunting reduced the population of the native wild buffalo herd in Yellowstone National Park to only 25 by 1901, so to avoid extinction, the park herd was supplemented by 21 buffalo from tribal captive herds in 1902, thereby keeping the gift alive for future generations of Americans; and

WHEREAS, as Yellowstone Park buffalo thrived in their protected environment, they achieved numbers that now provide for limited hunting in Montana when they migrate into this state and are authorized for hunting by the state veterinarian and the Department of Livestock; and

WHEREAS, buffalo meat is used as part of the treatment of tribal members who suffer from diabetes; and

WHEREAS, it is a fitting gesture by the State of Montana and the Legislature to honor and return the gift of the buffalo to Montana tribes for hunting and use in the traditional ceremonial ways."

Effective Date: Section 4, Ch. 378, L. 2005, provided that this section is effective on passage and approval. Approved April 25, 2005.

Termination: Section 5, Ch. 378, L. 2005, provided: "[This act] terminates July 1, 2015."

Part 8
Exceptions to License Requirements

Part Case Notes

Constitutionality: The disparity in the treatment of residents and nonresidents under 87-2-505 is not an unconstitutional discrimination because it infringes upon no fundamental rights and therefore does not violate the due process or equal protection clauses; nor is the right to hunt for sport a privilege or immunity of citizens of the several states that Montana is required to grant equally to residents and nonresidents under Art. IV, sec. 2, U.S. Const. Mont. Outfitters

Action Group v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 417 F. Supp. 1005 (D.C. Mont. 1976), affirmed in Baldwin v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 436 US 371, 56 L Ed 2d 354, 98 S Ct 1852 (1978).

1983 Amendment: In (1), after "entitled to" substituted "fish and to hunt game birds with only a conservation license" for "fish without a license" and after "certified as disabled", substituted "as prescribed by departmental rule" for "by a medical doctor licensed to practice medicine in Montana"; substituted (2) (see 1983 Session Law) for former (2), which read: "Disability is defined as a physical or mental condition that prevents a person from doing any substantial gainful work that is expected to last for the rest of his life."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 402 (Ch. 169, L. 1983), first adopted by the House Fish and Game Committee, read: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks. Section 2 of the bill [amending 87-2-803] authorizes the department to make rules concerning disabled persons and exemptions to fishing and game bird license requirements.

The legislature contemplates that the rules should address the following subjects as well as others:

(1) A definition of "disabled" as it applies to persons meeting license requirements for fishing and hunting game birds and qualifying for the one-half fee deer and elk licenses;

(2) Documents that would, of themselves, be adequate certification of disability."

The amendment to this section made by sec. 4, Ch. 134, L. 2011, was rendered void by sec. 122, Ch. 258, L. 2011, a coordination section.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 258, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the 2007 Legislature passed House Joint Resolution No. 16, urging that revision of the criminal codes within Title 87 of the Montana Code Annotated be given priority; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 noted that practitioners, judges, and citizens find that the criminal codes intertwined within the fish and game laws in Title 87 are difficult to read, understand, and prosecute; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 directed that revision of the Title 87 criminal code should not include policy changes to current laws and should adhere to the intent of the legislatures that crafted the laws; and

WHEREAS, in 2008, the Director of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks appointed a Title 87 criminal code revision working group, consisting of Justices of the Peace, County Attorneys, an Assistant Attorney General, legal counsel and the enforcement administrator of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and legislative staff; and

WHEREAS, the working group met numerous times and spent countless hours crafting a revision that makes the Title 87 criminal code more understandable without making substantive or policy changes to present law; and

WHEREAS, revision of the fish and game criminal statutes will benefit the hunting and fishing public, magistrates, and prosecutors by codifying crimes and penalties in a separate chapter of Montana law, rather than being intertwined throughout Title 87."

Contingent Effective Date: Section 8(2), Ch. 415, L. 2007, provided that this section is effective upon notification by the U.S. fish and wildlife service to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks that the wolf has been formally removed from the federal threatened or endangered species list and upon removal of the wolf from the state endangered species list by the department of fish, wildlife, and parks. The contingency occurred when the Northern Rocky Mountain gray wolf was removed from the federal list of threatened and endangered species by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service through the adoption of a rule effective May 4, 2009. The wolf was removed from the state endangered species list on the effective date of that rule.

District Court Ruling — Effect on Delisting of Northern Rocky Mountain Gray Wolf: On August 5, 2010, District Judge Donald Molloy reversed the delisting of the Northern Rocky Mountain gray wolf by issuing a ruling ordering that the April 2, 2009, Final Rule to Identify the Northern Rocky Mountain Population of Gray Wolf as a Distinct Population Segment, 74 Fed. Reg. 15123, which removed the Endangered Species Act's protection of wolves except in Wyoming, is vacated and set aside. Judge Molloy's ruling stated that the whole Northern Rocky Mountain gray wolf population must be protected, not just those in Wyoming, and that the federal Fish and Wildlife Service's delisting of the wolf in only Montana and Idaho as a solution to the legal problem raised by the inadequacy of Wyoming's regulatory mechanisms does not comply with the federal Endangered Species Act. 1997 Amendment: Chapter 187 in (1), in third sentence, substituted reference to March 1 for reference to April 1; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 1998.

1983 Amendment: In (1), at end of first sentence substituted "or other security as required by department rule" for "of $1,000 or in an amount equal to the value of the licenses, permits, and certificates received for distribution, the amount to be fixed at the discretion of the director".

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 434 (Ch. 534, L. 1983), which amended this section, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants rulemaking authority to the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to adopt rules to set deadlines for license receipts according to different classes of license agents and setting guidelines for allowing alternative forms of security for small volume license agents.

Section 2 of this bill [amending 87-2-903] proposes to allow the director of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to set deadlines for the license receipts according to different classes of license agents. The intent of this bill is to allow the director the flexibility to recognize that there are widely disparate kinds of license agents. In some sparsely populated areas, the license receipts for a given year are so few that the current monthly accounting requirement may be unrealistic. On the other hand, in heavily populated areas some license agents have extremely high monthly receipts, necessitating that the money be transferred promptly, on a monthly basis, to the Department. The Department contemplates rules that would have deadlines grounded in population base and historical demand in an area.

Section 1 of this bill [amending 87-2-902] proposes to change the security requirements for license agents. Currently, the law requires a minimum bond of $1,000. In reality, no bonding company gives a bond for only $1,000. The current industry standard is a minimum of $5,000. Many of the small license agents may carry a total inventory of licenses far below $5,000. In those instances, where the license agent does not stand to make a great deal of money on the license agency, the $5,000 bonding requirement may be unduly burdensome. The proposed amendment would allow the director to adjust the bonding requirement to the particular circumstance of a given license agent. For instance, a license agent with a large inventory would be obliged to provide a bond. A license agent with an inventory of less than $1,000 may be obliged to provide some other kind of security to ensure performance under the law. The Department anticipates promulgating rules that would allow alternative forms of security other than a bond for the small volume license agent."

2011 Amendment: Chapter 298 in (1) inserted "under subsection (9) and"; inserted (9) relating to a commission paid for processing hunting license lotteries; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 1, 2012.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 452 in (4) at end after "sold" inserted "or issued pursuant to 87-2-805(5)"; and in (7) after "sale" inserted "or issuance". Amendment effective May 8, 2007, and terminates February 28, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 515 in (1) at end inserted "plus any additional amount as determined by rules adopted pursuant to subsection (9)"; inserted (2) authorizing credit card convenience fees; in (3) at end inserted "and convenience fee"; in (4) before "license" inserted "paper"; in (5) after "system" deleted "installation"; in (6) in first sentence substituted "protocol for" for "deadline for submission of license money by"; in (7) inserted "collection of any data or fee" and "issuance of any"; in (8) in first sentence after "appropriate" inserted "commission and convenience" and near end after "15-1-216" substituted "may" for "must"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 427 in (7) substituted "charged under 15-1-216" for "charged on late corporation license tax payments under 15-31-510". Amendment effective January 1, 2000.

Applicability: Section 57, Ch. 427, L. 1999, provided that this section applies to all tax periods beginning after December 31, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 187 in (1), after "services rendered", substituted "a commission of 50 cents for each transaction" for "the sum of 50 cents for each license, permit, or certificate issued" and deleted second sentence that read: "Each license agent shall submit to the department all duplicates of each class of licenses sold and shall accompany the duplicate licenses with all money received for the sale of the licenses, less the appropriate fee"; inserted (2) through (4) setting out additional conditions applicable to license agents; in (6), after "term", substituted "transaction" for "license", after "includes" inserted "the sale of", and before "certificate" substituted "or" for "and"; in (7), after "15-31-510", deleted "(2)"; and inserted (8) allowing the adoption of rules. Amendment effective March 1, 1998.

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 187, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 87-2-105(7) and 87-2-903(8) grant rulemaking authority to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks regarding standards applicable to license agents.

It is intended that the rules adopted pursuant to 87-2-105(7) address the methods by which a license agent determines proof of competency in hunter safety, particularly the competency of nonresidents who apply for a Montana hunting license. It is intended that the rules recognize that a person who takes a hunter safety course from a department-authorized instructor will be considered competent for licensing purposes.

It is intended that rules adopted pursuant to 87-2-903(8) address compensation, system installation fees, and duties of license agents."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 92 in (1), in first sentence after "sum of", deleted "40 cents for the 1992 license year"; in (3), near end of first sentence, substituted "15-31-510(2)" for "15-31-502"; and made minor changes in style.

Applicability: Section 4(1), Ch. 92, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1993."

Rulemaking Authority: Section 4(2), Ch. 92, L. 1993, provided: "The department of revenue may institute rulemaking under Title 2, chapter 4, to implement [this act] prior to October 1, 1993, but the rules may not be effective prior to October 1, 1993."

1991 Amendment: In first sentence of (1) increased sum for services from 30 cents to 40 cents for 1992 license year and to 50 cents thereafter and at end of second sentence, after "licenses less", substituted "the appropriate fee" for "a fee of 30 cents for each license sold". Amendment effective March 1, 1992.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 592, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, an increase in Montana hunting and fishing license fees is necessary to raise revenue in order for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to meet an anticipated revenue shortfall."

1983 Amendment: In (1), in second sentence deleted "On or before the 10th day of each month" at the beginning and "during the preceding month" following "licenses sold", and inserted third sentence relating to classification of license agents and submission of license money; and inserted (3) relating to late submission of license money.

1983 Statement of Intent: See statement of intent attached to HB 434 (Ch. 534, L. 1983), set out in compiler's comments under 87-2-902.

1981 Amendment: Changed sum and fee in (1) from "15 cents" to "30 cents".

CHAPTER 3
RESTRICTIONS AND REGULATIONS

Chapter Case Notes

No Expectation of Privacy in Radio Conversation Held Over Public Airways: A game warden monitored Cotterell's two-way radio conversations held with his son while hunting. Cotterell asserted that, absent a warrant, the warden's surreptitious third-party electronic surveillance of the radio conversations was unlawful. The Supreme Court noted that it held in St. v. Goetz, 2008 MT 296, 345 M 421, 191 P3d 489 (2008), that warrantless electronic monitoring and recording of face-to-face conversations, even with the consent of one participant in the conversation, violates the other participant's right to privacy and the right to be free from unreasonable search and seizure. However, the initial inquiry under Goetz is to determine whether the electronic monitoring constitutes an unreasonable or unlawful search or seizure, and the factors in determining whether such a search or seizure occurred are whether the person challenging the state's action had an actual subjective expectation of privacy that society would recognize as objectively reasonable and the nature of the state's intrusion. In this case, Cotterell had no reasonable expectation of privacy. The electronic conversations were held using widely available hand-held radios over a public channel that could be monitored by anyone using the same equipment and thus could not be considered private. Absent a reasonable expectation of privacy, no search occurred and the warden did not need a warrant to monitor and record the conversations. St. v. Cotterell, 2008 MT 409, 347 M 231, 198 P3d 254 (2008).

Media Coverage of Search Involving Alleged Wildlife Violation Outside Scope of Warrant — Open Fields Doctrine and Invited Informer Doctrine Inapplicable: Federal agents who suspected a wildlife violation searched the Bergers' ranch pursuant to a search warrant and to a written contract with two national broadcasting networks authorizing the filming and recording of the search for broadcast on environmental television shows. After Berger was convicted of one misdemeanor count of improper use of a pesticide, he sued both the networks and the federal agents for violations of constitutional rights. On appeal, the Ninth Circuit Court held that activities conducted pursuant to the search were not authorized by the open fields doctrine, which allows law enforcement officers to obtain evidence while on privately owned open fields, because Berger had a reasonable expectation of privacy with regard to outbuildings that were photographed and because that doctrine does not authorize trespass by third parties. Further, the invited informer doctrine, which allows the use of informers with recording devices to obtain information as part of a good faith government investigation, did not apply in this instance because the recording of Berger's conversations was used to assist commercial television, not to further law enforcement objectives. Pursuant to the joint action test, the networks were considered to be acting under color of law and, as such, were liable for damages as government actors for contractually engaging in a search enterprise that only the government could lawfully institute for the mutual benefit of both private and governmental interests in publicity. The case was reversed for further consideration of Berger's state claims of trespass and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Berger v. Hanlon, 129 F3d 505 (9th Cir. 1997).

Part Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 272, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana's rivers are drawing people to the state to fish, float, and camp at an accelerating rate; and

WHEREAS, although the increasing popularity of Montana is beneficial to the state's economy, steps must be taken to ensure that escalating recreational use of natural resources does not degrade the resource, taint the experience, or threaten private property rights; and

WHEREAS, with the unparalleled scenery and the abundance of fish, osprey, bald eagles, deer, and other wildlife sustained by its waters, the Blackfoot River in western Montana offers recreationists a unique, pristine outdoor experience; and

WHEREAS, the same attributes that bring floaters, campers, and anglers to the banks of the Blackfoot River to visit have attracted Montana families to live, work, and recreate for over a hundred years; and

WHEREAS, increased use of the river has led to an increase in the frequency and intensity of conflicts among the landowner, the commercial outfitter, and the private recreationist, each of whom has a legitimate and legal interest in the Blackfoot River; and

WHEREAS, cooperation between private property owners and recreationists to resolve conflict along the Blackfoot River is not unprecedented; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds it appropriate and timely to direct the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to lead a comprehensive study of the Blackfoot River and its capacity to sustain recreational use, while ensuring that private property and water rights are retained with minimal conflict."

Blackfoot River Study: Section 1, Ch. 272, L. 1999, provided: "Blackfoot River study. (1) The department of fish, wildlife, and parks shall undertake a comprehensive study of the Blackfoot River, which may include ongoing department studies as well as findings derived from the draft Blackfoot River Recreation Management Direction of 1999.

(2) The study must address:

(a) the growing popularity of the Blackfoot River and ways to mitigate conflict among landowners, outfitters, and private recreationists;

(b) ways to protect the integrity of the river's resources, while continuing to accommodate recreational use;

(c) the amount and scope of use by recreationists that the river is capable of sustaining;

(d) easement, right-of-way, access, and trespass concerns between private landowners and public users of the river;

(e) the impact that heavy recreational use has on the river's fish, wildlife, streambanks, and water quality; and

(f) any other issue that the department determines needs to be examined in order to complete the study.

(3) During the course of the study, the department may enlist the assistance of the governor's consensus council, created pursuant to executive order, to organize discussions among all interested parties.

(4) The department shall report its findings and conclusions to the 57th legislature. The report must include but is not limited to:

(a) a suggested appropriate role for the department and the fish, wildlife, and parks commission in mitigating and mediating conflicts between recreationists and private landowners;

(b) the amount and type of use that is taking place on the river and how that use is changing from the historical recreational use of the river;

(c) the amount of use that the river is capable of sustaining before significant resource degradation occurs;

(d) a description of the amount, nature, and location of conflicts occurring on the river that have warranted intervention;

(e) the steps taken to ensure that landowners, outfitters, and members of the public were afforded the opportunity to comment and participate in the study; and

(f) suggested legislation or department rules, if either are warranted, to alleviate conflict, preserve the integrity of the resource, protect private property rights, and ensure continued high-quality fishing, camping, and floating for commercial and private recreational users."

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 346, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants rulemaking duties to the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] with regard to the awarding of prizes for the taking of protected fish in state waters. It is the intent of the legislature that the commission adopt rules that address an approval process for the conditions or operations of fishing tournaments, derbies, or contests in order to protect and preserve the fish resources in the state from potentially harmful practices or results of such events.

It is the intent of the legislature that the commission adopt rules that are designed to prevent adverse impacts on the fish resources. To accomplish the purpose, the commission may adopt rules that include but are not limited to:

(1) the duties of the department of fish, wildlife, and parks to recommend approval or disapproval of a tournament, derby, or contest or its conditions, based on sound wildlife conservation criteria;

(2) reporting requirements for the rules and conditions of a tournament, derby, or contest that awards a prize for the taking of fish;

(3) purse or participation limits for such events;

(4) time limits for reporting such events to obtain commission approval or disapproval; and

(5) details of the approval process, including any appeal process.

Notwithstanding the general rulemaking areas listed, it is the intent of the legislature to permit the commission to adopt rules that allow the commission enough flexibility to consider the merits of each tournament, derby, or contest on a case-by-case basis."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 258, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the 2007 Legislature passed House Joint Resolution No. 16, urging that revision of the criminal codes within Title 87 of the Montana Code Annotated be given priority; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 noted that practitioners, judges, and citizens find that the criminal codes intertwined within the fish and game laws in Title 87 are difficult to read, understand, and prosecute; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 directed that revision of the Title 87 criminal code should not include policy changes to current laws and should adhere to the intent of the legislatures that crafted the laws; and

WHEREAS, in 2008, the Director of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks appointed a Title 87 criminal code revision working group, consisting of Justices of the Peace, County Attorneys, an Assistant Attorney General, legal counsel and the enforcement administrator of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and legislative staff; and

WHEREAS, the working group met numerous times and spent countless hours crafting a revision that makes the Title 87 criminal code more understandable without making substantive or policy changes to present law; and

WHEREAS, revision of the fish and game criminal statutes will benefit the hunting and fishing public, magistrates, and prosecutors by codifying crimes and penalties in a separate chapter of Montana law, rather than being intertwined throughout Title 87."

Saving Clause: Section 131, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a saving clause.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 84 at beginning of (2) inserted exception clause; at end of (2)(a) inserted "or within immediate control"; in (2)(c) after "nets" inserted "spears, gigs"; in (3) substituted language authorizing commission to designate waters within the state where traps, seines, nets, spears, or gigs may be used for taking designated fish for former (3) that read: "(3) The department may designate such waters within the state of Montana wherein, in the judgment of the department, spears or gigs may be used for taking walleyed pike, sauger, northern pike, and nongame fish and traps, seines, nets, and rubber or spring-propelled spears, when employed by sportsmen swimming or submerged in the water, may be used for the taking of designated species of fish. The waters so designated may be closed at the discretion of the department. The taking of all fish by such means in the waters, when so designated, is to be done under such rules as the department may prescribe with reference thereto and under the supervision of the department. All such nongame fish so taken may be possessed and sold in such manner and under such restrictions as the department may direct. All fish, other than those herein designated, so taken under department rules, when prescribed by the department, shall be returned uninjured to the waters from which they were taken"; deleted former (4) that read: "(4) The taking of black bass in Flathead Lake may be permitted by the department"; in two places in (4) substituted "commission" for "department"; in (5) after "line" deleted "in hand"; in two places in (5)(a) substituted "chinook salmon" for "coho (silver salmon)" and near middle substituted "commission" for "department"; in (5)(c) substituted "taking of game fish pursuant to subsection (3)" for "taking of walleyed pike, sauger, northern pike, burbot (ling), and nongame fish with spear or gig when the department declares an open season for taking walleyed pike, sauger, northern pike, burbot (ling), and nongame fish with spear or gig"; in (5)(e) at end substituted "commission" for "department"; inserted (6) authorizing commission to designate waters where commercial fishing operators may use nets, seines, and traps to fish for designated nongame fish; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2003.

Chapter 227 inserted (5)(h) allowing commission to adopt rules permitting the taking of salmon and lake trout in Fort Peck reservoir by spear or gig from December through March; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1991 Name Change: Section 2, Ch. 28, L. 1991, directed the Code Commissioner to change the name of the Fish and Game Commission to the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission wherever the name appears in the MCA. Accordingly, the name was changed in this section as directed.

1989 Amendment: Inserted (6)(g) permitting a person to ice fish with unattended line or rod if within visual contact with line or rod. Amendment effective March 21, 1989.

1987 Amendment: In (6)(b) substituted language that reads: "the taking of paddlefish, channel catfish, and nongame fish with longbow and arrow, under such rules and regulations as the fish and game commission (now fish, wildlife, and parks commission) may prescribe" for "the taking of paddlefish with longbow and arrow when the department declares an open season when paddlefish may be taken by longbow and arrow".

1983 Amendment: Inserted (6)(f) relating to the taking of whitefish by nets or traps.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 387 (Ch. 267, L. 1983) provided: "A statement of intent is required for Senate Bill 387 because rulemaking authority is granted to the Montana Fish and Game Commission [now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission] to prescribe rules and regulations for the taking of Whitefish by nets or traps in the Kootenai River and in its tributary systems within one mile of the Kootenai River. It is proposed that such rules will encompass the following:

1. method of taking the fish;
2. permit requirements for those taking the fish; and
3. the times of taking the fish."

Part 4
Alternative Livestock Ranches

Part Administrative Rules

Title 12, chapter 6, subchapter 15, ARM Game farms.

Part Case Notes

Use of New Licensing Procedures Not Retroactive Application of Law and Not Violation of Department's Internal Policy: The Wallaces argued that the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks had violated the law by retroactively applying license approval criteria for game farm (now alternative livestock ranch) approval to them when they had filed their license application prior to 1993 legislative changes to the licensing law. The Wallaces also argued that the Department had not followed its own internal policies that required it to act on the application within 60 days of receipt. The Supreme Court held that the Department had correctly applied the new licensing criteria because a license is a privilege, not a vested right, the Department is required to comply with the law circumscribing its powers, and as a general rule, an agency is required to make its decisions on the law as it exists at the time that the decision is made, despite the fact that the law may have changed. The Supreme Court also held that the 60-day requirement to approve or disapprove a license application had been a statutory requirement under the previous law and had ceased to be a requirement when the amendments to the law became effective. Wallace v. Dept. of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, 269 M 364, 889 P2d 817, 52 St. Rep. 30 (1995). See also Harlem v. St. Highway Comm'n, 149 M 281, 425 P2d 718 (1967), and Saint Vincent Hosp. v. Blue Cross, 261 M 56, 862 P2d 6 (1993).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Wild Game Animals — Removal: When the fence of a game farm (now alternative livestock ranch) permittee encloses native wild big game animals, these animals remain the property of the state and may be hunted and taken only in compliance with state law. The state has no responsibility to remove the wild game animals from the enclosure. 38 A.G. Op. 68 (1980). Note: Portions of this opinion have been obviated by Ch. 570, L. 1983.

Game Harvesting — Game Ranch: The Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission) does not have the authority to regulate the hunting and killing of privately owned game through the imposition of licensing requirements on individual hunters or open and closed seasons. 36 A.G. Op. 112 (1976).

Case Notes

Transfer of Alternative Livestock to Unlicensed Tribal Lands Illegal: The Wallaces, licensed alternative livestock ranchers, sought to reduce the size of their elk herd by transferring about 500 elk to the Crow Indian Reservation for subsequent release into the wild. The elk had been certified as free of tuberculosis, brucellosis, and elk-red deer hybridization by the Department of Livestock (DOL). Despite notification by the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks (DFWP) that such an act violated state law, the Wallaces transferred 68 elk to the tribe. DFWP requested and received a permanent injunction prohibiting any further transfer of elk to the tribe, and the Wallaces appealed, questioning DFWP jurisdiction. The Supreme Court noted that DFWP has a statutory basis for its jurisdiction over the Wallaces as licensees. Based on DFWP jurisdiction over exterior fencing, and the Department's knowledge that the elk would not be contained behind a game-proof fence upon delivery to the tribe, DFWP had statutory authority to seek the permanent injunction to prevent the transfer. Also, the introduction or transplantation of any wildlife into the wild, including game farm elk, requires the approval of DFWP. Further, 87-4-414 provides that alternative livestock may be kept only on a licensed alternative livestock ranch, and because the tribe is not a licensed facility under Montana law, neither DFWP nor DOL had authority to permit the transfer. The Wallaces knew that the elk were destined for an unlicensed location where they would be released into the wild and could migrate back into Montana, so the transfer violated the Wallaces' duty as licensees to act in accordance with law, and the District Court correctly enjoined the transportation of the elk. Case Notes

Initiative Prohibiting Fee Shooting on Game Farms Not Unconstitutional Taking: In 2000 Montana voters approved Initiative No. 143 prohibiting the shooting of alternative livestock on game farms for a fee. Plaintiff game farm owners claimed that the initiative constituted a taking of their private property by the state without compensation in violation of Art. II, sec. 29, Mont. Const., because it removed the expectation of profitability from their businesses. The District Court held that the initiative did not constitute a regulatory taking of compensable property interests in plaintiffs' lands and that plaintiffs were not entitled to compensation for damage to the goodwill and going concern value of their businesses. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Compensable property interests can exist in government-issued licenses or permits if the licenses or permits are free from express statutory language precluding the formation of a property right in combination with the presence of the right to transfer and the right to exclude. In this case, the state retained the power at all times to revoke or change plaintiffs' licenses if it chose to do so, so plaintiffs possessed no common-law property right to the licenses. Therefore, the licenses were not compensable property interests under Art. II, sec. 29, Mont. Const. Further, an expectation of profitability in a highly regulated field of business that requires a license or permit for participation is virtually never considered a compensable property interest, so plaintiffs were not entitled to compensation for damage to the goodwill and going concern value of their businesses. Plaintiffs should reasonably have anticipated that the game farm industry might be phased out because of health and safety concerns over chronic wasting disease or even that the state might make the regulatory burden so onerous that game farms would no longer be profitable enterprises, and the elimination of the in-state market for fee shooting should have been within plaintiffs' reasonable investment-backed expectations given the absence of assurances from the state on that point. That expectation factor also weighed against finding of a compensable regulatory taking of plaintiffs' alternative livestock. Kafka v. Mont. Enforcement of Fee Shooting Ban Improperly Enjoined — No Challenge to Constitutionality of Initiative Measure No. 143: In November 2000, voters enacted Initiative Measure No. 143, which included a ban on fee shooting of animals on alternative livestock ranches. Spoklie was granted a preliminary injunction prohibiting the state from interfering with the sale of alternative livestock to third persons, even if the third persons subsequently shot the animals at the alternative livestock ranch. The state and intervenors moved to dissolve the injunction, but the motion was denied. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Spoklie clearly considered the right of third persons to harvest elk at an alternative livestock ranch to be an important part of the consideration received in exchange for fees paid, but the fee shooting arrangement is exactly what is prohibited by this section, as amended by the initiative. The preliminary injunction interfered with the state's enforcement of this section, a statute enacted for the public benefit, and was therefore prohibited under 27-19-103. Further, Spoklie's argument that an injunction was proper upon a showing of irreparable harm, as stated in dicta in The New Club Carlin, Inc. v. Billings, 237 M 194, 772 P2d 303 (1989), was also misplaced. As set out in State ex rel. Freebourn v. District Court, 85 M 439, 279 P 234 (1929), courts are prohibited from issuing injunctions to prevent the execution of a public statute by officers of the law for the public benefit. The only exception is when a statute or ordinance is unconstitutional or otherwise invalid and when, in the attempt to enforce it, there is a direct invasion of property rights resulting in irreparable injury. Spoklie neither alleged nor demonstrated that Initiative Measure No. 143 or this section was unconstitutional; therefore, the District Court erred as a matter of law when it enjoined the state's execution of this section. The order denying the motion to dissolve the injunction was reversed. Spoklie v. Dept. of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, 2002 MT 228, 311 M 427, 56 P3d 349 (2002).

Purpose of Alternative Livestock Transfer Regulations — Quarantine Exception to Commerce Clause Applicable: The Wallaces, licensed alternative livestock ranchers, sought to reduce the size of their elk herd by transferring about 500 elk to the Crow Indian Reservation for release into the wild. The Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks requested and received an injunction prohibiting any transfer of elk to tribal lands, and the Wallaces appealed, asserting that the injunction violated Art. I, sec. 8, clause 3, of the U.S. Constitution, known as the commerce clause. The Wallaces contended that prohibiting the transfer of alternative livestock to a recipient that is not licensed by the state constituted extraterritorial application of Montana's regulatory scheme to foreign nations, other states, and Indian nations in violation of federal law. The Supreme Court found that this case falls within the quarantine exception to the traditional commerce clause analysis. The quarantine exception recognizes that states may have a local interest in protecting public safety as a competing value when reviewing state burdens on interstate commerce. With the alarming spread of serious wildlife diseases throughout the country, the state has a compelling interest to enact regulations to ensure that alternative livestock cannot simply roam into Montana and threaten native populations. Because elk released on the Crow Indian Reservation could migrate back into Montana, the restrictions regarding transfer of alternative livestock in this section fall squarely within the quarantine exception to the commerce clause. Thus, the permanent injunction was affirmed. Hagener v. Wallace, 2002 MT 109, 309 M 473, 47 P3d 847 (2002). See also Bowman v. Chicago & NW. Ry. Co., 125 US 465 (1888).

Appropriateness of Intervention in Action Challenging Enforcement of Ballot Initiative: Two sporting groups sought to intervene in an action challenging the enforcement of a ballot initiative that prohibited the shooting of alternative livestock for a fee. The District Court denied the motion, and the groups appealed. After accepting supervisory control, the Supreme Court noted that an application for intervention as a matter of right must satisfy each of the following factors: (1) timeliness; (2) interest in the subject matter of the litigation; (3) a showing that protection of the interest may be impaired by disposition of the action; and (4) a showing that the interest is not adequately represented by an existing party. In the present case, timeliness was not disputed. Regarding the second factor, the Supreme Court cited Idaho Farm Bureau Fed'n v. Babbitt, 58 F3d 1392 (9th Cir. 1995), for the proposition that a public interest group is entitled as a matter of right to intervene in an action challenging the legality of a measure that the group has supported. The District Court did not address the third factor because it determined that the groups had no legally protectable interest in the litigation. However, the Supreme Court found that an adverse decision in the suit would impair the groups' interest in the management and protection of Montana's game animals, so the third factor was met. Finally, the District Court determined that the groups failed to demonstrate that the Attorney General, on behalf of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, would not zealously defend the groups' position in the suit. The Supreme Court concluded that the groups that actively drafted and supported the initiative may be in the best position to defend their interpretation of the resulting legislation and may not have been adequately represented by the Department. Thus, all four factors were met, and the Supreme Court ordered the District Court to permit the groups to intervene in the case. Sportsmen for I-143 v. District Court, 2002 MT 18, 308 M 189, 40 P3d 400 (2002).

Attorney General's Opinions

Wild Game Animals — Removal: When the fence of a game farm (now alternative livestock ranch) permittee encloses native wild big game animals, these animals remain the property of the state and may be hunted and taken only in compliance with state law. The state has no responsibility to remove the wild game animals from the enclosure. 38 A.G. Op. 68 (1980). Note: Portions of this opinion have been obviated by Ch. 570, L. 1983. (See also 1999 amendment.)

Game Harvesting — Game Ranch: The Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission) does not have the authority to regulate the hunting and killing of privately owned game through the imposition of licensing requirements on individual hunters or open and closed seasons. 36 A.G. Op. 112 (1976).

Transfer of Alternative Livestock to Unlicensed Tribal Lands Illegal: The Wallaces, licensed alternative livestock ranchers, sought to reduce the size of their elk herd by transferring about 500 elk to the Crow Indian Reservation for subsequent release into the wild. The elk had been certified as free of tuberculosis, brucellosis, and elk-red deer hybridization by the Department of Livestock (DOL). Despite notification by the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks (DFWP) that such an act violated state law, the Wallaces transferred 68 elk to the tribe. DFWP requested and received a permanent injunction prohibiting any further transfer of elk to the tribe, and the Wallaces appealed, questioning DFWP jurisdiction. The Supreme Court noted that DFWP has a statutory basis for its jurisdiction over the Wallaces as licensees. Based on DFWP jurisdiction over exterior fencing, and the Department's knowledge that the elk would not be contained behind a game-proof fence upon delivery to the tribe, DFWP had statutory authority to seek the permanent injunction to prevent the transfer. Also, the introduction or transplantation of any wildlife into the wild, including game farm elk, requires the approval of DFWP. Further, 87-4-414 provides that alternative livestock may be kept only on a licensed alternative livestock ranch, and because the tribe is not a licensed facility under Montana law, neither DFWP nor DOL had authority to permit the transfer. The Wallaces knew that the elk were destined for an unlicensed location where they would be released into the wild and could migrate back into Montana, so the transfer violated the Wallaces' duty as licensees to act in accordance with law, and the District Court correctly enjoined the transportation of the elk. 1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 503, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in order to clarify rulemaking authority of the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and the department of livestock with regard to the administration and regulation of game farms [now alternative livestock ranches]. It is intended that rules promulgated pursuant to Title 87, chapter 4, part 4, be adopted in accordance with the Montana Negotiated Rulemaking Act, Title 2, chapter 5, part 1.

(1) It is intended that the department of fish, wildlife, and parks have primary authority with regard to rules governing:

(a) game farm [now alternative livestock ranch] licensure;

(b) reporting requirements;

(c) exterior fencing requirements;

(d) classification of species the importation of which may present a threat to the state's wildlife population;

(e) general enforcement of game farm [now alternative livestock ranch] licensing violations; and

(f) the definition of "reasonable time" in the context of 87-4-419(2), which must reflect specific seasonal issues related to breeding and disease.

(2) It is intended that the department of livestock have primary authority with regard to rules governing:

(a) transportation and identification of game farm animals [now alternative livestock];

(b) health inspection and game farm [now alternative livestock ranch] quarantines, including interior facilities; and

(c) importation restrictions on exotic species.

(3) It is intended that the department of livestock's rules address the issue of immediate depopulation of game farm animals [now alternative livestock] that test positive for tuberculosis.

(4) It is intended that both the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and the department of livestock consider the feasibility of using DNA as an additional method of identification of game farm animals [now alternative livestock].

(5) It is intended that the game farm advisory council [now alternative livestock advisory council] advise both the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and the department of livestock regarding the administration of game farm [now alternative livestock ranch] operations, which may include input into the rules adopted pursuant to [this act].

(6) It is the intent of the legislature that in adopting rules pursuant to 87-4-426(6) [now repealed], the department of fish, wildlife, and parks provide for a timely and simplified process for minor amendments to an existing license. This may include, when appropriate, a categorical exclusion under the provisions of Title 75, chapter 1, part 1."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 315 at beginning of (2) substituted "Within 2 weeks after January 1, April 1, and September 1" for "On or before January 31", near middle, after "January 1", inserted "April 1, and September 1", near end, after "sold", inserted "or propagated", and at end substituted "reporting period" for "past year"; and made minor changes in style. 2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 84 in (1) at beginning in exception clause inserted reference to subsection (3) and near middle of first sentence after "catch" deleted "any of the fish which in this title are classified as" and in second sentence after "fish" deleted "of this state as defined in this title"; in (2)(a) after "fish" inserted "or the collecting of eggs or spawn" and after "private" substituted "fish pond licensed under 87-4-603 by the owner of the pond" for "ponds by the owners thereof"; at end of (2)(b) after "for" substituted "use in a private fish pond licensed under 87-4-603" for "such purposes"; at end of (2)(c) substituted "rules of the commission" for "rules and regulations of the department"; near middle of (2)(d) after "rules" deleted "and regulations"; inserted (3) authorizing person to possess and sell legally taken nongame fish; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2003.

Chapter 333 in (3)(a) at beginning inserted "Until June 30, 2018" and after reference to railroad bridge at Glendive substituted "North Dakota state line" for "confluence of Cottonwood Creek and the Yellowstone River"; at beginning of (3)(d)(i) substituted "Thirty percent" for "Forty percent"; at beginning of (3)(d)(ii) substituted "Seventy percent" for "Sixty percent"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 15, 2003.

Termination Provision Repealed: Sections 2 and 3, Ch. 333, L. 2003, amended sec. 5, Ch. 409, L. 1989, which terminated the 1989 amendments to this section June 30, 1993, by deleting the termination date and amended sec. 2, Ch. 196, L. 1993, which extended the termination date to June 30, 2003, by deleting the termination date. Effective April 15, 2003.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 196 in (3)(a), at beginning of first sentence, substituted description concerning Yellowstone River for "at the Intake fishing access site north of Glendive", deleted former second sentence containing definition of the Intake fishing access site as "the area from the face of Intake dam downstream to the confluence of Cottonwood Creek and the Yellowstone River", in second sentence, after "paddlefish", inserted "may be", substituted "only to" for "into", and before "donation" deleted "cleaning or"; in (3)(d)(i) reduced amount to "Forty percent" from "One-half", after "marketing" deleted "and administration", and after "fishing access" inserted "administration"; in (3)(d)(ii) increased amount to "Sixty percent" from "The other half", after "marketing" deleted "and administration", and inserted reference to nonprofit organization's administrative costs; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 25, 1993.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 2, Ch. 196, L. 1993, amended sec. 5, Ch. 409, L. 1989, by extending the termination date imposed by that chapter. Amendment effective March 25, 1993.

1991 Amendments — Name Change: Section 2, Ch. 28, L. 1991, directed the Code Commissioner to change the name of the Fish and Game Commission to the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission wherever the name appears in the MCA. Accordingly, the name was changed in this section as directed.

Chapter 68 in (3)(a) of temporary version inserted second through fifth sentences defining Intake fishing access site and clarifying paddlefish and roe that are acceptable for donation to the program. Amendment effective March 13, 1991.

1989 Amendment: In (1), near beginning, inserted reference to subsection (3); and inserted (3) providing rules and procedure for donation of paddlefish roe to nonprofit corporation for use in caviar production and designating how profits are to be used (see 1989 Session Law for text). Amendment effective July 1, 1989, and terminates June 30, 1993.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 409, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 87-4-601(3) grants rulemaking authority to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks to implement the paddlefish roe donation program. The legislature intends that the priority in implementing the provisions of this bill be on maintaining the paddlefish fishery. At a minimum, it is intended that the rules address the following:

(1) a process for the selection of a Montana nonprofit corporation to accept roe donations and to process and market the paddlefish roe;

(2) recordkeeping required of the selected corporation and commercial buyers to assure proper administration of the program;

(3) a process for development of recommendations and review of projects in expending funds raised through the paddlefish roe program;

(4) a provision that the total number of paddlefish taken in the Yellowstone River Basin may not exceed 3,500 in any year; and

(5) any other topics necessary for administration of the program."

1987 Amendment: Inserted (2)(e) relating to the sale of fish eggs.

87-4-603. Fish pond license for artificial lake or pond — records.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 108 in first sentence in (1) and in (2)(a) after reference to artificial lake or pond inserted reference to private fish pond; in (2)(a) substituted current definition of artificial lake or pond or private fish pond for former text that read: "does not include a natural pond or body of water, including streams and rivers, created by natural means or any portion of the streambed or lakebed of a natural pond or body of water. It includes only bodies of water created by artificial means or diversion of water that do not exceed 500 acres of surface area"; inserted (2)(b) excluding certain water from definition of artificial lake or pond or private fish pond; inserted (3) requiring applicant to provide verification regarding game fish or fish species in instream private fish pond; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 18, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 425 in (1), in second sentence after "pond with", substituted "fish" for "fry"; in (2), after "water", inserted "including streams and rivers"; inserted (5) concerning request for inspection to determine presence of disease or illegal introduction of species and notice of intent to enter; inserted (6) concerning action taken because of disease or illegal introduction, including emergency action; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 13, 1995.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 425, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, whirling disease was recently discovered in the world famous fishery of the upper Madison River and is the leading suspect for the 90% reduction in the numbers of wild rainbow trout in those waters; and

WHEREAS, Governor Racicot, in a recent communication to concerned parties, stated, "There is genuine reason to believe whirling disease is the worst disease threat our wild trout have ever faced"; and

WHEREAS, Governor Racicot has further stated that it is essential for the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to mobilize an unprecedented effort to research and combat this disease; and

WHEREAS, the wild trout fisheries in Montana provide in excess of $125 million in annual benefits to the state's economy; and

WHEREAS, the wild trout fisheries provide inestimable recreational pleasures for the citizens of the state; and

WHEREAS, there is significant potential for whirling disease to spread to other blue ribbon trout waters of the state; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks currently lacks both the authority and the staffing to combat a similar spread of disease; and

WHEREAS, whirling disease primarily results from the introduction of infected hatchery or wild fish; and

WHEREAS, the illegal introduction and movement of fish pose a serious threat to Montana's wild fisheries, including native fisheries; and

WHEREAS, many landowners with fish ponds and hatcheries need reassurance that their fish are disease-free."

1989 Amendment: In (1), in third sentence after "pond", inserted "and otherwise condition the license", in fourth sentence, after "this state", inserted "or violate the conditions of his license", after "will" inserted "submit an annual", after "report" inserted "on transactions", after "director" deleted reference to quantity of fish, eggs, and spawn taken, and deleted former fifth and sixth sentences regarding requirement for annual oath, requirement for record of species and pounds of fish, eggs, and fry sold, date of transaction, and purchaser; inserted (3) authorizing Department to condition license to require device to prevent escape of fish; inserted (4) requiring licensed seller to keep and file annually a record of species and quantities sold or purchased, date of sale or purchase, purchaser's or seller's name, and transfer locations; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Artificial Ponds: State Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission) abused discretion in failing to renew previously issued licenses for ponds that were entirely artificial and manmade within meaning of statute. (See 1999 amendment.) Paradise Rainbow v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 148 M 412, 421 P2d 717 (1966).

87-4-606. Term of license — fees — site inspections — license not transferable — exception for transfer.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 157 inserted (1) providing that, with some exceptions, a private fish pond license is valid for 10 years; inserted (2) providing for a $10 application fee and a $10 renewal fee; inserted (3)(a) providing for license expiration; in (3)(b) in second sentence after "expires on" substituted "February 28" for "January 31"; inserted (3)(c) regarding renewal of a license that has been in effect for more than 10 years as of April 8, 2005; in (3)(d) at end of second sentence after "granted" inserted "and if the licensee has met all of the requirements governing private fish ponds in 87-4-603 and this section"; in (4) at beginning after "A" deleted "licensee who does not sell fish or eggs is not required to renew his license"; in (5)(a) at beginning inserted exception clause; inserted (5)(b) and (5)(c) regarding license transfer; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 8, 2005.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 157, L. 2005, provided: "[This act] applies to any private fish pond license application pending review and approval by the department on [the effective date of this act] and applies prospectively to any fish pond license as of [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 8, 2005.

87-4-609. Regulation of commercial taking of fish or aquatic organisms — permit — rulemaking authority.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 258 in (2) before "to enable the department" substituted current text for "It is unlawful for a person to take fish or aquatic organisms for commercial purposes without obtaining a permit from the department. A permit applicant shall provide the department with sufficient details of the proposed operation to take any fish or aquatic organism for sale or commercial distribution". Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 258, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the 2007 Legislature passed House Joint Resolution No. 16, urging that revision of the criminal codes within Title 87 of the Montana Code Annotated be given priority; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 noted that practitioners, judges, and citizens find that the criminal codes intertwined within the fish and game laws in Title 87 are difficult to read, understand, and prosecute; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 directed that revision of the Title 87 criminal code should not include policy changes to current laws and should adhere to the intent of the legislatures that crafted the laws; and

WHEREAS, in 2008, the Director of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks appointed a Title 87 criminal code revision working group, consisting of Justices of the Peace, County Attorneys, an Assistant Attorney General, legal counsel and the enforcement administrator of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and legislative staff; and

WHEREAS, the working group met numerous times and spent countless hours crafting a revision that makes the Title 87 criminal code more understandable without making substantive or policy changes to present law; and

WHEREAS, revision of the fish and game criminal statutes will benefit the hunting and fishing public, magistrates, and prosecutors by codifying crimes and penalties in a separate chapter of Montana law, rather than being intertwined throughout Title 87."

Saving Clause: Section 131, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 132, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 84 inserted (1)(d) and (1)(e) requiring department to regulate taking of designated species of nongame fish and whitefish; at end of (1)(f) after "organisms" deleted "that provide a food source for fish"; in first and second sentences in (2) and near beginning of (5) substituted references to taking fish or aquatic organisms for references to taking aquatic fish food organisms; near middle of (5) after "requirements" deleted "for a particular aquatic fish food organism, in order"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2003.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 456 in (1), after "distribution, of", inserted "crayfish for fishing bait" and after "crayfish" inserted "from private fish ponds regulated under 87-4-603".

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 246, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because rulemaking authority is granted to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks in [section 1] [87-4-609] to regulate the taking, for sale or commercial distribution, of aquatic fish food organisms. Even though the bill provides for approval of permits for this activity on a case-by-case basis, the legislature anticipates that commercial activities for certain aquatic fish food organisms may increase to the extent that there is a need for general rulemaking. It is further anticipated that if this occurs, the department will have gathered sufficient information through the permit system and other monitoring to have sufficient knowledge to adopt appropriate rules to prevent overharvest of these organisms and conflicts with other uses of the waters.

[Section 2] [87-4-610] allows the department by rule to set reasonable fees for permits and for the use of traps, nets, or seines in the taking of aquatic fish food organisms for commercial purposes. It is intended that any fees should not exceed an amount necessary to meet administrative and monitoring costs of the department."

Effective Date: Section 5, Ch. 246, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval." Approved March 22, 1989.

87-4-610. Fees for commercial taking of fish or aquatic organisms — use of fees.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 84 in (1)(b) before "taking" inserted "commercial", after "of" inserted "nongame fish, whitefish, as authorized by statute", and after "aquatic" deleted "fish food"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2003.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 246, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because rulemaking authority is granted to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks in [section 1] [87-4-609] to regulate the taking, for sale or commercial distribution, of aquatic fish food organisms. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 258, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the 2007 Legislature passed House Joint Resolution No. 16, urging that revision of the criminal codes within Title 87 of the Montana Code Annotated be given priority; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 noted that practitioners, judges, and citizens find that the criminal codes intertwined within the fish and game laws in Title 87 are difficult to read, understand, and prosecute; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 directed that revision of the Title 87 criminal code should not include policy changes to current laws and should adhere to the intent of the legislatures that crafted the laws; and

WHEREAS, in 2008, the Director of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks appointed a Title 87 criminal code revision working group, consisting of Justices of the Peace, County Attorneys, an Assistant Attorney General, legal counsel and the enforcement administrator of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and legislative staff; and

WHEREAS, the working group met numerous times and spent countless hours crafting a revision that makes the Title 87 criminal code more understandable without making substantive or policy changes to present law; and

WHEREAS, revision of the fish and game criminal statutes will benefit the hunting and fishing public, magistrates, and prosecutors by codifying crimes and penalties in a separate chapter of Montana law, rather than being intertwined throughout Title 87."

Saving Clause: Section 131, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 132, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 448 (Ch. 570, L. 1983) provided: "This bill requires the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks to make rules for game animal farms under section 17 [87-4-422], game bird farms under section 32 [87-4-913], and fur farms under section 47 [87-4-1012]. It is the intent of the Legislature that these rules address procedural items necessary for a timely and efficient processing of applications and licenses and provide the information necessary for administration of the criteria provided in those sections. It is intended that the license fees to be set by the Department be in an amount commensurate with the costs of processing the applications and administering the provisions of the act."

CHAPTER 5
WILDLIFE PROTECTION

Chapter Case Notes

Media Coverage of Search Involving Alleged Wildlife Violation Outside Scope of Warrant — Open Fields Doctrine and Invited Informer Doctrine Inapplicable: Federal agents who suspected a wildlife violation searched the Bergers' ranch pursuant to a search warrant and to a written contract with two national broadcasting networks authorizing the filming and recording of the search for broadcast on environmental television shows. After Berger was convicted of one misdemeanor count of improper use of a pesticide, he sued both the networks and the federal agents for violations of constitutional rights. On appeal, the Ninth Circuit Court held that activities conducted pursuant to the search were not authorized by the open fields doctrine, which allows law enforcement officers to obtain evidence while on privately owned open fields, because Berger had a reasonable expectation of privacy with regard to outbuildings that were photographed and because that doctrine does not authorize trespass by third parties. Further, the invited informer doctrine, which allows the use of informers with recording devices to obtain information as part of a good faith government investigation, did not apply in this instance because the recording of Berger's conversations was used to assist commercial television, not to further law enforcement objectives. Pursuant to the joint action test, the networks were considered to be acting under color of law and, as such, were liable for damages as government actors for contractually engaging in a search enterprise that only the government could lawfully institute for the mutual benefit of both private and governmental interests in publicity. The case was reversed for further consideration of Berger's state claims of trespass and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Berger v. Hanlon, 129 F3d 505 (9th Cir. 1997).

Nongame and Endangered Species

87-5-102. Definitions.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 301 in definition of management in first sentence after "purposes of" substituted "conserving populations of wildlife consistent with other uses of land and habitat" for "increasing the number of individuals within species and populations of wildlife up to the optimum carrying capacity of their habitat and maintaining those levels", in second sentence following "improvement" inserted "control", and in third sentence following "periodic" deleted "or total"; deleted definition of optimum carrying capacity that read: ""Optimum carrying capacity" means that point at which a given habitat can support healthy populations of wildlife species, having regard to the total ecosystem, without diminishing the ability of the habitat to continue that function"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 18, 2009.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 301 inserted definition of commercial purposes; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Chapter 521 in definition of endangered species in (d) substituted "artificial factors" for "man-made factors"; in definition of management in first sentence substituted "conserving populations of wildlife consistent with other uses of land and habitat" for "increasing the number of individuals within species and populations of wildlife up to the optimum carrying capacity of their habitat and maintaining such levels", in second sentence after "improvement" inserted "control", and in third sentence after "periodic" deleted "or total"; in definition of nongame wildlife inserted third sentence providing that prairie dogs are nongame wildlife that may be managed, controlled, and regulated, inserted fourth sentence concerning management and control by counties and departments of agriculture and natural resources and conservation if consistent with approved management plan, and inserted fifth sentence prohibiting interpretation of law to limit landowner's control of prairie dog concentrations on private lands; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 2001, and terminates October 1, 2007.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 301, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds it desirable to regulate or manage the collection, harvest, possession, or transportation of nongame wildlife for commercial purposes."

The preamble attached to Ch. 521, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana has a responsibility to ensure that a viable prairie dog population is maintained in the state for the long term, as well as to ensure the long-term existence of species associated with prairie dogs; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Prairie Dog Working Group is developing a conservation plan for prairie dogs in Montana to provide for management of populations and habitats in order to ensure both the long-term existence of prairie dogs and the control of prairie dogs to protect existing land uses; and

WHEREAS, the only existing statutory authority for prairie dog management is to control them as rodents under Title 7, chapter 22, part 22, MCA, and as vertebrate pests under section 80-7-1101, MCA; and

WHEREAS, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) has found that the black-tailed prairie dog is warranted for listing under the federal Endangered Species Act (ESA) over an 11-state area that includes Montana, but that listing of this species is precluded at the present time because other candidate species have a higher priority for listing; and

WHEREAS, the USFWS finding is based in part on the inadequacy of regulatory mechanisms that Montana and other states currently possess to ensure maintenance of viable prairie dog populations for the long term; and

WHEREAS, Montana and 10 other states have entered into an agreement to jointly develop management plans that address the needs of the species across virtually its entire range, thus improving the status of the black-tailed prairie dog to the point that it can be removed from consideration for listing under the ESA; and

WHEREAS, the USFWS will review the status of the black-tailed prairie dog on an annual basis; and

WHEREAS, it is desirable to enable the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks and the Department of Agriculture to implement management actions contained in Montana's prairie dog conservation plan while specifically protecting the current ability of landowners to manage prairie dogs on their lands; and

WHEREAS, it is desirable to facilitate long-term conservation of prairie dogs according to the conservation plan for prairie dogs in Montana while simultaneously reducing the likelihood that the black-tailed prairie dog will be listed under the ESA."

1983 Amendment: Inserted (1) defining account; and in second sentence of (4) after "habitat" deleted "acquisition and".

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 361 inserted (1) relating to constitutional obligations and legislative intent; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 2003.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 3, of the Montana Constitution enumerates certain inalienable individual rights, including the right to a clean and healthful environment, the right of pursuing life's basic necessities, the right of enjoying and defending an individual's life and liberty, the right of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and the right of seeking individual safety, health, and happiness in all lawful ways; and

WHEREAS, the constitutionally enumerated rights are by their very nature bound to result in competing interests in specific fact situations; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 1, of the Montana Constitution provides that the state and each person shall maintain and improve a clean and healthful environment in Montana for present and future generations and directs the Legislature to provide for the administration and enforcement of this duty and also directs the Legislature to provide adequate remedies for the protection of the environmental life support system from degradation and to provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has reviewed the intent of the framers of the 1972 Montana Constitution as evidenced in the verbatim transcripts of the constitutional convention; and

WHEREAS, there is no indication that one enumerated inalienable right is intended to supersede other inalienable rights, including the right to use property in all lawful means; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature, mindful of its constitutional obligation to provide for the administration and enforcement of the constitution, has enacted a comprehensive set of laws to accomplish the goals of the constitution, including the Montana Clean Indoor Air Act of 1979, Title 50, chapter 40, part 1, MCA; the Montana Environmental Policy Act, Title 75, chapter 1, parts 1 through 3, MCA; the Clean Air Act of Montana, Title 75, chapter 2, parts 1 through 4, MCA; water quality laws, Title 75, chapter 5, MCA; The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, Title 75, chapter 7, part 1, MCA; The Montana Solid Waste Management Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 2, MCA; The Montana Hazardous Waste Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 4, MCA; the Comprehensive Environmental Cleanup and Responsibility Act,

Title 75, chapter 10, part 7, MCA; the Montana Megalandfill Siting Act, sections 75-10-901 through 75-10-945, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Installer and Inspector Licensing and Permitting Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 2, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 5, MCA; the Montana Major Facility Siting Act, Title 75, chapter 20, MCA; the Open-Space Land and Voluntary Conservation Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 6, MCA; the Environmental Control Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 7, MCA; The Strip and Underground Mine Siting Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 1, MCA; The Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 2, MCA; The Opencut Mining Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 4, MCA; and The Nongame and Endangered Species Conservation Act, Title 87, chapter 5, part 1, MCA."

Severability: Section 39, Ch. 361, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 41, Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to actions for judicial review or other causes of action challenging the issuance of a permit, petition for review, amendment, license, arbitration, action, certificate, or inspection that are pending but not yet decided on or after [the effective date of this act]." 1991 Amendment: At end of (2), after "account", deleted "except as provided in subsection (5)"; deleted former (5) that read: "(5) The department of revenue may deduct from collections an amount not to exceed $1 for each tax checkoff contribution for administering the voluntary checkoff program"; and made minor change in style.

1987 Amendment: In (2), at end, changed reference to subsection (6) to reference to subsection (5); deleted former (5) and (6) that read: "(5) Money derived from tax checkoff contributions to the account will replace license fee funding for nongame wildlife programs after June 30, 1985, and may not be used to replace money that would otherwise be appropriated for nongame wildlife programs.

(6) The department of revenue may deduct from collections an amount not to exceed $7,884 in fiscal year 1986 and $7,884 in fiscal year 1987 for administering the voluntary checkoff program. The department is authorized to spend the amounts and hire necessary personnel and shall provide an itemized accounting to the legislative finance committee of the cost of administering the checkoff program during fiscal years 1986 and 1987"; and inserted (5) based on contingency described below.

Contingency Authorization: Section 5, Ch. 589, L. 1987, provided: "The authorization for deduction of administrative costs for the department of revenue in 87-5-121(5) of this act is contingent on passage and approval by the 50th legislature of legislation to require a similar deduction for administrative costs for all voluntary income tax checkoff programs authorized by law." (This contingency did not occur.)

1985 Amendment: In (2) in middle, inserted "and all interest earned by the fund before being expended under this section"; and in (6) in first sentence, after "exceed", substituted "$7,884 in fiscal year 1986 and $7,884 in fiscal year 1987" for "$6,638 in fiscal year 1984 and $4,238 in fiscal year 1985", in middle of second sentence substituted "legislative finance committee" for "49th legislature" and at end, after "fiscal years", substituted "1986 and 1987" for "1984 and 1985".

1983 Amendment: In (1), substituted "state special revenue fund" for "earmarked revenue fund".

Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 627, L. 1983, provided: "(1) This act applies to tax returns which by law are required to be filed after January 1, 1984.

(2) This act shall terminate December 31, 1987."

2011 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 390 in (2) near beginning substituted "may expend any federal funds received" for "shall expend only the federal funds" and after "purposes" inserted "and the portion of money allocated from the wolf management account established in 87-1-623"; in (3) after "The department" substituted current text for "may collaborate and cooperate with other state and federal agencies to fulfill the requirements of this section". Amendment effective July 1, 2011.

Chapter 400 in (1) inserted "or a collar that uses global positioning system technology"; and in (2) substituted "may expend state and federal funds" for "shall expend only the federal funds". Amendment effective July 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 400, L. 2011, provided:

"WHEREAS, the gray wolf was listed as an endangered species under the Endangered Species Act (ESA) in 1973; and

WHEREAS, gray wolves were reintroduced in Yellowstone National Park and central Idaho in 1995 and 1996 by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) to speed up recovery of the gray wolf population in the Northern Rocky Mountain region; and

WHEREAS, the biological requirement established by the USFWS for the recovery of the gray wolf population in the Northern Rocky Mountains is a minimum of 30 breeding pairs and 300 wolves in Montana, Idaho, and Wyoming combined or effectively 10 breeding pairs and 100 wolves per state; and

WHEREAS, the USFWS approved the Montana Gray Wolf Conservation and Management Plan in January 2004, under which Montana agreed to use adaptive management strategies to ensure its portion of the biological recovery goal is met; and

WHEREAS, the gray wolf population in Montana, Idaho, and Wyoming achieved the biological requirements of 30 breeding pairs and 300 wolves in 2002; and

WHEREAS, the most recent data available show that at the end of 2009, the estimated minimum number of wolves in Montana was 524 wolves with an estimated minimum of 37 breeding pairs in Montana; and

WHEREAS, the final environmental impact statement prepared by the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks (MDFWP) for the Montana Gray Wolf Conservation and Management Plan, submitted to the USFWS in October 2003, estimated that MDFWP's required budget for the wolf management alternative that was ultimately selected would be $924,739 to $1,062,399, of which 90% would be provided by the federal government under Section 6 of the ESA and 10% would be the responsibility of Montana; and

WHEREAS, the 90%-10% cost share was never implemented because the USFWS allocated funding directly to MDFWP rather than it being necessary for MDFWP to request funding under Section 6 of the ESA; and

WHEREAS, the USFWS allocated an average of $573,000 annually to Montana for wolf management under a 5-year contract that expired June 30, 2010; and

WHEREAS, that annual allocation was far below the estimate included in the final environmental impact statement; and

WHEREAS, under MDFWP's new contract for July 1, 2010, through June 30, 2015, the USFWS allocates only $626,000 to Montana for the entire 5-year period."

Vagueness: Where defendant was convicted of illegally possessing and transporting falcons, after having fraudulently obtained a permit to possess and transport falcons, conviction under 87-5-206(4) (repealed, 1991) and this section was sustained despite defendant's contention that the sections were unconstitutionally vague because they did not clearly prohibit possession or transportation with a fraudulently obtained permit. U.S. v. Doyle, 786 F2d 1440 (1986), certiorari denied, 479 US 984, 93 L Ed 2d 576, 107 S Ct 572 (1986).

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 258 in (1) deleted former last sentence that read: "Except as provided in 87-5-210, it is unlawful for any person to possess a raptor or to train a raptor in the practice of falconry without a license." Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 258, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the 2007 Legislature passed House Joint Resolution No. 16, urging that revision of the criminal codes within Title 87 of the Montana Code Annotated be given priority; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 noted that practitioners, judges, and citizens find that the criminal codes intertwined within the fish and game laws in Title 87 are difficult to read, understand, and prosecute; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 directed that revision of the Title 87 criminal code should not include policy changes to current laws and should adhere to the intent of the legislatures that crafted the laws; and

WHEREAS, in 2008, the Director of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks appointed a Title 87 criminal code revision working group, consisting of Justices of the Peace, County Attorneys, an Assistant Attorney General, legal counsel and the enforcement administrator of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and legislative staff; and

WHEREAS, the working group met numerous times and spent countless hours crafting a revision that makes the Title 87 criminal code more understandable without making substantive or policy changes to present law; and

WHEREAS, revision of the fish and game criminal statutes will benefit the hunting and fishing public, magistrates, and prosecutors by codifying crimes and penalties in a separate chapter of Montana law, rather than being intertwined throughout Title 87."

Saving Clause: Section 131, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 132, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

1991 Amendment: In (1), near beginning of first sentence, substituted "commission shall" for "department may", near middle, after "possession", inserted "by residents and nonresidents, selling or transfer of possession", at end, after "falconry", inserted "and set license qualifications and fees", and inserted second sentence requiring conformance with federal law; deleted former

(2) and (3) that read: "(2) The fee for a falconry license is $3 a year or any part of a year. A license expires April 30 each year.

(3) A license may not be issued to a person under the age of 12 years"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 243, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 87-5-204 and 87-5-210 require the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] to adopt rules regarding certain aspects of the use and breeding of raptors and the sport of falconry. Because the regulation of raptors and the sport of falconry are in large part regulated by federal law and because detailed and precise standards are rapidly changing, the rules must comply with federal law and regulations as adopted or amended from time to time. The legislature recognizes that the commission has the power to determine the extent and nature of measures that control wildlife in Montana and that the commission's expertise makes it the proper forum for addressing the regulation of raptors and the sport of falconry. At a minimum, the rules must address:

(1) the regulation of raptors and restrictions on taking, possessing, and selling raptors, including:

(a) the number of raptors that may legally be possessed;

(b) appropriate times and areas for trapping raptors and removing of raptors from the nest;

(c) notification requirements regarding transfer of ownership;

(d) permitting requirements regarding sale and transportation of raptors; and

(e) possession of and hunting with raptors by nonresidents;

(2) licenses and rules for falconry and the allowable uses of raptors in the sport of falconry, including:

(a) appropriate falconry license fees;

(b) age requirements regarding issuance of falconry licenses;

(c) the necessity of possessing other valid game licenses when practicing falconry; and

(d) the transfer and revocation of falconry licenses; and

(3) the regulation of captive breeding of raptors, including:

(a) appropriate breeding permit fees;

(b) transferability and revocation of breeding permits; and

(c) any other aspects of captive breeding considered appropriate by the commission."

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 118 deleted former (2) that read: "(2) A nonresident is not allowed to capture raptors from the wild in the state of Montana for falconry or captive breeding purposes"; inserted (2) regarding nonresident capture of raptors according to rule; and inserted

(3) regarding other states' reciprocity for trapping raptors. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

1991 Amendment: In (1) substituted first sentence regarding practice of falconry by federally licensed nonresidents for former first sentence that read: "Nonresidents who are working, attending schools, or otherwise living temporarily in the state of Montana may obtain a Montana falconry license and bring raptors, legally acquired in other states or countries, into the state of Montana"; inserted (2) disallowing raptor capture in Montana by nonresidents; and made minor change in style.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 243, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 87-5-204 and 87-5-210 require the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] to adopt rules regarding certain aspects of the use and breeding of raptors and the sport of falconry. Because the regulation of raptors and the sport of falconry are in large part regulated by federal law and because detailed and precise standards are rapidly changing, the rules must comply with federal law and regulations as adopted or amended from time to time. The legislature recognizes that the commission has the power to determine the extent and nature of measures that control wildlife in Montana and that the commission's expertise makes it the proper forum for addressing the regulation of raptors and the sport of falconry. At a minimum, the rules must address:

(1) the regulation of raptors and restrictions on taking, possessing, and selling raptors, including:

(a) the number of raptors that may legally be possessed;

(b) appropriate times and areas for trapping raptors and removing of raptors from the nest;

(c) notification requirements regarding transfer of ownership;

(d) permitting requirements regarding sale and transportation of raptors; and

(e) possession of and hunting with raptors by nonresidents;

(2) licenses and rules for falconry and the allowable uses of raptors in the sport of falconry, including:

(a) appropriate falconry license fees;

(b) age requirements regarding issuance of falconry licenses;

(c) the necessity of possessing other valid game licenses when practicing falconry; and

(d) the transfer and revocation of falconry licenses; and

(3) the regulation of captive breeding of raptors, including:

(a) appropriate breeding permit fees;

(b) transferability and revocation of breeding permits; and

(c) any other aspects of captive breeding considered appropriate by the commission."

Compiler's Comments

1991 Amendment: In (1), near end of first sentence after "part", inserted "and with rules adopted by the commission" and inserted second sentence regarding adoption of permit qualifications and fees by rule; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The fee for a captive breeding permit is $20 a year"; at end of (2) substituted "commission" for "department"; in (3), near beginning of first sentence, substituted "commission shall" for "department may", after "rules" substituted "regarding" for "for the keeping of records on, the trapping, taking, possession, propagation, and release of, and the sale of progeny of", and inserted second sentence requiring conformance with federal law.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 243, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 87-5-204 and 87-5-210 require the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] to adopt rules regarding certain aspects of the use and breeding of raptors and the sport of falconry. 1987 Amendment: In (4) inserted "and the sale of progeny of" and made minor changes in grammar.

Report on Sale of Progeny of Raptors — 51st Legislature: Section 3, Ch. 532, L. 1987, read: "The department [of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks] shall report to the 51st legislature the results of the program regulating the sale of the progeny of raptors, including but not limited to the numbers of birds sold, a description of the enforcement efforts undertaken, and the cost of the program to the department."

Codification Without Instruction: This section was enacted without a codification instruction. The apparent intent was that it become an integral part of Title 87, chapter 5, part 2, and the Code Commissioner has codified it accordingly.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 94 (Ch. 297, L. 1983), first adopted by the House Fish and Game Committee, read: "House Bill No. 94 requires a statement of intent because the proposed amendments [to the bill enacting this section] would provide the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks with the authority to pass regulations on the taking and keeping of raptors for captive breeding purposes.

The reason for the Department to pass regulations controlling captive breeding is to avoid abuses which could endanger the birds captured or in some cases to protect species which are already rare or unusual in Montana. Accordingly, regulations may be adopted which would regulate the kinds of raptors which may be captured, the methods used to capture birds, the facilities in which the birds are kept and bred, the times of capture, the kinds of records to be kept regarding the bird, and the qualifications of the people requesting a captive breeding permit."

Application of Part to Government Projects Including Highway Contractor Discretionary Work Bridges: This part was enacted to regulate projects undertaken by governmental entities, and the Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975 (Title 75, ch. 7, part 7) was enacted to control projects not subject to this part. Because highway projects are governmental undertakings, all activities in such a project that may impact upon a stream are within the jurisdiction of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks under this part, including activities such as temporary work bridges erected at a private contractor's discretion and not reflected on the Department of Highways' (now Department of Transportation's) construction plans. 40 A.G. Op. 71 (1984).

Application of Streambed Act: The Legislature did not intend to regulate any federally constructed projects under The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975. However, the mere location of a nonfederal project on federal land does not preempt state regulation under the Act. The Act is applicable to private projects on state lands, but state or local projects are regulated by the Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission) under applicable statutes. As to Indian reservations, the Act does not apply to projects constructed by Indians within the reservations, but projects constructed by non-Indians on non-Indian land within a reservation may be regulated by the state if it does not interfere with tribal self-government. 37 A.G. It is contemplated that the department establish rules for instituting an award program, including criteria to be used in determining who will receive the rewards and the amount of the rewards in order to guarantee that the rewards be granted through a reasonable and consistent procedure.

It is also contemplated that the department draft rules for guaranteeing the confidentiality of persons providing crime-related information. The rules must comply with the constitutional right to know and the right of privacy; confidentiality will be maintained only when the demand of individual privacy clearly exceeds the merits of public disclosure.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 770 (Ch. 624, L. 1985) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because section 10 [87-5-704] grants rulemaking authority to both the fish and game commission [now fish, wildlife, and parks commission] and the department of fish, wildlife, and parks. Section 10 [87-5-704] specifies what sections each entity may implement.

It is the intent of the legislature that the department adopt detailed rules pertaining to the procedure for accepting and processing applications for permission to import for introduction, introduce, or transplant wildlife. The department should address information such as names of applicants, species of wildlife, source of obtaining wildlife, purpose for introducing or transplanting, benefit to the public, potential for harm, and processing fee.

It is the intent of the legislature that the commission review proposals for the introduction or transplantation of wildlife species in the state on a case-by-case basis. It is also the intent of the legislature that the department develop a plan for those applications approved by the commission to assure that the population can be controlled if unforeseen harm should occur."

Case Notes

Transfer of Alternative Livestock to Unlicensed Tribal Lands Illegal: The Wallaces, licensed alternative livestock ranchers, sought to reduce the size of their elk herd by transferring about 500 elk to the Crow Indian Reservation for subsequent release into the wild. The elk had been certified as free of tuberculosis, brucellosis, and elk-red deer hybridization by the Department of Livestock (DOL). Despite notification by the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks (DFWP) that such an act violated state law, the Wallaces transferred 68 elk to the tribe. DFWP requested and received a permanent injunction prohibiting any further transfer of elk to the tribe, and the Wallaces appealed, questioning DFWP jurisdiction. The Supreme Court noted that DFWP has a statutory basis for its jurisdiction over the Wallaces as licensees. Based on DFWP jurisdiction over exterior fencing, and the Department's knowledge that the elk would not be contained behind a game-proof fence upon delivery to the tribe, DFWP had statutory authority to seek the permanent injunction to prevent the transfer. Also, the introduction or transplantation of any wildlife into the wild, including game farm elk, requires the approval of DFWP. Further, 87-4-414 provides that alternative livestock may be kept only on a licensed alternative livestock ranch, and because the tribe is not a licensed facility under Montana law, neither DFWP nor DOL had authority to permit the transfer. The Wallaces knew that the elk were destined for an unlicensed location where they would be released into the wild and could migrate back into Montana, so the transfer violated the Wallaces' duty as licensees to act in accordance with law, and the District Court correctly enjoined the transportation of the elk. Hagener v. Wallace, 2002 MT 109, 309 M 473, 47 P3d 847 (2002).

87-5-712. Authority for commission to control importation, possession, or sale of certain wildlife species and exotic wildlife.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 281 inserted (2) authorizing the commission to make exceptions for certain institutional control; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 19, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 536 in introductory clause in first sentence after "hearing" inserted language relating to classification review committee, after "species" substituted "or exotic wildlife that may not be imported, possessed, or sold as pets" for "prohibited from importation", and at end inserted "for any other reason" and at beginning of second sentence inserted clause concerning placement of wildlife species or exotic wildlife on list and after "finds" deleted "based on scientific investigation"; in (1) at beginning substituted "exotic wildlife" for "species, because of behavioral traits or other biological considerations"; in (2) after "released" substituted "from captivity, the exotic wildlife" for "into natural habitat"; inserted (3) concerning risk posed by exotic wildlife; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2004.

87-5-713. Control of wildlife species permitted to be transplanted or introduced.

Administrative Rules

ARM 12.7.540 Permit required for importation of bait leeches.
ARM 12.7.541 Importation of bait leeches — requirements.

87-5-714. Wildlife species authorized for introduction or transplantation.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 19 in (1)(v) substituted "walleye (Sander vitreus)" for "walleye (Stizostedion vitreum)". Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Administrative Rules

ARM 12.7.701 Authorization for department and commercial fish planting.

87-5-715. Extermination or control of transplanted or introduced wildlife or feral species posing threat.

Compiler's Comments

1989 Amendment: At beginning of first sentence deleted clause referring to 87-5-714 and after "commission" deleted "after scientific investigation by the department and after public hearing"; and deleted third sentence authorizing Department to take action, by emergency rule without hearing, to control or exterminate transplanted wildlife or species posing threat.

87-5-716. Consultation with departments of agriculture, public health and human services, and livestock.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 536 near beginning inserted reference to department of public health and human services, after "wildlife species" inserted "and exotic wildlife", and at end inserted language relating to risk to human health or safety; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2004.

87-5-721. Penalty — license and permit revocation and denial.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 139 in (1) substituted "convicted of a violation" for "who violates a provision"; in (2)(a) in first sentence increased minimum fine from $500 to $2,000 and increased maximum fine from $5,000 to $10,000 and in third sentence increased minimum fine from $500 to $2,000; in (2)(c) in first sentence substituted "by this state" for "under this title" and substituted "5 years or more than 10 years" for "24 months", in second sentence substituted "the imposed forfeiture period" for "24 months" and substituted "an additional period of time" for "more than 24 months", and in third sentence substituted "life" for "the lifetime of that person"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Chapter 258 in (1) in first sentence after "a person" substituted current text for "who violates a provision of this part is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable as provided in 87-1-102"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 258, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the 2007 Legislature passed House Joint Resolution No. 16, urging that revision of the criminal codes within Title 87 of the Montana Code Annotated be given priority; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 noted that practitioners, judges, and citizens find that the criminal codes intertwined within the fish and game laws in Title 87 are difficult to read, understand, and prosecute; and

WHEREAS, House Joint Resolution No. 16 directed that revision of the Title 87 criminal code should not include policy changes to current laws and should adhere to the intent of the legislatures that crafted the laws; and

WHEREAS, in 2008, the Director of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks appointed a Title 87 criminal code revision working group, consisting of Justices of the Peace, County Attorneys, an Assistant Attorney General, legal counsel and the enforcement administrator of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and legislative staff; and

WHEREAS, the working group met numerous times and spent countless hours crafting a revision that makes the Title 87 criminal code more understandable without making substantive or policy changes to present law; and

WHEREAS, revision of the fish and game criminal statutes will benefit the hunting and fishing public, magistrates, and prosecutors by codifying crimes and penalties in a separate chapter of Montana law, rather than being intertwined throughout Title 87."

Saving Clause: Section 2, Ch. 139, L. 2011, was a saving clause.

Section 131, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 132, Ch. 258, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 429 in (3) at end of first sentence after "within" substituted "a time set by the department, not to exceed 6 months" for "6 months of a conviction or sooner if ordered by the court". Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 429, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, invasive species can wreak damage on the economy, environment, recreational opportunities, and human health; and

WHEREAS, aquatic invasive species, including Eurasian watermilfoil, the quagga mussel, and the zebra mussel, pose new and imminent threats, which if left unchecked could cost millions of dollars not only in damage to Montana waterways, rivers, and lakes, to water storage, delivery, and irrigation systems, to hydroelectric power structures and systems, and to aquatic ecosystems, but also to the entire state economy; and

WHEREAS, the enormous impact caused by the zebra mussel is clearly demonstrated in the eastern United States where the species was first observed in Lake Ontario in 1988 and spread to Lake Michigan and the Finger Lakes Region in New York State by the following year; and

WHEREAS, the United States Geological Survey estimates that $5 billion has been spent thus far in the Great Lakes Basin alone for damages caused by and control efforts for the zebra mussel; and

WHEREAS, the zebra mussel was first discovered in Lake Mead in January 2007 and has now spread to Lakes Mojave and Havasu and the Colorado River, impacting the states of Arizona, Nevada, and California, as well as to Pueblo Reservoir in Colorado, San Justo Reservoir in California, and Electric Lake in Utah; and

WHEREAS, Eurasian watermilfoil, the zebra mussel, and the quagga mussel are easily carried on vessels used in infested water and then transported to another body of water if the vessel has not been properly cleaned; and

WHEREAS, Eurasian watermilfoil is already present in Montana and unless Montana takes action now to prevent the infestation of its waters with the zebra mussel and quagga mussel it is only a matter of time before their introduction in this state occurs; and

WHEREAS, the most cost-effective way of dealing with an aquatic invasive species is preventing an infestation from occurring."

Severability: Section 19, Ch. 429, L. 2009, was a severability clause.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 281 inserted (3) relating to the disposition of illegally held exotic wildlife. Amendment effective April 19, 2005.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 344 in (2)(a), in first sentence, substituted "an offense" for "a misdemeanor" and substituted "$5,000 and imprisonment for up to 1 year" for "$1,000 or imprisonment for not more than 6 months, or both" and inserted second and third sentences allowing sentencing court to consider community service in lieu of imprisonment and prohibiting the sentencing court from deferring or suspending $500 of the fine amount.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 223 in (2)(a), after "$500", substituted language concerning $1,000 fine or imprisonment for "and may be fined up to the amount necessary to eliminate or mitigate the effects of the violation"; inserted (2)(b) regarding civil liability and damages; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: At beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; and inserted (2) relating to penalty for illegal importation, introduction, or transplantation of fish.

Case Notes

Fish and Game Restitution Not Within Jurisdiction of Justice Court: The Justice Court imposed a $515 fine, suspended fishing privileges, and ordered restitution in an amount necessary to mitigate the effects of the violation to be paid by a plaintiff who had intentionally introduced fish into Lake Mary Ronan. On appeal, the Supreme Court vacated the conviction and sentence, holding that the potentially limitless fine that could be imposed to mitigate the effects of a violation of the fish and game statute is inconsistent with the statute that grants Justices' Courts jurisdiction over violations of fish and game statutes that are punishable by a fine not exceeding $1,000. Moseley v. Lake County Justice Court, 256 M 206, 845 P2d 732, 50 St. Rep. 28 (1993).

Part 1
General Provisions

87-6-104. Fish and game code not to supersede criminal code — statute of limitations.

Case Notes

Exclusivity of Title 87 as Remedy for Fish and Game Violations: Section 87-1-102(1) (1993) provided in part that a "person who purposely or knowingly violates any provision of this title, any other state law pertaining to fish and game, or the orders or rules of the commission or department is guilty of a misdemeanor, except if a felony is expressly provided by law, and shall be fined not less than $50 or more than $500, imprisoned in the county jail for not more than 6 months, or both, unless a different punishment is expressly provided by law for the violation". This provision limits penalties for fish and game violations to those provided in this title and precludes the charging of appellant with felony criminal mischief under Title 45. The portion of St. v. Fertterer, 255 M 73, 841 P2d 467 (1992), holding that this title does not provide the exclusive remedy for fish and game violations and allowing defendant to be charged with felony criminal mischief under Title 45, is manifestly wrong and is expressly overruled. St. v. Gatts, 279 M 42, 928 P2d 114, 53 St. Rep. 1042 (1996). (See 1997 enactment of this section.)

87-6-106. Lawful taking to protect livestock or person.

Case Notes

Claim of Defense of Person Invalid After Seventy-Two Hours: The District Court did not err in refusing to submit to the jury the issue of whether defendant shot a bobcat in defense of another person when defendant failed to notify the Department within 72 hours, as required by 87-3-130 (now repealed, but see 87-6-106). St. v. Gibbs, 244 M 251, 797 P2d 928, 47 St. Rep. 1584 (1990).

Part 2
General Hunting, Fishing, and Trapping Offenses

Part Case Notes

No Error in Suspending Hunting and Fishing Privileges for Outfitting Without License When Suspension Also Assessed for Fish and Game Violations: Ruiz was convicted of outfitting without a license and for several fish and game violations. The sentencing court suspended Ruiz's hunting and fishing privileges for both violations, designating the suspension periods to run concurrently. Ruiz appealed on grounds that it was error to suspend privileges for outfitting without a license. The Supreme Court agreed that 37-47-344 does not allow for the suspension of privileges for outfitting violations. However, 87-1-102 (now repealed) allows suspension for fish and game violations. The practical effect of the concurrent sentences was suspension in any event, and the District Court did not abuse its lawful discretion in suspending hunting and fishing privileges for Ruiz's violations. St. v. Ruiz, 2005 MT 117, 327 M 109, 112 P3d 1001 (2005).

Ten-Year Suspension of Accompaniment and Nongame Hunting Privileges Affirmed: Ruiz was convicted on numerous counts related to hunting, fishing, and outfitting. The District Court suspended Ruiz's privileges to accompany others and partake in nongame hunting for 10 years. Ruiz appealed on grounds that the 10-year suspension of privileges had little connection to and were not statutorily authorized for the underlying charges. The Supreme Court disagreed. Under 87-1-102 (now repealed), a long suspension period is authorized when warranted, and 46-18-202 also allows imposition of sentencing conditions that are reasonably related to the rehabilitation of the offender and the protection of the victim and society. The sentencing court was influenced by the fact that Ruiz attended college and majored in forestry, resource conservation, and wildlife biology and yet deliberately disregarded the hunting laws and regulations, in which he was well-versed, for money and personal benefit. In order to protect wildlife and slow down Ruiz's behavior, the significant restrictions of Ruiz's ability to engage in hunting were warranted. The 10-year suspension of privileges was legal and was affirmed. St. v. Ruiz, 2005 MT 117, 327 M 109, 112 P3d 1001 (2005).

Appeal to District Court Allowed Only After Trial in Lower Court, Not After Forfeiture of Bond — Exclusive Statutory Remedy for Appeals From Courts of Limited Jurisdiction: Kempin was charged in Justice's Court with seven fish and game violations but failed to appear for trial, so the appearance bonds that Kempin had posted were forfeited and Kempin's hunting, fishing, and trapping privileges were suspended for 10 years. Kempin appealed to the District Court within 10 days of the Justice's Court judgment, but the appeal was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction and because Kempin had no statutory right to appeal the forfeitures as a matter of law, so Kempin appealed to the Supreme Court. Under Art. VII, sec. 4, Mont. Const., District Courts must hear appeals from inferior courts as trials de novo unless otherwise provided by law, and appeal of a criminal conviction from a court of limited jurisdiction is governed exclusively by 46-17-311, which provides three circumstances under which a criminal defendant may appeal to District Court for a trial de novo: (1) when a defendant pleads guilty or nolo contendere but preserves legal issues raised by pretrial motion for appeal; (2) when a defendant files written notice of intention to appeal within 10 days after a judgment is rendered following a trial; and (3) when a defendant appeals revocation of a suspended sentence. Here, Kempin claimed that denial of a District Court trial by jury following forfeiture in Justice's Court violated his due process rights. However, Kempin raised no appealable pretrial issues, nor was the case an appeal of a suspended sentence, so the first and third circumstances did not apply. Kempin did appeal the judgment within 10 days, but there was no trial, so Kempin was not constitutionally entitled to a trial de novo when there had been no trial initially, nor is 46-17-311 unconstitutionally vague for not explicitly proscribing an appeal following a forfeiture. The Supreme Court agreed with the District Court's explanation in declining jurisdiction—that if a defendant was automatically entitled to a trial de novo on appeal without first having a trial in Justice's Court, a defendant could avoid Justice's Court altogether by not appearing and forfeiting the Justice's Court bonds and then pursuing a trial in District Court, which would render the Justice's Court system meaningless. Kempin's other due process arguments were also not compelling because Kempin waived his trial rights by failing to appear in Justice's Court to assert any constitutional rights and in light of his stated intention to forfeit the bonds and the advance notice of the suspension of the hunting, fishing, and trapping privileges. Absent any statutory basis for an appeal, dismissal of the appeal by the District Court was affirmed. St. v. Kempin, 2001 MT 313, 308 M 17, 38 P3d 859 (2001). See also St. v. Feight, 2001 MT 205, 306 M 312, 33 P3d 623 (2001), and St. v. Schulke, 2005 MT 77, 326 M 390, 109 P3d 744 (2005).

Exclusivity of Title 87 as Remedy for Fish and Game Violations:

Section 87-1-102(1) (1993) (now repealed) provided in part that a "person who purposely or knowingly violates any provision of this title, any other state law pertaining to fish and game, or the orders or rules of the commission or department is guilty of a misdemeanor, except if a felony is expressly provided by law, and shall be fined not less than $50 or more than $500, imprisoned in the county jail for not more than 6 months, or both, unless a different punishment is expressly provided by law for the violation". This provision limits penalties for fish and game violations to those provided in this title and precludes the charging of appellant with felony criminal mischief under Title 45. The portion of St. v. Fertterer, 255 M 73, 841 P2d 467 (1992), holding that this title does not provide the exclusive remedy for fish and game violations and allowing defendant to be charged with felony criminal mischief under Title 45, is manifestly wrong and is expressly overruled. St. v. Gatts, 279 M 42, 928 P2d 114, 53 St. Rep. 1042 (1996). (See 1997 enactment of 87-1-110 (now repealed, but see 87-6-104) and 1999 amendment.)

Defendants Richard and David Fertterer were convicted of felony criminal mischief for illegally killing game. They contended on appeal that because of the differences in misdemeanor penalties under Title 87 and felony penalties under Title 45, it is manifestly unjust for them to be convicted under 45-6-101 and is contrary to the intent of the Legislature. Citing the language of 87-1-102 (now repealed), the Supreme Court held that the Legislature did not intend Title 87 to constitute the exclusive penalties for fish and game violations because the penalties under 45-6-101 constitute the "different punishment" contemplated by 87-1-102 (now repealed). St. v. Fertterer, 255 M 73, 841 P2d 467, 49 St. Rep. 846 (1992).

Hours of Hunting Sufficiently Clear to Withstand Due Process Challenge: After he shot a bull elk half an hour before sunrise, Johnston was arrested for hunting before the allowed time. Johnston challenged the rules of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks as being inconsistent, ambiguous, vague, and factually erroneous. The Supreme Court held that the rules establishing the time of sunrise within the hunting district where Johnston shot the elk were clear in that they precisely defined the time of sunrise on the day Johnston shot the elk, leaving no room to guess at what time a hunter could begin shooting. St. v. Johnston, 263 M 179, 867 P2d 1090, 51 St. Rep. 5 (1994).

Jurisdiction — Hunting and Fishing: Flathead Tribe had jurisdiction to regulate fishing upon Crow Creek Reservoir, and violation of tribal ordinance requiring permit for fishing constituted federal offense. U.S. v. Zempel, 32 St. Rep. 1130 (D.C. Mont. 1975). (Annotator's Comment: This case was not published in F. Supp.)

Seasons on Indian Reservation: Conviction of non-Indian for killing two bull elk on Crow Indian Reservation during season closed by state fish and game laws was not in conflict with act of Congress providing penalty for trespass to possessory rights of reservation Indians or in conflict with The Enabling Act providing that Indian lands shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of Congress of United States. State ex rel. Nepstad v. Danielson, 149 M 438, 427 P2d 689 (1967), followed in U.S. v. Sanford, 547 F2d 1089 (9th Cir. 1976).

Failure to Tag Deer: When plaintiff lawfully killed a deer but failed to fill out the tag attached to his hunting license and attach it to the carcass, the deer was not unlawfully possessed and the Game Warden was without authority to seize and confiscate the carcass when he arrested plaintiff for failure to attach the tag. Shipman v. Todd, 131 M 365, 310 P2d 300 (1957).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Duty of Judge to Notify Defendant of Potential Forfeiture of Hunting, Fishing, and Trapping Privileges — Notification of Loss of Privileges Duty of Department: In order to ensure that a knowing plea is entered by a defendant accused of a fish and game violation, a judge must inform the defendant of the potential forfeiture of hunting, fishing, and trapping privileges as a result of a conviction, guilty plea, or forfeiture of bond in the case of offenses for which the loss of privileges is a direct and immediate consequence of the violation. Notification of the loss of hunting, fishing, and trapping privileges is statutorily delegated to the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks. 49 A.G. Op. 20 (2002).

87-6-202. Unlawful possession, shipping, or transportation of game fish, bird, game animal, or fur-bearing animal.

Case Notes

Felony Convictions for Unlawful Possession of Game Animals Affirmed — Jury Instructions Proper: The jury found that Norman illegally possessed two buck mule deer, one antelope, and one bull elk in 2007, one cow elk and one buck mule deer in November 2004, and one antelope and one bull elk in 2003, in violation of either 87-1-111 or 87-1-115 (now repealed, but see 87-6-906 and 87-6-907). Under each count, the jury found that the value of the animals either individually or in the aggregate exceeded $1,000. Norman argued on appeal that the District Court improperly instructed the jury by not specifically instructing on the element of value. Norman also argued that, pursuant to the first count, the animals were not part of the "same transaction" under 87-3-111 (now repealed) because they were killed on different dates. Norman also objected to a special instruction that indicated that the jury needed to find Norman guilty of only one offense under each count. The Supreme Court affirmed. The court was not "firmly convinced" that its failure to review the instructions would result in a manifest miscarriage of justice, leave unsettled the question of the fundamental fairness of the trial or proceedings, or compromise the integrity of the judicial process. In addition, the prosecutor's grouping of the animals as part of the "same transaction," which allowed the value of the animals to be aggregated, was not improper, and Norman did not object at trial to the special instruction provided to the jury. St. v. Norman, 2010 MT 253, 358 Mont. 252, 244 P.3d 737.

Interpretation of License Suspension Requirements: Following Cotterell's conviction for possession of unlawfully killed game animals, the District Court suspended Cotterell's hunting, fishing, and trapping privileges for 2 years from the date of conviction. Cotterell objected on grounds that the court misinterpreted 87-1-102 (now repealed, but see 87-6-202) by concluding that it could not suspend the 2-year forfeiture with appropriate conditions and by suspending fishing privileges even though the convicted offenses were unrelated to fishing. The Supreme Court affirmed the license forfeiture. A violation of 87-1-102(2)(b) (now repealed) triggers a mandatory license forfeiture, and nothing in former subsection (2)(b) allows a sentencing court to suspend any portion of the forfeiture period. Further, the forfeiture of fishing privileges is not tied to violation of any fishing laws but was specifically tied to the offense for which Cotterell was convicted, and nothing in former subsection (2)(b) allows a sentencing court to sever fishing privileges from hunting and trapping privileges. St. v. Cotterell, 2008 MT 409, 347 M 231, 198 P3d 254 (2008).

Sufficient Corroborating Evidence to Testimony of Legally Accountable Witness: Corroborating evidence included testimony of the wife of a witness deemed legally accountable for offense, the hunting license records produced by a game warden, the testimony by a game warden as to the opening date of hunting season in 2002, a photo of defendant with the bear carcass, and the game warden's testimony that he inspected bear parts in a freezer located in a lodge owned by defendant. This was sufficient to support an accountable witness's testimony regarding unlawful possession of an illegally killed bear. St. v. Wendler, 2008 MT 370, 346 M 467, 197 P3d 932 (2008).

No Expectation of Privacy in Animal Cape Taken to Taxidermist: Bowman took an elk cape to a taxidermist for mounting, but the cape was seized without a warrant when wildlife officials received a tip that Bowman had taken the elk out of season. Bowman contended that the evidence should be suppressed because the search was unlawful. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that a determination of whether a search is lawful depends in part on whether a person has an actual expectation of privacy that society is willing to recognize as reasonable and that one factor in determining a legitimate expectation of privacy is the extent to which the person took measures to shield the property from public view. Here, any expectation of privacy that Bowman had in the cape was relinquished when, without taking any measures to preserve a claim of privacy, the cape was taken to a public business and placed in possession of a third party, even if the transfer was only temporary. St. v. Bowman, 2004 MT 119, 321 M 176, 89 P3d 986 (2004).

Sufficient Evidence That Hunter Used Firearm to Take Elk During Archery Season — Conviction Affirmed: Following conviction for taking a game animal out of season by using a firearm to kill an elk during archery season and for illegal possession of a game animal, Bowman appealed on grounds that there was insufficient evidence to support the verdict. The Supreme Court disagreed, finding sufficient evidence establishing that: (1) the size of entrance wounds in the elk cape were similar to the caliber of more than one weapon found and seized in Bowman's home; (2) the elk Bowman possessed died in close proximity to the time that the bullet wounds were made; and (3) given the position of the entrance and exit wounds in the elk cape, bullets likely caused damage to a major artery, vein, or muscle tissue, caused shock to the spinal cord, and could also have hit the larynx and trachea. The arrow identified by Bowman as the one used to kill the animal had plant material on the blade that was probably from the elk's stomach. Based on the evidence, a jury could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt, and the Supreme Court declined to disturb the verdict. St. v. Bowman, 2004 MT 119, 321 M 176, 89 P3d 986 (2004).

Warrants Based on Anonymous Tip Sufficiently Corroborated by Inculpatory Information — Motion to Suppress Evidence Properly Denied: Wildlife officials received an anonymous tip that Bowman had taken an elk out of season and seized evidence at a taxidermy shop and at Bowman's home pursuant to two warrants. Bowman moved to suppress the evidence, contending that the warrant applications did not state probable cause. The motion was denied, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. After receiving the anonymous tip, the wildlife officials obtained independent data that revealed inculpatory information corroborating the criminal conduct disclosed by the tip, which provided a substantial basis to determine that probable cause existed to issue the warrants. Bowman's motion to suppress was properly denied. St. v. Bowman, 2004 MT 119, 321 M 176, 89 P3d 986 (2004).

Sale of Eagle Parts — Federal Violation Notwithstanding Claims of Religious Use: Frank and William Hugs admitted active involvement in purchasing and selling eagles and eagle parts but claimed that they did so for religious purposes. Following an undercover investigation, they were convicted of a violation of the federal Bald and Golden Eagle Protection Act (BGEPA), 16 U.S.C. 668(a), which prohibits the taking of eagle parts for religious purposes unless the person has obtained the proper federal permit. The Hugses claimed that the BGEPA infringed on their constitutional guarantee of free exercise of religion and that actions of the undercover agent were so outrageous as to warrant dismissal of the prosecution. The Hugses could challenge only the facial validity of the BGEPA, not the operation of the underlying administrative scheme, because they did not possess a permit and never applied for one. On appeal, it was held that the statute and permit system, while imposing a substantial burden on the practice of religion by restricting the ability of adherents to obtain and possess eagles and eagle parts, nevertheless provided the least restrictive means of conserving eagles while permitting access to eagles and eagle parts for religious purposes. Further, the undercover agent's conduct fell short of the level of outrageousness required to invalidate a prosecution under the due process clause. Judgment was affirmed. U.S. v. Hugs, 109 F3d 1375 (9th Cir. 1997).

Authority of Tribal Warden to Detain and Turn Nontribal Member Over to State Game Warden: Horseman was detained by a tribal warden and turned over to a state game warden, who had requested that Horseman be detained for possessing an illegally killed game animal. Horseman argued that he had been unlawfully extradited. The Supreme Court held that Horseman, although Indian, was not a member of the tribe on whose reservation he had been detained and that under Duro v. Reina, 495 US 676 (1990), the tribal game warden had the authority to detain a nontribal member and turn the person over to state authorities. St. v. Horseman, 263 M 87, 866 P2d 1110, 50 St. Rep. 1720 (1993).

No Treaty Hunting Rights Off Reservation: Horseman was charged with possessing unlawfully killed game. He argued that an 1855 treaty gave him the right to hunt on traditional tribal hunting grounds located outside the reservation. The Supreme Court held that the treaty Horseman based his argument on had only been for 99 years and had expired in 1954. St. v. Horseman, 263 M 87, 866 P2d 1110, 50 St. Rep. 1720 (1993).

Tribal Members Subject to State Hunting Laws Off Reservation: Horseman argued that he could not be charged with possession of unlawfully killed game because, as a tribal member, he was not subject to state game laws. The Supreme Court held that the game had been killed off the reservation and that the state may assume jurisdiction in disputes concerning Indians that arise outside the reservation. St. v. Horseman, 263 M 87, 866 P2d 1110, 50 St. Rep. 1720 (1993).

Market Value of Deer Taken in Violation of Lacey Act: The prohibition in the Lacey Act against offering guide services for the illegal taking of wildlife does not involve the "sale" of game in the traditional sense. Rather, the commodity being sold is the opportunity to illegally hunt game with the assistance of a guide. In determining the market value of illegally taken deer, the fine imposed under Montana law for illegal taking did not establish market value, nor was that value established by the value of the deer if sold in open market. Rather, the market value is the amount that hunters were willing to pay for the guide's services. U.S. v. Atkinson, 966 F2d 1270 (9th Cir. 1992).

Trafficking as Misdemeanor by Classification: Regardless of the statement in 87-3-111 (now repealed, but see 87-6-202), prior to 1991 amendment, that trafficking in game animals is a felony, because the jail sentence for a trafficking violation does not exceed 1 year, under classification rules provided by the Legislature prior to 1991, trafficking may not be considered a felony. St. v. Gibbs, 244 M 251, 797 P2d 928, 47 St. Rep. 1584 (1990).

Application of Federal Lacey Act to Outfitting and Guiding — Statute of Limitations on Charges of Conspiracy: While a prosecution under the federal Lacey Act, 16 U.S.C. 3371, et seq., which prohibits transportation or acquisition in interstate commerce of wildlife in violation of state laws, may not properly be had for the substantive acts of selling guiding services and hunting permits, a prosecution can be maintained for conspiracies to violate the Act while providing outfitting and guiding services, such as arranging for out-of-state hunters to use elk licenses and permits belonging to other hunters, knowing that any elk taken would be transported out of state. The Act applied when evidence was sufficient to establish the involvement of defendant, a hunting guide and outfitter, in a conspiracy to transport elk in interstate commerce in violation of Montana law. Further, the 5-year "catchall" statute of limitations set out in 18 U.S.C. 3282 applied to charges of conspiring to violate the Act. U.S. v. Thomas, 887 F2d 1341 (9th Cir. 1989), distinguishing U.S. v. Stenberg, 803 F2d 422 (9th Cir. 1986).

Provision of Guiding Service Not an Offer to Sell Wildlife Prohibited by Federal Law: The alleged provision of guiding services to an unlicensed hunter does not constitute an illegal sale or offer to sell wildlife under the federal Lacey Act (16 U.S.C. 3372, 3373). U.S. v. Stenberg, 803 F2d 422 (9th Cir. 1986).

Felony Offense Versus Misdemeanor Offense — Jury Instruction: Hankins was convicted of trafficking in the unlawfully obtained body parts of a protected species in violation of 87-3-111 (now repealed, but see 87-6-202). On appeal, Hankins argued that the court's jury instructions failed to distinguish between the felony and the misdemeanor offenses under 87-3-111 (now repealed, but see 87-6-202). When read together, however, the jury instructions clearly drew a distinction between the felony offense charged and the lesser included misdemeanor offense. St. v. Hankins, 209 M 365, 680 P2d 958, 41 St. Rep. 762 (1984). See also St. v. Gibbs, 244 M 251, 797 P2d 928, 47 St. Rep. 1584 (1990).

Trafficking — Jury Instruction: It is not reversible error to give a jury instruction defining "trafficking" that is taken directly from 87-3-111 (now repealed, but see 87-6-202). St. v. Hankins, 209 M 365, 680 P2d 958, 41 St. Rep. 762 (1984).

87-6-204. Hunting or fishing during closed season.

Case Notes

No Expectation of Privacy in Animal Cape Taken to Taxidermist: Bowman took an elk cape to a taxidermist for mounting, but the cape was seized without a warrant when wildlife officials received a tip that Bowman had taken the elk out of season. Bowman contended that the evidence should be suppressed because the search was unlawful. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that a determination of whether a search is lawful depends in part on whether a person has an actual expectation of privacy that society is willing to recognize as reasonable and that one factor in determining a legitimate expectation of privacy is the extent to which the person took measures to shield the property from public view. Here, any expectation of privacy that Bowman had in the cape was relinquished when, without taking any measures to preserve a claim of privacy, the cape was taken to a public business and placed in possession of a third party, even if the transfer was only temporary. St. v. Bowman, 2004 MT 119, 321 M 176, 89 P3d 986 (2004).

Sufficient Evidence That Hunter Used Firearm to Take Elk During Archery Season — Conviction Affirmed: Following conviction for taking a game animal out of season by using a firearm to kill an elk during archery season and for illegal possession of a game animal, Bowman appealed on grounds that there was insufficient evidence to support the verdict. The Supreme Court disagreed, finding sufficient evidence establishing that: (1) the size of entrance wounds in the elk cape were similar to the caliber of more than one weapon found and seized in Bowman's home; (2) the elk Bowman possessed died in close proximity to the time that the bullet wounds were made; and (3) given the position of the entrance and exit wounds in the elk cape, bullets likely caused damage to a major artery, vein, or muscle tissue, caused shock to the spinal cord, and could also have hit the larynx and trachea. The arrow identified by Bowman as the one used to kill the animal had plant material on the blade that was probably from the elk's stomach. Based on the evidence, a jury could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt, and the Supreme Court declined to disturb the verdict. St. v. Bowman, 2004 MT 119, 321 M 176, 89 P3d 986 (2004).

Warrants Based on Anonymous Tip Sufficiently Corroborated by Inculpatory Information — Motion to Suppress Evidence Properly Denied: Wildlife officials received an anonymous tip that Bowman had taken an elk out of season and seized evidence at a taxidermy shop and at Bowman's home pursuant to two warrants. Bowman moved to suppress the evidence, contending that the warrant applications did not state probable cause. The motion was denied, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. After receiving the anonymous tip, the wildlife officials obtained independent data that revealed inculpatory information corroborating the criminal conduct disclosed by the tip, which provided a substantial basis to determine that probable cause existed to issue the warrants. Bowman's motion to suppress was properly denied. St. v. Bowman, 2004 MT 119, 321 M 176, 89 P3d 986 (2004).

Road Hunter Pleading Ignorance: The defendant argued that the state did not prove that he knew road hunting was illegal or that he knew it was not hunting season. The Supreme Court ruled that ignorance of the law is no excuse. St. v. Lynn, 243 M 430, 795 P2d 429, 47 St. Rep. 1288 (1990).

Indians Hunting on Open and Unclaimed Land: Members of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes have a right to hunt free from the regulation of Montana game laws on "open and unclaimed lands" by virtue of Article II of the Treaty of Hell Gate and this includes National Forest Service land. St. v. Stasso, 172 M 242, 563 P2d 562 (1977).

Regulation Subject to Constitutional Guaranties: On appeal from a conviction of killing an elk out of season, defendant's defense was predicated upon the constitutional guaranties under sec. 3, 13, and 29, Art. III, 1889 Mont. Const. (now sec. 3 and 12, 1972 Mont. Const.), of the right to enjoy and defend one's property; held, under the facts presented, that legal justification may always be interposed as a defense by a person charged with killing a wild animal contrary to law, and that the general law on the right to use force, 49-1-103, must be construed in pari materia with 87-3-104 (now repealed, but see 87-6-204) when found inoperative, otherwise 87-3-104 (now repealed, but see 87-6-204) would be unconstitutional as denying an inalienable right. Reversed and remanded for a new trial. St. v. Rathbone, 110 M 225, 100 P2d 86 (1940).

Commission Empowered to Lengthen Hunting Season: A temporary order restraining the State Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission) from putting into effect its order lengthening the hunting season on elk in a certain locality, thus modifying the law on fixing of seasons, was improper since under section 26-104, R.C.M. 1947, declaring prior to amendment that the statutes governing "such subjects" should continue in force and effect except as altered or modified by the rules and regulations of the Commission, the Legislature so empowered the Commission, amounting to modification of existing statutes. State ex rel. Fish & Game Comm'n v. District Court, 107 M 289, 84 P2d 798 (1938).

87-6-205. Waste of game animal, game bird, or game fish.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Code Commissioner Correction: In (4) the Code Commissioner substituted "87-3-131" for "87-3-110". Section 87-3-110 was repealed by Ch. 113, L. 2011, and 87-3-110(4) was enacted by Ch. 258, L. 2011. The Code Commissioner has codified 87-3-110(4) from Ch. 258 as 87-3-131.

Case Notes

Waste of Game Animal — Photos of Moldy Carcass Held Probative — No Substantial Change in Condition: Wilmer was charged with waste of a game animal under 87-3-102 (now repealed, but see 87-6-205) and objected to introduction of a photo of the carcass at trial because 3 days had passed between when the carcass was confiscated and when the photo was taken and because there may have been bite marks on it. The Supreme Court noted that roughly 70 days had passed between when the deer was shot and when it was confiscated and that the game warden insisted that the photo showed the condition of the carcass when it was confiscated. The Supreme Court held that the additional 3 days could not have altered the carcass significantly, that the lack of odor of the meat in the photographs went to the weight of the evidence and not its admissibility, that the photos were not unduly prejudicial, and that the District Court properly admitted the photographs. St. v. Wilmer, 2011 MT 78, 360 Mont. 101, 252 P.3d 178.

Crime of Waste of Game as Absolute Liability Offense: Defendant contended that because the offense of wasting game meat is punishable by a fine in excess of $500, the offense may not be classed as an absolute liability offense. However, the second element of 45-2-104, wherein a clear legislative purpose validates the imposition of absolute liability, was indicated by the obvious statutory intent to preserve game resources for the benefit of the public and by the recognition of the state's duty to protect public wildlife resources. The trial court did not err in failing to instruct the jury on criminal intent. St. v. Huebner, 252 M 184, 827 P2d 1260, 49 St. Rep. 210 (1992).

Forfeiture of Game Properly Applied in Case of Waste of Mountain Goat: Defendant was convicted of wasting game contrary to the provisions of 87-3-102 (now repealed, but see 87-6-205). He contended that it was improper to impose a penalty of forfeiture of the head, cape, and horns of the mountain goat he killed legally. Having failed to comply with the requirement that he not waste the meat, defendant was subject to the game warden's authority under 87-1-506 to seize any parts of the animal. Imposition of forfeiture was not contrary to law. St. v. Huebner, 252 M 184, 827 P2d 1260, 49 St. Rep. 210 (1992).

No Arbitrary Exceptions in Game Waste Statute: Unlike the spotlighting statute considered in St. v. Austin, 217 M 265, 704 P2d 55 (1985), 87-3-102 (now repealed, but see 87-6-205) does not contain exceptions that would permit arbitrary and irrational enforcement sufficient to render the statute unconstitutional. St. v. Huebner, 252 M 184, 827 P2d 1260, 49 St. Rep. 210 (1992).

Statute Not Vague or Overbroad: Defendant contended that 87-3-102 (now repealed, but see 87-6-205) was unconstitutionally vague because it did not clearly set forth the prohibited conduct. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that the statute did not fail to give a person of ordinary intelligence a reasonable opportunity to know what was prohibited so that person could act accordingly. Defendant's contention that 87-3-102 (now repealed, but see 87-6-205) was overbroad, in that it could be construed to prohibit otherwise legal activities of a hunter or taxidermist who removed the head, horns, and cape at any time, was also disaffirmed. The court noted that it is not the removal of the specified body parts that is illegal, but rather the removal of only those parts without using the remainder of the animal. St. v. Huebner, 252 M 184, 827 P2d 1260, 49 St. Rep. 210 (1992).

87-6-206. Unlawful sale of game fish, bird, game animal, or fur-bearing animal.

Case Notes

Admission of Evidence of Prior Game Farm (now Alternative Livestock Ranch) Acts Proper: The District Court did not err in admitting evidence of prior game farm (now alternative livestock ranch) acts and in limiting references to those acts and not to any subsequent convictions since the earlier case was still pending on appeal because: (1) the prior acts were sufficiently similar, although not identical, to those for which defendant was presently charged; (2) the acts, although occurring 3 years prior, were not so remote as to be inadmissible because of the similarity of the acts; and (3) the state's purpose in introducing the evidence was to establish absence of mistake or accident regarding defendant's possession of unlawfully taken wildlife. St. v. Brogan, 272 M 156, 900 P2d 284, 52 St. Rep. 636 (1995). See also St. v. Matt, 249 M 136, 814 P2d 52 (1991), and St. v. Romero, 261 M 221, 861 P2d 929 (1993).

Statute Not Unconstitutionally Vague: Brogan challenged the constitutionality of 87-3-118 (now repealed) as being void for vagueness because it does not sufficiently define "constructive possession" and thus does not give a reasonable person notice of what conduct is proscribed and because no specific intent to possess unlawfully taken wildlife is required. Applying St. v. Crisp, 249 M 199, 814 P2d 981 (1991), the Supreme Court held that by incorporating the intent element of purposely and knowingly, which are statutorily defined terms, into the definition of the offense of possession of unlawfully taken wildlife, the Legislature has given fair warning of the mental state that is an element of the offense. Further, although the term "constructive possession" is not defined by statute, it has been defined in St. v. Meader, 184 M 32, 601 P2d 386 (1979), to mean that the goods are not in actual, physical possession but that the person charged with possession has dominion and control over the goods. Thus, 87-3-118 (now repealed) is not unconstitutionally vague by virtue of the mental state element of the offense or the absence of a statutory definition of "constructive possession". (See 1995 amendment.) St. v. Brogan, 272 M 156, 900 P2d 284, 52 St. Rep. 636 (1995). Meader was followed, as to constructive possession of a firearm, in St. v. Caekaert, 1999 MT 147, 295 M 42, 983 P2d 332, 56 St. Rep. 583 (1999).

87-6-215. Harassment.

Case Notes

Defendant Without Standing to Challenge Constitutionality of Hunter Harassment Law on Basis of Vagueness: Lilburn alleged that the hunter harassment law is unconstitutionally vague because it leaves several key terms undefined so that there is no statutory guidance to law enforcement officers or the public as to what type of conduct is prohibited. The Supreme Court held that Lilburn's conduct in standing between a hunter and a bison clearly was conduct that disturbed the hunter in the taking of game and that since Lilburn's conduct is clearly prohibited, he did not have standing to raise a facial vagueness challenge. St. v. Lilburn, 265 M 258, 875 P2d 1036, 51 St. Rep. 507 (1994), followed in St. v. Stubblefield, 283 M 292, 940 P2d 444, 54 St. Rep. 605 (1997).

Hunter Harassment Law Not Violation of Free Speech Rights or Overbroad: Lilburn challenged the hunter harassment law on the basis that its prohibition of "dissuading" a hunter from taking a wild animal is content-based and designed to prevent the message contained in the dissuading language. The Supreme Court held that the Legislature did not use the term "dissuade" in isolation and that, reading the statute as a whole, it is clear that the conduct proscribed is the "disturbance" of a hunter engaged in a lawful activity. The Supreme Court also held that the law is not overbroad and that, to the extent that the statute might reach constitutionally protected expression, whatever overbreadth might exist should be cured on a case-by-case analysis of the fact situations. St. v. Lilburn, 265 M 258, 875 P2d 1036, 51 St. Rep. 507 (1994).

87-6-218. Checking station offenses.

Case Notes

Stopping Short of and Subsequent Failure to Stop at Game Check Station — Particularized Suspicion Justifying Traffic Stop: A game warden observed Clark stopping short of a game check station, exiting the vehicle, then reentering the vehicle and driving past the check station. Based on Clark's actions, the warden suspected that Clark might have stopped to hide or change something before reaching the check station, so wardens stopped Clark's vehicle. Clark exhibited signs of intoxication and was subsequently arrested by the Highway Patrol for DUI. Clark contended that wardens had no particularized suspicion to stop the vehicle for a possible fish and game violation and that evidence from the vehicle search should be suppressed. The District Court denied Clark's suppression motion, and on appeal the Supreme Court affirmed. The game warden possessed a reasonable suspicion based on articulable facts and experience from which to draw an inference that Clark might have committed a game violation sufficient to warrant stopping Clark's vehicle. St. v. Clark, 2009 MT 327, 353 M 1, 218 P3d 483 (2009).

Part 3
Licensing, Tags, and Permits

87-6-301. Hunting, fishing, or trapping without license.

Case Notes

Three-Year Statute of Limitations Reasonable for Prosecution of Misdemeanor Fish and Game Violations — Equal Protection and Due Process Not Violated: Defendant was charged with five misdemeanor fish and game and outfitter violations that occurred nearly 2 years earlier. Although misdemeanor violations must generally be charged within 1 year, 45-1-205(5) and (6) allow charges for misdemeanor fish and game crimes to be brought within 3 years of violation. Defendant contended that the extended statute of limitations for charging fish and game crimes violated equal protection and due process guarantees. The District Court reviewed the legislative history of 45-1-205(5) and (6) and concluded that the extended statute of limitations served a reasonable relation to the proper legislative purpose of protecting wildlife and that in order to effectively enforce fish and games laws, additional time to discover and investigate fish and game violations was warranted. The Supreme Court agreed. A separate class of misdemeanors for fish and game violations did not violate equal protection because all persons who commit such crimes are in a similarly situated class and subject to the same treatment. Further, because fish and game and outfitter violations sometimes require investigation over several hunting seasons and involve perpetrators who reside out of state, an extended statute of limitations is a reasonable exercise of the state's legitimate police power in preserving wildlife and does not violate substantive due process. St. v. Egdorf, 2003 MT 264, 317 M 436, 77 P3d 517 (2003).

Taking Elk Without Valid License — Consent Defense Invalid: Undercover government agents did not consent to defendant's shooting of elk without a valid Montana hunting license when they provided defendant with a false hunting license. Defendant did not know that the persons who provided him the license were government agents but did know that he was shooting elk without a valid license. Defendant's proposed consent instruction improperly propounded a theory akin to entrapment without stating the proper elements of entrapment and was correctly disallowed. U.S. v. Heuer, 916 F2d 1557 (9th Cir. 1990).

Attorney General's Opinions

Game Harvesting — Game Ranch: The Fish and Game Commission (now Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission) does not have the authority to regulate the hunting and killing of privately owned game through the imposition of licensing requirements on individual hunters or open and closed seasons. 36 A.G. Op. 112 (1976).

87-6-304. License, permit, or tag offenses.

Case Notes

Game Warden May Reasonably Request Production of Hunting or Fishing License — Particularized Suspicion of Criminal Activity Inapplicable: Initially concerned for the safety of the occupants of a seemingly unoccupied watercraft, a game warden was assured of Boyer's safety, but when Boyer told the warden that he had been fishing, the warden asked to see Boyer's fishing license. Boyer contended that the warden needed a particularized suspicion of wrongdoing to effectuate detention and the request for the license. However, under 87-2-109 (now repealed, but see 87-6-304) it is unlawful to refuse to show one's fishing license upon demand, and the warden had authority under 87-1-502 to request production of the license. In light of these provisions, the Supreme Court declined to imply a particularized suspicion into the statutes, holding that a game warden may request production of a hunting or fishing license when circumstances reasonably indicate that an individual has been engaged in those activities. St. v. Boyer, 2002 MT 33, 308 M 276, 42 P3d 771 (2002).

Application of Federal Lacey Act to Outfitting and Guiding — Statute of Limitations on Charges of Conspiracy: While a prosecution under the federal Lacey Act, 16 U.S.C. 3371, et seq., which prohibits transportation or acquisition in interstate commerce of wildlife in violation of state laws, may not properly be had for the substantive acts of selling guiding services and hunting permits, a prosecution can be maintained for conspiracies to violate the Act while providing outfitting and guiding services, such as arranging for out-of-state hunters to use elk licenses and permits belonging to other hunters, knowing that any elk taken would be transported out of state. The Act applied when evidence was sufficient to establish the involvement of defendant, a hunting guide and outfitter, in a conspiracy to transport elk in interstate commerce in violation of Montana law. Further, the 5-year "catchall" statute of limitations set out in 18 U.S.C. 3282 applied to charges of conspiring to violate the Act. U.S. v. Thomas, 887 F2d 1341 (9th Cir. 1989), distinguishing U.S. v. Stenberg, 803 F2d 422 (9th Cir. 1986).

Illegal Sale of Special Season Elk Tag Not an Offer to Sell Wildlife Prohibited by Federal Law: The alleged sale of a special season elk tag in violation of 87-2-110 (now repealed, but see 87-6-304) did not constitute an illegal sale or offer to sell wildlife under the federal Lacey Act (16 U.S.C. 3372, 3373). U.S. v. Stenberg, 803 F2d 422 (9th Cir. 1986).

Part 4
Hunting Offenses

87-6-401. Unlawful use of equipment while hunting.

Case Notes

Court Not to Imply Mental State Requirement: The Supreme Court will not imply a mental state in a statute prohibiting spotlighting while hunting when that statute (87-3-122, now repealed) does not include a mental state. To do so would arbitrarily make some persons guilty of an offense, while excepting others committing the offense. St. v. Austin, 217 M 265, 704 P2d 55, 42 St. Rep. 1186 (1985).

Invalid Classification: The classification created by 87-3-122's (now repealed) exemption from its coverage of landowners, lessees, or their agents is not rationally related to the state interest involved, that is, protection of its wildlife. Section 87-3-122 (now repealed) allowed exceptions that would permit arbitrary and irrational enforcement by law enforcement officers and was a nullity. It was inadequate to serve the legislative purpose of prohibiting the use of artificial light with the intent to hunt for animals. St. v. Austin, 217 M 265, 704 P2d 55, 42 St. Rep. 1186 (1985).

Validity of Statute Under Which Defendant Not Charged: In ruling 87-3-122 (repealed, 1991) inadequate to serve its legislative purpose and a violation of equal protection, the Supreme Court stated that 87-3-101 (now repealed, but see 87-6-401) correctly prohibits spotlighting in connection with hunting. St. v. Austin, 217 M 265, 704 P2d 55, 42 St. Rep. 1186 (1985).

87-6-403. Unlawful hunting from public highway.

Case Notes

Road Hunter Pleading Ignorance: The defendant argued that the state did not prove that he knew road hunting was illegal or that he knew it was not hunting season. The Supreme Court ruled that ignorance of the law is no excuse. St. v. Lynn, 243 M 430, 795 P2d 429, 47 St. Rep. 1288 (1990).

Shooting From Public Highway or Its Shoulder: The defendant argued that the state had not proved that he had fired at game from a public highway. The Supreme Court stated that the elements of an offense can be proved by circumstantial evidence, including in the case before it the fact that casings of the same brand as those used by the defendant were found beside the road. St. v. Lynn, 243 M 430, 795 P2d 429, 47 St. Rep. 1288 (1990).

87-6-404. Unlawful use of dog while hunting.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Code Commissioner Correction: In (5)(a)(ii) the Code Commissioner substituted "87-6-414" for "87-3-302" and in (5)(a)(v) substituted "87-6-411" for "87-2-509". Sections 87-2-509 and 87-3-302 were repealed by Ch. 258, L. 2011. Sections 87-6-411 and 87-6-414, enacted by Ch.

258, deal with the same subject matter as the repealed sections. The authority for the correction is contained in sec. 49, Ch. 19, L. 2011.

87-6-411. Tagging of game animal offenses.

Case Notes

Failure to Keep Tag Attached to Animal Hide — Continuous Offense: Defendant argued that the statute of limitations on the misdemeanor offense of failing to keep a tag attached to a hide is 1 year under 45-1-205. However, the language of 87-2-509 (now repealed, but see 87-6-411) indicates that the offense continues as long as any considerable portion of the hide remains unconsumed, which in this case was interpreted to mean as long as the bear hide remained in preparation for taxidermy. St. v. Earl, 242 M 279, 790 P2d 464, 47 St. Rep. 691 (1990).

Sufficient Evidence of Failure to Keep Tag on Bear Hide: In the freezer of a taxidermy shop, fish and game inspectors found a frozen bear hide without a tag attached. Defendant was cited for failure to keep a tag attached to the hide but argued that the state failed to prove she was in possession of the hide at any time when it was not tagged. However, a rational jury could have found possession beyond a reasonable doubt, based on defendant's testimony that she knew where the hide was at all times and had not given it away or abandoned control over it. St. v. Earl, 242 M 279, 790 P2d 464, 47 St. Rep. 691 (1990).

Tagging Game Killed by Another: Under statute requiring tagging, the word "take" does not mean that one can tag animal someone else has killed, so if one person illegally killed elk, another person cannot gain ownership by tagging it and ownership of elk remains in state. State ex rel. Visser v. St. Fish & Game Comm'n, 150 M 525, 437 P2d 373 (1968).

Seizure and Confiscation of Untagged Carcass: In a case which arose while section 26-205, R.C.M. 1947 (subsequently repealed), was in effect, it was held that when plaintiff lawfully killed a deer but failed to fill out the tag attached to his hunting license and attach it to the carcass, the deer was not unlawfully possessed and the Game Warden was without authority to seize and confiscate the carcass when he arrested plaintiff for failure to attach the tag. Shipman v. Todd, 131 M 365, 310 P2d 300 (1957).

87-6-415. Failure to obtain landowner's permission for hunting.

Attorney General's Opinions

Hunting of Specific Animal — Violation if Other Animal Hunted: A landowner may refuse permission entirely or give limited permission to hunt at certain times, in certain areas, or for certain kinds of animals. A hunter given explicit permission to hunt only for a specific kind of big game animal who exceeds the permission by hunting another kind of animal may be charged under this section with failure to obtain the landowner's permission. 41 A.G. Op. 65 (1986).

Hunting Trespass Not Repealed: Montana's criminal trespass statutes, 45-6-201 and 45-6-203, do not repeal or affect 87-3-304 (now repealed, but see 87-6-415), which makes it unlawful to hunt big game animals on private property without permission, because the statutes do not relate to the same conduct. 37 A.G. Op. 144 (1978).

Part 9
Additional Sentencing Provisions

87-6-906. Restitution for illegal killing, possession, or waste of certain wildlife.

Case Notes

Felony Convictions for Unlawful Possession of Game Animals Affirmed — Jury Instructions Proper: The jury found that Norman illegally possessed two buck mule deer, one antelope, and one bull elk in 2007, one cow elk and one buck mule deer in November 2004, and one antelope and one bull elk in 2003, in violation of either 87-1-111 or 87-1-115 (now repealed, but see 87-6-906 and 87-6-907). Under each count, the jury found that the value of the animals either individually or in the aggregate exceeded $1,000. Norman argued on appeal that the District Court improperly instructed the jury by not specifically instructing on the element of value. Norman also argued that, pursuant to the first count, the animals were not part of the "same transaction" under 87-3-111 (now repealed) because they were killed on different dates. Norman also objected to a special instruction that indicated that the jury needed to find Norman guilty of only one offense under each count. The Supreme Court affirmed. The court was not "firmly convinced" that its failure to review the instructions would result in a manifest miscarriage of justice, leave unsettled the question of the fundamental fairness of the trial or proceedings, or compromise the integrity of the judicial process. In addition, the prosecutor's grouping of the animals as part of the "same transaction," which allowed the value of the animals to be aggregated, was not improper, and Norman did not object at trial to the special instruction provided to the jury. St. v. Norman, 2010 MT 253, 358 Mont. 252, 244 P.3d 737.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 348 inserted (2) requiring department by January 1, 2003, to have developed and published examples of subdivision regulations that provide incentives for and remove disincentives for cluster development, requiring department to seek advice of interested parties, and requiring department to provide technical assistance to local governments developing cluster development regulations; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 2001.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 348, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, agricultural land is increasingly being taken out of production for development and becoming unavailable for production of food; and

WHEREAS, farmers and ranchers are often forced to sell their land to generate sufficient income to retire; and

WHEREAS, cluster development can facilitate the preservation of Montana's unique landscape; and

WHEREAS, cluster development can reduce local government costs for infrastructure and provision of services by concentrating building sites on smaller lots so that services and utilities can be concentrated in a smaller area; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Department of Commerce is charged with providing technical assistance and information related to community development; and

WHEREAS, local governments need mechanisms to encourage development approaches that minimize costs to local citizens and that promote effective and efficient provision of public services."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 148 in second sentence of (4), after "analyses", inserted "and in providing technical assistance to communities" and before "problems" inserted "planning and financing of public facilities and to the"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (5) referring to federal community development block grant program.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 230, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it authorizes the department of commerce to adopt administrative rules necessary to administer the federal community development block grant (CDBG) program.

The purpose of this bill is to formalize within the context of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act the department's promulgation of policies, guidelines, ranking criteria, and requirements governing the CDBG program which the department has administered since it was authorized to do so by the November 1981 special session of the legislature. It is not the intention of this bill, however, to add unnecessarily to the cost or complexity of administering the program.

Currently the department's requirements for the program are contained in the publications described below:

1. The Montana Community Development Block Grant Program Application Guidelines describe the policies governing the program, the threshold requirements for CDBG applicants, and the procedure and criteria for evaluating applications.

2. The Montana Community Development Block Grant Program — Grant Administration Manual describes the administrative procedures for local project start up, environmental review of project activities, procurement of goods and services, financial management, protection of civil rights, assuring fair wages for labor, and acquisition of property and relocation of persons displaced thereby. It also discusses special administrative considerations peculiar to public facilities, housing rehabilitation, and economic development projects.

3. The Montana Community Development Block Grant Program — Requirements Notebook is a compilation of the federal and state statutes, regulations, and other standards which govern the CDBG program but which have been promulgated by agencies other than the department.

Because the conversion of these three lengthy publications to a rule format and their inclusion in the Montana Administrative Register or the Administrative Rules of Montana would be unduly cumbersome, expensive, and inexpedient, the legislature contemplates that the rules promulgated pursuant to this bill would be adopted by reference to the publications themselves as is authorized by section 2-4-307, MCA."

1981 Amendment: Substituted "department of commerce" for "department of community affairs" in the section introductory clause.

Department of Commerce Authorized to Administer Housing Assistance Payments Program — No Restriction in Area Served by Municipal Housing Authority: The Montana Department of Commerce fits the description of a public housing authority under regulations of the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and is authorized to contract with HUD to administer HUD's Housing Assistance Payments Program, including federal Section 8 certificate and voucher programs. The restriction in 7-15-4414 applies only to municipal housing authorities operating in the same geographic location and therefore does not restrict the administration of federal Section 8 housing programs in the same area by an authorized state agency. 44 A.G. Chapter 232 in (11) in definition of renewable resource research and development in (b)(i) substituted "69-3-2003(10)" for "69-3-2003(6)". Amendment effective April 16, 2009.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 118, L. 2009, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to competitive electricity suppliers during the compliance year beginning January 1, 2009, for the renewable energy standard pursuant to 69-3-2004."

Section 6, Ch. 232, L. 2009, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to the compliance year beginning January 1, 2009."

2007 Amendment: Chapter 438 in (3)(b) near middle after "commercialization projects" inserted "clean coal research and development projects, or renewable resource research and development projects"; inserted (5) directing a percentage of account funds toward projects that enhance clean coal or renewable resource research and development and providing an exception; inserted (11) defining clean coal research and development and renewable resource research and development; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

Code Commissioner Correction: In (11)(b)(i) the code commissioner substituted "69-3-2003(6)" for "69-8-1003(6)" to reflect the directions to the code commissioner in Ch. 220, L. 2007.

Saving Clause: Section 4, Ch. 438, L. 2007, was a saving clause.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 539 inserted (3)(d) concerning administrative costs; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 34 throughout section substituted "account" for "expendable trust fund"; and in two places in (7) substituted "account" for "fund". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Chapter 431 in (3)(a) inserted "that are to be used for research and commercialization projects to be conducted at research and commercialization centers located in Montana"; inserted (3)(b) expanding use of account to grants used for production agriculture research and commercialization projects conducted at research and commercialization centers in Montana; in (4) substituted "trust funds approved for research and commercialization projects" for "investments made" and deleted former second sentence that read: "An amount allocated for matching funds must be matched by at least a 1-to-1 ratio"; inserted (5) requiring grant applicant to provide matching funds from nonstate sources equal to 25% of total project costs and providing that matching funds are qualifier, not criterion, for grant approval; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 30, 2001.

Code Commissioner Instruction: Pursuant to sec. 38, Ch. 34, L. 2001, in (4) the code commissioner changed "trust funds" to "account funds".

Saving Clause: Section 3, Ch. 431, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

Appropriation of Oil Overcharge Money for State Programs: Chapter 49, L. 1999, appropriated certain oil overcharge money to various state programs as an implementation of the policy stated in this section. The text of Ch. 49 provided: "Section 1. Policy. [Sections 1 through 13] [not codified] implement the policy stated in 90-4-210.

Section 2. Definitions. As used in [sections 1 through 13] [not codified], the following definitions apply:

(1) "Carryover" means unspent oil overcharge funds previously appropriated and incorporated into an approved program plan for one of the federal energy conservation programs, but not included in unspent project funds as defined in subsection (8).

(2) "Cities service payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the consent agreement between cities service oil and gas and the U.S. department of energy, as affirmed by the federal energy regulatory commission, and any interest accrued on the payments.

(3) "Diamond shamrock payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana as the result of the final settlement agreement in the U.S. district court for the southern district of Ohio eastern division in civil action No. C2-84-1432 and any interest accrued on the payments.

(4) "Exxon payments" means the oil overcharge payments made by the exxon corporation to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the order of the U.S. district court for the District of Columbia in civil action No. 78-1035 and any interest accrued on the payments.

(5) "Getty oil payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the order of disbursement issued in civil action No. 77-347 (MMS) in the U.S. district court for the district of Delaware and any interest accrued on the payments.

(6) "Stripper well payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana as the result of the final settlement agreement in the U.S. district court for the district of Kansas, Cause No. M.D.L. 378, and any interest accrued on the payments. The term also includes but is not limited to cities service payments, as defined in subsection (2), getty oil payments, as defined in subsection (5), texaco payments, as defined in subsection (7), and any unspent project funds, as defined in subsection (8).

(7) "Texaco payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the texaco final consent order, 53 Fed. Reg. 32929, August 29, 1988, and any interest accrued on the payments.

(8) "Unspent project funds" means stripper well payments that were not expended or otherwise legally obligated during the 1999 biennium but were appropriated for the 1999 biennium in Chapter 526, Laws of 1997, in:

(a) section 4;
(b) section 5;
(c) section 6;
(d) section 7;
(e) section 8;
(f) section 9;
(g) section 10;
(h) section 11;
(i) section 12; and
(j) section 13.

Section 3. Deposit of oil overcharge revenue. All funds from stripper well and exxon payments must be deposited by the state treasurer in the federal special revenue fund. All interest earned on any of these funds or payments also must be deposited in the federal special revenue fund.

Section 4. Matching funds for low-income energy assistance — appropriation. (1) There is appropriated $300,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of public health and human services for the purpose described in subsection (2) and under the restrictions contained in subsection (3).

(2) The department of public health and human services shall match private contributions to energy share, inc. to be used to address home heating emergencies encountered by households with incomes between 0% and 150% of federal poverty guidelines who are not eligible for federal low-income energy assistance or who have not received federal low-income energy assistance in the current program year. All of the funds appropriated to the department for this purpose under subsection (1) must be used for clients' emergency energy needs.

(3) In the event a combination of the oil overcharge funds appropriated in subsection (1) and universal system benefits funds designated to energy share, inc. exceeds $400,000 in fiscal year 2000 or in fiscal year 2001, the excess amount must be subtracted from the appropriation of oil overcharge funds provided in subsection (1) for that fiscal year and a like amount shall be added to the oil overcharge funds appropriated in [section 5] [not codified] for low-income home weatherization, except that the biennial appropriation for low-income home weatherization provided in [section 5] [not codified] shall not exceed under any condition.

Section 5. Low-income home weatherization — appropriation. There is appropriated $500,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of public health and human services for use in the home weatherization program created in 90-4-201.

Section 6. Affordable, efficient housing plan book — appropriation. There is appropriated $40,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of environmental quality to assist in the preparation, production, and distribution of a plan book containing affordable, energy-efficient house designs developed in cooperation with the Montana building industries association, the department of commerce, local building code officials, and other entities.

Section 7. Food bank network transportation — appropriation. There is appropriated $15,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of public health and human services for use in assisting the Montana food bank network with coordinated energy-efficient transportation of food to drop sites and local food banks statewide.

Section 8. Transportation to nutrition sites — appropriation. There is appropriated $11,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of public health and human services for grants to the area agencies on aging to provide transportation for seniors to nutrition sites. The area agencies on aging shall apply to the department of public health and human services for these funds.

Section 9. Low-income weatherization — appropriation. In addition to the appropriations in [sections 4 and 5] [not codified], there is appropriated $200,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of public health and human services for use in the home weatherization program created in 90-4-201.

Section 10. Montana public and private organizations becoming consortium partners — appropriation. There is appropriated $50,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of environmental quality to provide a grant to the national center for appropriate technology to initiate the formation of a Montana advanced transportation technologies consortium focusing on vehicles traditionally powered by two-stroke engines. The national center for appropriate technology will integrate its transportation technology development services with other western regional consortium and national programs, as recommended by the western governors' association and the western interstate energy board, to provide specialized business assistance, to attract development financing and production capital, and to promote regional industrial growth for the clean transportation technologies fostered by the consortium.

Section 11. Carryover — reappropriations. There is reappropriated $28,000 from the stripper well payments, $51,000 from the exxon payments, and $66,000 from the diamond shamrock payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of environmental quality to fund the state energy program administered by the department pursuant to 10 CFR 420. There is reappropriated up to $40,000 of stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund at the department of administration to help establish a refueling infrastructure that will support the use of ethanol-fueled vehicles.

Section 12. Conditions applied to appropriations. (1) The appropriations made in [sections 4 through 10] [not codified] are biennial appropriations. One-half of the total amount appropriated to each program in [sections 4 through 10] [not codified] is appropriated in fiscal year 2000, and the remainder is appropriated in fiscal year 2001. As biennial appropriations, the unexpended funds appropriated in fiscal year 2000 may be carried forward within each program to fiscal year 2001, subject to the specific conditions governing each appropriation.

(2) The appropriations in [section 11] [not codified] are limited to available funds. Expenditures of carryover funds for the state energy program may not exceed the actual amount of unspent funds available at the department of environmental quality. Total expenditures of stripper well funds to help establish a refueling infrastructure that will support the use of ethanol-fueled vehicles may not exceed $70,000 for

Section 13. Appropriations prioritized. (1) The appropriations in [sections 4 through 10] [not codified] are approved in order of priority as they appear in [sections 4 through 10] [not codified], with the appropriation in [section 4] [not codified] having the highest priority and the appropriation in [section 10] [not codified] having the lowest priority. If the U.S. department of energy does not approve one or more of the programs that are funded by [sections 4 through 10] [not codified], any stripper well payments that are not used to fund the higher priority program must be provided to the lower-ranked program up to the amounts appropriated in [sections 4 through 10] [not codified].

(2) If stripper well payments are insufficient to fully fund the appropriations made in [sections 4 through 10] [not codified], allocations to the lowest ranking program must be reduced until the deficiency is eliminated. If the deficiency is in excess of the appropriation to the lowest ranking program, the next lowest ranking program must have its appropriation reduced until the deficiency is eliminated and so forth as the programs are prioritized. These priorities must be applied to one-half of the total amount appropriated in [sections 4 through 10] [not codified] for fiscal year 2000 and to the remaining appropriation for fiscal year 2001.

(3) In order to provide continuity for the programs when establishing the appropriations for each fiscal year of the 2001 biennium, anticipated stripper well payments that will be received under terms of the stripper well agreement during the biennium may be considered as available to fund the activities.

(4) The expenditure of money appropriated by [sections 4 through 10] [not codified] may not exceed the amount of the stripper well payments available in the biennium."

Coordination: Section 14, Ch. 49, L. 1999, provided: "If House Bill No. 12 is passed and approved, the stripper well payments appropriated in House Bill No. 12 have a higher priority than any appropriation of stripper well payments in [sections 4 through 11] [not codified]." House Bill No. 12 was approved as Ch. 50, L. 1999.

Effective Date. Section 15, Ch. 49, L. 1999, provided: "[This act] is effective July 1, 1999."

Appropriation of Oil Overcharge Money for State Programs: Chapter 526, L. 1997, appropriated certain oil overcharge money to various state programs as an implementation of the policy stated in this section. The text of Ch. 526 provided:

"Section 1. Policy. [Sections 1 through 15] [not codified] implement the policy stated in 90-4-210.

Section 2. Definitions. As used in [sections 1 through 15] [not codified], the following definitions apply:

(1) "Amoco payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the decision and order of the U.S. department of energy in Case No. HQF-0588 and any interest accrued on the payments.

(2) "Carryover" means unspent oil overcharge funds previously appropriated and incorporated into an approved program plan for one of the federal energy conservation programs, but not included in unspent project funds as defined in subsection (9).

(3) "Cities service payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the consent agreement between cities service oil and gas and the U.S. department of energy, as affirmed by the federal energy regulatory commission, and any interest accrued on the payments.

(4) "Diamond shamrock payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana as the result of the final settlement agreement in the U.S. district court for the southern district of Ohio eastern division in Civil Action No. C2-84-1432 and any interest accrued on the payments.

(5) "Exxon payments" means the oil overcharge payments made by the exxon corporation to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the order of the U.S. district court for the District of Columbia in Civil Action No. 78-1035 and any interest accrued on the payments.

(6) "Getty oil payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the order of disbursement issued in Civil Action No. 77-347 (MMS) in the U.S. district court for the district of Delaware and any interest accrued on the payments.

(7) "Stripper well payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana as the result of the final settlement agreement in the U.S. district court for the district of Kansas, Cause No. M.D.L. 378, and any interest accrued on the payments. The term also includes but is not limited to cities service payments, as defined in subsection (3), getty oil payments, as defined in subsection (6), texaco payments, as defined in subsection (8), and any unspent project funds, as defined in subsection (9).

(8) "Texaco payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the texaco final consent order, 53 Fed. Reg. 32929, August 29, 1988, and any interest accrued on the payments.

(9) "Unspent project funds" means stripper well payments that were not expended or otherwise legally obligated during the 1997 biennium but were appropriated for the 1997 biennium in Chapter 63, Laws of 1995, in:

(a) section 4;
(b) section 5;
(c) section 6;
(d) section 7; and
(e) section 8.

Section 3. Deposit of oil overcharge revenue. All funds from stripper well, amoco, and exxon payments must be deposited by the state treasurer in the federal special revenue fund. All interest earned on any of these funds or payments also must be deposited in the federal special revenue fund.

Section 4. Matching funds for low-income energy assistance — appropriation. (1) There is appropriated $180,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of public health and human services for the purpose described in subsection (2).

(2) The department of public health and human services shall use the funds appropriated in subsection (1) to match private contributions to energy share, inc., to be used to provide emergency energy assistance to residents with incomes between 125% and 150% of poverty guidelines who are not eligible for federal low-income energy assistance. All of the funds appropriated to the department for this purpose under subsection (1) must be used for clients' fuel bills or other emergency energy needs.

Section 5. Low-income home weatherization — appropriation. There is appropriated $230,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of public health and human services for use in the home weatherization program created in 90-4-201.

Section 6. Recommissioning state-owned buildings — appropriation. (1) There is appropriated $80,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of environmental quality to identify and implement low-cost maintenance activities and modifications to equipment and procedures that will enable state building systems to operate at their designed efficiencies, reducing energy consumption in buildings by 5% to 10%.

(2) Although the aggregate energy cost savings realized from this program could be significant, the amount of savings realized by individual agencies is not likely to be substantial. Therefore, it is the intent of the legislature that agencies be allowed to keep and use any energy cost savings realized as an incentive to participate in this program. The department of environmental quality shall report the amount of savings to the 1999 legislature, at which time this policy may be reevaluated.

Section 7. Infrastructure to support purchase and use of ethanol-fueled vehicles — appropriation. There is appropriated $70,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of environmental quality to help establish a refueling infrastructure that will support the use of ethanol-fueled (E-85) vehicles. A one-time investment of oil overcharge dollars will be used to leverage private sector funds to provide pilot alternative refueling stations to supply alternative-fueled vehicles.

Section 8. Reduce petroleum use in Yellowstone region — appropriation. There is appropriated $25,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of environmental quality to promote expanded use of alternative fuels within Yellowstone park and neighboring Montana communities.

Section 9. Small business and tribal environmental compliance loan fund program — appropriation. There is appropriated $180,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of environmental quality to provide a grant to the department of commerce microbusiness finance program to offer loans to small businesses and tribal communities for pollution control equipment, petroleum-based chemical product substitution, equipment replacement, pollution prevention, energy conservation, and waste minimization.

Section 10. Recycling for mercury-containing lamps — appropriation. There is appropriated $36,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of environmental quality to reduce disposal costs and enhance energy savings from lighting retrofits by providing equipment and training to establish a self-sustaining lamp recycling program.

Section 11. Low-income home weatherization — appropriation. There is appropriated another $295,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of public health and human services for use in the home weatherization program created in 90-4-201.

Section 12. Food bank network transportation — appropriation. There is appropriated $5,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of public health and human services for use in assisting the Montana food bank network with coordinated energy-efficient transportation of food to drop sites and local food banks statewide.

Section 13. Carryover — reappropriations. There is reappropriated $25,000 from the stripper well payments, $50,000 from the exxon payments, $57,000 from the diamond shamrock payments, and $1,500 from the amoco payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of environmental quality to fund the state energy program administered by the department pursuant to 10 CFR 420.

Section 14. Conditions applied to appropriations. (1) The appropriations made in [sections 4 through 13] [not codified] are biennial appropriations.

(2) One-half of the total amount appropriated to each program in [sections 4 through 13] [not codified] is appropriated in fiscal year 1998 and the remainder is appropriated in fiscal year 1999. As biennial appropriations, the unexpended funds appropriated in fiscal year 1998 may be carried forward within each program to fiscal year 1999.

(3) The appropriations in [section 13] [not codified] are limited to available funds. Expenditures of carryover funds may not exceed the actual amount of unspent funds available.

Section 15. Appropriations prioritized. (1) The appropriations in [sections 4 through 12] [not codified] are approved in order of priority as they appear in [sections 4 through 12] [not codified] , with the appropriation in [section 4] [not codified] having the highest priority and the appropriation in [section 12] [not codified] having the lowest priority. If the U.S. department of energy does not approve one or more of the programs that are funded by [sections 4 through 12] [not codified], any stripper well payments that are not used to fund the higher-priority program must be provided to the lower-ranked program up to the amounts appropriated in [sections 4 through 12] [not codified].

(2) If stripper well payments are insufficient to fully fund the appropriations made in [sections 4 through 12] [not codified], allocations to the lowest-ranking program must be reduced until the deficiency is eliminated. If the deficiency is in excess of the appropriation to the lowest-ranking program, the next lowest-ranking program must have its appropriation reduced until the deficiency is eliminated and so forth as the programs are prioritized. These priorities must be applied to one-half of the total amount appropriated in [sections 4 through 12] [not codified] for fiscal year 1998 and to the remaining appropriation for fiscal year 1999.

(3) In order to provide continuity for the programs when establishing the appropriations for each fiscal year of the 1999 biennium, anticipated stripper well payments that will be received under terms of the stripper well agreement during the biennium may be considered as available to fund the activities.

(4) The expenditure of money appropriated by [sections 4 through 12] [not codified] may not exceed the amount of the stripper well payments available in the biennium."

Coordination: Section 16, Ch. 526, provided: "If House Bill No. 12 is passed and approved, the stripper well payments appropriated in House Bill No. 12 have a higher priority than any appropriation of stripper well payments in [sections 4 through 12] [not codified]." House Bill No. 12 was approved as Ch. 81, L. 1997.

Effective date: Section 17, Ch. 526, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] is effective July 1, 1997."

Policy: Section 1, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "[Sections 1 through 10] [not codified] implement the policy stated in 90-4-210."

Definitions: Section 2, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "As used in [sections 1 through 10] [not codified], the following definitions apply:

(1) "Amoco payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the decision and order of the U.S. department of energy in Case No. HQF-0588 and includes any interest accrued on the payments.

(2) "Carryover" means unspent oil overcharge funds previously appropriated and incorporated into an approved program plan for one of the federal energy conservation programs, but not included in unspent project funds as defined in subsection (9).

(3) "Cities service payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the consent agreement between cities service oil and gas and the U.S. department of energy, as affirmed by the federal energy regulatory commission, and includes any interest accrued on the payments.

(4) "Diamond shamrock payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana as the result of the final settlement agreement in the U.S. district court for the southern district of Ohio eastern division in Civil Action No. C2-84-1432 and includes any interest accrued on the payments.

(6) "Getty oil payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the order of disbursement issued in Civil Action No. 77-347 (MMS) in the U.S. district court for the district of Delaware and includes any interest accrued on the payments.

(7) "Stripper well payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana as the result of the final settlement agreement in the U.S. district court for the district of Kansas, Cause No. M.D.L. 378, and includes any interest accrued on the payments. The term also includes but is not limited to cities service payments, as defined in subsection (3), Getty oil payments, as defined in subsection (6), texaco payments, as defined in subsection (8), and any unspent project funds, as defined in subsection (9).

(8) "Texaco payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the texaco final consent order, 53 Fed. Reg. 32929, August 29, 1988, and includes any interest accrued on the payments.

(9) "Unspent project funds" means stripper well payments that were not expended or otherwise legally obligated during the 1995 biennium but that were appropriated for the 1995 biennium in Chapter 496, Laws of 1993, in:

(a) section 5(1);

(b) section 6;

(c) section 7;

(d) section 8; and

(e) section 9.

(10) "Warner payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the U.S. treasury for distribution to the state of Montana pursuant to the Warner amendment (section 155 of P.L. 97-377) and includes any interest accrued on the payments."

Deposit of Oil Overcharge Revenue: Section 3, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "All funds from stripper well, amoco, Warner, and exxon payments must be deposited by the state treasurer in the federal special revenue fund. All interest earned on any of these funds or payments must also be deposited in the federal special revenue fund."

Matching Funds for Low-Income Energy Assistance — Appropriation: Section 4, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "(1) There is appropriated $50,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of social and rehabilitation services [functions now transferred to department of public health and human services] for the purpose described in subsection (2).

(2) The department of social and rehabilitation services [functions now transferred to department of public health and human services] shall match private contributions to energy share, inc., to be used to assist persons not eligible for federal low-income energy assistance whose income is less than 150% of the federal poverty threshold published by the U.S. bureau of the census in the most recent edition of its publication, Poverty in the United States. All of the funds appropriated to the department for this purpose under subsection (1) must be used for clients' fuel bills or other energy needs."

Petroleum Substitutes From Agricultural Products — Appropriation: Section 5, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "There is appropriated $10,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of natural resources and conservation to foster expanded use of alternative transportation fuels derived from agricultural products that may reduce petroleum consumption, produce environmental benefits to Montana, and result in potential new cash crops for Montana farmers. Money expended under this appropriation must be matched at least dollar for dollar with private or federal revenue, or both."

Institutional Conservation Program — Appropriation: Section 6, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "There is appropriated $200,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of natural resources and conservation to fund the institutional conservation program for schools and hospitals administered by the department pursuant to 10 CFR 455."

Northern Montana College Tractor Resource Center (Now Montana State University-Northern) — Appropriation: Section 7, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "There is appropriated $125,000 from the stripper well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to northern Montana college [now Montana state university-northern] to support the ongoing activities of the northern Montana college [now Montana state university-northern] tractor resource center."

Carryover — Reappropriations: Section 8, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "(1) There is reappropriated $20,000 from the stripper well payments, $5,000 from the exxon payments, $60,000 from the diamond shamrock payments, and $1,500 from the amoco payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of natural resources and conservation to fund the state energy conservation program administered by the department pursuant to 10 CFR 420.

(2) There is reappropriated $100,000 from the stripper well payments, $5,000 from the exxon payments, and $800 from the Warner payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of natural resources and conservation to fund the institutional conservation program for schools and hospitals administered by the department pursuant to 10 CFR 455."

Conditions Applied to Appropriations: Section 9, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "The appropriations made in [sections 4 through 8] [not codified] are biennial appropriations.

(1) One-half of the total amount appropriated to each program in [sections 4 through 7] [not codified] is appropriated in fiscal year 1996, and the remainder is appropriated in fiscal year 1997. As biennial appropriations, the unexpended funds appropriated in fiscal year 1996 may be carried forward within each program to fiscal year 1997.

(2) The appropriations in [section 8] [not codified] are limited to available funds. Expenditures of carryover funds may not exceed the actual amount of unspent funds available."

Appropriations Prioritized: Section 10, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "(1) The appropriations in [sections 4 through 7] [not codified] are approved in order of priority as they appear in [sections 4 through 7] [not codified]. If the U.S. department of energy does not approve one or more of the programs that are funded by [sections 4 through 7] [not codified], any stripper well payments that are not used to fund the higher priority program must be provided to the lower ranked program up to the amounts appropriated in [sections 4 through 7] [not codified].

(2) If stripper well payments are insufficient to fully fund the appropriations made in [sections 4 through 7] [not codified], allocations to the lowest ranking program must be reduced until the deficiency is eliminated. If the deficiency is in excess of the appropriation to the lowest ranking program, the next lowest ranking program must have its appropriation reduced until the deficiency is eliminated. These priorities must be applied to one-half of the total amount appropriated in [sections 4 through 7] [not codified] for fiscal year 1996 and to the remaining appropriation for fiscal year 1997.

(3) In order to provide continuity for the programs when establishing the appropriations for each fiscal year of the 1997 biennium, anticipated stripper well payments that will be received under terms of the stripper well agreements during the biennium may be considered as available to fund the activities.

(4) The expenditure of money appropriated by [sections 4 through 7] [not codified] may not exceed the amount of the stripper well payments available in the biennium."

Coordination Instruction: Section 11, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "If House Bill No. 12 is passed and approved, the stripper well payments appropriated in House Bill No. 12 have a higher priority than any appropriation of stripper well payments in [sections 4 through 7] [not codified]." House Bill No. 12 was passed and approved as Ch. 61, L. 1995.

Effective Date: Section 12, Ch. 63, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] is effective July 1, 1995."

Policy Restated: Section 1, Ch. 597, L. 1989, was a policy statement on distribution of oil overcharge money. Although not enacted as an amendment to 90-4-210, the text was essentially identical and was not codified. See 1989 Session Law for text of the statement.

Deposit of Oil Overcharge Revenue: Section 3, Ch. 597, L. 1989, provided that all funds from stripper well payments must be deposited in the federal special revenue fund and also required the deposit of all interest in the federal special revenue fund.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 4 in (2) deleted former second and third sentences that read: "However, the department may use the principal of the account only if the federal grants for either of those programs are reduced below the federal fiscal year 1987 level. The department may not use the principal to increase expenditures to either program above the level of the federal grant for that program for federal fiscal year 1987"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 5, 2007.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 389 in (2) in first sentence after "account" substituted "may be used by" for "are statutorily appropriated, as provided in 17-7-502, to"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 546 in (2) substituted "department of public health and human services" for "department of social and rehabilitation services"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 182 in definition of energy emergency in (a) near beginning after "energy" deleted "or a price of energy" and inserted (b) outlining a price of energy that will constitute an energy emergency; in definition of energy supply alert near middle after "supplies" deleted "or the price of energy"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 593 in definition of energy emergency near beginning after "shortage of energy" inserted "or a price of energy" and at end inserted "or to increase the available supply of energy"; and in definition of energy supply alert near middle after "supplies" inserted "or the price of energy" and at end inserted "or action is taken to increase the supply of energy". Amendment effective May 5, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 545 deleted definition of committee that read: ""Committee" means the energy policy committee established in 90-4-303"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1995 Transition: Section 81, Ch. 545, L. 1995 provided: "(1) The members of the legislative council, as provided in 5-11-101, the members of the legislative finance committee, as provided in 5-12-202, the members of the legislative audit committee, as provided in 5-13-202, and the members of the environmental quality council, as provided in 5-16-101, must be appointed as soon as possible following [the effective date of this section] [effective April 27, 1995].

(2) To implement the changes provided in [this act], the office of the legislative council, the office of budget and program planning, and the department of administration shall establish all necessary authorizations during the accounting preparation process known as the "turnaround" process, beginning in April or May 1995, to administer the several appropriations made by any means to programs of the legislative branch agencies consolidated under [sections 3 and 4] [5-2-503 and 5-2-504] for fiscal year 1996 or 1997 or the biennium ending June 30, 1997, as appropriations to a single legislative agency while maintaining the specific identification, legislative intent, and purpose for which the appropriations were made. During this transition, the executive director may authenticate documents as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act]. Appropriate changes on the statewide budgeting and accounting system and the payroll, personnel, and position control system must also be made and authorized as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act].

(3) Personnel and property of the environmental quality council are transferred to the legislative services division effective July 1, 1995."

1981 Amendment: Inserted definitions of petroleum products, refinery, refiner, prime petroleum supplier, petroleum pipeline company, and bulk pipeline terminal.

Part Compiler's Comments

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 473, L. 1989, provided: "This bill requires a statement by the department of natural resources and conservation that the estimated annual energy savings to be derived from the installation of the energy saving improvements are expected to equal or exceed the annual debt service to be paid on the bonds issued to fund the improvements. In developing this savings statement, the department shall determine which energy improvements yield sufficient return on investment to be included in the financing package. In making this determination, the department should consider the projected savings of the improvement, the impact on project cash flow, the expected useful life of the improvement and the facility, the state's long-range plans for the facility, the potential impacts on the utility system, and any additional monetary and nonmonetary benefits to be derived from the improvement.

The department shall consult with the utility or utilities that serve the facilities on which the improvements are to be made. If a fuel switching measure is proposed, the department must demonstrate that the benefits to the state exceed the costs to the utility and its customers."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 240 deleted former (3) that read: "(3) During the energy analyses, the department shall consult with the utilities that serve the selected facilities to discuss potential impacts on the utilities and their customers of making energy conservation improvements to these facilities"; in (3) in first sentence after "department shall" deleted "submit to the governor its findings and a list of projects recommended for funding under the energy conservation program" and inserted second and third sentences requiring department to notify department of administration of buildings that have a potential for energy savings and requiring department of administration to implement design and construction projects for those buildings; deleted former (5)(d) and (5)(e) that read: "(d) a description of measures taken by the department to address the issues that were raised in the consultation with the affected utilities; and

(e) if a fuel switching measure is proposed, an analysis of the costs to the affected utility and its customers and of the benefits to the state"; inserted (4)(d) requiring report to include additional projects under consideration; deleted former (6) that read: "(6) If a fuel switching measure is proposed, the department shall demonstrate through the analysis required by subsection (5)(e) that the benefits to the state exceed the costs to the utility and its customers"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 50 in (1) deleted former first sentence that read: "Before June 30 of each odd-numbered year, the department shall inform, in writing, each state agency of the energy conservation program and request agencies interested in participating in the program to contact the department"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 61 substituted present (1) concerning participation in energy conservation program for former language that read: "Before June 30 of each odd-numbered year, state agencies shall submit to the department, on forms provided by the department, a list of any facilities operated by that agency that have a potential for energy savings, based on age, energy use, function, and condition of the building. Agencies may request assistance from the department to identify these facilities"; in (2), after "subsection (1)", inserted "and on the feasibility of leveraging other funds, such as federal and utility energy conservation program money"; in (4), in first sentence before "list", deleted "prioritized" and in second sentence, after "shall", substituted "identify estimated costs and savings" for "rank projects in terms of cost-effectiveness" and at end inserted "based on these analyses"; in (5)(a), after "listing of", substituted "contacts between the department and other" for "all requests submitted by"; in (5)(b), at end, inserted "and a selection of projects for in-depth analysis"; and in (5)(e), at end, deleted "of the fuel switching measure". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 473, L. 1989, provided: "This bill requires a statement by the department of natural resources and conservation that the estimated annual energy savings to be derived from the installation of the energy saving improvements are expected to equal or exceed the annual debt service to be paid on the bonds issued to fund the improvements. In developing this savings statement, the department shall determine which energy improvements yield sufficient return on investment to be included in the financing package. In making this determination, the department should consider the projected savings of the improvement, the impact on project cash flow, the expected useful life of the improvement and the facility, the state's long-range plans for the facility, the potential impacts on the utility system, and any additional monetary and nonmonetary benefits to be derived from the improvement.

The department shall consult with the utility or utilities that serve the facilities on which the improvements are to be made. If a fuel switching measure is proposed, the department must demonstrate that the benefits to the state exceed the costs to the utility and its customers."

1999 Amendment Void: The amendment to this section made by sec. 13, Ch. 3, L. 1999, was rendered void by sec. 16, Ch. 3, L. 1999, a contingent voidness section, which provided that if Constitutional Initiative No. 75, enacting Article VIII, section 17, of the Montana constitution, was declared invalid, then [this act] was void. The initiative was declared invalid February 24, 1999.

Temporary Authorization of Bonds — 1990-91 Biennium: Section 10, Ch. 473, L. 1989, provided: "(1) At the request of the department, the board may issue and sell bonds of the state in an aggregate principal amount not exceeding $3 million to provide money for the 1990-91 biennium energy conservation program. The bonds are general obligations for which the full faith and credit and taxing powers of the state are pledged for payment of the principal and interest. The bonds must be issued as provided by Title 17, chapter 5, part 8.

(2) The proceeds of the bonds, other than any premiums and accrued interest received, must be deposited in the energy conservation program account. Any premium and accrued interest must be deposited to the debt service fund established in 17-2-102. Proceeds of bonds deposited in the energy conservation program account may be used to pay the costs of issuing the bonds and to pay costs of the energy conservation program, including the funding of the 1990-91 biennium energy conservation projects approved by the legislature. For purposes of 17-5-803 and 17-5-804, the energy conservation program account constitutes a capital projects account. Such proceeds must be available to the department and may be used for the purposes authorized in [sections 1 through 8] [Title 90, ch. 4, part 6] without further budgetary authorization."

Stripper-Well Payments — Reappropriation — Definition — Priority: Section 3, Ch. 50, L. 1999, provided: "(1) There is reappropriated from the stripper-well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of environmental quality $100,000 to fulfill duties authorized by 90-4-605 and 90-4-607. The original appropriation was contained in section 9, Chapter 597, Laws of 1989. The reappropriation is a biennial appropriation.

(2) (a) "Stripper-well payments" means the oil overcharge payments made to the United States treasury for distribution to the state of Montana as the result of the final settlement agreement in Cause No. M.D.L. 378, United States district court for the district of Kansas, and any interest accrued on the payments.

(b) The term does not include stripper-well payments that have been expended or legally obligated or that have been incorporated into any of the existing federal energy programs as the result of prior appropriations by the legislature.

(3) The stripper-well payments reappropriated in this section have a higher priority than any other appropriation of stripper-well payments for fiscal years 2000 and 2001." Effective July 1, 1999.

Appropriations of Bond Proceeds: Section 4, Ch. 50, L. 1999, provided: "There is appropriated from bond proceeds authorized by Chapter 571, Laws of 1991, Chapter 350, Laws of 1993, Chapter 61, Laws of 1995, Chapter 81, Laws of 1997, and [section 6] [not codified], $450,000 to the department of environmental quality to fulfill duties under 90-4-605 and 90-4-607. This appropriation is a biennial appropriation." Effective July 1, 1999.

Approval of Energy Conservation Projects — Definition: Section 5, Ch. 50, L. 1999, provided: "(1) Pursuant to Title 90, chapter 4, part 6, the legislature approves the following energy conservation projects for fiscal years 2000 and 2001.

University of Montana
Science Complex, Missoula
Montana State University
Cowan Hall Remodel, Havre
Special Education Building, Billings
Department of Administration
Justice Building
Department of Transportation
Signal Light Retrofit Project
University of Montana
Grizzly Pool
Department of Military Affairs
Maintenance Shop Building, Helena

(2) In addition to the energy conservation projects listed in subsection (1), the department of environmental quality may expend funds appropriated under [section 6] [not codified] to respond to lost energy saving opportunities. This includes coordination of energy improvement projects with the long-range building program's capital improvement projects.

(3) For purposes of this section, a "lost energy saving opportunity" means an opportunity to improve energy use that would provide significant energy and cost savings to the state and that will be technically infeasible or uneconomical if the department of environmental quality is delayed in providing the necessary funds until specific legislative approval can be obtained.

(4) If the costs of the projects authorized in subsections (1) and (2) are substantially below the bond amount authorized in [section 6] [not codified], the department of environmental quality may fund projects that otherwise would be proposed as part of the state building energy conservation package for fiscal years 2002 and 2003." Effective July 1, 1999.

Bond Authorization — Appropriation of Bond Proceeds: Section 6, Ch. 50, L. 1999, provided: "(1) The board of examiners may, pursuant to 90-4-611, issue and sell bonds of the state in an aggregate principal amount not to exceed $3 million for fiscal years 2000 and 2001 for the projects approved in [section 5] [not codified] and to fulfill duties authorized by 90-4-605 and 90-4-607, as provided in [section 4] [not codified]. The bonds are general obligations for which the full faith and credit and taxing powers of the state are pledged for payment of the principal and interest on the bonds. The bonds must be issued as provided by Title 17, chapter 5, part 8.

(2) The proceeds of the bonds, other than any premiums and accrued interest received, must be deposited in the energy conservation program account established by 90-4-612. Premiums and accrued interest must be deposited in the debt service fund established in 17-2-102. Proceeds of bonds deposited in the energy conservation program account may be used to pay the costs of issuing the bonds, to fulfill duties authorized by 90-4-605 and 90-4-607, and to fund the projects approved in [section 5] [not codified]. For purposes of 17-5-803 and 17-5-804, the energy conservation program account constitutes a capital projects account. The bond proceeds must be available to the department of environmental quality and may be used for the purposes authorized in this section without further budgetary authorization." Effective July 1, 1999.

Requirements for Approval of State Debt: Section 7, Ch. 50, L. 1999,provided: "Because [section 6] [not codified] authorizes the creation of state debt, Article VIII, section 8, of the Montana constitution requires a vote of two-thirds of the members of each house of the legislature for enactment of [section 6] [not codified]."

Stripper-Well Payments — Reappropriation — Definition — Priority: Section 1, Ch. 61, L. 1995, provided: "(1) There is reappropriated from the stripper-well payments contained in the federal special revenue fund to the department of natural resources and conservation $100,000 to fulfill duties authorized by 90-4-605 and 90-4-607. (2) In addition to the energy conservation projects listed in subsection (1), the department of natural resources and conservation may expend funds appropriated under [section 4] [not codified, see 1995 compiler's comment] to respond to lost energy saving opportunities.

(3) For purposes of this section, a "lost energy saving opportunity" means an opportunity to improve energy use that would provide significant energy and cost savings to the state and that will be technically infeasible or uneconomical if the department is delayed in providing the necessary funds until specific legislative approval can be obtained.

(4) If the costs of the projects authorized in subsections (1) and (2) are substantially below the bond amount authorized in [section 4] [not codified, see 1995 compiler's comment], the department of natural resources and conservation may fund projects that otherwise would be proposed as part of the state building energy conservation package for fiscal years 1998 and 1999.

(5) The retrofit of Montana state university-northern must be conducted as a pilot project, using performance contracting. Montana state university-northern shall use state general obligation bonds authorized under [section 4] [not codified, see 1995 compiler's comment] to fund energy efficiency improvements in campus buildings used for instructional purposes. Montana state university-northern may provide financing other than state general obligation bonds for energy efficiency improvements in buildings supported by student fees and revenue. Whenever state general obligation bonds are used, resulting energy cost savings must be transferred to the energy conservation program account as provided in 90-4-614. If funding other than state general obligation bonds is used for improvements in buildings supported by student fees and revenue, a performance contract must be developed jointly by Montana state university-northern, the department of natural resources and conservation, and the department of administration and any resulting energy cost savings in these buildings in excess of debt service and program costs must remain with the auxiliary services at Montana state university-northern." Effective July 1, 1995.

Bond Authorization — Appropriation of Bond Proceeds: Section 4, Ch. 61, L. 1995, provided: "(1) The board of examiners may, pursuant to 90-4-611, issue and sell bonds of the state in an aggregate principal amount not to exceed $5.5 million for fiscal years 1996 and 1997 for the projects approved in [section 3] [not codified, see 1995 compiler's comment] and to fulfill duties authorized by 90-4-605 and 90-4-607 as provided in [section 2] [not codified, see 1995 compiler's comment]. The bonds are general obligations for which the full faith and credit and taxing powers of the state are pledged for payment of the principal and interest on the bonds. The bonds must be issued as provided by Title 17, chapter 5, part 8.

(2) The proceeds of the bonds, other than any premiums and accrued interest received, must be deposited in the energy conservation program account established by 90-4-612. Premiums and accrued interest must be deposited in the debt service fund established in 17-2-102. Proceeds of bonds deposited in the energy conservation program account may be used to pay the costs of issuing the bonds, to fulfill duties authorized by 90-4-605 and 90-4-607, and to fund the projects approved in [section 3] [not codified, see 1995 compiler's comment]. For purposes of 17-5-803 and 17-5-804, the energy conservation program account constitutes a capital projects account. The bond proceeds must be available to the department of natural resources and conservation and may be used for the purposes authorized in this section without further budgetary authorization." Effective July 1, 1995.

Requirements for Approval of State Debt: Section 6, Ch. 61, L. 1995, provided: "Because [section 4] [not codified, see 1995 compiler's comment] authorizes the creation of a state debt, a vote of two-thirds of the members of each house is required for enactment of [section 4] [not codified, see 1995 compiler's comment]." Effective July 1, 1995.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 350, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, Chapter 473, Laws of 1989, established the state building energy conservation program; and

WHEREAS, recommended projects for the state building energy conservation program for fiscal years 1994 and 1995 have been analyzed and are submitted to the Legislature as required by Title 90, chapter 4, part 6."

Temporary Bond Authorization — 1994-95 Biennium: Section 4, Ch. 350, L. 1993, provided: "(1) The board of examiners may, pursuant to 90-4-611, issue and sell bonds of the state in an aggregate principal amount not to exceed $3 million for the energy conservation and lighting retrofit projects approved in [section 3] [not codified, see 1993 compiler's comment] for fiscal years 1994 and 1995. The bonds are general obligations for which the full faith and credit and taxing powers of the state are pledged for payment of the principal and interest on the bonds. The bonds must be issued as provided by Title 17, chapter 5, part 8.

(2) The proceeds of the bonds, other than any premiums and accrued interest received, must be deposited in the energy conservation program account established by 90-4-612. Premiums and accrued interest must be deposited in the debt service fund established in 17-2-102. Proceeds of bonds deposited in the energy conservation program account may be used to pay the costs of issuing the bonds and to fund the projects approved by the legislature in [section 3] [not codified, see 1993 compiler's comment]. For purposes of 17-5-803 and 17-5-804, the energy conservation program account constitutes a capital projects account. The bond proceeds must be available to the department of natural resources and conservation and may be used for the purposes authorized in this section without further budgetary authorization."

1991 Amendment: At end, deleted "This money is statutorily appropriated as provided in 17-7-502". Amendment effective April 23, 1991.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 571, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, Chapter 473, Laws of 1989, established the state building energy conservation program and authorized the issuance of up to $3 million of general obligation bonds to provide money for the state building energy conservation program for fiscal years 1990-91; and

WHEREAS, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation determined that the issuance of the bonds was not necessary during fiscal years 1990-91 and that portions of the projects identified in section 9, Chapter 473, Laws of 1989, were either funded from other sources or not in the state's best interest at the time; and

WHEREAS, recommended projects for the state building energy conservation program for fiscal years 1992-93 have been identified as required by Title 90, chapter 4, part 6."

Temporary Bond Authorization — 1992-93 Biennium: Section 3, Ch. 571, L. 1991, provided: "(1) The board of examiners may, pursuant to 90-4-611, issue and sell bonds of the state in an aggregate principal amount not to exceed $3 million for fiscal years 1992-93. The bonds are general obligations for which the full faith and credit and taxing powers of the state are pledged for payment of the principal and interest on the bonds. The bonds must be issued as provided by Title 17, chapter 5, part 8.

(2) The proceeds of the bonds, other than any premiums and accrued interest received, must be deposited in the energy conservation program account established by 90-4-612. Premiums and accrued interest must be deposited in the debt service fund established in 17-2-102. Proceeds of bonds deposited in the energy conservation program account may be used to pay the costs of issuing the bonds and to fund the projects approved by the legislature in [section 2] [not codified, see 1991 compiler's comment]. For purposes of 17-5-803 and 17-5-804, the energy conservation program account constitutes a capital projects account. The bond proceeds must be available to the department of natural resources and conservation and may be used for the purposes authorized in this section without further budgetary authorization."

Withdrawal of Authorization for Previously Authorized Bonds: Section 6, Ch. 571, L. 1991, provided: "The authorization granted by section 10, Chapter 473, Laws of 1989, for the issuance of up to $3 million in bonds to provide money for fiscal years 1990-91 energy conservation program is withdrawn."

90-4-614. Appropriation of energy cost savings.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 240 in (1) near middle inserted "using money from the sale of energy conservation program bonds"; deleted former (1)(b) that read: "(b) a projection of the debt service on energy conservation program bonds that should be apportioned to that agency in each year of the biennium. Debt service is zero after the term of bond repayment"; in (2) at end substituted "energy cost savings to the energy conservation program debt service account established in 90-4-625. These transfers must be made for a period that is equal to the term of the bonds, plus 1 year" for "projected debt service to the energy conservation program account established in 90-4-612"; deleted former (2)(b) that read: "(b) authority for each participating state agency to transfer funds to the long-range building program fund in an amount equal to the difference between the estimated energy cost savings to the agency and the projected debt service apportioned to that agency"; in (3) substituted "each state agency" for "state agencies" and substituted "amount appropriated in subsection (2)" for "sum of the amounts appropriated in subsections (2)(a) and (2)(b)"; and made minor changes in style. State Energy Policy — Goal and Development Process

90-4-1001. State energy policy goal statements.

Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 385 inserted (1)(b) through (1)(x), (2)(b), (2)(c), and (2)(f) concerning state energy policy goal statements; in (2)(a) substituted "consider" for "recognize"; in (2)(d) substituted "consider reviewing" for "review"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 12, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 454 in (1) near beginning after "energy" inserted "efficiency"; in (2)(b) at beginning before "review" deleted "maintain a continual process to" and after "changes" inserted "pursuant to 90-4-1003"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2009.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 311 inserted (2)(c) promoting as a state policy the adoption and implementation of a state transportation energy policy and an alternative fuels policy.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 311, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, in section 90-4-1003, MCA, the Legislature adopted a process for the incremental development of a comprehensive state energy policy; and

WHEREAS, under the provisions of that statute, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation recommended to the Environmental Quality Council the development of a transportation energy policy as one component of a comprehensive state energy policy; and

WHEREAS, the Environmental Quality Council assigned a broad-based working group of stakeholders in the issues relating to development of a transportation energy policy to use a collaborative, consensus process to develop that policy; and

WHEREAS, these stakeholders included the Montana Department of Transportation, members of the Montana Highway Commission [now Transportation Commission], the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation, representatives of state and local governments, highway users, railroad interests, utilities, commercial transportation interests, environmental groups, agricultural producers, bicycle and pedestrian interests, transportation planners, and representatives of petroleum producers; and

WHEREAS, the collaborative working group met regularly over an 8-month period to develop the following transportation energy policy goal statement and to recommend a specific component of a transportation energy policy on alternative fuels, along with implementing guidelines."

2011 Amendment: Chapter 43 in (1) at beginning substituted initial clause referring to first interim committee meeting for "Except as provided in subsection (1)(b), each interim", inserted "if determined necessary by the committee, discuss at future meetings issues to be included in a revised policy and", and at end deleted "to the state energy policy, pursuant to subsection (2)"; deleted former (1)(b) that read: "(b) During the 2009-2010 interim, the committee shall consult with a broad representation of stakeholders, including appropriate state agencies and the public, and focus on the following issues to be included in a revised state energy policy:

(i) increasing the supply of low-cost electricity with coal-fired generation;

(ii) rebuilding and extending electric transmission lines;
(iii) maximizing state land use for energy generation;
(iv) increasing energy efficiency standards for new construction;
(v) promoting conservation;
(vi) promoting energy efficiency incentives;
(vii) promoting alternative energy systems;
(viii) reducing regulations that increase ratepayers' energy costs; and
(ix) integrating wind energy"; in (2) at beginning substituted "If the committee" for "Except as provided in subsection (1)(b), the committee", inserted reference to decision of committee to discuss and recommend potential changes, after "in developing the" deleted "issues to be included within the", and at end after "energy policy" deleted "each interim"; in (3) at beginning before "committee shall" substituted language regarding revisions proposed by committee for "Each biennium" and near middle inserted "for a proposed revised state energy policy"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 23, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 454 substituted current text relating to committee interim duties for former text that read: "(1) The department and the committee, in cooperation with the consumer counsel and the public service commission, shall maintain a continual process to develop the components of a comprehensive state energy policy.

(2) Because of limited state resources and the need to focus intensive effort on specific issues of importance, the development of a comprehensive state energy policy must occur on an incremental basis. As the need arises, the department, in cooperation with the appropriate state agencies and with extensive public involvement, shall identify and recommend to the committee specific components of a state energy policy for development under the consensus process described in subsection (3).

(3) (a) Upon selection of a specific energy policy component, the committee shall assign to a working group composed of representatives of the parties with a stake in that specific component the task of developing consensus recommendations for that component of state energy policy.

(b) The working group must include the broadest possible representation of stakeholders in the issues to be included within the specific component of state energy policy.

(c) Whenever possible, the working group shall use a consensus process to develop recommendations for a specific energy policy component to be submitted to the committee. Recommendations that are not based upon consensus must be so noted by the working group. Upon consideration of the working group's recommendations, the committee shall forward its recommendations to the legislature and to the appropriate state agencies for adoption.

(d) The department shall:

(i) provide staff support to the working group, including policy analysis, data gathering, research, technical analysis, and administrative support;

(ii) provide administrative coordination among the appropriate state agencies in the energy policy development process;

(iii) prepare reports for and make recommendations to the committee; and

(iv) consult regularly with the committee to coordinate each agency's activities.

(4) In carrying out their responsibilities under this section, the department and the committee may contract with experts, consultants, and facilitators and may seek funding from a variety of private and public sources for technical and other assistance necessary to accomplish their responsibilities." Amendment effective May 5, 2009.

Montana Clean Renewable Energy Bond Act

Part Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 378, L. 2007, provided: "WHEREAS, the Montana Legislature has previously determined that Montana is blessed with an abundance of diverse renewable resources, that renewable energy production promotes and sustains economic development activity in local communities across the state, that increased use of renewable resources will enhance Montana's energy self-sufficiency, that economic and environmental benefits from renewable energy production accrue to the public at large, and that the expanded development of these resources to meet Montana's electricity demand and stabilize electricity prices should be encouraged and promoted; and

WHEREAS, Congress, pursuant to the Energy Tax Incentives Act of 2005, codified in part as section 54 of the Internal Revenue Code and referred to as the Federal Act, has created a federal tax credit program that would enable qualified issuers to issue clean renewable energy bonds for which the holder would receive a federal tax credit, in lieu of interest, to finance the capital costs of qualified projects as described in the Federal Act; and

WHEREAS, qualified issuers and qualified borrowers under the Federal Act include governmental bodies, which are defined as any state, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, an Indian tribal government, or any political subdivision of those entities; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature, in enacting the Montana Renewable Power Production and Rural Economic Development Act, has required Montana public utilities to establish graduated renewable energy standards and to purchase renewable energy from the community renewable energy projects and has allowed Montana political subdivisions or governmental bodies to be owners of community renewable energy projects; and

WHEREAS, several Montana cities, towns, and counties have expressed a desire to issue clean renewable energy bonds and to acquire and construct qualified projects under the Federal

Act that would provide the energy for their own needs at a stable price and have applied to the Internal Revenue Service for allocations under the Federal Act; and

WHEREAS, the purpose of this legislation is to authorize Montana local governmental bodies and Indian tribal governments to participate as qualified issuers or qualified borrowers under the Federal Act and to enable governmental bodies and Indian tribal governments to better access financial investments for community renewable energy projects or alternative renewable energy sources."

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 353 inserted definition of family services providers; in definition of project near end inserted "family services provider facilities"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Chapter 541 inserted definition of electric energy generation facility; in definition of project near end after "higher education facilities" substituted "electric energy generation facilities" for "small-scale hydroelectric production facilities with a capacity of 50 megawatts or less"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 2001.

Chapter 591 in definition of project near end before "hydroelectric production" deleted "small-scale" (amendment rendered void by Ch. 541) and inserted second to last clause concerning production of energy using alternative renewable energy sources. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Severability: Section 28, Ch. 591, L. 2001, was a severability clause.

1995 Amendment — Phrase Change: Section 21, Ch. 255, L. 1995, directed the Code Commissioner to change references in the MCA to a person who is developmentally disabled or to a developmentally disabled person to a person with developmental disabilities. The change was not to be made to the phrase "seriously developmentally disabled". In this section, the Code Commissioner has made the change in (8).

1993 Amendment: Chapter 254 near middle of definition of project inserted "community-based facilities for individuals who are developmentally disabled as defined in 53-20-102"; and made minor changes in style.

1986 Amendment: Inserted definitions of higher education facilities and institution of higher education; and near end of definition of project after "medical facilities" inserted "higher education facilities".

1981 Amendments: Chapter 318 in definition of project inserted "small-scale hydroelectric production facilities with a capacity of 50 megawatts or less".

Chapter 376 inserted definition of bonds.

90-5-102. General municipal and county powers.

Compiler's Comments

Composite Section: This section was amended by Ch. 51 and Ch. 656, L. 1979, and a composite section was prepared by the Code Commissioner, 1979. Chapter 51 was a Code Commissioner bill and was not intended to make substantive changes in the law. Therefore, a conflict of language in subsection (2) between Ch. 51 and Ch. 656 has been resolved in favor of the language in Ch. 656.

Case Notes

Judicial Review: When project was entirely within county, court would not consider hypothetical conflict between 7-1-2101 and provision in this section allowing project partially outside county. Fickes v. Missoula County, 155 M 258, 470 P2d 287 (1970).

Constitutionality: Provision for issuance of revenue bonds under this part does not violate Art. XIII, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. VIII, sec. 10, 1972 Mont. Const.), since it is done for a public purpose, despite the fact that certain individual associations or corporations may benefit from the legislation. Fickes v. Missoula County, 155 M 258, 470 P2d 287 (1970).

Attorney General's Opinions

Community College District Statutory Borrowing Authority: A community college district may enter into an agreement with a city whereby the city would loan the district the proceeds from the sale of an industrial development revenue bond and the district would repay the loan from college revenues. A district may also enter into a promissory note loan agreement with a private lender whereby the district would repay the loan from college revenues. A college district election is not required to approve these construction project financing arrangements; however, a city is required to hold a public hearing prior to issuing industrial development revenue bonds. A district is subject to the election requirement in 20-6-603 when acquiring or constructing sites or buildings. 42 A.G. Op. 78 (1988).

County Revenue Bonds to Finance Community College District Construction: Flathead Valley Community College District may use funds that Flathead County raised by issuing revenue bonds for school construction either by borrowing the funds from the county or by leasing the buildings constructed by the county, subject to applicable school law. 42 A.G. Op. 29 (1987).

Payment Directly to Purchaser Not Considered Interest: A payment made directly to the purchaser of industrial development revenue bonds by the user-beneficiary of the bond proceeds from the user-beneficiary's own funds need not be considered in applying the interest limitation of 17-5-102. 38 A.G. Op. 78 (1980).

Sale of Bonds of Less Than Face Value: The sale of industrial revenue bonds issued pursuant to Title 90, ch. 5, part 1, at a price less than the face value of the bonds does not violate 17-5-102 if the yield of the bonds exceeds 9%. 38 A.G. Op. 78 (1980).

90-5-103. Limited obligation bonds — form and contents — sale — negotiability — filing.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 489 inserted (6) concerning tax credit bonds, recovery zone economic development bonds, or qualified energy conservation bonds. Amendment effective May 14, 2009.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 423 in (2) extended term of payment of bonds from 30 years to 40 years; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 13, 1995.

Applicability: Section 53, Ch. 423, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to bonds issued under the provisions of [this act] after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 13, 1995.

1981 Amendment: Inserted (5) referring to filing of bonds with Securities Commissioner.

Case Notes

Constitutionality: This section does not violate Art. XIII, sec. 5, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. VIII, sec. 10, 1972 Mont. Const.), since it provides for revenue bonds and does not create debt or liability within the meaning of Art. XIII, sec. 5, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. VIII, sec. 10, 1972 Mont. Const.). Fickes v. Missoula County, 155 M 258, 470 P2d 287 (1970).

Attorney General's Opinions

Payment Directly to Purchaser Not Considered Interest: A payment made directly to the purchaser of industrial development revenue bonds by the user-beneficiary of the bond proceeds from the user-beneficiary's own funds need not be considered in applying the interest limitation of 17-5-102. 38 A.G. Op. 78 (1980).

Sale of Bonds of Less Than Face Value: The sale of industrial revenue bonds issued pursuant to Title 90, ch. 5, part 1, at a price less than the face value of the bonds does not violate 17-5-102 if the yield of the bonds exceeds 9%. 38 A.G. Op. 78 (1980).

90-5-104. Hearing.

Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendment: In the first sentence of (1), inserted "to pay the costs of acquiring or improving a project" after "or county"; inserted "or user of the project" after "borrower" near the middle of (1); inserted "to pay the costs of acquiring or improving a project" after "issue the bonds" in the last sentence of (1); and inserted (2) referring to refunding bonds.

Attorney General's Opinions

Revenue Bonds: A community college district may enter into an agreement whereby the city would loan the district the proceeds from the sale of an industrial development revenue bond and the district would repay the loan from college revenues. However, a city is required to hold a public hearing under this section. 42 A.G. Op. 78 (1988).

90-5-106. Determination of costs — terms of lease.

Attorney General's Opinions

Payment Directly to Purchaser Not Considered Interest: A payment made directly to the purchaser of industrial development revenue bonds by the user-beneficiary of the bond proceeds from the user-beneficiary's own funds need not be considered in applying the interest limitation of 17-5-102. 38 A.G. Op. 78 (1980).

90-5-107. Refunding of bonds.

Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendment: Inserted "including without limitation short-term bonds issued in anticipation of the issuance of long-term bonds" after "any time outstanding" in the first sentence of (1); deleted "unpaid" after "together with any" near the middle of (1); deleted "and 90-5-104" after "90-5-103" near the end of (2); inserted (3) referring to use of principal proceeds from refunding bonds; inserted (4) referring to investment of trust fund money; and inserted (5) referring to limitation on duration of deposit in trust for the retirement of certain bonds.

Erroneous Reference: The compiler has substituted the reference to 90-5-106(1) for an apparently erroneous reference to "subsection (5)" in the first subsection.

90-5-108. Use of proceeds of bond sales.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 353 in (1) at end of first sentence and middle of second sentence inserted reference to a family services provider facility; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1986 Amendment: In (1) in two places after "long-term care facility" inserted "or higher education facility".

Case Notes

Equipment Acquired: Pollution controls or other equipment useful in industrial project created under this part may be acquired under provisions of this section from the proceeds of bond sales. Fickes v. Missoula County, 155 M 258, 470 P2d 287 (1970).

90-5-110. Taxation of projects.

Compiler's Comments

1983 Amendment: In (2), substituted "warrant for distraint" for "distress warrant".

Case Notes

Constitutionality: This section does not violate provisions of Art. XII, sec. 2, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. VIII, sec. 5, 1972 Mont. Const.), against taxing property of county or municipality, since county or municipality has only trust as opposed to beneficial interest, and taxation is based on use of property. Fickes v. Missoula County, 155 M 258, 470 P2d 287 (1970).

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 495 in (1)(a) at end substituted "as provided in 15-10-425" for "voting in a city, county, or town election". Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Chapter 574 in (1) in first sentence after "levy" substituted "a tax upon the taxable value of all taxable property in the city, county, or town" for "up to 1 mill upon the taxable value of all the property in the city, county, or town subject to taxation"; at end of (1)(a) substituted "as provided in 15-10-425" for "voting in a city, county, or town election"; and deleted former (4) that read: "(4) A tax authorized by a vote of the electorate, as provided in subsection (1)(a), may be levied for a period not to exceed 6 years." Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 584 at beginning of (1) inserted reference to 15-10-420; at end of (4) after "years" deleted "and is not subject to the provisions of Title 15, chapter 10, part 4"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 10, 1999.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 279 in (4) increased from 5 years to 6 years the time in which an economic development levy is effective. Amendment effective March 29, 1995.

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 279, L. 1995, provided: "[Section 1] [90-5-112] applies to all levies approved by the electorate after [the effective date of this act] [effective March 29, 1995]."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 386 substituted (1) authorizing 1-mill economic development levy by public vote or vote of governing body for former (1) that read: "Upon an affirmative vote of a majority of the qualified voters voting in a city, county, or town on the question of whether the governing body may levy a tax for economic development, the governing body of that city, county, or town is authorized to levy in any one election up to 1 mill upon the taxable value of all the property in the county, city, or town subject to taxation for the purpose of economic development for a period not to exceed 5 years"; and at beginning of (4) substituted language authorizing tax with a public vote for "The authorization to levy up to 1 mill for the purpose of economic development, as provided in subsection (1)".

1991 Amendment: At end of (4), after "part 4", deleted "if voter authorization for the levy occurred prior to December 31, 1990". Amendment effective April 16, 1991.

1989 Special Session Amendment: Inserted (4) exempting economic development levy from property tax freeze if approval by voters occurs prior to December 31, 1990. Amendment effective July 11, 1989.

1991 Amendment: Deleted (21) concerning lending money to Board of Investments to establish Montana economic development guaranty fund; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Saving Clause: Section 20, Ch. 589, L. 1991, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 21, Ch. 589, L. 1991, was a severability clause.

1987 Amendment: In (21), referring to Montana economic development guaranty fund, changed "economic development board" to "board of investments".

1983 Amendments: Chapter 249, at end of (13), substituted "housing authority enterprise fund" for "housing finance account".

Chapters 686 and 701 inserted (21) referring to the Montana economic development guaranty fund. Both Ch. 686, L. 1983, and Ch. 701, L. 1983, inserted the subsection in identical form. The Code Commissioner combined the amendments pursuant to sec. 32, Ch. 686, L. 1983, which provided for coordination.

Attorney General's Opinions

Legislative Authority to Direct Board of Housing Funds Not Pledged to Trust Indenture: The Legislature has clear authority to direct the placement of state funds under the Housing Act of 1975 and has given the Board of Housing explicit direction in the placement and use of funds under Board control. Therefore, Board of Housing funds not specifically pledged under a trust indenture must be deposited in the housing authority enterprise fund and invested in accordance with the unified investment program as provided in 90-6-107 and this section. 44 A.G. Op. 42 (1992).

Conflicts of Interest: Although no conflicts of interest were found, Board of Housing members (who were also bank officers) would be in conflict of interest if the Board were to contract with the institutions with which the members were associated. 37 A.G. Op. 2 (1977).

1985 Amendment: In (5) near beginning, after "outstanding at", substituted "any time" for "any one time", raised limit from $675 million to $975 million, and inserted last sentence making issue price of bonds sold at discount countable against statutory ceiling.

1983 Amendment: In (4), inserted second to last sentence referring to tax status of bond interest payments; and in (5), deleted former last two sentences, which read: "The rate of interest on bonds or notes issued by the board may not exceed an interest rate equal to 1% less than the interest rate established from time to time by the U.S. department of housing and urban development (HUD), federal housing administration (FHA). The interest rate shall be determined for each issue of bonds or notes according to the HUD/FHA rate in effect 30 days prior to the sale of the bonds or notes."

1981 Amendments: Chapter 53, in (5), substituted language tying interest rate limitation to HUD rate for "9% per annum".

Chapter 64 increased the bond debt limit in (5) from $375 million to $675 million.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 91 (Ch. 64, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent was requested for this bill by the Senate Committee on Business and Industry.

It is the intent of the legislature that SB 91 not conflict with SB 90 [Ch. 53, L. 1981]. The bills are not in apparent conflict but both amend section 90-6-111. Both bills are effective on passage and approval. It is the intent of the legislature that should both SB 90 and SB 91 be enacted into law, section 90-6-111 should read as follows:

"90-6-111. Bonds and notes. (1) The board may by resolution, from time to time, issue negotiable notes and bonds in a principal amount as the board determines necessary to provide sufficient funds for achieving any of its purposes, including the payment of interest on notes and bonds of the board, establishment of reserves to secure the notes and bonds, including the reserve funds created under 90-6-119, and all other expenditures of the board incident to and necessary or convenient to carry out this part.

(2) The board may by resolution, from time to time, issue notes to renew notes and bonds to pay notes, including interest, and whenever it deems refunding expedient, refund any bonds by the issuance of new bonds, whether the bonds to be refunded have or have not matured, and issue bonds partly to refund bonds outstanding and partly for any of its other purposes.

(3) Except as otherwise expressly provided by resolution of the board, every issue of its notes and bonds shall be obligations of the board payable out of any revenues, assets, or moneys of the board, subject only to agreements with the holders of particular notes or bonds pledging particular revenues, assets, or moneys.

(4) The notes and bonds shall be authorized by resolutions of the board, shall bear a date, and shall mature at times as the resolutions provide. A note shall not mature more than 10 years and a bond shall not mature more than 50 years from the date of its issue. The bonds may be issued as serial bonds payable in annual installments or as term bonds or as a combination thereof. The notes and bonds shall bear interest at a rate, or rates, be in denominations, be in a form, either coupon or registered, carry registration privileges, be executed in a manner, be payable in a medium of payment, at places within or without the state, and be subject to terms of redemption as provided in resolutions. The notes and bonds of the board may be sold at public or private sale at such prices, which may be above or below par, as are determined by the board.

(5) The total amount of notes and bonds outstanding at any one time, except notes or bonds as to which the board's obligation has been satisfied and discharged by refunding or for which reserve for payment or other means of payment have been otherwise provided, may not exceed $675 million. The rate of interest on bonds or notes issued by the board may not exceed an interest rate equal to 1% less than the interest rate established from time to time by the U.S. department of housing and urban development (HUD), federal housing administration (FHA). The interest rate shall be determined for each issue of bonds or notes according to the HUD/FHA rate in effect 30 days prior to the sale of the bonds or notes.""

Attorney General's Opinions

Limitation on Appropriation: The legislative interpretation of 90-6-205, as established by past appropriations, suggests that the Legislature intended to limit the Coal Board appropriations to 7/15 of the income projected to the local impact and education trust fund in each fiscal year and not up to 7/15 of the entire aggregate amount in the trust fund. 40 A.G. Op. 4 (1983), prior to 1987 amendments.

Governmental Service or Facility: The city of Billings and Yellowstone County proposed to purchase and renovate a building for use by a nonprofit corporation providing treatment for alcohol and drug-related problems. The city proposed to issue industrial revenue bonds (IRBs) to fund a portion of the project, and the county sought a grant from the Montana Coal Board. Under the proposal, title to the building would vest in the nonprofit corporation once the IRBs have been retired. The questions presented were whether: (1) the building in question is a "governmental facility"; (2) a city or county has the power to expend funds for a building the title to which will eventually vest in a private corporation; and (3) contracting with a private corporation is a legitimate means of providing a governmental service. In the opinion of the Attorney General, a local government unit with self-government powers and counties with general government powers are authorized to provide alcohol and drug abuse treatment services under Title 53, ch. 24. Local governments may contract with nonprofit corporations for the provision of such services. A program of alcohol and drug abuse treatment services provided by contract with a private nonprofit corporation is a "governmental service or facility" under 90-6-205 for the purpose of determining eligibility for coal impact assistance. 39 A.G. Op. 31 (1981).

Eligibility for Coal Impact Grants: "Local governmental units" eligible to receive impact grants from the Coal Board under 90-6-205 and 90-6-206 include counties, incorporated cities and towns, consolidated local governments, school districts, and any other statutorily created governmental unit or district empowered to exercise delegated sovereign powers over a defined geographical region of the state, viz., county water and sewer districts, rural improvement districts which include areas of more than one county and have separate governing bodies (counties may apply for grants to pay for rural improvement district expenses), and special improvement districts within cities, towns, and consolidated units. Opinion No. 74, Volume 36, of the Official Opinions of the Attorney General is overruled except that portion excluding Indian tribes from impact grant eligibility. 37 A.G. Op. 22 (1977), prior to 1983 amendments.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 503 in (1)(b)(i) and (1)(d)(i) substituted "300,000 tons" for "1 million tons"; in (1)(b)(i), at end after "year", inserted "and that the department of commerce determines will commence production within 2 years"; in (1)(b)(ii), at beginning, substituted "the department of commerce has determined that" for "or that will increase", after "mine" inserted "will increase", after "year and" deleted "for which the department of commerce determines", and after "production" deleted "authorized by the permit"; in (1)(b)(ii) and (1)(b)(iv), before "years", reduced time from 3 years to 2 years; inserted (1)(b)(iii) requiring Department to annually designate each county and all local governmental units within each county in which a newly constructed railroad serves a new, existing, or expanding coal mine; in (1)(b)(iv), before "steam-generating" and "coal-burning", inserted "new"; in (1)(c) increased distance from 50 miles to 100 miles and at end inserted reference to subsection (1)(b)(iv); substituted (3) relating to awarding grants and loans for former (3) that read: "(3) Except as provided in 90-6-205(5)(b), the coal board shall, subject to the appropriations of the legislature, award at least 50% of all grants awarded to governmental units and state agencies for meeting the needs caused by coal development each year to these designated governmental units"; inserted (7) relating to impact grant designation; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1987 Amendment: In (6), after "local impact", deleted "and educational trust fund", after "this part" deleted "subject to the limitations imposed by 90-6-211", and at end, after "local impact", deleted "or for transfer to a permanent trust for education".

Severability: Section 13, Ch. 662, L. 1987, was a severability section.

1985 Amendments: Chapter 462 in (1)(a) at beginning, changed references to government entities from plural to singular and made corresponding change in predicate; and inserted (1)(b) through (2) referring to designation of counties and local governmental units.

Chapter 619 in (3) at beginning inserted "Except as provided in 90-6-205(5)(b)".

1983 Amendment: Near beginning of (1), inserted "annually"; after "counties," inserted "incorporated cities and"; in middle of first sentence, substituted "as a result of the impact of coal development a net increase" for "an increase"; at end of first sentence, substituted "over one of the 3-year periods specified in subsection (2)" for "during any 3 years since 1972 as a result of the impact of coal development"; and inserted (2) listing five 3-year periods.

Attorney General's Opinions

Reversion of Coal Board Funds: The provision of 17-7-304, requiring the reversion of unexpended and unencumbered portions of appropriations at the close of the fiscal year, applies to the appropriations to the Coal Board from the local impact and education trust fund. The Legislature appropriates money to the Coal Board as a discretionary matter under 90-6-207. There is no constitutional impediment to the reversion of the funds, nor is there any indication of legislative intent to except the Coal Board grant money from the operation of 17-7-304. The Board must follow the legislatively created financial requirements. 40 A.G. Op. 4 (1983), prior to 1987 amendments.

The amendments made by Ch. 619 are effective July 1, 1985.

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 472 (Ch. 489, L. 1983) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it expands the rulemaking authority of the hard-rock mining impact board.

(1) The legislature intends, under Section 2 [which amended this section], that the hard-rock mining impact board be authorized to adopt rules under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act that will facilitate and effectuate its role as a Quasi-Judicial Board responsible for administering the Hard-Rock Mining Impact Act. The rules must ensure that implementation of the act is consistent with the purpose of mitigating local government impacts that may result from the commencement of large-scale hard-rock mineral developments in this state.

(2) The legislature intends that the board adopt rules for implementing Section 3 [which amended 90-6-307] by establishing criteria that the board will use when making decisions on whether or not to grant a requested 30-day extension to an impact review period.

(3) The legislature further intends that the board adopt rules implementing Section 5 [which enacted 90-6-311] that provide:

(a) a procedure for conducting hearings on objections to proposed impact plan amendments that is consistent with the Montana Administrative Procedure Act; and

(b) a list of factors that will be used to determine the validity of objections to the proposed impact plan amendments.

The rulemaking authority granted in this bill is intended to supersede the existing authority that the hard-rock mining impact board has pursuant to Chapter 617, Laws of 1981."

1981 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 718 (Ch. 617, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for HB 718 because [90-6-305] grants rulemaking authority to the hard-rock mining impact board.

The legislature intends that the rules adopted by the board governing its proceedings be procedural in nature.

(1) The legislature intends that the board may adopt forms for notice required by the board and to be given by the board.

(2) The board is intended to act as a "referee" in hearing disputes between local government units and large-scale mineral developers over the impact plan submitted to the board under the provisions of [90-6-307]. The hearings are subject to Montana Administrative Procedure Act and any rules adopted by the board governing the hearings must be consistent with that act.

(3) The legislature intends that the rules adopted by the board governing the awarding of grants shall be consistent with the criteria set out in [90-6-306] [now repealed]."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 418 in (11) and (14) substituted "department of environmental quality" for "department of state lands"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1991 Amendment: In (2), in middle of first sentence, after "industrial" substituted "local government facility" for "educational". Amendment effective March 29, 1991.

1987 Amendment: In (1), at end of introductory material, substituted reference to the mineral developer and the affected local government units ensuring contents of impact plan for "The impact plan shall include"; inserted (4) requiring public hearing on impact plan; inserted (5) allowing objection by affected local government unit not identified in impact plan; in (6), in fourth sentence, substituted "the impact plan is approved without any review by the board" for "the impact plan shall be approved by the board" and inserted last sentence referring to alteration of approved plan; and in (13) substituted "subsections (5) and (6)" for "subsection (4)".

1987 Amendment of Rule: Rule 8.104.203A, ARM, was amended by sec. 6, Ch. 311, L. 1987.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 311, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in order to clarify the role of the hard-rock mining impact board. The amendments to section 3 of this bill [90-6-307] are designed to ensure that the board is not involved in reviewing the plan unless objections are filed under 90-6-307 or amendments are sought under 90-6-311.

The amendment of Rule 8.104.203A, Administrative Rules of Montana, does not indicate a legislative intent to define population changes associated with a mineral development. This matter should be determined by the mineral developer and the affected local governments. The amendment further indicates that the legislature desires that the hard-rock mining impact board should not influence this determination by enacting rules on matters that should be the product of discussions between the mineral developer and the affected local governments, except when the board is required to address impact plan concerns during the objections and amendment processes.

This bill also attempts to stress the cooperation role of the mineral developer and the affected local governments in formulating the impact plan. The impact plan, as a result, should reflect the concerns and agreements among these entities. Furthermore, to ensure public involvement in the planning process, a mandatory public hearing is required."

Applicability: Sections 8 and 9, Ch. 311, L. 1987, provided that the amendments made by that chapter were effective on passage and approval (approved March 31, 1987) and apply to all impact plans submitted after that date.

1985 Amendments: Chapter 24 near end of (10) after "hard-rock mining impact" changed "fund" to "account".

Chapter 582 in (1)(c) after "services" deleted "including but not limited to police and fire protection, sewage, water treatment, schools, road construction and upkeep, education, and medical care"; in (2) in first sentence inserted "as identified in the impact plan" and inserted second sentence referring to other revenue sources and funding mechanisms; in first sentence of (3) substituted "the end" for "commencement"; in (5) in second sentence substituted language referring to extension of 30-day period for "If within 30 days the local government unit and the developer cannot resolve the objection", and in third sentence inserted "If the objections are not resolved"; in (7) substituted "guarantee" for "guaranty", and substituted "meet the increased costs of public services and facilities as specified" for "make all the payments to the board required"; in (8) substituted reference to payment to a local government unit or the Board and deposit and verification of payments for "The board shall deposit all payments received from the developer into the hard-rock mining impact account established by 90-6-304"; in (9) substituted "guarantee" for "guaranty", and after "payment" deleted "of each required payment"; in (10) inserted "if the hard-rock mining impact account is used to deliver payments to the local government unit"; in (11) inserted "or 90-6-311(3)"; inserted (12) referring to waiver of impact plan requirement; and inserted (13) referring to certification of compliance and failure to comply.

1983 Amendment: In (1), in first sentence substituted "After" for "When" and made minor change in sentence structure, and inserted second sentence referring to cooperation to eliminate duplication of effort in data collection; inserted (3) referring to financial assistance to prepare for and evaluate the impact plan; in (4), inserted second and third sentences referring to extension of 90-day period and in last sentence inserted "or any extension thereof"; in (5) near beginning substituted "within 10 days" for "promptly"; and in (11), in first sentence inserted "and it results in some remedial order by the board or court of competent jurisdiction", and near end inserted "administrative or judicial".

In (11) the Code Commissioner corrected subsection reference from "(3)" to "(4)" which was apparently overlooked when new (3) was inserted and former (3) renumbered as (4). Only (4) relates to filing of objection.

Case Notes

Issue Not Raised Before Agency Not Allowed to Be Raised on Judicial Review: Lincoln County argued in District Court that Sanders County had not objected to an impact plan before the Hard-Rock Mining Board and therefore had no standing to appeal the Board's decision in District Court. The Supreme Court held that Lincoln County had not argued that Sanders County was without standing when the issue was before the agency; therefore, Lincoln County could not raise the standing issue for the first time in District Court. Lincoln County v. Sanders County, 261 M 344, 862 P2d 1133, 50 St. Rep. 1352 (1993), followed in Hilands Golf Club v. Ashmore, 2002 MT 8, 308 M 111, 39 P3d 697 (2002).

Mining Board's Amendment of Mine's Allocation of Taxes Not Beyond Its Authority: Lincoln County argued that the Hard-Rock Mining Board had exceeded its authority in amending Noranda's tax allocation plan because it allocated an additional amount of the taxes to Sanders

County, which was not anticipated to be negatively impacted by an influx of workers. The Supreme Court ruled that the Board could modify tax allocation plans for any affected county not just counties impacted by an influx of workers and that the Board had not acted unreasonably in amending the plan on the basis that after 5 years, the majority of increased property valuation would be in Lincoln County and not Sanders County where the ore body was located. Lincoln County v. Sanders County, 261 M 344, 862 P2d 1133, 50 St. Rep. 1352 (1993).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 57 in (1) near middle of second sentence after "under" substituted "15-10-108" for "20-25-423"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 25, 2009.

Name Change — Short Form Amendment: Section 55(1), Ch. 633, L. 1993, directed the Code Commissioner to change the term "foundation program", when it refers to equalization aid for schools, to "BASE funding program" in this section.

1989 Special Session Amendment: In (1), after "university levy" inserted "established under 20-25-423" and after "foundation program" substituted "established in 20-9-331 and 20-9-333" for "of 45 mills"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective August 11, 1989, and applies retroactively to July 1, 1989.

1985 Amendment: In (1) at end of first sentence substituted "as specified in the impact plan" for "in an amount equal to at least three times the estimated property tax due the year the large-scale mineral development facility commences operation" and in last sentence increased mills from 40 to 45; and in (5) after "shall provide for", substituted reference to tax credit and limitations thereon for "repayment according to the following procedure:

(a) In each year after the commencement of mining, the local government shall:

(i) divide its budget by the average mill levy of its jurisdiction during the 3 years immediately preceding commencement of mining operations, to arrive at a taxable valuation needed to fund its budget using the average 3-year mill levy;

(ii) reduce the taxable valuation of property of a person who prepaid property taxes by the excess, if any, of the total taxable value of the taxing jurisdiction including the person's property over the taxable value determined under subsection (5)(a)(i), but in no case by an amount greater than the taxable value of the person's property.

(b) The reduction in taxable value, if any, determined under subsection (5)(a)(ii) times the average mill levy used in subsection (5)(a)(i) equals the property tax prepayment credit allowed for the taxable year for that local government unit. Any local government unit not receiving a payment shall not be affected by this section, and no reduction in value shall be used in the computation of taxes due that unit of local government. In no event shall the credit allowed under this part extend more than 10 years beyond the date the prepayment is made under this section.

(c) The procedure established under subsection (5)(a) shall continue from year to year until the total credit allowed the person who prepaid property taxes equals the total property taxes prepaid".

1983 Amendment: Near beginning of (1), substituted "governing body" for "board of county commissioners"; and in (3), substituted "through an appropriate financial institution" for "with appropriate bank guarantees".

90-6-310. Local government facility impact bonds.

1987 Amendment: In (1), near beginning of first sentence after "approved", deleted "by the board".

90-6-404. Allocation of taxable valuation for local taxation purposes.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 464 at beginning of (1) deleted "If the board determines that", after "located" substituted "must be allocated" for "is not affected by the development and if this determination is shown on the impact plan", and after "proceeds" deleted "must be allocated to that local government unit" and deleted second sentence that read: "This provision is intended to establish a minimum allocation for the units and does not prohibit proof by a unit that actual direct impacts would exceed 20% of the total impacts of the development"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 22, 1999.

1991 Amendment: Inserted (1) requiring that if Board determines that local government unit in which ore body or mineral deposit being mined is located is not affected by development as shown on impact plan, 20% of total increase in taxable valuation of proceeds must be allocated to local government unit and providing that provision does not prohibit proof by unit that impacts would exceed 20% of total developmental impacts; at beginning of (2) substituted "remaining" for "total"; in (3) and (4), at beginning before "increase", deleted "total" and after "valuation" inserted "equal to that subject to subsection (2)"; and inserted (5) authorizing modification of distribution formula by approved or amended impact plan if needed to ensure reasonable correspondence between costs of mineral development and allocation of taxable valuation from development.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 760, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all large-scale mineral developments required to comply with 90-6-307 that did not have an impact plan approved pursuant to 90-6-307, as of December 31, 1990."

Case Notes

Mining Board's Amendment of Mine's Allocation of Taxes Not Beyond Its Authority: Lincoln County argued that the Hard-Rock Mining Board had exceeded its authority in amending Noranda's tax allocation plan because it allocated an additional amount of the taxes to Sanders County, which was not anticipated to be negatively impacted by an influx of workers. The Supreme Court ruled that the Board could modify tax allocation plans for any affected county not just counties impacted by an influx of workers and that the Board had not acted unreasonably in amending the plan on the basis that after 5 years, the majority of increased property valuation would be in Lincoln County and not Sanders County where the ore body was located. 1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 178, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants the board of housing authority to adopt rules to secure, implement, and administer a reverse annuity mortgage loan program to be utilized by elderly Montanans. The legislature intends that the rules adopted by the board recognize the necessity for some elderly Montanans to draw income for essential living expenses and other purposes from the equity accumulated in their single-family homes during their lifetimes while continuing to enjoy the shelter and security afforded by those residences. The rules must afford the elderly homeowner monthly payments over 10 years, as provided in the loan agreement, under terms that assure life tenancy and the right to repay the loan balance at any time. The rules must be consistent with other statutory or regulatory provisions requiring sufficient security for a loan provided by the board. The rules must prescribe forms and procedures necessary to apply for and receive reverse annuity mortgages."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 349, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that members of the Montana National Guard, residents of Montana in the federal reserves, and Montana residents serving on active duty in the armed forces have all made sacrifices of various kinds in order to serve the state and their country in times of war or national emergency; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature further finds that while those sacrifices may be difficult to quantify or compare because they range from loss of time with family and friends due to demands of reserve duty to loss of life in the service of the country, those sacrifices have in common that they occurred because of the status of the individual as a member of the armed forces; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature further finds that it has the authority pursuant to Article II, section 35, of the Montana Constitution to recognize and reward this status by providing special consideration to the status of service members and veterans; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that it is appropriate to reward this status and the sacrifices the status represents by facilitating the fulfillment of the American dream of home ownership for those who serve or have served in the American armed forces; and

WHEREAS, the purpose of the Montana Veterans' Home Loan Mortgage Program Act is not to provide the most substantial return on the investment of money in the coal tax trust fund used for the program but to use some of the money in the trust fund for a mortgage loan program so that first-time home buyers who are eligible veterans can acquire a mortgage loan at a rate lower than prevailing market rates and in this way reward those eligible veterans who have served this country well and reward the unremarried spouses of eligible veterans who have made the ultimate sacrifice in service to their country."

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 534, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 5] [90-14-105] authorizes the office of community service to adopt rules relating to the Montana community service corps.

It is the intent of the legislature that a variety of opportunities be developed, enhanced, and coordinated that maximize the resources and abilities of citizens of Montana to renew the ethic of civic involvement and responsibility by:

(1) encouraging Montanans, regardless of age, income, or ability, to engage in full-time or part-time service;

(2) involving youth in programs that benefit the state and improve their own lives;
(3) enabling young adults to make a sustained commitment to service; and
(4) involving participants in activities to help meet human, educational, environmental, service, and public safety needs that would not otherwise be performed by paid workers.

It is also the intent of the legislature that the rules address the following:
(1) procedures for recruitment and involvement in service;
(2) procedures for review and approval of volunteer or work experience projects;
(3) a service code of conduct and grievance procedure;
(4) standards and procedures to evaluate and report on the performance of participants and projects;
(5) training guidelines for service leaders and participants;
(6) requirements necessary to ensure cooperation and compliance with any federal programs or requirements related to national public service legislation; and

CHAPTER 15
NATURAL RESOURCE INFORMATION SYSTEM

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to HB 785 (Ch. 650, L. 1983) provided: "WHEREAS, various departments of state government, including the Departments of Natural Resources and Conservation; Fish, Wildlife, and Parks; State Lands [functions now transferred to Department of Environmental Quality]; Health and Environmental Sciences [functions now transferred to Department of Environmental Quality]; and Agriculture and various branches of the university system independently collect natural resource information for different purposes, using manual and automated methods; and

WHEREAS, although ideally there should be an integrated natural resource information system, such a sophisticated system would be extremely costly because of the unique and distinctly different requirements of each department; and

WHEREAS, efforts should be made to expedite the development of separate but compatible systems and to catalog this data and make it available for department and statewide use; and

WHEREAS, a natural heritage program begins by developing a classification system to conceptually organize the elements of natural diversity in the state, and this classification serves as a framework for categorizing natural landscape information to facilitate comparison of similar elements and recognize dissimilar elements; and

WHEREAS, 33 states have already developed programs to collect and manage information on their natural heritage, and the methods used by those state programs are available to Montana; and

WHEREAS, the classification system embodied in the natural heritage program should be a working one that retains the flexibility to be changed as need dictates so that new categories may be added or preexisting categories subdivided and, within classes, elements may be added or deleted as new information becomes available; and

WHEREAS, a natural heritage program is needed to eliminate costly duplication and enhance the efficiency of natural resource data collection and to provide a valuable source of that information for state government, industry, and other groups.

THEREFORE, the State of Montana, as a first step in developing a natural resource information system establishes a Montana Natural Heritage Program."
